"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, JANUARY 5, 1937 No. 1

VIEWING THE NEW YEAR

Another year has flown away
To join itself with Yesterday
And swell our growing Past.
Reluctantly we watch it go—
A motley mass of joy and woe—
And helpless stand aghast.

Yet even as it takes its flight,
A fresh New Year comes into sight—
A spotless while display.
We face its brightness with good cheer,
And yearn to keep it always clear,

To better every day.
But resolutions, though sincere,
Will fall far short again this year,
And futile prove e'er long.
There is a way—an only way—
To win life's battles every day—
To overcome the wrong.

What is this way? A plan designed
By God Himself for all mankind.
Transformed by love divine
Our human hearts imbibe His strength,
And thus we conquer till at length
We reach Life's parting line.

'Though hosts of days this day ensue,
God grants us strength for all we do
But only for today.
Thus day by day, renewed in soul,
We may through Him attain our goal,
And walk the Winning Way.

So if perchance this time next year,
We still are priv'leged to be here
To greet the New Year's sun,
We'll leave with God these many days,
And they'll redound to give Him praise,
Since we lived them "one by one"!

THE NEW YEAR

Ed. G. Kaufman

Our New Year's thought is taken from words spoken to the Children of Israel, "Ye have not passed this way before," (Josh. 3:4). In a very real sense, these words apply to us as we enter the new year. We have seen new years before, but not the year of 1937, and we do well to pause a moment and remind ourselves that we "have not passed this way before." This is a new road for us, yet all must travel it. Naturally, not knowing what will meet us on this road, one enters it with some hesitation.

As other roads, so the road of the new year can be traveled only a part at a time, moment by moment, minute by minute, hour by hour, day by day, and so on through the year. This road will be easier to travel, will mean more to us, and enable us to do more for others if we take it a day at a time and develop certain daily practices.

1. Daily thanksgiving and prayer. "Blessed is the Lord who daily loadeth us with benefits," (Ps. 86:19): "Be merciful unto me, O Lord, for I cry unto thee daily," (Ps. 86:3.)

2. Daily watchfulness. "Exhort one another daily lest any of you be hardened through deceitfulness of sin," (Heb. 3:13).

3. Daily sacrifice. "Thou shalt offer every day a bullock for a sin offering," (Exod. 29:36); "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me," (Luke 9:23); "I die daily," (I Cor. 15:31).

4. Daily growth. "And the Lord added unto the church daily," (Acts 2:47): "—and increased in number daily," (Acts 16:5); "..searched the Scriptures daily," (Acts 17:11).

5. Daily bread. We should not want too much at a time. "Give us this day our daily bread," (Matt. 6:11).

6. Daily strength. Let us rest assured our Father in heaven will do His part daily. "As the days so shall thy strength be," (Deut. 33:25).

If we travel the new year in the Lord's presence, day by day, we need have no fear, for he has said, "Fear not for I am with thee." And we may not only enter but also go on through and reach the end of the new year with increased faith, hope, and love. This is our prayer for us all.

THE NEW EDITOR

Beginning with this issue THE MENNONITE has a new editor, acting editor he prefers to be called. For he will be glad to turn the office over to a permanent editor, when the Board of Publications can find a person who has the requisite qualifications and inclination for such work and who is willing or able to work for a small allowance.

In assuming this task the new editor has somewhat the same feeling that the apostle must have when he told the Collossians, "I came (come) to you not with excellency of speech or enticing words of man's wisdom, but with a feeling of fear." Not having been trained as a journalist, his choice of words and style may often show anything but excellency of speech. Without actual training in the arts of diplomacy and oratory, his articles will likely be wanting in "enticing words." And when he thinks of the widely varying literary, intellectual and spiritual tastes of the readers and his impotency in catering to them, he has a decided "feeling of fear" or almost of dispair.

But, knowing that his Heavenly father is the source of wisdom and strength and that quite a number of the brethern have wished him God's help and offered to intercede for him in prayer, and hoping that many more will sense the urge of doing this, he feels encouraged to try the task for a while.

As for the attempt of satisfying the tastes of the many readers, the editor is inclined to take the view expressed in Goethe's masterpiece "Faust." In the opening stanzas of this poem the director of the theater and the playwright discuss the problem, what they must offer in order to attract large audiences. Their conclusion is:

> The masses can be won only through plenty,
> Out of it each selects what he likes.
> He who brings much brings something for > everybody,
> And each individual returns to his home > satisfied.

And, after all, the responsibility for making THE MENNONITE interesting and worthwhile does not devolve on the editor alone. If we as members of a body of Christians really love one another and are interested in the upbuilding of Christ's kingdom within us and round about us, we are going to use the paper as a medium of exchange of thought. And many will contribute their share in making it a real power for good. A score or more of our most interested readers have already promised their help as contributors and we hope that others may join the group. In this way we can have real fellowship with one another, and with God's help become a blessing to many.

What Can Others Do For The Mennonite

In an endeavor to give some suggestions as to what the membership of the General Conference can do to make THE MENNONITE a real help and blessing may we propose the following:

The editor is trying to line up a force of reporters or correspondents for each church with the request that they may make brief postal card reports of any worthwhile event or doings that take place within their organization for the "Jottings", and some longer reports as "Correspondence". As a guide for such reports and correspondence we should like to remind the contributors of the old Latin adage, "multum in parvo" (Much in compact form).

The pastors of the churches can help create interest in the paper by referring to worthwhile articles found in it.

If a brother or sister feels especially blessed by some sermon listened to, why not pass the good thing on by reporting the gist of it in a short write-up or, if not that, kindly request the minister to do it.

If any of you read a book that is particularly helpful and suggestive for Christian living, write and send in a brief summary or a book review of it.

If in your reading you find something that could be made instructive and edifying in the form of an editorial why not pass it on to the editor in the form of your choice or for the editor to put it in shape.

If any of you make a study of some Bible truth or teaching and are willing to write it up in concentrated form, send it in for THE MENNONITE.

If you find a wholesome story that children would enjoy, make a clipping of it and send it in.

If in your Christian life you have or have had some experience to know which would serve to lift up or give comfort to others, send it in.

If you find or know of a good poem in season send us a copy, but shorter ones will be preferable.

And so one might go on. But thoughtful readers will think of other ways by which they can make contributions.

However, may the editor again suggest that any article of the type "multum in parvo" is apt to find more favor with the great majority of readers than a lengthy one or one long-drawn-out. In his experience he finds this to be the case: When he reads our church papers or other publications of that nature he usually reads the shorter ones first, leaving longer ones for later. And then the pity of it is that in the end he may not get back to them. Articles filling a column or a page are more popular than those covering several pages. If a treatise is such as to require several pages it could be probably be offered in logical parts, in a series running through several issues of the paper.

Obituaries, unless they are of persons widely and prominently known in the Conference had better be presented in rather condensed form if they are to be generally read.

Nobody should be afraid to write. The editor will be glad to do what he can to make any article presentable, if requested to do so by the writer.

A WORD ABOUT THE OUTGOING EDITOR

After reading the touching farewell of the passing editor in the last issue of the Mennonite, we feel that it is only fair to make a short response thereto. As he has so closely pointed out to us, the conditions under which he edited the Mennonite twenty-five years have been far from normal. But in spite of all handicaps he has provided us with reading material that has been wholesome, ennobling, sound in doctrine, and yet in keeping with the progress of the times through which we are passing. He has steadily pointed onward and upward toward the goal which is in Christ our Saviour. And the beneficent influence that he has thus exerted only eternity can reveal and measure. Can we realize what vast opportunities and power for good an editor of a Christian journal has in weekly appearing before an audience made up of about 1000 homes, in talking to them through the printed page? Brother Grubb has been conscious of all this and under the circumstances has done his best to serve us. Who could do more? So he has honestly earned the, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant" in the task required of him. It is sure to bring eternal reward!

On Christmas Morning Miss Irma Schneck, missionary to Africa, arrived in Pandora, Ohio, on her furlough.

NEW YEAR REFLECTIONS

As we enter upon a new year we all have our reflections. We turn away from the past and meditate upon the future, for which we have our hopes and wishes. We my also form resolutions. Our conference boards and the officials of our colleges and academies also have their plans and aspirations. They have been invited to express themselves briefly in the columns of the Mennonite. Below are the contributions of those who have responded:

This Mission Page

This page has been kindly granted to the Mission Boards by the Publication Board gratis for mission material fresh from the field, or other inspiring and instructive mission articles.

In general, our readers appreciate short gripping articles more than the long ones. So our policy is to give the short articles as a rule the preference.

We believe that whatever grips the missionaries on the field in the way of needs, opposition, success, or failures will ordinarily also grip the readers if presented in a warm and hearty way.

We urge our dear readers to read these articles regularly. Even if now and then one is long or less inspiring than others, it pays to read them all for information and inspiration. And, dear parents, please urge your children to do the same. The Bible and the church papers should have the first place in the reading in a Christian home. The first mission command of Christ was: "Lift up your eyes and look into the field, for it is ripe." O that all our church members would obey this command, the other mission commands would then become much easier. One cannot help but be interested in a ripe harvest field that has not enough laborers. Therefore, "Give attendance to reading" as Paul puts it in I Tim. 4:13. That will also lead to intercessory prayer. Our missionaries write that "if prayer ever was necessary, then it is now." P. H. Richert

Home Missions

"I really do not know that our Board has any new plans in regard to the use of the Mennonite. We have always reported the news from the field in short items and extracts from the reports of the workers. I intend to do that during the next year and occasionally one of the workers or members of the Board will write a direct letter for publication. I report the actions of the Board in their meetings and between meetings. The only matter that is evident to the Board is the fact that our people are not sufficiently acquainted with Home Mission work, but that evidently is not the fault of the lack of news in the paper, because many do not read the church papers, but they need to be informed from the pulpit which so many of our preachers are not doing. It is therefore necessary that a member of the Board or one of the workers visit the churches and give first hand information. The board intends to send one of the Canadian workers to the various conferences this year to speak on Home Missions with special emphasis on the work in Canada which is our greatest field today."

Publication

The Board of Publication wishes all those who read these lines that happiness and those blessings that can be had and experienced in the fellowship with Jesus Christ and there only.

May our Board also hope or, dare we say, take it for granted, that many of the readers of our papers, particularly the pastors, will consider themselves a committee of one to solicit and send in at least one new subscription to one of the papers, THE MENNONITE, CHRISTLICHER BUNDESBOTE and, not to forget, DER KINDERBOTE AND JUNIOR MESSENGER.

May we further take it for granted that the churches will seriously consider the work of publication as a missionary enterprise and take at least one good offering during this year for the support of this work. A thousand more subscriptions and an average of twenty cents from each member of the conference, for 1937 and 1938, will raise enough money so that we can buy and have our own printing plant.

Education

The board of education looks forward to 1937 in terms of opportunity to render a larger service to the church and the young people through the promotion of a program of Christian education.

A notable step in the effort of the Board to advance this cause was made recently when a meeting was called with the board members and faculties of our colleges to discuss Mennonite higher education.

This meeting was held at Bluffton, Ohio, on December 29 with representatives from Bethel, Freeman, and Bluffton colleges and the seminary board invited to be present. A report soon to appear will present some of the matters discussed at that time.

The board is not only interested in our colleges and in a seminary but is keenly alive to our needs in providing leadership for our young people in their various activities and in the promotion of Christian training in our Sunday schools and young people's organizations.

The Board is watching with interest the reception accorded our new quarterly. Dr. Warkentin and his staff have given earnest and prayerful attention to its preparation, and we believe the results are accordingly.

The Board of Education feels that many of our people have not yet caught the vision of our educational program. We hope to help them see that an efficient effective Christian training may be offered our young people. A. S. Rosenberger, Secretary

Bluffton College

Bluffton College looks forward to the coming year with hope and anticipation. This is so in part because the times are indisputably somewhat better and the outlook is financially brighter for all Christian institutions and causes as a result.

Bluffton College also looks forward to the future with greater hope because she feels that she has a plan for meeting the financial problems brought about through the dark days of the depression. As her financial structure is being rebuilt we can look forward more definitely to permanency as a Christian institution.

Bluffton College looks more courageously forward to the future because of a spirit of harmony and cooperation that characterizes her life as we go on into the new year.

Last but not least, Bluffton College is hopeful because her faith in things that can not be shaken. Many things have been shaken during the past few years but the conviction of the need of Christian education has not been shaken nor has faith in a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God. Bluffton College also believes that an institution that serves her constituency will not go unrecognized; and thus with the spirit of trusting God and serving mankind, we approach the new year with whatever tasks and problems may bring us. A. S. Rosenberger, Pres.

Bethel College

The following statement of aims was adopted by the Faculty May 2, 1934, and by the board of Directors May 11, 1934:

I. DENOMINATIONAL: Bethel College was established and exists primarily in order to serve the group of over 100,000 persons of the Mennonite faith west of the Mississippi River by providing the facilities for a thorough Christian higher education for their young people. For this denominational constituency the school aims to provide (1) a spiritual force making for integration and progress of a people with a history going back to the time of the Reformation; (2) a center for the conservation of the best elements of historic Mennonitism, including a positive attitude in support of the principles of peace, simplicity of life, habits of industry, integrity of character, sacredness of the home, respect for personality, the authority of the Scriptures, and freedom of conscience; (3) an opportunity of a Christian college education to many who would otherwise not avail themselves of one; and (4) a trained leadership and more intelligent and consecrated laymen for the church. By rendering this service to the denomination Bethel College aims better to enable Mennonites to make their contribution to the present and future generations."

Ed. G. Kaufman, President

Freeman Junior College

The primary aim of Freeman Junior College is to serve its constituency. While it desires to preserve for the future the splendid ideals of a people, it by no means adheres to a narrow sectarianism. It believes that the ideal upon which all education must be based, if it is to be effective, is the ideal of Jesus. It believes that there should at all times be evident a wholesome Christian atmosphere on the campus. From this fundamental aim Freeman Junior College will not deviate in the year to come. On the contrary, the zeal toward the accomplishment of this aim will be intensified. J. D. Unruh, Pres.

German English Academy

Rosthern, Sask., Canada

With the beginning of a new year the German English Academy has special reason for encouragement and rejoicing from the fact that many of its students are manifesting a deep interest in the Christ life. The world is drifting from its only safe refuge, from the only panacea for all its ills whether they be considered from the individual, national or international standpoint; the only solution for the world's problems, be they economic or political is Christ. We are glad when we can send into the world's vineyard graduates who themselves have experienced the goodness of the Lord and who will devote their lives to carrying the message of God's love and mercy to sinful humanity. Though we teach the various branches of the academic programme, our chief aim is to show students that there can be no real life or happiness without Christ, for "in Him all fulness dwells".

Relief Work—A Mission Work

There was a time, no doubt, when many people thought of Mission as work done by ministers, evangelists, or missionaries. This may be applied also to the constituency of our General Conference. This frame of mind gradually changed as time went on. Not until the last few years, have the minds and hearts of the people repeatedly been so impressed with the fact, that all the Departments of our General Conference do mission work in one way or another. So it is not out of the way when we say, RELIEF WORK—A MISSION WORK. There may not be any other way by which a person's heart may be so readily touched, as when you render service in a material way to one who finds himself absolutely helpless and wanting. If by rendering material help, we can touch the hearts of men, it is comparatively easy to offer them spiritual food and find them receptive for same.

In speaking for the Emergency Relief Board as a body, I am positive, that I am expressing the sentiment of each individual member, that it is our humble but earnest desire to render service to God, in the calling we have been placed, in rendering service to the needy and destitute.

May God bless all of you, who have so liberally supported this branch of Mission work, and may he make your hearts and hands willing to continue in this work in the New Year God has so graciously giveen us, is our earnest prayer.

Emergency Relief Board,
John C. Mueller, Sec.

A COMPARISON

The Seventh Day Adventists in their annual conference report show the following: "We have 152,000 members in the United States, and in our efforts to comply with the great commission of our Lord Jesus Christ to 'proclaim the Gospel to all nations' we are now active in 295 countries and islands and teach and preach in 504 languages and dialects. We have in this vast field 22,254 evangelists, doctors, nurses, colporteurs, publication-workers, and teachers. In the whole world we sustain 123 sanitariums, hospitals, drugstores for the poor, and clinics. Besides, we have 2,271 schools with 95,000 pupils and students and have 69 publishing houses which print and publish the Gospel and the publications on health and sanitation in 161 different languages. In the White Memorial Hospital and Clinic in Los Angeles, California, 100,000 patients are treated annually."

How can this denomination accomplish so vast a work with such results? Answer: Because they have adopted "Biblical Tithing" besides "Freewill Offerings." Remember, dear reader, that this denomination, which is called "heretic"—and surely it is erring in some teaching—is only seventy-five years old, while our dear denomination, split up into seventeen branches, dates back four hundred years, and our General Conference also seventy-five years with but a beginning in seeing the necessity and importance of a publication work that would and should produce results to make our churches grow and be active for our Lord Jesus Christ who suffered the Cross for cur salvation. Let your oilwells and bank-deposits flow more freely to Berne, Indiana, and Brother E. W. Baumgartner will surely be delighted and the churches will be revived. May God help us.

J. J. Balzer

Last spring the ministers' conference of the Western and Northern districts was held in the Bethesda church at Henderson, Nebr. This brought together the largest number of ministers that had ever assembled in that community. Among others, topics on the second coming of Christ were on the program, topics usually shunned at conferences.

Sunday School Lesson

January 10, 1936

NEW LIFE IN CHRIST

John 2:1 to 3.36 Printed, John 3:1-17

In our lesson Nicodemus, a Pharisee, member of the Sanhedrin, a ruler of the Jews (v1) comes to Jesus as a cautious inquirer and we believe a sincere one. The educated, cultured, refined leader among the Jews courteously opens up the conversation (v2).

The New Birth Necessary

In John's very brief summary of this heart to heart talk, Jesus deals with the very heart of true religion. Solemnly, pointedly He declares to the surprised and, perhaps amazed, Nicodemus that he must experience a new birth (v3) to enter into and enjoy the blessings of the Kingdom of God. This FUNDAMENTAL TRUTH needs much emphasis today. Man is naturally sinful, no good deeds can change his heart. Careful training and betterment of outward conditions can not bring spiritual life into the soul, heart. The spiritual must have its source in Christ dwelling in the heart, creating a new nature.

Nature of the New Birth

It is not physical but spiritual (vs 5,6). The Holy Spirit is the effective agent in this new birth. It contains an element of mystery. The Holy Spirit and the soul can not be seen. We do not know exactly how the Spirit does His work, (v8) but we can plainly see the results in wicked persons made good, in mean, evil-minded lives transformed, in slaves to sinful habits being enabled to live victorious Christian lives. The inner change transforms the outward life. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

This new life in Christ is a reality. Christ promised it to His followers (John 10:10). Many have experienced it through the centuries (2 Cor. 5:17). Twice-born men are living witnesses.

How Attain the New Birth?

The new birth, "born of the Spirit", is a divine work available for all, yet attainable only through meeting the condition necessary to have eternal life (vs 15, 16). We must believe in, accept, receive the Son of God, lifted up on the sacrificial Cross (v 14). This faith is a living, a heart faith which commits our all into His hands, surrenders the will fully to Him and trusts Him for salvation here and eternally. There must be a turning away from sin, a penitent turning to God.

Cost of the New Birth

New Life in Christ is offered freely to all, God's gift of free grace. The cost of it to Him, however, passes all our ability to understand. It invo'ved the sending of His only begotten Son to live with and die for men. Jesus clearly states this fact (vs 16, 17). The Sacrifice must be made and this is the supreme demonstration of God's love. It should awaken our undying gratitude and a determination to faithful service and love to Him. Christianity is the only religion that teaches that God so loved man that He gave, sacrificed in man's behalf, for man's eternal salvation.

The essential point of our lesson is that there is New Life for each believer through the forgiveness of sin in a new birth by God. This new birth is essential to kingdom entrance. Goodness of conduct, improvement and refinement of the natural man can not suffice.

Practical Truth.

New Life is provided through Christ to all who will repent and believe.

SERMON SKETCH

J. N. Smucker

THE PARABLE OF THE FRIEND AT MIDNIGHT

Luke 11:5-8

One day the disciples found Jesus in prayer. They noted that He really met somebody. To Him, prayer was not a Farce nor a Fetish but a Force. The disciples felt the need of such an experience. Jesus taught them the Lord's Prayer, and told them a story. A man received an unexpected guest at midnight. He was greatly embarrassed because he could not provide true Oriental hospitality. He went to a sleeping friend with his need. With much persistency he gained his request.

I Prayer Denotes Dominant Desire

The man in the story knew exactly what he needed. Much unanswered prayer is due to lack of feeling of definite need. Prayer is the plea of our all-controlling desire. This desire must be definite and very real. Common desires which may grip us: yearning for fellowship with God; for cleansing and forgiveness; for courage to adequately meet life; strength for daily tasks; spiritual resources to share with others. The Psalms voice many such moods. This consciousness of imperative need which we are unable to supply, will inspire the spirit and determine the form of our prayer.

II Prayer Means Persistency

The man's desire led to action. He went at the unseemly hour of midnight. He was desperately in earnest. So we. Prayer is not mere wishful thinking but persistent action. To the persistent seekers come the desired ends. If we really "hunger and thirst", we will not give up until we are "filled". Jacob wrestling with the angel, "I will not go, except thou bless me". Jesus in Gethsemane sweat drops of blood until victory was His. We must prove to God that we are sincerely in earnest in this matter of Christian living. No grace is bestowed upon a cheap devotion. God answers only persistent quest.

III Prayer Implies a Friend

The man of the parable knew where to go for help. He had a friend. Our trouble is not that we have no friend, but that we do not make use of Him. Here the teaching is by contrast: the friend in the story was sleepy, ours never "slumbers nor sleeps"; this friend was reluctant to give, our Friend spared not His own Son; the friend of the story was a grudging friend ours is more anxious to give than we are to receive. If sometimes our Friend seems not to heed our requests, it is for a purpose. Perhaps our patience needs to be deepened; our needs clarified; our desires purged. But if an earthly friend grants a worthy and persistent need, "how much more" our Father who is in heaven.

Our Need Of Spiritual Reality

During the past few years, life has become almost too much for us. We have tried many things and they have failed. Men are trying all kinds of systems—Communism, Fascism, Secularism, Materialism—and on every hand defeat is in the offing. An unbridled mania for pleasure is resulting in emptiness and waste, Living a good moral life is leaving a sense of emptiness, and bolstering up the will is proving to be a mere spasmodic urge resulting in vanity. Even religion as many have been living it has seemed superficial and without dynamic.

There are evident reasons to believe that we are passing from one age to another—the old has been discredited, the new has not yet been fully discovered and validated. Man's spirit has been thrown against the spirit of the world and it seems almost too much for him. The complexity of life has caused nerves to become tired, spirits to become jaded, and men's souls cramped. The machine was hailed as a means of making life easier but in many cases we are discovering it is becoming our master. Comforts and luxuries have resulted in flabbiness of the moral and spiritual life and many have become bitter and cynical. A multitude of men and women are becoming aware of these things and are seeking for moral and spiritual purpose.

Students of church history believe another spiritual regeneration like that of Luther, the Wesleys and Moody is due, it is very much needed, and in fact many believe this will be the only hope for a day and a world like this. An increasingly large number of men are looking to religion for true reality. They feel that if religion has worth, it should be of great benefit in a situation like we are facing today. Some of us are finding that the plan of salvation as portrayed in the Bible leading over the hill to a cross does work. We find the Master does say as in Galilee of old: "Peace be still" and "Go sin no more".

This series of devotional meditations is planned for the purpose of showing the way to this spiritual reality. In the following weeks we will endeavor to point to some of the barriers keeping us spiritually poverty-stricken, and then in turn to find the way in which we may come into His Presence, and experience every day to be a wonderful adventure.

During the past few years many of us have found ourselves less victorious in our Christian lives than we believed a loyal follower of Christ should be, and consequently we wrestled with God like Jacob of old and have come to a new surrender. Some of us are finding a new spiritual reality. In making a study of the meaning of Christ and His death we find that mention is made far more often of a present salvation from sin than of a future salvation in a heaven beyond, showing very plainly God's estimate of the relative importance of the two.

In Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians we find that the true Christian life must be experiential, he must lay aside the old nature which belonged to his former course of life, for that nature will crumble to ruin under the passions of moral deceit. The walk suitable to a Christian will come by the renewing of the spirit of the mind, and by putting on the new nature, that divine pattern which has been created to resemble God in righteousness and holiness.

Let us endeavor to live more victoriously. Would it not be a glorious feeling if we could know confidently that God and we are working cooperatively through our lives daily? He will do His part.

OPEN HEARTS AND READY HANDS

One day a teacher said to his class, "Boys, you can all be useful, if you will. If you cannot do good by great deeds you can do little ones". These boys said nothing, but the teacher saw by their looks that they thought he was mistaken. They did not believe that they could be of any use. So he continued, "You think it is not so; but suppose you just try it for a week". "How shall we try it?" asked one of them. "Just keep your eyes open and your hands ready to do anything good that comes in your way this week, and tell me next Sabbath if you have not managed to be useful in some way or other," said the teacher. "Agreed," said the lads; and so they parted.

The next Sabbath the boys gathered around the teacher with smiling lips and eyes so full of light that they fairly twinkled like the stars.

"Ah, lads, I see by your looks that you have something to tell me."

"We have, sir; we have!" they all said together. Then each told his story.

"I," said one, "thought of going to the well every morning to save mother trouble and time. She thanked me so much, was so greatly pleased, that I mean to keep on doing it for her."

"And I said another boy, "thought of a poor old woman, whose eyes were too dim to read. I went to her house every day and read a chapter to her from the Bible. It seems to give her a great deal of comfort. I cannot tell how she thanked me."

"I was walking with my eyes open and my hands ready, as you told us," said the fourth boy, "when I saw a little fellow crying because he had lost some pennies. I found them, and he dried his tears, and ran off feeling very happy."

A fifth boy said: "I saw my mother was very tired one day. The baby was cross, and mother looked sick and sad. I asked mother to put baby into my little wagon. She did so, and I gave him a grand ride round the garden. If you had only heard him crow, and seen him clap his hands, it would have done you good; and oh! how much brighter mother looked when I took the baby indoors again!"

WHAT DOES THE HOME MEAN TO ME?

(Echo from a Girls Home in Canada)

The "Home" is primarily a place for me where I become acquainted with God and God's Word. How few of us girls still have the opportunity to enjoy religious instruction. How many of the younger girls really first learn to know the Bible at our Bible study hours in the "Home."

Here in the "Home" we experience much. Here we are led away from the temporal things and are pointed to that which is eternal. The many visits from ministers and missionaries, how they lift us and encourage us to do our part in building God's Kingdom. Here in the "Home" we are strengthened for our daily tasks, which we need very much.

Furthermore, the "Home is to me a place where I may go in and out as a gladly-seen sister. Here we find friends for life. When we come into the "Home" we are given a friendly reception. When one of the girls has been absent from Winnipeg for a long time and then returns, she is greeted with a big "hello." We are so glad to meet and we always gladly return.

Here we feel that we have equal rights. Here every girl is a "personality," and not merely a maid for all things. I gladly linger in the "Home." Here I may shake off all bonds and show myself as I am. I must admit, it is often quite noisy in the "Home," but please do not blame us for this. The whole week one must be quiet and do one's work in solitude. On Thursday and Sunday here in the "Home" we may laugh and sing, tell stories, and sometimes also weep. By our sisters we are understood, as they themselves often feel the same way.

The "Home" is for us an "at home." Many of us have no other "at home" any more. For others it serves as an "at home" in a foreign land. Our dear Lena, whom most of us call "Mamma," does her best to make this "Home" a real "at home" for us. The coffee which she prepares for us at five o'clock we gladly drink, especially in winter time. In summer time she prepares for us vegetable soup as mother at home does. For months this is often the

Closed for Inventory

The modern merchant keeps a perpetual inventory of his merchandise, so that at any time he may tell how much merchandise of each kind he has on hand. He goes to considerable trouble and expense that this record in his office is correct and up to date at all times. He does so because the modern merchant has learned from bitter experience that it pays to know "where you're at."

In Chicago, each Christmas season, a group of teachers meet to share with one another the experpiences of the year that has just passed. Most of these experiences are given in the form of very scientific papers which, for the ordinary layman, would be difficult to interpret. But the final session is devoted to an informal expression of any thought, wish, or idle dream which may occur to the teachers present. At this session at least no one is expected to "present proof for his opinion." This is the famous "Visions and Dreams Session."

Do you, personally, every so often, have a "Visions and Dreams Session" with yourself? Do you, personally, keep a perpetual inventory of yourself, to know where "you're at"? These two ideas are very closely connected, for they are, respectively, and together a mighty source of power—power for right living.

Get a pencil, and we shall proceed. Read carefully the questions in the Personal Inventory Blank on this page. If you can honestly answer Yes to the question, place a check-mark in the first column; if you must answer No, place your check-mark in the right-hand column.

Through? Good! Now add all the Yes-marks, divide by the number of questions—ten—and there's your score. Simple, isn't it? That's your inventory.

And now for the "Visions and Dreams." Take each statement to which you have had to answer No, and repeat it quietly, but definitely to yourself—not too fast, now—thinking definitely of each word, and of the entire thought as you repeat it to yourself. Soon you will find that your whole being has become exhilarated, and you will feel surging through your whole being a sense of the awareness of God in you. You will find yourself definitely and

Personal Inventory Blank

		Yes	No
1.	It has been my sincere purpose in the year that has passed to look hopefully for God's expression of Himself in my life daily.	——	——
2.	I have found God frequently as a source of wisdom and strength in the little tasks of life, day by day.	——	——
3.	I have found genuine joy in the making of new friends in the year that has passed	——	——
4.	I can see now where the experiences of the past year have been for my good, even though at the time they seemed difficult to bear	——	——
5.	My relations with other members of my family and those with whom I work shoulder-to-shoulder during the week have definitely improved, and the spirit of love and understanding have become stronger during the year that is past	——	——
6.	My relations with my employer are more pleasant, shot through with more confidence and with the mutual desire to serve	——	——
7.	I have learned better to accept criticism in the spirit of gratitude	——	——
8.	I shared with others my joy in serving God	——	——
9.	I have shown tolerance and consideration toward all men	——	——
10.	My relation to Christ has become more definite and more satisfying in the course of the past year	——	——

SCORE: Total YES (———) divided by 10 equals (———) per cent clearly setting out upon a path which, before you know it, will enable you to answer Yes to it. Visions and dreams are good; we can't get along without them—but they must be definite.

Spent a few moments daily, not only with statements such as are given in the personal inventory herewith, but with noble statements from the Bible, or wherever you may find them. Repeat them not so much with the idea of memorizing them, but with the idea of letting them become a part of yourself—of blending your mind with the mind of Christ—and you will find in time that your mind HAS become ONE with Christ.

Now one more thing: If this is good for you as an individual, and we believe that it is, why would this not be a good thing for your Christian Endeavor Society? Prepare an inventory blank similar to the one shown, and put in questions which will really check up the members of your group against the aims and objectives which you think your society should achieve.

Don't forget: They belong together—Personal, perpetual inventories, and Visions and Dreams.

INTERMEDIATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Topic: How Should We Use The Bible?
2 Tim. 3:15; 2:15

Daily Quiet Hour

Jan. 11 Teaching the Bible. Luke 4:16-21
Jan. 12 Feeding the soul. Acts. 20:28-36
Jan. 13 Searching the Word. Acts 17:10-15
Jan. 14 Sowing the word. Matt. 13:1-9, 18-23
Jan. 15 The Word in the heart. Col. 3:16, 17.
Jan. 16 Doers of the word. Jas. 1:22-27.
Jan. 17 How should we use the Bible? 2 Tim. 3:15; 2:15.

Advance Preparation

1. The Bible should again hold a prominent place in the room decorations. See the suggestions for last week.
2. An interesting and helpful part of the meeting can be prepared as follows: A few days or a week before the meeting take a number of blank sheets of paper and type the following question across the top: "What method of using the Bible have you found most helpful? Why?" (Please answer briefly). Give these to a number of people in the church and community, whom you know to be students of the Bible. Have them returned in time to be read at the meeting.
3. By means of a poster or an announcement in the church bulletin ask the members to come prepared to give their favorite Bible verse from memory.

Preprayer Circle

Have a Bible verse for each one present to look up and read before you ask for prayer participation. Ps. 46:10a; Ps. 119:2-9; 11:18-105; 1 Pet. 1:24b, 25a. Add others.

Praise Service

Select two or three songs, including some that refer to the Bible. Find the number and select the stanzas you wish to sing and write it in your program.

Announcements

The missionary committee should have at least one brief item of missionary news to tell the society each Sunday evening.

A Suggested Worship Service

Topic announced by the leader.
Hymn: "Break Thou the Bread of Life", 1 and 4.
"The Bible Speaks" (Read by someone holding an open Bible)
Scripture Reading: 2 Tim. 3:15; 2 Tim. 2:15
Favorite Verses from memory. (After the leader has read the Scripture he can explain that one way to use the Bible is to store it in our memories. Ps. 119:11 gives one reason for memorizing Scripture. With the open Bible in his hand let him quote a verse from memory, then pass it on to one of the members, and as it is passed from member to member each one can give his favorite verse as he stands and holds the open Bible.
Prayer. Thanksgiving for the Bible. Ask 3 to lead before the meeting. Close the prayer time with the singing of "Spirit of the Living God."

Discussing The Topic

1. Leader's opening remarks. Speak of the fact that there are wrong and right ways of using the Bible. The benefit we get from it depends as much on how we use it as a prescription for a sickness does.
2. What the Bible says about how it is to be used. Use references from the daily readings and others you may select.
3. What students of the Bible say. Call for the reading of the testimonies that have been gathered on how to use the Bible.
4. Questions answered.

Closing Moments

Poem:

"Thy word is like a garden, Lord,
With flowers bright and fair

And every one who seeks may pluck
A lovely cluster there.
Thy word is like a deep, deep mine;
And jewels rich and rare
Are hidden in the mighty depths
For every searcher there.

O may I love Thy precious word;
May I explore the mine;
May I its fragrant flowers glean;
May light upon me shine.

Benediction. Ps. 19:14

The Bible Speaks

Just use me—I am the Bible.
I am God's wonderful library.
I am always, and above all, the truth.
To the weary pilgrim I am a good strong staff.
To the one who sits in gloom I am a glorious light.
To those who stoop beneath heavy burdens I am sweet rest.
To him who has lost his way I am a safe guide.
To those who have been hurt by sin I am a healing balm.
To the discouraged I whisper glad messages of hope.
To those who are distressed by the storms of life I am an anchor.
O child of man, to best defend me, just use me!

—Record of Christian Work

Questions For Discussion

1. Should we follow one method of using the Bible? Name as many as you can. What is to be gained by using a variety of methods.
2. What is to be gained by reading the Bible through? What are some dangers in following this method?
3. Of what value is the memorization of Bible passages? Name as many benefits as you can that are derived from memorizing Bible passages.

I would head it "In the Footsteps of Jesus?" Under this heading could be the program, framed at the bottom and on one side in a scenery of footprints and a palm tree. The pin-ons could have the same setting, simplified, with this question on it: In whose footsteps are you walking?

only Mennonite food that we get. At Christmas and Easter time she always prepares a special supper for us.

Thus efforts are made to make our "Home" ever more home-like. If a girl is looking for a job, she first goes to the "Home." Many of us girls have been sick in bed in the "Home" and have received good care. Is any one in need, Lena always hears and helps every one. How thankful the girls were when the "Home" was opened ten years ago. Now they had a place where they could linger on their free days. Are we sufficiently thankful for this "Home?" My wish is that we might all fully recognize the value of the "Home" and thank God and the Mission Board for it. May God keep the "Home" for us a long time. —Liese Klassen

KEEP EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

(By Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, President, Bethel College)

Jesus As A Teacher

There have probably been more books written on Jesus Christ than on any other subject. Where so much has been written, it is surprising to find that only very little pertains to Jesus as a teacher. To be sure, He came to save, and His work was as the Savior, but He was also a teacher: "We know thou art a teacher come from God." Scholars have considered Jesus from many angles, but somehow only very few have studied Him as a teacher. That Jesus was a teacher—the greatest of all time—would probably not be denied by any Christian. Yet, somehow those interested in education have often failed to bring that interest together with their interest in Christ. We all believe in Christian education. If education is to be Christian, it must be Christ-centered. This implies much, the least of which is that it must be built on the Christ pattern. It becomes, therefore, important that we study Jesus as a teacher—as the Master Teacher—as well as the Savior of Man.

PUBLICATION NOTES

The Mennonite and Bundesbote are published each week of the year except the week of the Fourth of July and the last week of the year. This has been our custom ever since the papers were published. Some readers seem to forget this.

All orders for subscriptions or renewals to the Mennonite, the Year Book, Kinderbote-Junior Messenger, and the Sunday School Quarterly should be sent to the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana, not to the editors.

For reasons which we prefer not to divulge here the Year Book is belated this year. Please be patient. As soon as it is out copies will be sent to all advance subscribers of the Mennonite free of charge. Subscribers to both the Mennonite and Bundesbote can get the two papers with free copies of the Bundesbote Kalender and Year Book, for $2.70, if payment is made in advance. Advance subscribers to either paper, at $1.50, get either the Kalender or the Year Book free.

We are sorry to learn that some of the packages with Sunday School Quarterlies came through the mails in not very good shape. One cause for this is the terribly cramped and crowded condition of the mails just at the time these packages were sent. Another appears to be the rather light paper of the wrappings. Will try to do better next time. About 10,500 Quarterlies have been ordered so far. This is a fine showing, and we thank all the churches who are so splendidly cooperating with us.

THE REVISED KINDERBOTE

With the beginning of the new year "der Kinderbote", our children's paper, will appear under a double name, "Der Kinderbote and Junior Messenger", and will have four editors instead of one as heretofore. Details of the change were published in No. 45, Nov. 17, 1936, of both of our weekly church papers. Necessary explanations will also appear in the first new number of the little journal itself. Suffice it to say, here, that the Board of Publication has engaged Rev. Jacob H. Jansen of Vancouver, British Columbia, as editor-in-chief and editor of the German section, and Mrs. D. O. Rupp, Moundridge, Kansas, Mrs. J. M. Suderman, Buhler, Kansas, and Mrs. T. A. van der Smissen, Beatrice, Nebraska, as assistant editors of the English part. In making this change the Board had principally two needs in mind:

1. We felt that the paper should be so planned that it may serve the thousands of German reading children in Canada and also the large body of mainly English reading children in the States. And since Brother Janzen is one of the leaders north of the Divide as well as a versatile writer, he is competent to furnish the children there interesting reading matter through his section and at the same time make linkage with the young readers on this side.
2. To fill the little journal with a variety of reading material that will appeal to the many-sided interests of the children.

Subscribers now on the mailing list will receive the paper at once. To new subscribers it will be sent at the usual rate: 40 cents per year for single copies, or 30 cents per copy in quantities of ten or more. The paper is issued twice a month, the first and fifteenth, respectively.

Sample copies are being sent to the leaders of the churches or Sunday schools throughout the conference, as far as we know their addresses, to others for the asking. May we have the hearty cooperation of these leaders to do all they can to put this little journal to use in their congregations. A good many of the Sunday schools are taking enough copies for each family attending their school, distributing them on Sundays. That is a very good plan.

CORRESPONDENCE

First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, December 17, 1936—The First Church of Newton has just closed a series of deeply spiritual evangelistic meetings which were held for one week by Rev. P. R. Schroeder of Freeman, S. D. The Bible hour of the afternoon was conducted in the German language, while the evening meetings were held in the English language. In addition to the evangelistic services, Brother Schroeder also gave a few addresses relative to his last summer's trip to Europe, "The Mennonite World Congress", "The World Sunday School Convention," and "Walls and Bridges," each showing to some extent present European trends as he observed them. A deeper and stronger spiritual life is felt in the congregation as a result of these meetings.

The annual business meeting of the Sunday School was also held recently. The report of the many diverse activities of the school showed that there had been considerable growth and progress made during the past year. Bro. Ted Claassen and Bro. G. H. Willms were re-elected superintendent and assistant superintendent, respectively.

Members of the church with defective hearing are not as much at a disadvantage in hearing the services since the installation of an amplifying system two weeks ago. The system is a gift to the church from Brother C. F. Claassen. Six persons can be accommodated at each service.

Extensive arrangements are being made by the Sunday School for the Christmas exercises on Christmas day. On Sunday evening, Dec. 20, the choir of the church, directed by Prof. W. H. Hohmann presented the sacred cantata, "The Coming of the King" by Dudley Buck.

Beatrice, Nebr., Dec. 3, 1936

Dear Editor and Readers:

We are enjoying fine weather but we could use some rain before the winter sets in.

During the month of July it was our privilege to commemorate the twenty-fifth birthday of our hospital. The main speakers for the occasion were the Reverends P. P. Wedel and J. E. Entz, the former serving us in the English and the latter in the German language. Both stressed the importance of being thankful for God's grace and guidance through the past twenty-five years.

In late summer our congregation decided that it had been a long time since the Western District Conference had been held here. So, together with the Second Mennonite Church in the city, we entended an invitation to both the Ministerial and Western District committees, and we were privileged to have their acceptance. The meetings were held from Oct. 20 to 23. The attendance was large, the Reception Committee reported 300 delegates and guests from the various churches.

The weather and the roads were very nice, so that we could enjoy all sessions of the conference. We hope that the visitors enjoyed their stay as much as we enjoyed having them with us.

During the session Rev. P. R. Schroeder, President of the General Conference, gave several interesting talks on his trip abroad.

Our conference spirits were shocked, when on Oct. 24, one of our dear church members, Mrs. H. C. Jantzen, was very suddenly called to her heavenly reward.

Our church choir gave a short song service on Thanksgiving morning. Both the Senior and Junior Choirs are practicing a song program for Christmas.

Rev. T. A. van der Smissen is teaching our Bible School and assisting in the English ministerial work. The school has a fair attendance, after it had been closed for a year

Halstead, Kansas, Dec. 28, 1936

Saturday, Dec. 26, marked the sixtieth anniversary of the Sunday school in the Halstead Mennonite church. On Sunday morning at the close of the Sunday school hour B. P. Krehbiel gave reminiscences of the past. Daniel Haury who is in his ninety-second year, the only living charter member, was present at the service. D. Langenwalter was the first superintendent. Others that followed him were David Goerz, H. H. Ewert, J. E. Schmidt. These all served a number of years. The Mennonite Seminary was located here and the student body attended our services which made it very interesting. Our hope an prayer is that lasting influence for good may have been the result of this Sunday school.

Missionary Elizabeth Goertz from China recently gave a report of her work in our church. She especially stressed the work in nurse training, in which she is vitally interested. She showed pictures of graduating classes, numerous young men and women in white uniforms. Women are not allowed to nurse men patients. That accounts for so many men nurses. Her listeners were surprised at the progress made along that line in spite of the handicaps they have to face. Flash lights and candles have to be used instead of electric lights. Water has to be carried. They have, however, hope to get these conveniences in course of time. Miss Goertz is cheerfully looking forward to the time when she will return to her field of labor.

Dear Readers of the Mennonite:

Happy New Year to the Editor and Readers of the Mennonite. Again a year has flown by as if on wings. For our church it has been a very prosperous and happy year.

God blessed us in that he permitted us to secure a full time and resident pastor in Rev. Walter Dick from Elbing. We were further blessed in being able to raise the money to erect a parsonage for our pastor on the church lot.

Our C. E. has been very active. A Christmas Pageant in the form of a candle lighting service was sponsored shortly before Christmas.

Elizabeth Goertz, one of our China missionaries, gave a very inspirational talk on our mission work in China recently.

The Christmas season brought many old friends as well as relatives to our midst for family reunions.

Special services are being planned by our pastor for several times next week.

Our little church is growing in membership. May we as members serve to the best of our ability that we may be worthy of many rich blessings that are ours.

Minnie Richert, Corr.

NEWS AND NOTES

Important: The next issue of THE MENNONITE will bring as interesting summary of suggestion which leaders of our churches have made to the editor at his request.. Every member of every church in the General Conference should be given the opportunity to read these suggestions. Sample copies will be available to such that call for them by dropping a card to our business house, Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana.

For further information concerning this Training School write to the undersigned.

The annual Bible Week will be observed from January 31 to February 5. The principal speaker this year will be Rev. P. E. Whitmer, formerly Dean of Witmarsum Seminary and now pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church of Pandora, Ohio. An interesting and helpful series of messages is also being arranged for the afternoons. Various teachers and ministers will bring these.

Hillsboro, Kansas, Dec. 22, '36

Dear Brother Thierstein:

We enclose herewith material that has been left over from time to time in the matter of the Mennonite, so that you can make use of it in the future as you see fit.

According to our agreement and contract the time for printing the Mennonite has expired and since no one has asked us to continue we have taken it for granted that from now on it will be printed in Newton.

It has been a pleasure to serve you people in the past and we hope you have equal service in the future. No doubt when you have editors and printers close together you will get better and more efficient service than we were able to give you.

Very sincerely yours,
Mennonite Brethren Publishing Company,
P. H. Berg, Mgr.

Response to the Above

We, too, can truthfully say that it has been a real pleasure to work with Brother Berg, his assistant, Brother Voth, and the workers in the printshop. They have cooperated with us and accommodated us in every way possible. To arrange weekly the set-up of sixteen pages of printing matter, sent in by an editor fifteen hundred miles away, required much thoughtful planning and, above all, a lot of patience, all of which these Christian co-workers gave unstintingly, with never a murmur. In my relations as a sort of intermediary between the editors and the printers I have learned to know the managers as real Christian gentlemen, and my life has been enriched through contact with them.

Their firm has been a decided help to us in bringing the cost of printing within reach of our ability to pay. Their printing establishment makes them money, which is used to support their college, Tabor College, into whose treasury they have annually been able to pay a sum ranging from $500.00 to $5000.00. But their books will show that our jobs have not been profitable to them. They served them, though, as a means of keeping their force of workers busy.

Of the batch of material for the Mennonite that they have turned over to us, we shall try to use all we can, but fear that a good deal of it is almost too stale by this time.

On Christmas day the editor and his wife attended a rural Mennonite church where a quartet beautifully sang the French Christmas song, "The First Noel", in translation. After the services some of the brethern were wondering what the theme of the song really was, Noel? No ale? No vale? or what? As this song seems to be finding rapid entry into our American churches, due to certain charms that it has, it may interest some of the readers what it is really about. "Noel" is a French word meaning Christmas. It is a corruption of the Latin word, "Natalis", meaning birthday. The songs sung some centuries ago during the Christmas season in France were known as "Noels" or "Nowels" and were much like the English Christmas carols. It is hoped that this song will not replace our own good Christmas song, "Silent Night, Holy Night", which is after all the best.

It is getting to be more and more a necessity for colleges to furnish part-time work for many of their students. Working one's way through college is becoming the fashion rather than the exception as it used to be. And in the long run this will prove to be a blessing rather than a burden or obstacle. For life, to be of real service, means struggle and toil, and it is well for young people to get used to it in time. Among the Mennonite schools Bethel is featuring a printshop where all the school's and some of our cnference printing is done; at Hesston College they are running a broom factory, at Goshen College a shirt factory and at Tabor College an overall factory.

The Quakertown Free Press reports that Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, pastor of the Lorraine Ave. Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, who was extended a call by the Grace Mennonite Church of Landsdale, Pa. Dec. 13, has accepted the call and will take charge of his new position as soon as Wichita has found a successor.

The Salem Mennonite Church near Dalton, Ohio, recently presented the very dramatic Peace Play, "The Eleventh Mayor". It was very enthusiastically received by a large and appreciative audience. The group is planning to present it to some of the neighboring churches in the near future. It presents a way out of war.

Recently the Ladies' Mission society of the Mennonite church at Aberdeen, Idaho, had a three day quilting session. The King's Daughters met at the home of Mrs. John Hunsinger to prepare fancy work and cook food for a sale to be held soon afterward. The True Blue girls spent their entire session making flowers for the bride of Miss Marie Schirmer's adopted son Daniel, whose marriage was soon to take place.

Occassionlly one hears of Mennonites serving their state or country in a legislative capacity. At the recent election Peter F. Funk of Aberdeen, Idaho, and J. A. Schowalter of Halstead, Kansas, were elected to their respective state legislatures.

The Y. P. S. of the Bethany Mennonite Church of Freeman, S. D. sponsored a musical program for the purpose of securing funds to be sent to the Bowery Mission, New York City. The offering received should feed approximately one hundred tramps and poor people.

On Sunday evening, Dec. 20, the Halstead Mennonite choir of forty-five voices, under the able leadership of its new pastor, Rev. David Wedel, rendered a service of Christmas carols. Each one was preceded by scripture reading leading up to the carol suited to the Scripture. The service was enjoyed by all. It manifested the real Christmas spirit.

Recently the large chorus of the Mennonite church at Berne, Indiana, rendered Haendel's "Messiah" before a crowded church, under the direction of Prof. Lentz of Bluffton College. In return about thirty of the singers motored to Bluffton to assist the professor and his chorus there to entertain a large audience with the same masterpiece.

A capacity audience that gathered in the First Mennonite Church of Upland, Calif. on Dec. 6 heard the third annual sacred concert presented by the Upland Oratorio Society, when a chorus of 70 voices sang Haendel's, "The Messiah", under the skilled direction of the Rev. Lester Hostetler. This fine community chorus repeated the program at the First Methodist Church in Ontario, a week later, and again the 20th of December.

As usual the churches of Berne, Indiana, will have a series of evangelistic union meetings January 3-17. The speaker is Dr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, founder and president of Dallas Theological Seminary, Dallas, Texas. The meetings are to be held in the spacious Mennonite church. The services will consist of Bible studies in the forenoon and evangelistic services in the evening. Of services such as these Dr. Chafer says, "My confidence in all of this work has always been not in methods or human influence, but in the prayer of God's people and the working of the Spirit through the Word of God."

Freeman College recently celebrated its Founder's Day. The addresses made bear ample proof that the Mennonite people of that section are really coming to a full appreciation of the great power for good and for enlightenment the school has been during the thirty-three years of its existence. The school has recently weathered seven years of very poor crop conditions, with faculty members working for mere pittances, but they are trusting in God for better times ahead. The editor, who was the pioneer principal of the institution, then called South Dakota Mennonite College, maintains a warm heart for it and the good people there. On this occasion the debts of the school were reduced by the following donations: Dr. Isaac P. Thieszen, $1750.00, Ben P. Miller, $1000.00, and Rev. P. R. Schroeder, $750.00, by cancelling notes due them.

"If organized labor labored to produce more and destroy less, they and the country at large would suffer less. They complain of gas bombs, night sticks being used. We ask why are these weapons being brought into play? Who started the game? If every man who might be working over this country today would go to work and stick to the job, and cut out these strikes, night sticks and gas bombs would not be in evidence and strife would be reduced to a minimum."—C. F. Spicer.

Seven percent of the world's population is in the United States. This seven percent consumes half the world's coffee, three-fourths of the world's silk, two-thirds of the world's crude oil and has more producing power than all the people of Europe.

German religious statistics report that the country has 41 million Protestants, 20 million 700 thousand Catholics, 500 thousand other Christians, 400 thousand Jews, 2 million unbelievers belonging to no church, and 700 thousand without any faith. According to this the Jews haven't nearly all been chased out of the country yet.

The Mennonite churches in and about Mountain Lake, Minn are holding their 26th annual Sunday school convention January 1. There are to be two sessions one in the afternoon in the German language, and one in the evening, in English. Rev. C. G. Zeek of St. Paul and Rev. C. D. Thieszen will be the special speakers. W. J. Toews is secretary of the organization and Mr. C. B. Friesen its president.

Here are a few items from a private letter sent in by missionary P. W. Penner: "in the last two quarters we have celebrated three baptismal festivals. The mass movement of religious conviction is on. Would to God that it might spread like a fire. Do not forget to pray for us, Satan is strong. We had hoped to great new missionaries in our midst this year but it seems as though we will have to wait another year. Our dear daughter Nellie is in her last college year. She writes such attractive letters and opens wide her heart, as becomes a good daughter. This year's rainy season was a good one. The rice harvest was rich, it is now being harvested. The rain fell so evenly. The garden has been made, everything is growing almost visibly. We already have plenty of radishes and lettuce. Brother and sister Dester and sister L. Lehman have safely returned. On Dec. 6 the India Conference is to take place at Janjgir, we are expecting many guests. The nights are wonderfully cool "und der Schweiss hoert auf".

DEATHS

Mrs. Evelyn Winsky Pankratz, daughter of Theodore and Katherine Winsky, was born December 31, 1894 in Harvey County, Kansas. She was baptized upon her confession of faith by Rev. S. S. Baumgartner in the Garden Township Mennonite Church, on October 25, 1908.

She received her education in the Hoffnungsau Preparatory School and Bethel College Academy.

She was united in marriage to Otto B. Pankratz on June 8, 1920.

In the fall of 1922 they together entered the mission field among the Cheyenne Indians in Montana.

After about three years of service, her health failed and they were obliged to discontinue the work, and sought a better climate, coming to Southern California in 1926.

But her health gradually failed. December 5 she was relieved of her suffering at an age of 41 years, 11 months and 4 days. She leaves to mourn her bereaved husband, one son, four daughters, her aged parents, three sisters and one brother and a host of relatives and friends.

We mourn but not as those who have no faith and are assured that she has gone to her Master and eternal home.

She was a member of the Immanuel Church, and Rev. D. D. Eitzen, her pastor, conducted the funeral services.

Mrs. P. J. Goering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. C. Goering of Elyria, McPherson County, Kansas, died at the home of her parents Wednesday, Dec. 22. Funeral services were conducted at the Eden Mennonite Church, Saturday, Dec. 26, 1936.

Our sympathies are extended to Mrs. John J. Brand and children of Upland, California, in the passing away of husband and father on December 12. Funeral services were held at the Mennonite church, Tuesday, December 15 at 2 P. M., pastor officiating. In his death the church has lost a faithful member. John J. Brand, son of John and Elizabeth Brand was born April 15, 1862 in St. Clair County, Illinois. His youth and early manhood was spent near Summerfield where he also united at an early age with the Mennonite Church. He was married December 26, 1892, to Mary Hornburg. Seven children were born to them, four of whom survive: Mrs. Frank Freeman of Cucamonga; Mrs. Ralph Sage of Upland, Frieda Brand at home; and Herbert Brand of Ventura. The family came to California in 1907 and located at Cucamonga where they lived ever since. For a number of years, Mr. Brand suffered a complication of diseases which he bore with grace and patience until he was released to live in a better land where there is neither grief nor crying nor more pain. He attained the age of 74 years, four months and 27 days.

EXPLANATION

To produce a paper it takes an editor to furnish copy betimes, a printshop to set and print it promptly, and a postal service to speed it on to the readers on schedule time. In putting out the first MENNONITE of this year factors number one and three were "Johnnie on the spot." But holiday vacations, delayed shipments of equipment and even sickness played havoc in the printing department, making the issue a week late and seriously lacking in mechanical make-up. The "Shop" is very sorry for thus disappointing the readers and kindly asks their pardon. With a little patience on their part and strenuous efforts on the part of the shop to catch up and do a better job, it is hoped that matters will soon progress normally.

Consecrated Mothers. Recently two mothers passed away whose departure deserves more than passing notice, because they have left behind an heritage of inestimable value. These mothers have raised large families of godfearing children who, as they grew, became a definite influence for good in their respective communities and beyond them. Some of the sons of these mothers have become leaders in our General Conference, while other members of the families have in various ways made valuable contributions to the work of our Mennonite constituency. The mothers referred to are Mrs. Helena Richert Balzer of Goessel, Kansas, and Mrs. Christina Langenwalter of Halstead, Kansas, to whose Christian training and influence we owe such valuable men and women as Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, Rev. P. H. Richert and Mrs. P. A. Penner, formerly Martha Richert, of the India mission field, all three well known throughout our conference. Then there are Prof. P. H. Richert of Bethel College, Dr. J. E. Langenwalter, physician of Twin Falls, Idaho, Miss Margaret Richert, noted nurse of Goessel, Kansas, Bro. J. H. Richert of Newton, Kansas, prominent Mennonite insurance man, before he passed away, and others all useful to their fellowmen. These good mothers were but little known, because like all true Christian mothers they haven't tried to parade themselves before the world. They have quietly and unobstrusively tried to instill the Christ spirit into their children and have been content with letting their light shine in their sons and daughters. Almost all truly great men and women in the world attribute their success to the influence of their mothers. John Quincy Adam says, "All that I am, my mother made me." Herbert Spencer, "One good mother is worth a hundred school masters." Lord Langdale, "If the whole world were put into one scale, and my mother into the other, the world would kick the beam." Dickens, "I think it must somewhere be written that the virtues of mothers shall, occasionally, be visited on their children, as well as the sins of the fathers." Novalis, "To whom do all men, especially those that have attempted something great and worthwhile, owe their power. To none but their mothers! You, mother, have contributed almost everything to the development of my capacities, and whatever good I may do or attempt to do is your work and the best token of gratitude that I can bring to you."

KEEP EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

(By Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman, President, Bethel College)

Jesus as a Teacher

1. Regarding the truth. - One of the first things required of the teacher is an intelligent concern and respect for the truth. Only as one has a passionate regard to know the truth himself will he be able to impart to others the same passion. There must be, not only intelligent knowledge of the truth, but a vital personal possession of it before a person is fit to teach anyone truth. The truth one knows and is trying to teach to others must have become a real part of one's being. Jesus knew and possessed the truth. He said, "I am the truth"; and again, "For this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." He knew the truth, and He was the Truth Incarnate.

"God said, let us make man in our image: "Man said, "Let us make God in our image."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Religious Instruction in our India Schools

We thought that it might be of interest to friends at home to know just what we teach in our classes in India from the religious point of view. That our schools exist for the purpose of building up Christian character is well known. But just what is done in order to attempt that building of Christian character is not so well known. In order to limit myself to a short space I will tell you in this short article only of half of the religious work in only the fifth and the sixth classes in only our boys school here in India. To tell you of all the classes would take too long. Of the other half of the work I will tell you in another article.

In one half of the alloted time for religious instruction in these two classes we studied a course which is called: The spread of the Gospel into all the world. Since children of the ages from eleven to fourteen, as these are in our fifth and sixth classes, are socalled hero worshipers, we studied this course from the biographical point of view. I shall here give you a list of the people whom we studied during the school year 1935-36. They are:

A brief study of the life and work of Christ, in outline form.

The work of Paul Francis of Assisi. Livingstone bringing the good news to Africa, Apolo of Mbogo carries it on. Augustine brings the good news to England and Wycliffe carries it on. Columbia brings it to Scotland and John Knox carries it on Boniface (Winifred) takes it to Germany and Luther carries it on. The Pilgrim fathers to America. Damien takes the good news to the Pacific Islands and Kapolini of Hawaii carries it on. Xavier to Japan and Ishii carries it on; Morison to China and Yen carries it on; Judson to Burma and Ko Tha Byu carries it on. And then Carry to India; and brief studies of the apostle Thomas, Xavier in India, Ziegenbalg, Schwartz, Duff Booth-Tucker, Isabella Thoburn, the two Bannerjis, Rev. Deo, Pandita Ramabai, and Naraiyan Tilak.

All this study of biography was carried on with the thought of movement. The Gospel moved on and on. One person brought it to a country and then one of the country's own people took it up and continued with it; until the good news has spread all over the face of the globe. Together with the study of each biography the special traits of the individual were listed, and then attempts are made by the children to practice such traits in their own lives just now. One outstanding trait found in so many of the people setudied was, "Courage to stand up for the right"; and "untainted love for fellow men." As far as these two traits were seriously considered by the children there was a change noticable in their attitude toward each other.

At the close of the school year we can look back, and say that our study with the children has been worth while. They have been inspired to "go and do likewise". Fraternally, John Thiessen.

He Maketh Wars To Cease

In Psalm 46:9, the inspired writer says: "He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth, He breaketh the bow and cuteth the spear in sunder, He burneth the chariot in the fire."

Should we be asked to give in one short word the most prevailing characteristic, the most striking feature of human history, what would our answer be? "War." The history of all nations, civilized or savage, ancient or modern, is saturated with "War."

Should we be asked to furnish in one word the proof that human nature is sinful and fallen, our answer would again be "War."

Should we be asked, in one word to furnish the proof that the passions of the natural man cannot be bridled by justice or ruled by love, once more the answer would be "War."

Is this always to be the case? Is humanity destined to go on and on under that fearful curse, the result of the fall? Or will the time come when nations shall learn war no more? Yes, that time will come and the prophecy of Isaiah 2:4 and Micah 4:3 will literally be fulfilled.

Christians as followers of the Prince of Peace have a great mission in the world. It is their great and sacred mission to show the world in word and deed the way which is infinitely better than destruction, bloodshed, and terrors of war. This is the way of righteousness, justice, and love. This way may lead to Calvary. What if the price must be paid? It was paid by our Lord and Master and a servant is not above his master. The way to Calvary is the way of final and glorious triumph.

Who makes wars to cease? God alone can make wars to cease. Science cannot do it and why? It does not change one single human heart. It teaches men how more skillfully to destroy one another, to make war more frightful, to wipe out that which human hands patiently and slowly wrought, lo! these many centuries.

Commerce cannot do it! Some of the most cruel and most wicked wars have been waged for the sake of trade and revenue. The World War is a most horrible example of this terrible truth.

Education cannot do it! The most highly-educated and cultured nations of the world are the most militaristic in spite of education. Governments are actuated by unholy ambitions, lust of power, jealousy, evil consciences, and fear. Progress and civilization cannot do it! The most wonderful progress and the highest civilization without the spirit of Christ do not make men unselfish, but lead to self-deification.

Here we touch the most vital spot. The source of war is not in outward circumstances, but in fallen human nature. Such outward circumstances are contributing factors, but not the real cause of war. The lust of gain, exploitation, power, glory, vengeance, fear, etc.—these are the real causes. Read in connection with this James 4:1,2.

Who can make wars to cease? God alone can make wars cease! He could do it by the sweep of His almighty hand, one act of miraculous power. One word of command would sink every warship and paralyze every soldier's arms. He could sweep every ammunition factory and every fortification off the face of the earth into the deepest depth of the sea, where they belong. But that is not God's way of ruling the world. He will not make wars to cease unless the root out of which they grow be plucked up and eradicated.

Here comes in His dispensational plan, yea His infinite, incomprehensible patience with a fallen race. While sin reigns, strife will reign. Let justice and benevolence become universally recognized and war must cease, die out. There never was a war during the Christian era, where right was exclusively on one side and wrong on the other. There never was and never can be a war that was just and right on both sides. Without killing the truth by terribly insidious war propaganda, war mania could not be produced.

How then does God make wars to cease? That which is impossible with man is possible with God. He can bring it about that men love righteousness and hate wickedness. There are millions of God's children today who love justice, are inspired by unselfishness, and endeavor to follow in the footsteps of their Lord and Master. They love their enemies, they bless those who curse them, do good to those who hate them, and pray for those who despitefully use them. If all were like them, war would be impossible.

All these Christian virtues, however, cannot be brought forth by natural man. A heart renewed by the power of the Holy Spirit only is a heart of peace. When will it be? When will men's hearts be changed and wars impossible? When? When righteousness covers the earth as water covers the sea. This time seems a long way off, but God's time will come. In our dispensation the power of evil will ripen out, as well as the power of good; the kingdom of darkness as well as the kingdom of light. The former will ripen out for judgment, the latter for the return and reign of the Prince of Peace.

He maketh wars to cease! So God has promised and so He will do. Sometimes we hear the question and it is a presumptuous one: "If God can make wars to cease and has promised it, why does war continue to scourge mankind?" Why? Because men will not have God's remedy. As long as they are not at peace with God, they cannot be at peace among themselves. Does God look down on human suffering with indifference? The whole Bible is in contradiction to such an idea. In Christ Jesus His father-heart is full of compassion toward human suffering. He has taken the crushing sin-burden upon Himself to the cross, that He may make peace and take away the wall of partition which separated God and man.

No nobler title belongs to our Saviour than "Prince of Peace." Yes, His time will come, when this bloodsoaked, war-ridden dispensation will be at an end. When the author of all evil shall be bound so he cannot any longer deceive the nations. Then the Prince of Peace shall return in great power and glory to establish His Kingdom. Remember, every triumph of the gospel, every heart yielded to the Prince of Peace, every life consecrated to Christ, means a step toward His beneficent reign. We must not lose sight of the fact that we cannot save society without saving the individual. Society is composed of individuals and as go the majority of individuals, so goes society.

Here we see the great mission of our peace organizations. They must not grow into as many independent organizations nor grow away from the Christ-Peace. Recognize the good in the popular, all-inclusive Pacifism, but have not alliance with it. This Pacifism we fear, will go to pieces, when the acid test comes and it will come, sooner or later.

Our peace organizations cannot be in alliance with world powers, nor with the arm of flesh. Their great object cannot be accomplished in this manner.

JESUS, THE WATER OF LIFE

John 4:1-54 Printed, John 4:7-26

Jesus' ministry touched all classes. He and his disciples passing through Samaria, came to Jacob's well, near Sychar about noon. Jesus, who is both human and divine, wearied from the long journey, sat by the well to rest.

An Unusual Interview

A Samaritan woman of unsavory character, came to draw water. She needed Jesus and the Holy Spirit more than water. Jesus saw her soul's need and was eager to meet this deepest need. The woman was astonished at his request for a drink (v9). Jesus forgot all his physical thirst and hunger in his greater hunger and thirst to do the Father's will (v34) and help perishing souls. He did the entirely contrary of all custom, a rabbi talk with a woman and particularly a Samaritan. He broke down the barrier of national and religious jealousies. He asked a small favor that He might confer a great one.

Living Water and How to Get it vs. 10-22

To this seemingly unpromising person, Jesus made an astounding offer. Skillfully he led her thoughts from the natural to the "living water" which he could supply (v10). Two things she needed to know: the "gift of God" i. e. the Holy Spirit (cf. v14) and the wondrous Man speaking to her.

The natural water satisfies but for a short time (v13). The "living water" (v14) quenches the soul thirst, the inner cravings of the soul. It satisfies "whosoever drinketh" thereof. But one must actually drink, not merely read about it or look at it. Then it becomes a constantly springing fountain within the heart, the source of "everlasting life". Jesus reveals himself as the source of the water of life. This "living water" we may have within the heart through vital fellowship with Christ.

God Seeks True Worshippers vs 23-26

Jesus did not answer the disputed question of the proper place to worship raised by the woman (v20). He states plainly that worship does not depend on location, that God is not confined to one place (v21). We can not limit his presence. The time is at hand when all restrictions limiting worship to a local shrine shall be removed (v23). God is a Spirit and a sincere soul may have fellowship with Him anywhere (v24). God is seeking those who worship in spirit and in truth, in heart sincerity. Emphasis is on with what mind we worship.

Jesus revealed himself as the awaited Messiah who "will tell us all things" (v26). Eagerly she runs to bring her fellow towns-people to Him.

Jesus reveals himself in our lesson as an eager personal worker. Jesus met the needs of individuals as individuals. To Him he and his needs were the all-important motive of action and method of remedy.

Jesus attended to human needs first, his method of working was from the inside out. His teachings live.

The water which Jesus gives is life-giving and life-sustaining, abundant, satisfying, perpetual, free to all who will receive Him.

Golden Text John 14:4a

"But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst".

Practical Truth:

Jesus can satisfy every need of the soul.

THE HIDDEN WORD

Thy word have I hidden in mine heart. Psalm 119:11.

The care of property has always been a difficult matter. Today it taxes the wisdom and ingenuity of the best and most capable. But in ancient Palestine, when this Psalm was written, it was even more difficult. There were no fire-proof safes, no mob-proof vaults, no indemnity insurance policies to protect an owner against the loss of property by rust and moth, by fire and robbers.

Under these circumstances the approved way of safeguarding silver and gold, precious documents and costly fabrics, was to hide them. They were hidden in caves and dens of the earth, concealed in houses and even buried in the ground. Sometimes property was so securely hidden that it was lost by the death of the owner or forgotten when the owner reached old age. The New Testament gives us at least one incident when a laborer discovered hidden treasures and decided to sell all he had and buy that field.

The Psalmist evidently had in mind the custom of hiding rich treasures for their safekeeping when he considered the preciousness of God's word. He decided also to hide God's word in a secure place, and came to the conclusion that the only effective way to make sure of its permanent possession was to store it in his heart. There he felt it was secure against loss. The elements could not destroy it. Robbers could not steal it.

The method of safekeeping property have greatly changed since this Psalm was written. We have made great advances in the protection of material possessions. But we have never learned a better way of making secure our possession of God's word than to hide it in our hearts. In this respect we too like the Psalmist can do no better than to hide His word in the place of greatest security and also the place of greatest availability for our every-day use and help. "Thy word have I hidden in mine heart."

What are the best and most practicable ways of hiding God's word in our hearts? In our day God's word has been translated into nearly every written language in the earth. It is also beautifully printed in whole and in part for the widest and most convenient reading. No book of its size has ever been sold as cheaply and distributed as widely over the earth as our Bible. The best possible way of hiding God's word in our hearts is to read it. There are many methods advocated for reading the Bible. It is immaterial which methods we use, but it is all-important that we use some method or a combination of several methods. Methods are much less important than an alert mind and an eager heart. The poorest methods with a great hunger and thirst for righteousness will yield large results. The best methods with small interest will accomplish little.

Committing to memory notable passages of the Bible is also an effective method of hiding God's word in our hearts. Passages that have become very precious to us through life's experience should be garnered into our hearts by committing to memory. Christ quoted passages from memory very readily and no doubt found them effective weapons in his hours of temptation in the wilderness trials. An earnest purpose to obey God's word is also another approved method of hiding His word. The more we live with and practice His word the more real and precious it becomes to us. Let us hide His word in our hearts.

CORRESPONDENCE

St. John's Church, Pandora, Ohio, Dec. 30, 1936

1936 has slipped by very rapidly and it seems to be time for another report of the past few months.

On July 26 was Rev. Edgar Toevs' farewell sermon, followed by a picnic dinner in the church basement. In the afternoon a farewell program was rendered, with the different organizations expressing their appreciation of the Toevs ministry and presenting them some love gifts. It was a mixture of sadness and joy, for that same morning a telegram was read to the congregation that came from our future pastor, Rev. D. J. Unruh of Lansdale, Pa. It was his acceptance of the pastorate here.

Loretta Lehman, missionary to India, Ezra Steiner, missionary to Tibet, Homer Moser, agricultural missionary to South America, John Tosh and C. E. Rediger gave messages during the period that we had no regular pastor. The last month Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, Pres. of Bluffton College, assumed charge. Rev. L. B. Remaley, pastor of the Church of Christ, Pandora, accepted leadership of the Young People's Bible Class throughout this period.

On November 8th it was with great joy that we welcomed the Rev. D. J. Unruh family. The installation service was performed by Rev. Rosenberger. Following the morning services the congregation filed past the family for a "hand-shake". Then followed a picnic dinner and in the afternoon a reception program. The preceding week the Ladies' Missionary Society showed their love in getting the parsonage ready.

From December 10 to 16 Rev. Unruh conducted evangelistic meetings at the Church. In these very interesting and helpful messages attention was called to the fact that the rewards of the Christian are eternal. Also the costs Christians may expect in this life.

Immediately following these meetings, the Young People's Bible Conference commenced, continuing from Dec. 17-20. The theme of the conference was "Christ for Youth, Youth for Christ". Speakers were Miss Helen Nickel, missionary from India, Rev. L. B. Remaley, Rev. J. J. Esau of Lima, Rev. D. J. Unruh and Rev. Herbert Lockyer of Liverpool, England, now with the Moody Bible Institute, Chicago. Some of the outstanding thoughts presented were: That it cost God more to save one soul than to create the entire world. We must have the life of Christ in us first before we can follow Christ. We do not grow into grace but in grace. The greatest obstacle to a victorious Christian life is self.

On the evening of Dec. 22nd the children of the S. S. gave a Christmas program. After that the White Gifts were presented by the various classes.

In this spiritual warfare nothing is accomplished by power or might, but by the Spirit of God. Our organizations may be used very aggressively in word and deed, concerning our sincerest Biblical convictions about war. Be peace-makers and help make the newspaper-propaganda-influenced, war-conscious multitude, to become peace-conscious. This is no small task and must be done with much tact, prayer, and victorious faith. We should leave no one in doubt, not the least our government, that by the grace of God, we are determined to follow in the footsteps of the Prince of Peace and are willing to pay the price. This not as fighting pacifists, but as humble disciples of Christ.

There is such a thing as pugnacious pacifism. And Marxist or God-hating Communist can be such a pacifist. Between this and the Spirit of the Prince of Peace is a heaven-wide difference. No, we do not wish to have anything to do with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them.

We must never give our militarists occasion to name us in one breath with law- and order- and government-destroying, communistic pacifism.

We close with the precious promise of Christ our Lord: "Peace I leave with you. My peace I give unto you. Not as the world giveth give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither be ye afraid." John 14:27.

"Blessed are the Peace-makers for they shall be called the children of God." Matthew 5:9.

II Our Resources

Who am I? For what purpose have I come? What is the meaning of life? In answer to such questions man became conscious that he is not only a body but that he is also a mind and a soul. Human life should consist of more than eating, sleeping and rollicking around like the ox. Each of us is sure that we possess a higher consciousness and a desire for a more abundant life. We are like the small boy when questioned about his really being hungry who replied "I have inside information."

We find that our conscious self not only has the ability to feel, act and think but it also has the capacity for relationships. Very important is the relation of the soul to the impulses, desires and emotions of the inner life. These are our inheritance out of the great unconscious life behind us and the conscious soul within us. We must deal with them. If we hold them in control and unify them in loyalty to some great and worthy ideal we will have peace and power. If we do not unify these conflicting emotions there will be endless troubles robbing us of peace and of a whole personality.

Not only must a man "Know himself" and give full loyalty with his whole being to that great Ideal who is Jesus Christ but he will also soon discover that of almost equal importance is his relationship to other souls—to friends, to enemies, and above all to God who is greater than we are in all of our qualities of personality. Until we recognize this relationship to God we are driven either to egotism or to despair. Wieman says:

> "God is that aspect of the Universe to which if a man adjusts himself, he will attain the greatest good possible to human life.

There is an urge in us reaching toward perfection. When life is at its best, when we are more moral and better, when the whole life is centered upon God, who gave Himself and is giving Himself through Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit, then we have Christianity.

Our Christian faith is not a one-sided affair found in our reaching toward God, we are also pressed from above, there is a Divine initiative, God is continually wooing us to Himself. This is the meaning of the Shepherd who goes forth with unflagging determination to find the hundredth sheep. Psalm 139 and Francis Thompson's great poem "The Hound of Heaven" also emphasize this truth.

The strange but important fact is found to be that this relationship between the soul and God must be right. Life will not work in any other way than in God's way. That is what Jesus meant when He said:

> "It is better for thee to enter into life maimed than having two hands to go into hell......And if thine eye offend thee pluck it out; it is better for thee to enter the Kingdom of God with one eye than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire."

The winning life, and that is what we are all seeking, may be ours when we are willing to be saved from our pet sins, when we will receive power more than our own, when we have Christ's help and when we become more Christlike. These are our spiritual resources, they come to us through Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit. We can overcome that sin or habit which stands as a veil between God and us, we can be conscious of His Presence always and we can be of greater power in His service. If our lives would be thus changed, we need to set up a new relationship. How can we set it up? We must first remove the barriers—they are all on our side—We must ever be conscious that He seeks us through a redemptive love. Yes, let us remember that "we are to be sons of God", and we should live like God's heirs. It will help to come into His Presence daily and hourly.

Ebenezer Church, near Bluffton, Ohio

On October 25 Rev. P. A. Kliewer, our pastor, officiated at a baptismal service in our Chicago Mission, and Rev. H. T. Unruh of Bluffton filled the pulpit in his place.

Sunday morning, Nov. 8, Brother Kenneth Neuenschwander, a young man from our neighborhood, whom the Mennonite church at Wayland, Iowa, had called to be their pastor was, at their request, ordained to the full ministry in our church, so that he might carry the responsibility of whatever kind that might present itself. Rev. H. T. Unruh of Bluffton assisted our pastor, Rev. P. A. Kliewer, in the ordination. Then Brother Neuenschwander brought much joy to our hearts as he expounded the message on "Inspiration", as his start in life, based on Tim. 3-16, God's breath in man. Our church wishes the new worker Divine Guidance. In the evening a nice wedding took place in our church, when Miss Elizabeth Margaret Kliewer and Dr. Calvin Ruckmeier of Toledo, Ohio, were pronounced husband and wife. The grooms father, Rev. Ruckmeier, opened the ceremony while Rev. Kliewer gave his daughter in marriage, after which he, too, assisted in the ceremony. After the bridal couple had departed the large audience enjoyed a fine program by the Christian Endeavor. Back in October another wedding of considerable interest was held here, when Miss Velma Burkholder of Ebenezer was married to Rev. Emerson Slotterback of Pennsylvania. The couple were then invited to the Lima Mission, where the groom filled the pulpit during a brief absence of Rev. J. J. Esau.

During the week of Nov. 15 Miss Helen Nickel, returned missionary from India, gave us an interesting lesson on her experiences in that far away country.—Rev. David Toews of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Canada, member of our Home Mission Board, presented, in an impressive picture, conditions of the Mennonite immigrants from Russia and their needs.—Rev. George Bloomgreen, world traveler and evangelist, recently returned from Russia and Europe spoke in our church. His interesting story was illustrated by the aid of pictures from Russia. He lectured on three world leaders. To add to the interest of the meeting was the song service by Albert Tindley, famous colored singer from Philadelphia.—That week, too, the Girl's Mission Band were asked to join the Ladies' Missionary Society in an allday sewing.

Tuesday, Nov. 24, many of the Ebenezer folks and also the sister churches of Pandora attended the funeral of Brother Enoch Basinger, and on Sunday, Nov. 29, the funeral of Brother S. S. Hiltey at the First Mennonite church, Bluffton. Rev. H. T. Unruh conducted the services.

Baptismal and communion services were held Sunday, Nov. 29. The collection on this occasion cleared the debt on our church, for which we "Give thanks unto the Lord; for He is good, for His mercy endureth forever". Ps. 136-1.—In the evening the Junior C. E's had a pleasant surprise, when the folding organ which they had purchased for the Rev. Rudolf Larsen Inland Mountain Mission was demonstrated by Bros. P. A. Kliewer.

Our Christmas program in the evening of Dec. 24 was rendered by the little children from the choir loft, about 80 in number. In the morning the service was in German. Correspondent

Essex United Mennonite Church

Leamington, Ontario, Canada, Jan. 2, 1937.

Greetings to friends and readers of THE MENNONITE.

The happy Christmas season once again is over, but we hope that the many blessings derived therefrom remain in our hearts.

On December 20 our young people presented a Christmas entertainment featuring songs, musical selections, and various recitations and dialogues. On Christmas Eve the Sunday School classes entertained, with about one hundred and eighty children taking part. Each one of them received a small present and some Christmas candy, which brought joy to their hearts.

Special services were held on Christmas morning, with the church choir participating. On Saturday and Sunday morning following Christmas, services were again held. Bible classes are still being held three nights weekly and quite a number of young people are availing themselves of the opportunity of learning to know more of the Bible.

Now that the New Year has set in again may I, on behalf of our whole group, wish that it be a very happy one, and may God be with us and keep us as He has in the past.

Mary Janzen, Correspondent.

NOTICE!

Will the leaders of those churches of the Western District Conference which are located within driving distance from Newton please call for their quota of Conference Constitutions at the Herold office? Emmaus C. E. Reports Good Year

Greetings from the Emmaus Young People's Christian Endeavor. We come to the close of this year with thanksgiving that we have been able to meet throughout the year. When the mercury fell below zero or rose to 120 degree above, we always found that the temperature and atmosphere were the best in church. We meet only every three weeks. In the summer we have our endeavors in the evening, and the rest of the year, in the afternoon. Our specials for the summer are an annual picnic and lunch to which all members of the church are invited and an outdoor meeting in front of church. For the picnic we usually have a special speaker.

December 6 we had Reverend H. J. Kliewer, retired missionary to the Oklahoma Indian field, as our guest speaker. He gave us several reasons why it was so hard to do missionary work among the Indians. The Indian, he pointed out, has much pride, and does not like to repent of his sins. The white people living among the Indians set a very poor example very often. Furthermore, the policy of the government is none too favorable for the work being done with the Indians there by the missionaries.

YOUR MOTTO

If your motto says, "Smile," and you carry a frown;
"Do it now," and you linger and wait;
If your motto says, "Help," and you trample men down;
If your motto says, "Love," and you hate;
You won't get away with the mottoes you stall—
For truth will come forth with a bounce.
It isn't the motto that hangs on the wall,
But the motto you live, that counts.

In the early spring, leaders were appointed who organized a Junior Endeavor. All children between the ages of 12 and 18 years may join. Under able leadership the organization has made wonderful progress and the membership is 31, while the membership in the Young People's Endeavor is about 123. December 27, both Endeavors will have a joint meeting. "Christmas Echoes" is the main theme of the program to be given. At the close of the meeting several of the Juniors will graduate into the Young People's Endeavor. A Blessed Christmas and Joyous New Year to all.

If you have not yet sent in your report to the editor of the Youth Department, remember that our young people everywhere are interested in what YOU are doing, and how YOU are solving our problems.

War Is Not Inevitable!

The morale of the forces working for peace is, at the moment somewhat shaken. More people hate war and expect no good from it, but fewer believe in the practicability of peace.

Individuals cannot make peace if governments are going to make war. Military preparations and threats must be curtailed. Commercial rivalries must be reduced to mutual help and cooperation.

There is reason to believe that there are lovers of peace — and in the aggregate probably a good many of them—who have lost hope. The clouds of war hang so low and are so full of lightning that they can see no other possibility than that the storm will break upon us within a few months. The only question is where will the lightning strike first. To put aside the figure of speech, the only question, as these despairing pacifists see it, is which side will strike first. War is bound to come, next year if not this, and the longer it is postponed the greater will be the relative strength of Germany; therefore, let it come quickly! This sentiment was heard not a week ago from the lips of a man who has been an absolute pacifist for years.

This feeling of the inevitability of war is itself a dangerous case of war. But war is never inevitable until the shooting begins.

The belief of enough people in the certainty of war will make peace possible.

The first and simplest service that every friend of peace can render to the cause is to resist that false suggestion and to base his own attitude upon the conviction that war, even in these days, is still as unnecessary as it is wicked.

Jan. 23 The sweatshop idea. er. 22:13, 14
Jan. 24 Dishonest practices in our daily life. Luke 16:1-12; Prov. 20:14

Pre-prayer Circle

Speak of the topic of the evening and read Ps. 51:6 and 10. Pray for the leader and all those who attend the meeting; the officers and committees; the superintendent of your society and the pastor, special missionaries and their needs.

Your Program Material

Plan the worship program and the discussion of the topic to suit your own society and its needs. The C. E. World Quarterly has splendid helps on both for this topic. The C. E. World Quarterly is only 75 cents per year and comes each quarter. Order from 419 Fourth Ave., New York City. The material in this department is prepared supplementary to that in the Quarterly.

Your Offering

If your society has a regular offering as a part of its Sunday night meeting, make it a part of the worship program, with an appropriate prayer or Scripture verse before it is received "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus how He said, it is more blessed to give than to receive." Freely ye have received, freely give." Offer a short consecration prayer after the offering has been taken." All things come from Thee, and of Thine own have we given to Thee."

Questions For Discussion

1. Why do most people allow some small dishonest practices in their daily lives? Mention some common ones. How can one overcome them?
2. Why is it harder to be honest in small things than in large ones?
3. Are small dishonest practices as serious as dishonesty in large things? Why are they dangerous?
4. Is it possible to be absolutely honest in all things? How can one become so?

Mother, when your children are irritable, do not make them more so by scolding and fault-finding, but correct their irritability by good nature and mirthfulness. Irritability comes from errors of food, bad air, too little sleep, a necessity for change of scene and surroundings; from confinement in close rooms, and lack of sunshine. —Herbert Spencer

HOBBY NIGHT

By Gertrude Eyemann

Usually during the summer months we have what we call "Hobby Night." During the months preceding, the Intermediates are encouraged to take up and develop some hobby, if they do not already have one or several. Suggestions are given to those who wish them.

On "Hobby Night" each one is given a chance to tell about his hobby. One that was particularly successful was in the form of a social. Supper was served with the members seated at small tables. Each one had a place card and a joke to read. After the meal each one told about his hobby and either had his collection with him, or if it was music, a song was sung or a number was played. There were boats, several models, stamps, collections of elephants of all kinds and wild flowers. It made a lovely social evening of music and talks and stimulated interest in similar hobbies if not new ones.

      Let Us Remember

      a. The people ran after Jesus because their hearts were hungry
      b. Jesus fed their hearts all day
      c. At the close of day He supplied also their food for the body—they came to Jesus hungry but went away filled and satisfied
      d. We need to go to Jesus. He alone can fill our hearts
   8) "Break Thou the Bread of Life" — sing in unison as a prayer
   9) Story: Four Thousand Guests—a junior using Mark 8:1-9, and also a poster of his making.
   10) Heart talk: "Lord, evermore give us this bread. And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life; he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst."
   11) Parting prayer — turn again to the hymn "Break Thou the Bread of Life" (perhaps in using it twice its mesage will sink deeper) and in unison read verses 1, 2, 3; verse 4 sing softly adding the amen.

A mother's prayers, silent and gentle, can never miss the road to the throne of all bounty.

Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebr.

The editor of the Mennonite has sent us some franked envelopes, with announcement of our appointment as correspondent of this worthy church paper. We really do not feel qualified to fill this important and responsible position. In our imagination it would compare with the driving of a Model T in this stream-lined time of speed and efficiency. But one thing is encouraging to us, whatever may not be fit to put into print will be fit for the wastebasket.

The year 1936 has been for us, as a church as well as for the community, an unusual year. Our harvest has not been plentiful, wheat and oats a fair crop, corn for the last three years, so to say, a failure, and a shortage of feed. However, we still have many things to be thankful for. So no complaints are made.

Starting at the close of the year, it makes it quite difficult to do justice to the high lights of the year in a belated report. Our church services were held regularly. The attendance has been praiseworthy. Our church membership is nearing the 700-mark and the enrollment in the Sunday school is more than 800. The interest shown is commendable, especially among the young people.

At different times ministers were invited to hold series of evangelistic and Bible study meetings. Among these were Rev. P. R. Schroeder and Rev. A. Warkentin. The Bible studies in the morning were in German and the sermons in the evening with few exceptions in English. When you listen to these men you will soon be convinced where they stand to God's plan of salvation.

The need is felt more and more for the use of English in our church services. So each month one Sunday morning service is held in English, while in the Sunday School some of the German classes have fallen out the past year. The trend is apparently more and more toward the English.

Our church Bible school again was opened in the fall for a term of four months. Brother Theodore Schmidt is the teacher and a goodly number are attending.

The last Sunday of the year Rev. N. P. Janzen, Madrid, Nebr., here on a visit with his parents, preached two sermons for us. The one was on the second coming of Christ, which held the audience spellbound throughout.

Bally, Pennsylvania, January 1, 1937

Greetings to the editor and readers of THE MENNONITE from the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania. The activities of the past six months have been quite interesting. During July about thirty-five of our people rehearsed under Prof. Russell A. Lantz for the "Songfest" on August 2. What a treat it was to work under so capable a man!

On Sunday morning, July 19, Rev. Carl Landes presented the Peace Program in our church and gave us vivid pictures of the last war and what the future looks like for peace-loving people today.

Our annual Harvest Home Services were held on Sunday morning, September 6. Founder's Recognition Day in honor of Dr. F. E. Clark, was held on Sunday evening, September 13, in the Schwenksville Mennonite Church. Our Intermediate Christian Endeavors took part in this program.

Sunday morning, September 20, the parishioners and friends of Bally had a real treat when Dr. John E. Hartzler spoke on "What is Religion" — a very forceful and enjoyable presentation. Walter Knepp, a German Exchange Student at Hartford Theological Seminary, spoke very interestingly on Sunday morning, September 27, of his experiences in traveling in the Great Northwest and meeting a group of Mennonites who are laboring there without a shepherd or pastor.

Our annual Fall Preparatory and Communion Services were held as usual; so were the annual Thanksgiving Day services. There was quite a nice attendance to show our appreciation to our Heavenly Father for His protection and care over us during the last year. The Ladies' Aid Society of the church had a most interesting anniversary program on Sunday evening, November 29. Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, the pastor, was the speaker, telling of the place the woman takes in the world today and what she has done in times past.

The Primary Department gave a lovely Christmas program on Sunday morning, December 20, and the Intermediate Department rendered the pageant, "The Sign of Peace," a timely peace play centering around the Christmas message. Both programs were attended by capacity houses. Much of the credit for such delightful programs is due the faithful teachers. The business meeting of the church will be held the first week in January. This reminds one of the responsibilities given to officers—hence this letter.

Hereford Mennonite parishioners wish the new editor and all readers a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and only as we take Christ as our guide and leader can we expect to go forth for greater things in this world of ours today.

NEWS AND NOTES

Aberdeen, Idaho:—The Cantata, "The Christmas Glory" by Heyser was greatly enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The Bazar and cooked food sale of the King's daughters was a great success and the proceeds will go to a needy cause. The Ladies Mission Society had a nice program and luncheon in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Banman whose golden wedding anniversary was celebrated Friday evening, Jan. 8, in the church parlors.

Bulletin, Second Church, Philadelphia.—Are You a Modern Gulliver? Gulliver was a man of great strength, yet the Lilliputians (tiny people) bound him hand and foot. "Spiritual Gullivers" may likewise come to grief. As small cords can render helpless the strongest man, so bad habits can ruin the Christian's life. Let us cut these cords asunder with the scissors of faith, prayer and obedience to God.

There seems to be hope, now, that a change for the better may ensue in the German religious controversy. Protestant and Catholic leaders had repeatedly protested against the semi-official ridicule heaped upon Christianity. The latest of the appeals was made in a strongly-worded declaration by a conciliatory group in the Protestant Church, which said in part, "We expect that a stop be put to the anti-Christian propaganda which has appeared even more boldly recently and has mocked and derided the Church and all that is holy in the most intolerable fashion." The result of this was that Chancellor Hitler has sent out a warning note to the leaders of Hitler Youth and all Nazi officials to stop their attacks on Christianity.

Of the nations whom the United States helped win the World War we have been told again and again that Finland alone pays and that the rest are defaulting. Now little Greece wants it to be known that it, too, pays.

From the Berne, Indiana, church comes the news of some interesting actions taken at their annual meeting: 1. That the monthly German service is to be held Sunday afternoon instead of once a month in the morning. 2. That the constitution be changed so that the pastor be elected every three years, and that the deacons are not to serve more than two terms in succession.

The Associated Press has listed the following events as the world's biggest news in 1936: The British Empire crisis over the King Edward-Mrs. Simpson romance; the United States political campaign, 1936; the Spanish civil war; Italy's conquest of Ethiopia; civil war in labor ranks; United States business recovery; remilitarization of the Rhineland; United States droughts and floods; Hauptman's execution; and development of Dr. Charles Greely Abbot's solar steam engine.

The price of wheat recently rose to $1.43 per bushel, the highest since 1929. The cause of this seems to be the report that some countries in Europe were about to make large purchases of wheat. To meet this demand and to coin large profits the American speculators bought all the surplus wheat they could. Great patriots, aren't they?

The Spanish civil war seems to be making little progress one way or another. It is, however, causing a great deal of friction between other nations because, though everybody is supposed to keep hands off, apparently no one does. Russia, probably the worst sinner, has spent millions upon millions of dollars to aid the Loyalists. She furnishes them many officers, and is cooperating with their rulers. While Germany and Italy furnish soldiers, England and France play innocent, although a recent report has it that Russia and France together have sent 40,000-50,000 men. At the same time the innocent rank and file of Spanish people see their beautiful country reduced to ruins and themselves to beggary and starvation.

Before the "Repeal" we had bootlegging of whiskey in this country. Now it is bootlegging of coal. In parts of the anthracite coal lands of Pennsylvania nearly half of the mines are closed, leaving forty to fifty thousand miners without work. Twenty thousand of these are said to be engaged in bootleg operations; that is, they help themselves to the coal and sell it as a natural right, saying, "The coal which is in these mountains was put there by our Creator, and this mineral wealth was stolen from us by the greedy rich class, the coal operators, and bankers."

Members of the General Conference Board of Education, the old Witmarsum Seminary Board, members of the faculties of Freeman, Bethel, and Bluffton Colleges, and others interested met at Bluffton, Ohio, December 29-30, to discuss the welfare of our institutions of learning in their relations to each other, to the Conference, and to our Mennonite constituency, and also to discuss the serious counsel a to what might be done regarding a seminary.

Even from a purely literary point of view the Bible has some of the choicest pieces and morsels of literature in the world, and its language is mostly simple and easy to understand. Realizing this and also the fact that much of the modern literature offered to high school and college classes is shallow and often has little to recommend it except the suspense of the story, especially in fiction, the editor, who teaches German and French at Bethel College, has for the last few years been reading portions of the French Bible with French elementary classes and of the German Bible with the German classes. The students thoroughly enjoy the stories of the Creation, Adam and Eve, the Flood, Joseph and his Brethren, Moses, Esther, the Life of Jesus. A French beginners' class is just now reading the Gospel of St. John. They desired this because the pastor of the college church has asked all who can to read that Gospel during January. Another advantage in this is that a seed may drop into some heart that will grow and bear good fruit.

DEATHS

On Wednesday, Dec. 2, Mrs. Christina Langenwalter passed away at the Bethel Home, Newton, Kansas, at the ripe age of 80 years, and was buried from her home church, Halstead, on the following Sunday afternoon. Rev. D. C. Wedel and Rev. C. E. Krehbiel conducted the services. Interment was made in the Halstead cemetery.

Christina Langenwalter, nee Schmutz, was born in Wuertemberg, Germany, on March 2, 1856, the daughter of Philip and Christina Schmutz. She was baptized on her confession of faith in 1870 and came to America with her family the same year, locating at Bolivar, Mo. In 1874 she came to Halstead. She was married to Daniel Langenwalter in 1876 with whom she lived on their farm, near Halstead, until 1914, when he was called to his reward. To this union were born 13 children, three of whom died in childhood. Those living are: Jacob Herman, Reedley, Calif.; Daniel Benjamin, Gerber, Calif.; Philip August, Paso Robles, Calif.; Christina Eliz. Lehman, Halstead, Kansas.; John Emil, Twin Falls, Idaho; David Ernest, Hollywood, Calif.; Samuel Frederick, Halstead, Kansas; Albert Lucas, Aberdeen, Idaho; Emil Arthur, Matameska, Alaska; Edwin Rudolf, Peoria, Ill. There are 23 grandchildren and four great grandchildren, and there remain also two brothers, Jacob F. and Frederick S. Schmutz, and one sister, Lena Schmutz.

Margaret Grother was born March 16, 1867, in Hamburg, Germany, and died at Reedley, California, Dec. 8, 1936. She came to the United States when she was seventeen years of age. Her first home here was at Pekin, Illinois. In 1891 she was married to Harry Ertmoed. In 1899 the family moved to Alva, Oklahoma, where they joined a Mennonite church. From 1905 to 1911 the family resided in Canada. After that they moved to Reedley, California, where they have made their home ever since.

Of the seven children, who came to bless the home, two were taken from this life in childhood. Five, one son and four daughters, remain, with the father, as survivors of the mother, whose long life has made a deep impression on them.

Mrs. Ertmoed has been ill for about two and one half years before she was called away.. She bore her trials with becoming patience and was a source of inspiration in her attitude and conduct.

Funeral services were held in the Mennonite church on Dec. 11, at which Rev. H. J. Krehbiel spoke, basing his remarks on I Thess. 4:13-14, and Rev. J. H. Langenwalter used for his text Matt. 3:28-30.

Ella Mae Regier was born April 30, 1932, near Slater, Wyoming, and died December 17 at 12:05 a.m. at the age of four years, seven months and sixteen days.

On December 10 she suddenly took sick with a severe headache; this however left her upon a remedy given by her mother, so that she rested and awoke cheerfully the next morning.

At 10:00 a.m. the headache returned and increased until at 6:00 p.m. she folded her hands, praying: "Abba Father," and pointing to heaven said: "The angels are coming." At 7:00 p.m. her parents and her only brother brought her to the Bethel Hospital, where she received good care. Her condition was critical. On December 14 her sickness developed into meningitis, of which she died.

She has brought much joy to her parents, brother and sisters during her short life. Now she rests with the Saviour where there is no more pain. She leaves her sorrowing parents, four older sisters and one brother, one grandfather, two grandmothers, and many relatives and friends.

Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. H. J. Dyck and Rev. B. W. Harder.

Mahon L. Rosenberger, son of Henry R. and Mary Laux Rosenberger, was born in Milford Square, Pa., September 9th, 1864. On March 26th, 1880 he was baptized upon confession of faith in Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour and was received into the West Swamp Mennonite Church, where he has been a helpful and faithful member until the end.

He was married to Emelina S. Shelly, April 14th, 1888. Into this union ten children were born, two of whom died in infancy. Those who survive their father are: Aaron S., Mrs. Ida Mumbauer and Oscar S. of Quakertown; Clayton S. of Center Valley, Mrs. Mabel Heimbach, Quakertown, Mrs. Elsie Mohr of Coopersburg, and Mary and Mrs. Katie Myers with whom he lived and who took care of him during his five month's illness.

On April 17th, 1927 his life companion preceded him in death. One brother Menno S. Rosenberger and the following sisters survive: Mrs. Lizzie Sweinhart, Mrs. Clara Bauman, Mrs. Jane Roth, Mrs. Emma Keiser and Mrs. Ella Boyer.

On Monday evening about 9:00 o'clock he fell asleep to awaken in glory, bringing his age to 72 years, 3 months and 5 days.

The text used by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander was John 4:14.

Interment was made in West Swamp Cemetery.

The future society is in the hands of mothers. If the world was lost through woman, she alone can save it.

BOOK CHAT

The purpose of this weekly feature will be to bring to the readers of the Mennonite information regarding books, both old and new, religious and secular, which will enable them more intelligently to select good books for themselves and others and for Church, Sunday School and Public Libraries.

There will not be many book reviews, since these will generally appear in another section of the Mennonite. We cannot be too careful in selecting books for ourselves or for others, especially for children. American publishers alone produce between 10,000 and 15,000 new books every year. At best we can find time to read only a few dozen of these. What shall we read and why should we read it is something on which there will never be 100 percent agreement. Yet we must make some attempt to sift good from the bad. How shall I decide whether or not a book is worth reading.

The Book Chats will attempt to give you information that will help you to decide this question. The reactions of the readers of the Mennonite will be appreciated by the author of these book chats.

Sunday School Lesson Commentaries

For the subject of our first Book Chat I have selected Sunday School Lesson Commentaries because this is the time of the year when most Sunday School Teachers look around for books or periodicals that will help them prepare for the weekly ordeal of teaching their classes. I say "Ordeal" because it is just that for a goodly percentage of those devoted Christian men and women to whom we assign the task of teaching the Sunday School Lessons.

Most Sunday School teachers are busy people, whether they be business men, farmers, teachers or housewives. God cannot use lazy, idle men and women to perform one of the most important duties of the church. And just because Sunday School teachers are busy people, it is important to give them the Lesson material they need in such a form that they can master it quickly and present it effectively to their classes. Most teachers cannot afford to buy an expensive set of Commentaries on the Bible. Instead they must rely on Teacher's magazines or books that contain suitable expository material.

The oldest and most widely used Sunday School Lesson Commentary is PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES. The 1937 issue is the 53rd Annual volume. It contains over 400 pages of excellent Lesson helps, including maps, illustrations, diagrams, outlines and much other invaluable material. It lists books by Bible scholars which may be profitably consulted for additional information. This book justly deserves its immense popularity and cannot be too highly recommended to the teacher who needs an all-around Lesson Commentary. Price $2.00 postpaid.

Next in size and and usefulness is TARBELL'S TEACHER'S GUIDE. The 1937 issue is the 32nd annual volume. Written from a slightly more liberal standpoint than Peloubet's, it contains many features that make it a favorite with teachers of adult classes. While Peloubet's quotes frequently from famous Bible Scholars, Tarbell's quotes less frequently and contains more original material. Price $2.00 postpaid.

THE TEACHER'S GUIDE by Kaye is a newer book. The 1937 issue is the 4th annual volume. The author of the Bible Study helps found in the New Analytical Bible has given us a bold helpful exposition of the Sunday School Lessons. This book contains many useful features not found elsewhere. The "Suggestive Questions" and diccussion "Topics" alone are worth the price of the book. Price $1.50 postpaid.

SNOWDEN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS for 1937 is the 16th Annual Volume. Next to Peloubet's, this smaller book by James H. Snowden, is the most popular Lesson Commentary. It is fresh, practical and challenging. We recommend it. It appeals especially to teachers of young people of high school age. Price $1.35 postpaid.

ARNOLD'S PRACTICAL COMMENTARY is an old favorite. Printed in much finer type than the above four books already mentioned. It's 233 pages are crowded with concise, helpful Lesson material including hints for teaching the Lesson to various ages—Adult, Senior, Intermediate, Junior and Primary. Price $1.00 postpaid.

HIGLEY'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON COMMENTARY for 1937 is the fourth Annual issue. Still comparatively unknown, yet it is in some respects the most useful of all the Lesson Commentaries. It is written by a man who has himself been a Sunday School Teacher and Bible student for over 40 years. The "Questions for Discussion" and "Seed Thoughts" will appeal to the teachers of adult classes. Old customers always repeat. We cannot recommend it too highly. Price $1.00 postpaid.

POPULAR COMMENTARY for 1937 is a new book. It is the cheapest complete Teacher's Lesson Commentary and has already won many friends. As in the case of all commentaries in this class it contains much excellent material but is set in small type. We suggest that you try it. Price 90c postpaid.

Pocket Lesson Commentaries

For Sunday School Teachers or Scholars who want a small book to carry in the pocket we recommend the two following booklets:

THE GIST OF THE LESSON for 1937 by R. A. Torrey. This is the 38th Annual Volume and most popular of pocket commentaries. It emphasizes the essential points of each lesson and contains an attendance record for every Sunday in the Year. Price 35c postpaid.

POCKET DIGEST ON THE INTERNATIONAL UNIFORM LESSONS FOR 1937 by Dr. George L. Robinson. Fifth Annual volume. Crammed with practical information, questions, discussion points, etc., that will be of inestimable help to teacher and pupil alike. You will be surprised and delighted with this book. Price 35c postpaid.

No teacher should become the slave of a Sunday School Commentary. Books of this type are meant to guide the teacher in preparing to teach the Lesson. Many teachers buy several Lesson Commentaries in order to get different viewpoints. We suggest that you order one or more of the above commentaries for 1937 today, before the supply is exhausted.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, JANUARY 19, 1937 No. 3

Quo Vadimus?– Whither are we going? In the Western District Conference there are six churches looking for pastors and others will soon follow because of the advanced age of the present pastor. No doubt there are similar cases in other conferences. There are a few young men, sons of some of our churches, now being trained in seminaries of other denominations, a practice which (as is well known,) has a tendency to wean them away from our fold. Meanwhile our erstwhile Witmarsum Seminary continues in its enforced slumber. Feeble efforts have been made to revive it. But it is always some individuals with a vision that are supposed to attend to such matters. Our colleges have been founded by private local or sectional corporations, the General Conference as such stood in the background watching developments. Meanwhile the colleges struggled along as best they could, and with the help of God and loyal, self-sacrificing friends they have managed to maintain themselves. Other advanced institutions of learning have helped train our young men and women for various callings: Teaching, medicine, business, and many others. It is different with the Seminary. For, failure to train our ministers in a school of our own, with our aims, our ideals, our principles of faith will strike at the very root of the existence of our denomination. Here it behooves the Conference as such to act, and act promptly. Hasn't the time come when the Conference, through its representative body, the Executive Committee, should inaugurate some plan of action that will lead to the acquisition of a Seminary of our own, in the near future? It is only a year and a half to the next conference session. Now is the time to plan and then act.

They say that man is mighty,
He governs land and sea,
He wields a mighty scepter
O'er lesser powers that be;
But a mightier power and stronger
Man from his throne has hurled,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world.

QUAINT TEACHINGS

Duty, will, self-discipline, conscience — words of deep significance thirty, even twenty-five years ago, have today almost disappeared from the "bright lexicon of youth," and have been largely forgotten or set aside as old-fashioned by their elders. Such conceptions are considered almost in the light of superstitions, inhibiting and injurious to the free development of youth.

Does Joe object to arithmetic? Undoubtedly his is an artistic bent. Let him choose for himself the studies of which he feels the need. Does Mary want to dance? Play music for her and let her put her ideas into her own rhythmic response. The old notion of exact training only hampers the child and spoils his spontaneity.

Are the young Browns unable to make a go of their marriage? No one suggests that for the sake of their children they should at least try to act like adults instead of self-willed and uncontrolled children. Why should they give up their personal happiness? Better break up the home at the sacrifice of the children's peace of mind, and try again.

That there is something bigger and finer than self-expression, personal freedom and personal happiness seems forgotten. The world is like a crowded market place where man is grabbing what he wants with no thought of anyone else. It is not a happy world, even for the best and biggest grabber.

Only when the children learn forgetfulness of self, thought of others, self-control and the duty each man owes his fellow men, can they attain real joy and contentment. And these lessons they can learn only by the example of those about them.—Exchange

Do a Common Thing Uncommonly Well

Loretta Clark

Do you wish to make for yourself a name
And have your portrait in the Hall of Fame?
Don't chose something mighty in which to excell,
Just do a common thing uncommonly well.
Do you wish to make your life a success?
On powerful things have you laid your stress?
Such thoughts from your mind expell
And do a common thing uncommonly well.
If in the race of life you wish to compete,
Don't place your goal too high and then retreat.
Again this motto shall I retell?
"Just do a common thing uncommonly well."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

CHURCH-MISSION PRIMARY SCHOOL REPORT FOR 1936

Janjgir C. P.

Since Miss Nickel has gone home on furlough I have been appointed principal of the Compound Primary School. This year there are 80 enrolled, 51 are Christian children and 29 are non-Christians. Of the non-Christians there are 22 Chamars low castes and 7 of other castes. The classes extend from the first to the fourth only.

Masihdas is the Head Master. His salary is Rs. 20 per month, Rs.—$8. He supervises the school and teaches the 4th class. His results are good. Laleser Surendra from Korba teaches the third class. She was the only girl who passed the eighth grade examination last March out of a class of eight in the Funk Memorial School. Talitha Dass teaches the first and second grades. I am pleased with her work. The children like her. There are 32 in the first class and 20 in the second class. This year we do not need any one to go to the home and call the children. The attendance is very good. Shanti Hirwa helps Talitha in the hygiene, geography, and hand work classes. Lalesar also helps her with preparation of materials for hand work and charts.

This year I have introduced the Moga system of reading in the First class. We are using the Moga readers and charts. Of 32 children, 28 learned to read in six weeks. The Moga system does not start with the alphabet. The order of procedure is stories, sentences, words and then letters. We make much use of charts, pictures, flash cards and matching words and sentences. There is no need of shouting at the children or making them shout in unison as formerly. We intend to have them read three or four primers and a first reader during the first year. The pupils need to buy only two books. The rest are library books. The aim is to encourage as much reading as possible. Writing is made interesting by making them want to write their names, which they learned to do very soon. They learn to write words before they write separate letters. In this way they see a purpose in learning to write. The meaning and value of numbers is taught to them through various objects. Then we emphasize the rapid addition of numbers without the use of their fingers. Pupils who do not learn to add rapidly in the first grade will be poor in the eighth grade in arithmetic. Miss Banwar told me lately that one of the girls in the eighth grade who is bright otherwise, is very slow in arithmetic because she has never mastered the combinations of numbers in addition and subtraction.

This years' new Primary School curriculum has been introduced with its special emphasis on practical work. In hand work the children learn to use the needle and scissors. Nature study and beginner's geography are taught out doors. In the first grade stars are put on a chart beside the pupils' names when they have come to school with clean hands and faces and combed their hair for a whole week. The children ar neater and cleaner. One Hindoo father told me that his son climbs on a box every morning to look into the mirror to comb his hair, a very unusual thing. For a number of years we have had a small garden connected with the Primary school, where vegetables and flowers have been grown.

The school expenses are shared equally by the church and the Mission. The church as shown a great interest in the school, and I welcome their criticisms and comments. Most of the parents are willing to pay for the books which they are asked to buy. Some children earned money during the hot season and put it away in Mr. Penner's safe to help pay for their books during the school year. Bible stories and Christian songs are learned eagerly by the children.

I do not have as much time as I should like to have to supervise the school because of my work as principal of th Bible school. However, I visit the school weekly for tests. Let us pray often for our Primary children.—M. R. Burkhalter.

Keep Education Christian

JESUS AS TEACHER

Dr. Ed. G. Kaufman

2. Regarding Himself.—A good teacher knows the truth about himself and his own ability. Jesus knew the truth about who He was and about what He could do: "I am the bread of life"; "No one comes to the Father except through Me"; "I am the way and the life"; "Come unto Me and I will give you rest"; "I came that ye might have life, and have it more abundantly." Many other passages of a similar nature could be cited. Jesus knew He had possession of something that others wanted and needed. Many a teacher looses out because he does not know his own mind and so causes his pupils to lose confidence in him as a teacher. Such a situation makes teaching impossible. Christ knew Himself and inspired confidence in the minds of His hearers that He knew and could teach them as well as save them.

Give the Bible to the people, unadulterated, pure, unaltered, unexplained, uncheapened, and then see it work its wholesome work through the whole nature. It is very difficult indeed for a man or for a boy who knows the Scripture ever to get away from it. It follows him like the memory of his mother. It haunts him like an old song. It reminds him like the word of an old and revered teacher. It forms a part of the warp and woof of his life.—Woodrow Wilson.

III Our Barriers—How To Remove Them

In a recent discussion among Sunday School teachers one of them confessed "The hardest problem I have to handle is myself." There are so very many problems confronting people of all ages and classes. Many do not seem to have anything to live for. Perhaps this situation may be a result of a lack of Christian beliefs and convictions. One young man said "One thing I am sure of, and that is that I am not sure of anything." A fully surrendered man hearing him asked "Have you tried God?" There are a number of fundamental beliefs of Christianity that the Christians may have.

Or perhaps the difficulty with many Christians may be a lack of moral dynamic, we cannot live as we believe a Christian should. There may be conflicts in the personal life, in the home and with one's associates. We would like to find the secret to the way out. We desire joy in the Christian life, we would like to feel that we are having constant fellowship with God and that Jesus Christ is real to us.

We may be ill at ease and worried about this whole matter, we cannot understand ourselves nor this idea of the victorious Christian life. We know confidently that we are a child of God and yet we are not joyful and triumphant as we had observed some others to be. Concerning ourselves we are reminded of Paul's message to the Corinthians when he accused them of being carnal Christians old enough to be fed with meat but still babes requiring milk for nourishment. If any of us feel that we are like the Corinthian babes in Christ it is no doubt because of some unconfessed sin.

In some quarters sin has been thought of as a word in poor taste, but the fact remains that sin is marring the relationship between God and man. It is true that in our lives we need to think of sin as a specific deed or misdeed, it is never general, it is either a coarser sin of the flesh or a more polite but equally heinous sin of the disposition. God's white is a terrible white. A small sense of sin means a small Christ. Sin is anything that weakens the individual, it may be something that mars our relationship with God or with our fellows. Sin in some form or another is the barrier standing between God and what we may become. "All men sin and come short of the glory of God. Before our relationship with God and with our fellowmen can be right that barrier must be removed. To Paul all unrighteousness was sin.

Sins are of various kinds, they may be habits or occasional misdeeds which are committed as a result of wrong thinking. The prodigal son was sinning against his father but the elder son sinned equally much—the one sinned in the lusts of physical appetite and the other in his selfish disposition. Sometimes sin has been classified as any deed or thought which falls short of absolute standards.

1. The first standard is honesty. Sin may be stealing, lying, mis-statement, exaggeration, dishonest silence, political lying, false excuses, discussing people negatively, hypocrisy, forgetting to return borrowed books, failing to hand in your ticket to the collector, sins of attitude and others.

2. The second standard is purity. More unhappiness results in failure to be pure than in any other realm of life. Jesus always made the eye, the thought and the tongue the beginning. Our bodies are to be temples in which the Spirit of God can dwell, we must keep them pure and holy. In our relationship with the opposite sex we may seek fellowship but not familiarity.

3. In the absolute standard of love we find sin to be anything that savors of hate, murder, resentment, lack of forgiveness, gossiping, ill-will and temper. It is the Christian act to apologize when we have not been loving and kind.

4. The Last absolute standard is unselfishness. Here we find sin to consist of such attitudes as self-love, self-pity, self-ambition, self-centeredness, self-sufficiency and others. The true Christian is Christ-centered and Christ-controlled.

Most of us will know quite readily where our prevailing sin is to be found. From time to time the Holy Spirit will make us conscious of still others providing we rid ourselves of our pet sins. We simply must rid ourselves of these barriers of sin if we would grow in the spiritual life, but we cannot succeed in our own strength. When will and imagination of evil come into conflict, imagination always wins. We must turn our imagination to Jesus Christ. When we hate sin badly enough and meditate and fellowship with Jesus Christ we will be surprised to find that the desire for our pet sin has disappeared. That will be the beginning of a life lived "In His Presence". It will be worth more than it costs.

Apology. Unfortunately the name of the author of the splendid poem, "Viewing the New Year," that appeared at the head of January 5's issue was inadvertantly omitted. It is Mrs. Edna Brown who resides at Spokane, Washington. She is a housewife who in her spare moments finds pleasure in writing Christian stories and poetry. Mrs. Brown experienced a thorough conversion some years ago and uses this means to serve the cause of Christ, her Master, and her fellowmen. Our readers will like her stories, as we publish them here.

CORRESPONDENCE

Tabor Church, Goessel, Kansas.
January 8, 1937.

Since it is still my duty to report of the last three months of the past year, I must do so at once before my successor's term begins.

On October 12 we had a meeting to elect delegates to the Western District Conference held at Beatrice, Nebraska. Our pastor, Rev. Richert, conducted revival meetings at the mission stations in Arizona the first two weeks in November. Rev. J. J. Voth of Bethel College filled the pulpit during the pastor's absence.

November 22-27 Rev. John C. Kaufman, Marion, South Dakota, was in our midst and held a series of meetings. On Sunday, November 22, he served us with a sermon on preparation for Communion, taking his text from the wonderful story of the deliverance out of the land of Egypt. Sunday evening his text was Ecclesiastes 4:12, "A Threefold Cord is not quickly Broken." Monday evening, "The Redemption of the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ." Wednesday and Thursday in German on "Mercy" and "Judgment." Friday evening, "For Unto Us a Child Is Born." November 20 the Women's Missionary and Sewing Society had a mission sale. It totaled $109.75. On Thanksgiving Day the Sunday school had a program in the morning. The collection totaled $600. Sunday, November 29, we held Communion and in the evening Rev. David Toews told us something about the Mennonites in Canada. Rev. Richert is conducting a Bible Study Hour with the young people who meet every Wednesday evening at the church. On December 26, Dr. Rudolph T. Unruh, missionary on furlough from Africa, told us of the Congo Inland Mission. On December 30, the annual business meeting of the church was held. Brother John Voth was elected a new member on the Trustee Board. The Church Building Committee reported approximately $1700 in the treasury. On the last evening of the year the Senior Christian Endeavor Society gave a program.

Two members are sick, Rev. Gustav Frey and my mother, Mrs. J. B. Thiessen. Please pray for them.

Butterfield, Minnesota, Dec. 31, 1936

We are again at the close of another year. We all know what this year brought us, but we do not know what the new year will bring. We are indeed thankful to God for his gracious care over us during the past. Let us again put our whole trust in Him who is able to help us through everything and give Him all the praise. Now some news which occured during the last three months. In October a men's quartet, the Cotton Blossom Singers from Mississippi, gave us a full evening of singing and speaking. Michael Ewy, an aged brother, passed to the great beyond, after only a few days in the hospital. His two daughters from Canada came to the funeral, October 14. Rev. J. P. Friesen spoke in German and Rev. L. H. Linscheid in English. On October 13 the Sunday School convention was held here all day; a lunch was served in the basement for all visitors. On the first of November the C. E. program, our annual meeting, took place; Albert Linscheid, Mrs. H. M. Fast, and B. J. Rempel were elected as officers. November 15 Rev. John Bartel from Mountain Lake had charge of the services, when six young girls were baptized. May these young souls be true to their promise made on this day is our wish and prayer. On November 16 Waldo Linscheid had a runaway accident, the wagon going over his abdomen twice. He was in a critical condition at the hospital for a few weeks. At this writing he is able to walk with crutches, and we praise God for the Miracle He performed here. On the 27th of November a beautiful church wedding took place in the evening when Theodora Linscheid and Edwin Roedekur were united in marriage by the bride's brother Rev. L. H. Linscheid. After the ceremony a lunch was served in the basement. The 30th of November our annual church meeting took place in the church with Rev. John Bartel from Mountain Lake in charge. Mrs. H. M. Fast was elected Sunday School superintendent for one year. We have nine classes in our school—two are German and the rest, English. At our Ladies Aid Society in December, Mrs. R. E. Casey was again elected president for one year. On December 24 we again celebrated our Lord Jesus' birthday with a program in the evening and Christmas Day we had services. The weather being very mild made it so good to attend for old and young. I am glad to state that Mrs. R. E. Casey will hereafter give reports of this congregation as she was voted in at the annual meeting. I am very thankful to the editor for his promptness in always giving a place in the paper for my poor reports. Now may our Lord and Saviour be with us and bless each and every one of us till we shall see Him face to face is my wish and prayer.

Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio

In October a catechism class was started by the pastor, Rev. Whitmer, to continue six months, and the Sunday School was reorganized and began its new year under the leadership of A. S. Hilty.

During the fall we were addressed or served on different occasions by the following: Rev. Walter Schutz, returned missionary from Africa, preached to us and told us of their experiences in the mission field, while Mrs. Schutz addressed the Mission Society. Dr. C. H. Smith of Bluffton College spoke on the All-Mennonite Congress at Amsterdam which he had attended. Dr. C. Ray Barrett of Finlay, Ohio, addressed the men of our church at a Fellowship meeting, which was followed by a banquet, with ninety-four men present. Miss Alice Treuschel, teacher of Religious Education and Bible studies in the Bluffton, Ohio, public schools, spoke of her experiences and work. Rev. David Toews of Rosthern, Sask., very interestingly spoke of the immigration of 21,000 Mennonites from Russia into Canada, and of the hardships and needs of these people due to successive crop failures and depression prices.

Other events in our church were a peace declamation contest in which four contestants participated, where Viola Amstutz won first place.—On November 21 the annual mission sale conducted by the Missionary and Dorcas Societies was held at the community room of the school building. There was a good attendance and a fine sum was realized.—On November 1 the Women's Missionary Society held an all-day meeting to prepare a shipment of clothes for the needy in Western Canada.

Christmas activities at the church consisted of a children's program given Christmas night and the rendition of Haendel's "Messiah" on December 27, directed by Mrs. Florence Schumacher Stucky. The soloists were: Mrs. Bertha Callahan, soprano; Mrs. Kathryn Welty, alto; Roland B. Mikisell, tenor; Robert F. Londenbach, bass. Mrs. Pearl Bogart Mann was at the piano and Miss Eulalia Steiner at the organ.

Two deaths occurred the last quarter: that of Mrs. Gilbert Suter, aged 45, and Miss Barbara Lugibihl, aged 86.

Three weddings took place: Wilbert Welty and Miss Vera Locher; Claude Schumacker and Miss Pauline Walthers; Jacob A. Watt and Miss Ella Neiswander.

We stand at the threshold of a New Year and as we look back upon the one so shortly gone we find some reasons for sadness, and also many for thankfulness for the wonderful way in which the Lord lead us.

The first part of the year was extremely cold, and while we looked forward hopefully to springtime and abundant crops which we had not had for three years, the summer was unprecedented for continuous abnormally high temperatures. Crops withered and died prematurely. Wheat and oats yielded very poorly. Pastures were burned brown as in wintertime, until one could scarcely see how livestock could exist and they had to be fed. In the fall, following the heavy rains, pastures revived somewhat and fall-sown barley and oats furnished some pasture. There was practically no corn. Of course gardens, too, were burned, up and housewives had to buy groceries as they can never remember doing before. Fortunately, so far, the winter has been very mild, with ample moisture to make winter wheat grow nicely, although it is rather late because of the late fall rains.

In September our pastor, Rev. C. H. Dirks and family moved to Hutchinson, Kansas, to serve the church there and also attend Bethel College. We were very sorry to lose them from our midst, but wish them God's blessing in their new work. Rev. P. P. Hilty is serving us temporarily for which we are grateful. Brother Jacob Unruh and wife from Pennsylvania have accepted a call from this church and expect to move here around the first of March. We pray that the Lord may bless our labors together.

On Sunday, June 28, occurred the marriage of Miss Winifred Hilty, second daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. P. Hilty, to Mr. Claud Lutman of Versailles.

On August 27-30 the Middle District Conference was held here. Quite a number attended and we felt very fortunate to be able to hear the many inspiring messages, and join in the fine spirit of Christian fellowship which prevailed at all these meetings.

The Sunday evening before Christmas, the choir rendered a cantata in connection with a Missionary Society program. Christmas eve the children rendered their program. The young people of the church are to be commended for the faithfulness in which they keep up the Christian Endeavor meetings every Sunday night, and also for helping with all other church work. On New Year's Eve quite a number of them went to nearly all the homes of the congregation, via the school bus, driven by Paul Hilty, and serenaded the members by singing New Year's hymns.—Mrs. Roy Gerber, Correspondent.

Unconverted teachers in Sunday School remind one of the stucco figure sustaining the gas jets in the Music Hall in Glasgow, guiding others in a way in which they never walk themselves.

Sunday School Lesson

January 24, 1937

TWO MIRACLES OF MERCY

John 5:1-6:71 Printed, 5:2-9, 6:8-15.

The writer of our lesson plainly described what he actually saw—Jesus working two miracles of mercy, being moved with compassion to help the needy.

An Incurable healed by the Great Physician 5:1-9

In the porches of the pool of Bethesda, "House of Mercy", lay many in wretchedness and need (v3). Their life was a sad one—a picture of a lost and dying world. Among these was one especially helpess (vs 5, 7), disappointed day after day, yet hopefully waiting. He represents the many waiting today for encouragement, help, a visit from us. He had no man, no friend to help him. Many needs are not met and relived today—no one is willing to help.

Jesus saw the man, knew his condition (v6), was moved with compassion (Matt. 14:14). Misfortune and suffering always strike a responsive chord in Him. He takes a deep, sympathetic interest in the sinner, helpless and miserable and will heal, save him. The Great Physician of the soul delights in helping the most needy (Mk. 9:21, Luke 8:43). The only question is, Are we willing? "Wilt thou be made whole?", is the question asked of each one of us. Most sinners wish only to be made better. Jesus healed the bodily infirmity, yea more, the man was made whole (v9). Christ still makes men whole. There is power in His Word to save, to heal all who will believe (John 5:24).

The Hungry Multitude Satisfied 6:8-15

Jesus was interested in, concerned about the multitude. He saw a sum total of individuals, persons, saw them as "sheep not having a shepherd". Many followed Him (v2), probably largely of the poorer people. Their souls were precious to Him. Does the Church of today see them as Christ did?

These had been attentive all day, had not provided any material food, evening was at hand. Jesus saw their need and had compassion on them. Andrew timidly speaks of the very small supply carried by a thoughtful lad in the multitude. Jesus made use of this when given to Him and abundantly fed the multitude. The lad gave willingly, all he had. Our small possessions, talent are quite sufficient if we will only give them to Him. Jesus can multiply in quantity and effectiveness all that we give into His hands.

The obedient people sat down. We need to obey if we would eat at Jesus table. We must sit at His feet. Jesus gave thanks, and all had enough and to spare. Carefully all fragments were gathered up (v 12). God's gifts are sacred, none should be wasted. We are stewards. Christ can supply our every need and with much to spare.

Jesus sent the people away (Matt. 14:22) and went alone for prayer. In our success, in time of popular acclaim, we much need communion with God.

Miracles as Signs

The miracles of our lesson were acts of mercy. Christ's miracles also were signs showing He was Christ, the divine Son of God, proofs of the truth of His claims as to himself. They were signs to the disciples (John 2:11), to Nicodemus (John 3:2, to the multitude (John 6:2), signs which John felt should lead the readers of the Gospel to believe in Him as the Christ (John 20:32,31). Jesus himself told the disciples of John to tell him what they had seen as proof of His being the Christ.

Jesus declares that He is the food needed to give men the true Life. He is the Living Bread.

Christ's miracles demonstrate that He alone is the source of the New Life in its fulness.

Golden Text, John 5:36:

"The very works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father has sent me."

Practical Truth:

Christ cares about our physical needs and can relieve them.

SERMON SKETCH

A. J. Neuenschwander

Forward and Upward With Christ in 1937

In Phil. 3:13,14 and Colosians 3:2 we have two texts that give us the directions in which we should travel in the whole of the New Year.

"Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

"Set your mind on things above, not on things on the earth."

The old year is past. The book is closed and the record is finished. The past cannot be changed. Let us truly repent for the past sins, blunders errors and failures if we have not already done so. Let us, however, not waste much time on the past, except to determine that with the help of God we will go Forward and Upward with Christ in 1937.

Our text urges us to forget the past and to get our minds on that which is above. Would Jesus have us do this? Indeed. See how He treated His disciples; Philip questioned, Thomas doubted and Peter denied Christ. Did Jesus discard them because of these things? He lead them to new relationships with himself and then inspired them to go onward and upward.

This is always God's way of dealing with men. In the poem "New Year", by an unknown author, this same thought is expressed.

"He came to my desk with a quivering lip,
The lesson was done.
"Have you a new leaf for me, dear Teacher?
I have spoiled this one!"
I took his leaf, all soiled and blotted
And gave him a new one, all unspotted,
Then into his tired heart I smiled:
"Do better now, my child".
I went to the throne, with trembling heart
The year was done.
"Have you a New Year for me, dear Master?
I have spoiled this one!"
He took my year, all soiled and blotted
And gave me a new one, all unspotted,
Then, into my tired heart he smiled:
"Do better now, my child."

What a glorious privilege as we stand at the threshold of the new year to hear: "Do better now, my child".

Let us start, forward and upward with Christ
"Grandly begin, tho thou hast time
For but a line, be that sublime,
Not failure, but low aim, is crime."

May the assurance of Christ, when He said: "Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" be a source of courage to you to undertake great things in His name.

Let us consider a few things that we ought to set as goals in our forward and upward endeavor with Christ. (a) Study God's Word more regularly. Do this daily. (b) For some of our younger members, this year is the time to decide on and prepare for life work. Whether your life work be Missionary, the Ministry, or whatever it be, let it be Christ-centered. (c) For those past the life-work decision time, invest more for Christ and His Cause. Instead of constantly holding back a little, let us invest for Christ in some young man or woman to encourage him or her. Let us invest in some Mission worker or Station and by personal letters, interest and prayer, watch the work develop and enlarge. (d) Speak definitely to individuals about their soul salvation. Give a simple but sincere testimony of what Jesus means to you. In 1937 experience the joy of soul-winning. (e) Forward and upward with Christ in putting the spiritual realities above the physical and material. (f) Live your noblest and best as a citizen of your community and nation for peace and harmony. (g) Let us rest in the assurance of eternal Salvation for all that are in Christ Jesus.

CORRESPONDENCE

Reedley, California, Jan. 7, 1937.

The readers of the Mennonite owe a debt of gratitude to Brother S. M. Grubb who for so many years has so efficiently edited this paper. We welcome his successor, Brother J. H. Thierstein, and hope that under his guidance the paper will serve even more efficiently the purpose for which it was established. In order to do this it is essential that the correspondents in our churches send in reports more frequently. Having been again elected as correspondent for our church I want to lead off with a good example in this new year. On Sunday, November 29, the Duerksen's gave us their farewell message. In the morning Mrs. Duerksen spoke on the topic: "Why go back to India." In the evening her husband spoke on the topic: "What we saw and learned durnig our furlough." They left San Francisco on December 8, for their field of labor in India. On Sunday, December 6, after the morning service, we had our annual church banquet. At the close of the meal we had a program in which a member of each organization of the church told us the purpose of that organization and what the organization was trying to accomplish. Between these talks the different musical organizations of the church entertained us with choir songs, quartets and duets. The program and fellowship were greatly enjoyed by all. Sunday afternoon December 13, we had our annual congregational meeting, with reports from every organization of the church. All reports were encouraging except the financial report of the trustees. Because of the improvements made in the church and the parsonage, they had to report a deficit of several hundred dollars, but we felt so much encouraged and look so hopefully into the future that we increased our pastor's salary $200.00 for the coming year. At the close of the meeting I conducted a brief memorial service for the seven members of our church who had passed to their reward during the year. They were all older people and members of the first German Bible Class of our Sunday school. During my stay in Reedley more than thirty persons from this class have graduated into the great university beyond, and the class is getting quite small. Sunday evening December 20, our Men's Chorus of twenty-voices, assisted by the Ladies, and Junior choirs, gave us a program of Christmas music that was delightful and inspiring. We have great reason to be thankful for these choirs which add so much of the devotional spirit to our regular services of worship and we appreciate very highly their service and that of their consecrated leaders. On Christmas morning we had a Christmas service in our church as usual, and a good program by the Sunday school in the evening. Yesterday we had several inches of snow, very unusual for Reedley, the first since 1910. All the people, especially the children, enjoyed it very much. Because of the previous rain the ground was wet and most of the snow melted, nevertheless there are many snowmen in the yards and on the lawns this morning. We are thankful for these precipitations of which we have had twice as much as last season. It means a greater abundance of irrigation water for next summer. We hope for greater and better things in 1937 and pray that the Christmas spirit of peace and good will might remain with us throughout the year and control all human relations.—H. J. Krehbiel.

First Mennonite Church, Sugarcreek, Ohio.

Greetings: A new year—a splendid gift for each one of us! For this new year, we wish you Health, Happiness, and Prosperity.

A large audience was deeply impressed with the clear and penetrating message brought by the play, "What Shall It Profit a Man?" presented by the young people of the First Moravian Church of Uhrichsville, Ohio, on Sunday evening, December 6

A fine Christmas program by the children and our White Gifts Christmas service were well attended. The music by the choir and a solo number from the "Messiah" by Dr. D. D. Hostetler added much to the enjoyment. After the Christmas play, "The Wise Men at the Well," taken from the December Household Magazine, four girls dressed in white received the white gifts, and one dressed as the Star of the East and placed them around the manger.

A New Year's Eve party and watch night service was held on Thursday evening, December 31, in the basement of the church. After a program including folk games and contests, refreshments were served. Then we had a brief watch night service and at midnight, while the church bell rang out the old and in the new year, we extended to each other a good old-fashioned New Year's greeting. Old and young together enjoyed this, our first New Year's watch night service.

Our annual congregational meeting was held on Tuesday evening, January 5. The congregation voted that hereafter the annual meeting shall be held on the evening of the second Tuesday of September, and the new year shall begin on the first Sunday of October.

The Women's Missionary Society held a meeting in their church room at the close of the past year. This meeting was looked forward to by all the members for quite some time, to learn who has been their friend and aid-sister for the past year. What fun, when those, so sure they knew the one who was their aid-sister, were so mistaken. This meeting is one we never want to miss.

The Women's Missionary Society is to be highly commended for their untiring work in husking over three thousand shocks of corn for the farmers of this community. The money earned will be used to beautify the house of God.

The program committee is preparing a very interesting and instructive series of studies on "The Personality of Jesus" for the young people's Sunday evening meetings. The study will cover seven evenings.

About twenty-five members of the Junior Christian Endeavor surprised Rev. and Mrs. Stauffer as they rushed into the parsonage with a wagon piled high with all kinds of groceries, as Christmas gifts, each beautifully wrapped in white. After all were arranged on the living room floor the mysteries on the wagon were opened with interest and excitement. Later all were served with refreshments. Rev. and Mrs. Stauffer were so grateful for these thoughtful gifts.

All of us have had much to be thankful for this past year. May we build on the past and make 1937 the best year that we have had for God's Great Kingdom.—Mrs. Homer Schrock, Correspondent.

The Second Church, Beatrice, Nebr.

Our correspondent is vacationing in California, but he has again been unanimously elected to continue his duties as reporter to our church papers.

The Second Church had a number of blessed experiences during the festive season. These we wish to share with the large Mennonite family. Christmas celebrations began the evening of December 21, when the writer and his beloved companion had the privilege of an active part in the hospital program, given by the hospital family for the benefit of the patients. Thou shalt call His name Jesus—Saviour and Healer of soul and body. What a message of hope and cheer to those upon their beds of affliction.

Wednesday evening followed the celebration in the county jail with the sheriff's family and all the inmates, all of whom were remembered with a small Christmas gift. This consisted of the Gospel of St. John in a neatly bound booklet and a chocolate bar.

Friday morning, Christmas Day, we had our regular Christmas services. It is gratifying to see our people turn out so well to these services. This not only on Christmas Day, but also on New Year's Day and other church holy days, not holidays. In the evening our Sunday school program was rendered. The children, including those from the neighborhood, did remarkably well and the teachers deserve credit for their faithful labor. At the close of the program Sister Elizabeth Goertz, our missionary on furlough from China, spoke to the children, and has addressed us several times since. Her heart is in the work which she represents, especially the hospital work in China, and we pray that her sojourn may be of mutual benefit and blessing.

The last celebration, on the county poor farm, took place Sunday afternoon, December 27, Here, too, all the inmates were remembered with simple gifts, reminding them of the "Unspeakable Gift" our Father gave us in Jesus Christ our Lord and Redeemer. The Christmas services in these county institutions are arranged by the mission committee of our Senior Christian Endeavor Society and are greatly appreciated by the inmates.

The annual congregational business meeting was held Wednesday evening, December 30. The necessary business was transacted in the spirit of brotherly forbearance and love. In these hard and strenuous times it is a matter for profound gratitude that the church debt is wiped out, all bills paid, and a little nest-egg in the treasury for the new year.

For the week of prayer our church had arranged for a series of evangelistic meetings, with Rev. Albert Claassen, Freeman, South Dakota, as speaker. But a serious blizzard rendered Brother Claassen snowbound, so the meetings had to be postponed. Here again the saying is true, "Man proposes and God disposes."

The Second Church of Beatrice has experienced our Father's unmerited grace, patience, and forbearance. This gives courage, confidently to look forward into the new year. We, with all of His people, may claim our Saviour's promise. "Lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." Matthew 28:20.

Wanted: A Name

What! No Name?

No name!

The Middle District Conference young people are going to find a GOOD name for their little paper, not just ANY name. For a good paper deserves a good name!

The ? ? ? , that's what they call it. The ? ? ? is a little, well planned, six-page mimeographed paper, chucked full of local news of what the different C. E. societies of the different churches are doing. It gives the complete roster of the conference officers, and best of all! it gives the names of young people's leaders.

There is one thing absolutely new in this little ? ? ? . It's a brand new idea. Honestly, we don't know that we have ever seen anything just like it. We spent some few minutes looking it over, especially to find out just who WAS the editor, but the name of the editor is not given. Now our guess is that they have that fact concealed, so that nobody being exactly sure who IS the editor, they all think they are, and that keeps them all working.

If you don't think they are all working you just write to Miss Inda Sprunger, Field Secretary, Berne, Indiana, for a sample copy. If she is not the editor, anyway she has something to do with it.

To our knowledge this is the second district conference to undertake the publication of the mimeographed conferenc sheet for young people. The need for these publications is real; the cost, in terms of material, is not great, but the cost in terms of human effort, faithfulness, consecration, is great. Such undertakings deserve the most sympathetic support of the churches themselves. To encourage the efforts of young people, to try to understand their dreamings and longings is the surest form of church-perpetuation we know of.

Success to you, ? ? ? , no question about it!

Who's Who?

Nobody knows.

Nobody knows Who's Who Among Young Mennonites. Ask anybody you know. They may tell you three or four names. Ask them why they think so, and they can't tell you.

There is not in existence any composite list of outstanding young leaders of the General Conference anywhere that we know of. Such a list would be of tremendous value. These are difficult times, and times in which, if ever we needed red blood and stout hearts, we need them now. There are doubtless many such young people, but no one knows who they are. We can't put our finger on them.

From out of the Mennonite fold have gone, these many years not only fine teachers, preachers, and missionaries. There have gone out (And lo! not always returned) nurses, deaconesses, businessmen, professional men and women, doctors, lawyers, scientists, scholars. They are supremely qualified to be our teachers. They know the Mennonite mind; they know the mind of the world; they know our mission, and where we fail to keep it.

Why not collect a list of them, and, if not publish them in book form, we could surely, once or twice a year, publish them right here in THE MENNONITE. Who will collect them? We know of no cheaper way than the young folks themselves—young folks in every C. E. group, in every church. Sit down now, and prepare a good, working list of the real leaders in your group, your district, your conference, and send the names in. We will be glad to list and index them for general distribution in these columns.

Life!

"A mystic bird once asked, 'what is life?'" writes Dr. H. S. Khosla in the Children's News of Delhi, India. "A musician bird at once responded, 'Life is a string of music.' A mole showed his head out of the ground to say, 'Life is a struggle in the dark.' The wild rose whose petals had just blossomed said, 'Life is the name of growth.' A fly buzzed 'Life is the smallest summer day.' An ant: 'Nothing—beyond hard labor.' Then the rain came with the message 'Life is teardrops.' An eagle spreading his wings like an airplane cried, 'It is another name for freedom and strength.' The breeze murmured, 'Life is a dream.' The morning's sun then appeared and sang, 'Life is the name of the beginning.'"—The New York Times.

This Sunday is the beginning of what is known as "Christian Endeavor Week." Special plans for the week and for next Sunday can be had for 10c each by writing to the International Society of C. E., at 41 Mt. Vernon St., Boston

Praise and Worship Service

After a ten minute praise service in song, the president should take charge of the announcements. Select songs suitable to the topic. Then follow the worship service as outlined in the C. E. World Quarterly or plan your own, keeping the topic in mind

Introducing The Topic

1. Speak of the purpose of the meeting. It is to increase our appreciation and understanding of the church and its varied purposes and to see our share in carrying out these purposes. Explain what we mean by "The Church"
2. (Use the blackboard to make the discussion more impressive. Have a picture of a large church drawn without windows. As the various purposes are brought out put in the windows and label them. You will need to plan carefully to have as many purposes discussed as you have room for windows. (If the leader does not feel able to take care of the drawing does not feel able to take care of the drawing, ing, can be used.) This can be introduced by the leader somewhat as follows: When the Christian church fulfills its purposes it is like letting the Light of Heaven shine upon those who come under its influence. So tonight we shall let each purpose be represented by a window in this church. As the purposes are brought out through our discussion we shall add a window for each one until it is completed

The Purposes of the Church

Have a series of short talks on the following: "How is our church fulfilling its purposes of:

1. Preaching God's word
2. Teaching the Bible
3. Offering a place of worship
4. Training in Christian living
5. Sharing the Gospel with those who do not have it
6. Administering the Christian Sacraments
7. Doing good to the needy and oppressed

The Mennonite Church

Have someone give a short talk on, "What purpose has carried the Mennonite church through four centuries as a denomination?" Material for such a talk will be found in "The Mennonite" of June 16, 1936, p. 3.

Closing

Ask the pastor to give a five-minute closing talk on, "How can young people share in carrying out the purpose of the church?"

Program Suggestions for January 31, 1937

"More About Jesus"

Topic 5: Healing the Sick

1. Setting the verse of the month in its accustomed place and on the blackboard the verse: "They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick. I came to call the sinners to repentance."
2. Opening service—service in song
3. Call to Worship—by a hymn played softly
4. Worship Period—(Place two readers in opposite places. Leader take place in back of group)
    1) Reader one—Bless Jehovah, O my soul; And all that is within me, bless his holy name
    2) Reader two—Bless Jehovah, O my soul and forget not all his benefits
    3) Reader one—Who forgiveth all thine iniquities.
    4) Reader two—Who healeth all thy diseases
    5 Reader one—Who redeemeth thy life from destruction
    6) Reader two—Who crowneth thee with loving kindness and tender mercies (Verses from Psalm 103)
    7) Leader—I am the Lord that healeth thee. I will take sickness away from the midst of thee. He healeth the broken in heart, and bindeth up their wounds. (Verses from Ex. 15:23 and Ps. 147)
    8) Reader one—Heal me, O Jehovah, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved. (Jer. 17:14)
    9) Reader two—Come, and let us return unto Jehovah for he will heal us. (Hosea 6)
    10) Leader—He hath not dealt with us after our sins, Nor rewarded us after our iniquities. For as the heavens are high above the earth, So great is his loving kindness toward them that fear him
    11) Reader one—Bless Jehovah all ye his works
    12) Reader two—Bless Jehovah, O my soul. (Verses from Psalm 103)

13) In unison sing—"Great Is Thy Faithfulness"

    1) Sing in unison—"More About Jesus"
    2) Connecting remarks as to study of the evening with previous studies
    3) Watching Jesus heal—accounts of healing retold by juniors

        b. The lepers—Mark 1:40-42
        c. The paralytic—Luke 5:17-26
        d. The withered hand—Luke 6:6-11
        e. The centurion's servant—Luke 7:1-10

        h. The ten lepers—Luke 17:11-19
        i. The servant of the high priest—Luke 22
    4) Repeat in unison the verse of the month
    5) Heart-talk: Am I Sick?—by leader, stressing the need of the Saviour
    6) Sing in unison—"The Great Physician"
    7) Closing prayer by leader

Yes, Why?

"Just why the motion picture industry should be so short-sighted as to allow itself to foster—even unconsciously—the war spirit is an unfathomable mystery. If war comes, the motion picture, both as a business and as an art, will suffer losses from which it may never recover. The financial burden of waging a war will take its toll from box-office receipts; and dictatorship, which will come with another war, will destroy the screen's freedom of expression. Why, then, does not the screen use its tremendous power to avert such a calamity by fomenting peace instead of stupidly inculcating the war spirit?" —Selected

THEN! NOW!

Four months ago a California Youth came down from the mountains, sat down at his typewriter and sent your editor this:

Parched desert, orchards and vineyards, curving road through foothills, a whiff of the pines, and then a lake! Lake Sequoia and our Retreat!

Morning devotions at Bible Rock, Indian Point, or Campfire Circle began the day. The forenoon was divided into five periods of Bible study, a chorus class, and Chapel. A new and deeper appreciation of God's Word, God's handiwork, and our heritage in hymn and history were the natural results.) The afternoon was given to recreation of the varied sort possible only in such an ideal location.

The high point of the day, a period of quiet worship, was at the lakeside facing the gradually fading glory of the departing sun. Campfire service at 8:30 o'clock varied from stunts to a testimony service on the last night.

A mountain top experience—What will our valley service be?

Young man, I'm curious what HAS your valley service been? Not only I, but the entire Church of Christ wants to know: Have these fine and holy aspirations changed YOU, or the world about you? Or was that mountain-top experience about which you wrote so vividly only a little incident, something to be talked about, and then to be forgotten?

ANGEL'S WORK

I have done angel's work today!
Yes, such an honor came my way.
Real angel's Work! And, lest you doubt it,
I'm going to tell you all about it.

Well, first, I cooked. It was so nice
To plan the pies, stewed fruit, and rice.
God sent His angel, once, to make
Cakes for a poor wayfarer's sake;
But, just today, He honored me,
And sent the task my way, you see.

Then, while I tidied up the place,
Gave every knob a radiant face,
Back to my mind this thought would lurk—
That I was still at angel's work.
Putting away the coats and dresses,
And moving small unsightlinesses.
For, oh! 'tis such a lovesome thing,
Just straightening out, and freshening.

And after that, I washed a few Small wooly garments, old, not new.
Things I had rinsed and rubbed before
Quite forty times, or even more.
And as I hung them on the line
I thought what Godlike work was mine;
To cleanse—ah me!—to wash out stains
Till not a single speck remains.

So later in the day, 'twas sweet
To sit and rest my tired feet,
Mending the clothes, and plan out, too,
How to make old things into new.
For, surely 'tis an angel's way
To put things right from day to day.
To find thin places, and repair
The glad rags and sturdy wear.
Since wear and tear must surely be
On this side of eternity,
I'm feeling very proud to say
I have done angel's work today.

DEATHS

John P. Linscheid, the son of Peter and Elizabeth Linscheid, was born July 20, 1864, in Galicia, Austria.

He was received as a member into the Mennonite Church by baptism on Pentecost Day, May 30, 1979, by Rev. Daniel Brubacher.

After graduation from the local schools he taught for a while. In 1883 he came to America with his parents. In 1887 the family settled near Arlington, Kansas. Here, on September 23, 1888, he married Mrs. Katherine Miller Linscheid, the widow of his deceased elder brother Peter, whose two boys, Jacob and John, found in their uncle a new father. To this family were added five children: Elizabeth, Emma, Edward, Alfred, and Peter.

The group of Mennonites living in this community felt the need of a spiritual leader and their choice fell upon the deceased, who had for some time previous served them as leader in the Sunday School. On February 17, 1901, he was regularly ordained to the ministry of the Gospel by Rev. J. J. Flickinger. In 1905 a church organization was affected under his leadership. At the request of the membership of the church he was given full office as elder and pastor of the congregation, and was so ordained on June 10, 1917, again by the Rev. J. J. Flickinger. In this capacity he served the congregation unstintingly and with utmost devotion, though, at times, under very trying conditions. His deep concern for the building of the Kingdom of God beyond the limits of the local church and community was revealed in his prayerful support and liberal contributions to missions, schools, and to social welfare in general.

In 1930 it was his privilege to realize a long-felt desire to see once more the scenes of his youth in Europe, renewing old acquaintances and gathering interesting historical data relating to the group of the so-called Galician Mennonites. He was active in the conception and execution of the celebration, in 1933, of the fiftieth anniversary of the coming of this group to America.

The deceased was preceded in death by a step-son, Jacob, in 1905, and by his wife, who died February 17, 1934. He is survived by his children, two daughters, four sons and their wives, a sister, Mrs. J. H. Linscheid, Arlington, and two brothers, Edward, of Arlington, and Gustav A., of Canton, Oklahoma, and also four grandchildren.

He was called to his reward on Sunday morning January 3, 1937. The call came suddenly and the faithful servant was privileged to go into the presence of his Lord and Master without a struggle.

In the home, services were conducted by Rev. H. J. Kliewer. At the church Rev. S. M. Musselman assisted with the reading of the scripture and prayer. Rev. D. D. Eitzen of Los Angeles, California, preached the sermon. Mrs. E. J. Linscheid, Newton, sang, "Ach mein Herr Jesu," and a trio of young friends sang several numbers.

"Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of His saints." Psalm 116:15.

Cornelius Schroeder died at Reedley, California, on December 12, at the age of 78 years, 9 months, and 6 days.

He was born in Poland and in his youth united with the Mennonite Church there. At the age of 19 he came to America and made his home in Kansas. Here he united in marriage with Francis Stucky on November 30, 1886. Five years after his marriage he moved to Oregon and in the fall of 1904 he came with his family to Reedley, California. Here he participated in the organization of The First Mennonite Church, becoming one of its charter members.

Funeral services were held in The First Mennonite Church on December 15 on which occasion Rev. H. J. Krehbiel spoke words of comfort, basing his remarks on Numbers 23:10. Rev. J. H. Langenwalter based his remarks on Psalm 119:89-96.

He leaves to mourn his death one son, two daughters, three brothers, two sisters, and many friends.

NEWS AND NOTES

THE MENNONITE MESSENGER, a monthly paper published by the Reverend William H. Stauffer, pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Sugar Creek, Ohio, is coming to our desk. It is the best-looking and most artistically gotten-up church paper that we have seen for many a day. Fine paper, fine illustrations, clear type, meaty, fascinating articels and talks to his congregation make it a very attractive and valuable sheet. Two of the good articles presented are entitled "What does Church Membership Mean?" and "Possession does not Mean Ownership." As soon as space permits we shall bring one or two of them. The page "Newest Notes on Science" is unique and interesting. Rev. Stauffer announces two new series of sermons: on Sunday mornings, sermons on "The Christian Religion"; on Sunday evenings, Bible Study discourses. This month's program is: Jan. 3, p. m.—"The Fourth Gospel"; Jan. 10, a. m. "Why Believe in God?"; Jan. 17, p. m. —"In the Beginning"; Jan. 24, a. m.—"What God is Like"; Jan. 31, p. m.—"John the Baptist."

From a Sunday bulletin sent us by Rev. D. D. Eitzen, pastor of the Emmanuel Church, Los Angeles, Calif., we clipped the following:

OUR CONFERENCE PERIODICALS. Every home represented in our church membership should subscribe either to THE MENNONITE or the BUNDESBOTE. This will unite us in a closer Christian fellowship with the brethren throughout the United States and Canada. Moreover, we will be kept informed about the work on the mision field. This will enable us to pray more intelligently for the Lord's work.

A CHOICE GIFT! For the thoughtful Christian parent, it is always a problem what to give at Christmas. Instead of giving guns and like toys, how wonderful for a child to receive a good Bible story book. There are several on the market, including Hurlbut's and Egermier's. The Mennonite Book Concern has sent our church a number of the latter that we might recommend it and if there were those who wish to have it that they could get it. The Sunday School Times says of this story book "True to the facts and inspiration of the Word." We have one copy left of this book but can get more if desired. Speak to the church worker or the pastor if interested.

Parents! Let's say AMEN to this suggestion. Get these books and others of this kind. Let's train our children to read good books and appreciate good music.

The First Mennonite Church of Upland, Calif., announces a series of evangelistic sermons to be held during the week of February 1-7, with Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, new pastor of the Mennonite Church at Reedley, Calif., as speaker. Sessions will be held every afternoon and evening. No doubt these services will be largely attended for Dr. Langenwalter is a spiritual man and an interesting and fluent speaker.

Dr. H. J. Krehbiel, pastor emeritus of the congregation at Reedley, California, writes that in spite of his counsel to choose a younger person, he was again elected correspondent for the year 1937. This pleases us, for he is a fascinating writer and has promised to contribute.

Our good friend J. P. Habegger of Berne, Indiana, who once encircled the globe on a visit to our mission fields in the Orient, with Rev. J. W. Kliewer, still feels the urge of Wanderlust occasionally. Only recently he took a spin by auto to Seattle, Washington. From the home of his son in that city he wrote in part, "We had a very interesting journey over the country, mostly over highway U. S. 30. All through were good paved roads. The way they make the roads and build cars, it is a joy to travel by automobile through God's wonderfully-created country. We traveled 2,679 miles, arrived safely and well in Seattle."

Here is a splendid opportunity for small children of a community! Would that others might follow the example! Mrs. M. L. Habegegr of Berne, Indiana, announces the opening of a kindergarten. "The kindergarten room is located in the attractively located basement of her large modern new home. The room is furnished in a soft brown and rust-colored combination, has a large fireplace, easy chairs, studio couch, and regular kindergarten equipment, consisting of small tables, piano, duo-easel, sand table, and toys." Nearly twenty children have been enrolled. How fortunate such children!

Missionary S. F. Moyer writes in a recent letter from India, "We have baptized 93 here at this station, and received back into the church at least 8 other backsliders. It is the BIBLE TEACHING WHICH IS WORKING THIS. By the time this letter reaches you we will have baptized another 100, which will make 200 souls brought to Christ within 12 months. May I plead with you to continue your support, and your prayers, and your interest. I feel that we are on a verge of a great ingathering, in which 1000 may come within the next few years. God's Word is proving true. Rejoice with us."

Evangelist John Nussbaum, Berne Indiana, is conducting Special Meetings for two weeks in the East Swamp and West Swamp Churches. This is a union effort to increase the spiritual life and to win new converts. The Ministers of these churches are Rev. W. S. Gottshall and Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, respectively. A fine interest has been manifested and attendance is increasing.

A motorist in the South once stopped for water at a dilapidated house where a barefooted man, leaning against a rickety fence, was gazing meditatively across a field that had grown up to weeds. "How is your cotton this year?" the motorist asked. "Well, sir," replied the man, "I ain't got no cotton. I didn't plant none 'cause I was afraid the boll weevil might be bad.' " "How is your corn?" "Well, I didn't plant no corn neither, for I didn't know if we'd git rain." The motorist hesitated. "How are your sweet potatoes?" "Well now, stranger, you see, it's this way: I didn't plant no sweet pertaters 'cause I was afraid the bugs might take them. No, sir, I didn't plant nothin'. I just played safe."

If the church does not move forward in 1937, we will know that most of the members were just playing safe.—Mrs. Homer Schrock, Sugar Creek, Ohio.

The church at Donnellson, Iowa, elected the following members for a three-year term of office: E. G. Hirschler, deacon; Walter Koller, trustee W. D. Krebill, president; A. D. Krebill, secretary; H. A. Lowenberg, treasurer; and Miss Elizabeth Koller, correspondent.

"Annual Christmas Epistle" is the title of an attractive little folder from the Rev. S. F. Pannabecker's in China, with a charming picture of the family. We wish we had space to print the whole letter, for it is a fine piece of composition, filled with interesting bits of information. For the present just a few extracts: "The picture doesn't do us justice, but after all what we need is perhaps mercy rather than justice. Dad got to the place where he is being comforted by the Reader's Digest statement about baldness: (1) Choose your ancestors more carefully, and (2) endure it. Mother's school girl complexion is holding out pretty well in spite of her few gray hairs, while her school girl smile is as good as ever." In the same happy vein the letter tells about the children. Dick is a sophomore in the American school at Kikungshan; Robert is in school work at home and keeps his mother busy with his sixth grade work; Alice Ruth, doing second grade work at home, is just learning to enjoy reading.

Rev. A. S. Bechtel who, after about eight years of service there, has resigned as pastor of the Deer Creek, Oklahoma, church, together with Mrs. Bechtel visited the Mennonite Church at Lehigh, Kansas, several days around New Year. Brother Bechtel writes, "I preached four times . . . and, believe it or not, I preached German on Sunday morning and the people were quite well satisfied with it. We were in eight homes and received a really good impression of the people and the church."

The report has come to us that Rev. S. M. Musselman, for the past few years pastor of the large Mennonite Church near Pretty Prairie, Kansas, is also severing his connections with this charge. We hope he will find a congenial place with one of the several other churches in the Western District that are looking for pastors.

We are getting quite a number of "correspondences" these days. In order to find room for all of them we had to shorten some. We thank the correspondents and hope that no one will be offended.

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, JANUARY 26, 1937 No. 4

Use of Leisure Time.—Among the objectives that American education is trying to foster is the "Proper Use of Leisure." This aim may be attained by getting the children to learn one or more avocations to enable them properly to utilize leisure time and to serve them as a diversion from professional or vocational duties, as well as for recreational purposes. Woodworking, gardening, sewing, crocheting, painting, or anything else of that nature have their value. We would suggest two profitable and enjoyable ways of using spare time. The first is reading. Children now learn to read rapidly. It is a very common thing for first-year beginners to read their primer and several first readers. While they are learning to read, there begins the delicate and very important duty of the teacher, and even more of the parents, to encourage the reading of good, wholesome literature. What the children read in school, ordinarily, isn't bad reading matter. But how fortunate for the young life, if through the home, the Sunday School, and the church, it can be trained to love to read the Bible and the masses of stories and books that are uplifting and that envelope the young reader with a Christian atmosphere. What parents can do and should do, is to see to it that their children have at their disposal good books, many of them, and then to encourage them to read them, show an interest in them, listen to their recital of them, and talk them over with them. Money spent for supplying young minds with real good books is wisely spent and will yield worthwhile returns. There is hardly a child that cannot be trained to love to read good books in preference to questionable ones, and in due time to learn to distinguish the good from the bad. A child that has acquired the urge or habit of reading good books, will find it pleasing and profitable to spend evenings and Sunday afternoons in reading them rather than to run around trying to find amusements of a questionable type. Petrarch, the Roman, chuckled when he had succeeded in collecting a library of about five hundred manuscripts of stories, poetry, and philosophy, and mused, "Now I have the best of friends with me in my house. I can go to them for information, entertainment, and inspiration." The Mennonite Book Concern is ready to supply homes and church libraries with the right kind of books.

Another good way to use leisure time is to learn to enjoy music, vocal or instrumental. Nothing adds more to the enjoyment of self and others than music. The children are learning to sing and play in our schools. Here, too, the home and church can do much in training them to love and appreciate good, up-lifting music. Any young person who has acquired a love for good books and good music has the equipment for a happier, pleasanter, and more useful life.

This life is at best only the scaffolding about our true life, which is immortal. A scaffolding, though useful in construction, really hides the beauty of the building, and is torn down when the building is complete. Useful as it is, it becomes a deformity when it needlessly withdraws attention from the main structure. Should a builder erect his scaffolding as if it were the building, expending on it so much time, and labor, and money, as to relay or risk the final completion of the edifice, he would be a fool, giving to the scaffolding what can properly be bestowed only on the structure itself, exhausting his means on that which is transient, rather than on that which is permanent. Such is the folly of a worldly life. In one dread moment all that is temporal collapses and falls into ruin, however elaborate and costly. In what condition will it reveal our eternal house!

Dead Churches. "Have you ever read the Ancient Mariner?" asked Rev. Mr. Spurgeon one day of his congregation. "I dare say you thought it one of the strangest imaginations ever put together, especially that part where the mariner represents the corpses of all dead men rising up to man the ship—dead men pulling the rope; dead men steering; dead men spreading the sails. I thought what a strange idea that was. But do you know that I have lived to see it done! I have gone into churches; I have seen a dead man in the pulpit; a dead man as a deacon; a dead man handing the plates; and dead men sitting to hear."

PLEASE

Will the correspondents and their churches kindly pardon us for putting their correspondences off until next week. We are sorry to cause disappointment, but we have other material that has been waiting and must appear in the Mennonite this week.

"Never did angels taste above, Redeeming grace and dying Love."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Extracts from a letter by S. F. Pannabecker, China

There have been times during the year when it looked as if things had reached a climax, but each passed off without serious consequences. The tendency for North China to go the way of Manchuria has been evident in the various "autonomy" moves apparently fostered by foreign influence. They have been checked by intense popular sentiment against any separation from the rest of China. Diplomatic negotiations are in progress in an attempt to settle the outstanding questions between the two countries. The Chinese refuse to accept Japanese demands, viz., (1) the independence of the five provinces of North China, and (2) united Chinese and Japanese military action against the Communists.

Of far-reaching importance is the sense of unification that has taken hold of the country recently. At no time in the history of the Chinese Republic has there been anything like the present solidarity. Chiang has proved himself a wise and capable leader and is growing in popularity. Of particular note is also the fact that the railroad from Hankow to Canton has been completed, so that one can travel from London to Canton entirely by rail.

In mission work our particular responsibility is the Bible School, where besides the odd jobs of a principal, I teach church history and singing. One would like to tell many things about our fifty students, what they study, how they live, how they go out every Sunday to neighboring villages, hospital and jail, and how we hope that they will eventually go back and become leaders of their local churches or serve in some way to promote the work of the Kingdom. In all our work we are trying to introduce men to Christ and to train them in life compatible with the Kingdom of God.

We are glad to report that during the year both our Hospital and our School of Nursing have been put under boards largely Chinese. In spring we celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of our work in China. The seven hundred local Christians and two hundred visitors had a blessed experience listening to the inspiring messages from China's noted evangelist Wang Ming Tao. In October, we enjoyed a visit from Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Suderman of Newton, Kansa. It's seldom that anybody from home gets out this way, so we appreciate the contact.

We are glad for the new worker, Miss Kuif, the first in seven years. With the return of Miss Fast and the Doctor Pannabecker family our ranks are somewhat replenished, but since two families are due to leave next spring the need of new missionaries is badly felt.

HOME MISSIONS

GENERAL CONFERENCE

It was the writers privilege to go through a number of our General Conference churches during the months of November and December, 1936. The reason of my sojourn in the United States was threefold:

In the first place the Publication Board of the General Conference asked me to go through the churches in order to present to our people the need of a book depository in Canada. Our Publication Board considers it as desirable that a depository of Christian German literature be made in order to offer to our young people reading matter of a Christian character in the German language. German literature must come from Germany, and if such literature comes to Canada by way of the United States, double duty and double postage has to be paid. Besides there is the difference in the value of currency. A depository of books in Canada would simplify matters considerably.

Our Publication Board rightly considers the spread of Christian literature as a missionary enterprise, and I believe we all agree that it is. It is our experience that if our churches get the proper information, so that they see a just purpose in any enterprise, they are willing to help to the extent of their ability.

Our home mission work may not have had the proper attention of our churches, simply because the information regarding the necessity of home mission in Canada was not presented to our churches as strongly as it might. Much has been done by our General Conference for home missions also, but much more is to be done, and it gave me pleasure to present the cause of home missions to our churches.

We have another problem in Canada in connection with our immigration work. The kind reader will remember that a huge debt had to be incurred in connection with the bringing over of some 21,000 immigrants on credit. Now, of course, it was understood that these immigrants should repay their debts as soon as at all possible. But it is 14 years now since the first group of immigrants came in 1923, and many of our immigrants have died in these fourteen years before they were able to repay their debts. This debt will have to be paid, however. I hoped to be able to present this problem to our churches, especially also to the relief committees of the different conferences.

I consider it my duty to express my sincerest gratitude and appreciation for the kind reception and consideration which I have received in the United States. It would have been impossible for me to do the work without the readiness on the part of many to help in every way possible.

I cannot estimate the results of the work done. In some cases offerings were taken after the address had been given, in other cases the offerings were to be taken on a Sunday, when there would be more present. I believe in every case promises were made that something would be done. I trust it will not be considered out of place, if I remind our brethren of these promises.

With regard to home missions most of the churches in the United States have the rule that on a certain Sunday in the month offerings are being taken for home and for foreign mission respectively. When we in the Home Mission Board sometimes consider the needs of our fields, we get the impression that our churches may not be sufficiently interested in home missions. Judging from the interest that practically all our churches are taking in foreign missions, we must come to the conclusion that lack of interest in home missions is often caused by lack of information. I trust that I have been able to give some information in connection with home mission work in Canada.

Our relief committees also have shown that they are sympathetic to our different problems, and some of our relief boards have agreed to take the necessary steps to come to our assistance. Many of our brethren have already come to our help and I would herewith express our sincerest thanks to all the kind people who have helped us in the various ways. But we are not through with our work, and we will also in the future need the kind co-operation of our churches.

In Gal. 6:9, we read: Let us not grow weary for in due season we shall reap without ceasing.

With kindest regards to all readers,
January 12, 1937. David Toews.

WESTERN DISTRICT

The Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Dyck last Wednesday and important matters were under consideration. Rev. Olin Krehbiel has resigned as pastor of the Wichita Mennonite Church, and plans for the future of this field were discussed. Rev. P. K. Regier and Rev. H. J. Dyck will visit the church at Kingman, Kansas, in the near future to look into the future of this church and report to the committee. Rev. A. J. Dyck and Rev. J. M. Suderman will visit the churches at Mennoville, Carnegie, and Taloga, Oklahoma, this week to look into the further needs of these fields.

The Hoffnungsan Church, near Inman, Kansas, has called Albert M. Gaeddert who is teaching in the High School at Goddard, Kansas, to act as assistant minister to their pastor, A. J. Dyck.

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

1. Higher education and American civilization.—"Political enemies may attempt to undermine, critics may cavil, bigots may bluster, but the cold indisputable fact remains that higher education, during the three and a half decades of the century now passing, has furnished more than ever before the proof for the permanency and the potency of the doctrine of educational opportunity and has become the great driving force for the advance of both material and spiritual things.... Whether we pursue the route of sentimental aspiration, or that of stern statistics, we inevitably reach the conclusion that what we, as a people, in this American world of ours, and what we are accomplishing for the cause of civilization, are more directly the products of the services and the skills of our colleges, our universities, and our professional schools than of any other existing agency or group of existing agencies. These institutions distinctly more than any other embody the best of our American idealism, the firmest of our confidence in the present and most stable of our faith in the future. They, above all, have been the means for giving a human reality to philanthropy."

FIELD SECRETARY

It is essential that the readers of our church papers should be informed, from time to time, of the progress of the work carried on by our field secretary, Rev. H. A. Fast. Here are some extracts from a report which he has just made to the Executive Committee. The report opens thus:

"If I should sum up in one statement my reactions of my activity I would express it in the words of Paul: 'I planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase.' . . . I am inexperienced in this work and so the friendly interest and the helpful counsel of members of the Executive Committee have been a great encouragement and help to me . . . The first weeks of my work, beginning with October 20 last, were devoted primarily to the problem of familiarizing myself with my task and of making plans for the work. This included consultations with officers of the Conference, chairmen and members of boards, and others; study of the beginnings, growth, present status, needs and problems of our Conference, foreign and home missions, publication interests, work of education, relief, mission societies, young people's work, and other activities; collecting and ordering of materials, formulating of plans and procedures, planning of itineraries, and the like. In the meantime I spoke several times at the College and in the neighborhood." (The Fast family have taken up their residences on the Bethel College campus.)

From November 19 to December 23, Rev. Fast visited churches in the Northern District, at Alsen, Langdon, and Arena, North Dakota, Warroad, Minnesota, and the churches in and around Mountain Lake and Butterfield, Minnesota. He reports that he generally visits two churches a week, giving Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday to the larger groups and Wednesday to Friday to the smaller ones. But very small groups he sometimes gives only one or two days. In addition to public addresses, twice on Sundays and once or more every weekday, except Saturday, he tries to arrange informal conferences with leaders of groups, such as church officers, Sunday schools, young people's organizations, mission societies, and the like, and tries to offer helpful counsel as to how each may have an effective part in the work of the church.

The interest and attendance at the meetings has, on the whole, been very good, except when the weather or sickness interfered. "My short experience," he says, "has thoroughly convinced me (1) that this work is really needed, and (2) that it is appreciated. Almost everywhere I go I am told that this work should have been done long ago. I think it needs to be done particularly for the sake of the younger and middle aged groups who often are almost wholly unacquainted with the larger work of the Conference and so do not have the real appreciation of the importance of the service it is rendering."

In conclusion he urges the various Boards to keep him posted on the latest developments, needs, plans, and problems in their field of activity. "Please Do Not Forget This" is his finis.

RELIEF

(Compiled by A. Warkentin, and O. O. Miller)

Franz Fast, Oberschulze, Mennonite Colony, Auhagen, St. Catherine, Brazil: "As you, of course, already know of the one hundred families who were originally on Stolz Plateau, Colony Auhagen, only one-third have stayed—or thirty-two Mennonite families. Because of the strong emigration most of these families also lost their courage. Thru this period of discouragement and in the hope that they also would be able to settle somewhere else, only very little was planted. Even this turned out poorly. In the whole Colony the maize harvest was very poor.

"If these poverty-stricken families are to have enough bread next year, they will be forced to work on their fields more diligently than they did last year, and not by looking to other fields during planting time. So far most of our colonists have just about been able to get along, but now, with debts piling up, they will find it more and more difficult. Because of this situation, which I explained to Brother Benj. H. Unruh, of the Mennonite Central Committee to see whether you could help us in the supply of the necessary bread. In as much as you Brethren already have so many problems with the Fernheim, Colony, I hesitate very much to ask. However, might it be possible for you to help us to the extent of $100.00 which would help us very much in taking care of our poorest families. Thanking you in advance in the name of the Colonists."

The Mennonite Central Committee passed on word of this need to our Cooperating groups. We were happy to be able to send Brother Fast the $100.00 requested.

Last July at the Holland Conference, a few M. C. C. members met and learned to know two Hutterian leaders of the Bruderhof at Lichtenstein, Austria and learned through them as well as from Dr. J. Ter Meulen of The Hague, Holland of their privations resulting from leaving Germany to avoid military service. Dr. Ter Meulen has several times visited the Lichtenstein group and heads a Committee of Holland Mennonites through which some Relief help has been given them. A few folks in this country who have learned of the difficulties of these brethren in maintaining our Peace testimony have also been moved to help them materially. The M. C. C. treasurer has recently forwarded $671.00 to Dr. Ter Meulen to be used as needed in helping these folks. Anyone else led to give to their need can be assured the cause is a worthy one.

A few months ago the Executor of the Robinette Estate, Philadelphia, Penn., (65 per cent owner of Corporation Paraguary, upon whose land our Fernheim Colony in Paraguay is located) approached the M. C. C. as to whether there would be any interest in making an offer on the Estates interest in Paraguay for the Mennonite Colony. After laying the matter before all the groups who cooperate through the M. C. C., authorization was given to obtain an option (on terms approved by all the cooperating groups), from the Estate until necessary investigations can be made in Paraguay. Such options having been obtained from the Estate as well as from the living 35 per cent co-owners, it has been decided that the secretary of the Committee visit Paraguay in the interest of this matter. Brother Miller plans to be in the Colony during January. While the foregoing represents the main purpose of the present visit to Paraguay, the Committee has instructed him to enter into the life and problems of the Colony in every way helpfully possible, especially as these apply to the material upbuilding of the Colony and M. C. C. relationships thereto since his 1931 visit. It is also hoped that this visit may open the way for other visits from our several groups where more direct spiritual help can receive the larger emphasis.

PUBLICATION

What Interested Readers Can Do for the Mennonite

The pastors of the churches can help create interest in the paper by referring to worthwhile articles found in it.

If a brother or sister feels especially blessed by some sermon listened to, why not pass the good thing on by reporting the gist of it in a short write-up or, if not that, kindly request the minister to do it.

If any of you read a book that is particularly helpful and suggestive for Christian living, write and send in a brief summary or a book review of it.

If in your reading you find something that could be made instructive and edifying in the form of an editorial why not pass it on to the editor in the form of your choice or for the editor to put it in shape.

If any of you make a study of some Bible truth or teaching and are willing to write it up in concentrated form, send it in for THE MENNONITE.

If you find a wholesome story that children would enjoy, make a clipping of it and send it in.

If in your Christian life you have or have had some experience to know which would serve to lift up or give comfort to others, send it in.

If you find or know of a good poem in season send us a copy, but shorter ones will be preferable.

And so one might go on. But thoughtful readers will think of other ways by which they can make contributions.

Three men. To three men Italy owes her liberation —Garibaldi the soldier, Mazzini the philosopher, Gavazzi the preacher. Of them all, none contributed more than Gavazzi.

Due to a change in the pastorate Rev. Olin Krehbiel, Wichita, Kansas, has resigned as statistician of the Western District Conference. To fill this vacancy the conference officers have appointed Rev. David C. Wedel, pastor of the Halstead Congregation to this office. All statistical material should therefore from now on be sent to Rev. D. C. Wedel, Halstead, Kansas, and not to Rev. Sunday School Lesson

January 31, 1937

The Financial Cost of Alcoholic Beverages

Prov. 21:17; 23:20, 21; Matt. 24:45-51 John 6:26, 27, 35

Our lesson contrasts two modes of life: the one satisfying the appetites of the flesh, the other living for spiritual ends. The verses from Proverbs show the financial result of dissipation; the passages from John depict the permanent satisfaction found in spiritual things. These two modes of life are an intense reality today and the outcome will be the same as shown in our lesson.

High Cost of Indulging in Strong Drink. Prov. 21:17; 23:20, 21.

Solomon of old, embodied in the book of Proverbs conclusions of his study of the social conditions of his time. Poverty he finds rooted in three causes,—drunkenness, sensuality and indolence. These three are very closely associated (v 21). Solomon's statement gives a warning of wide application.

Indulging in strong drink is costly to one's purse, one's health, one's reputation, one's spiritual life and welfare. The love of strong drink tends to make one a useless and unproductive member of society. It robs one of ambition and self-respect, dulls the mind and makes the body weaker. The craving for drink, when taking possession of a person, becomes absolute master and drink is placed above, ahead of everything else. The tragic cost is loss of employment, robbing family and self of clothing and food, reduction to the verge of starvation. The love of strong drink naturally leads toward economic degradation and destitution. Bondage to Satan is a fearful price to pay.

A Trust Kept, Betrayed. Matt. 24:45-51

In the parable recorded, the master placed one of his servant as chief steward over his household. He was faithful to his trust during his lord's absence. He was rewarded with larger responsibility and greater trust by his master upon his return (v. 47). Today men whose mind is befuddled with strong drink are not placed in positions of high trust and honor. Alcohol decreases dependability.

A second servant also was entrusted with responsiblity but he proved faithless, careless, gave himself to carousing, drinking and cruelty (v. 49). Punishment swift and sure is meted out to him at his master' unexpected return (vs. 50, 51). Drink makes people careless, disagreeable, often quarrelsome, neglectful of responsibility, soon leads to loss of responsibility.

This warning needs to be taken deeply to heart. Christians should always conduct themselves like good servants. It is the ONLY right way of living. God has given a large trust into our hands—material gifts, ability, opportunities. Are we faithful stewards? Cold, heartless greed is gripping many hearts. The legalized liquor business is one of its worst manifestations. It has never been a blessing in any sense whatsoever. The Church needs to take active leadership in the warfare against this selfish evil.

The True Bread — Eternal Value. John 6:26, 27, 35.

This passage shows the life of the Christian who lives chiefly for spiritual ends—who labors for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life (v. 27), in sharp contrast with the life of the drinker. The Christian's pleasures are satisfying and permanent and heighten his dependability.

Jesus is the "true bread from heaven," the source of everlasting life, satisfies all heart and soul hungers (v 35). All other hungers and thirst can be stilled but temporarily—at a cost. The hunger and thirst after God and righteousness can be satisfied without money, without price.

Bread, meat is a necessity for nourishing the body, but when these become our chief desires, we become slaves of the body.

Golden Text: Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not. Isaiah 55:2.

Practical Truth: Jesus is the true bread from heaven and real food for the soul.

SERMON SKETCH

J. N. Smucker

THE PARABLE OF THE FRIEND AT MIDNIGHT

Luke 11:5-8

One day the disciples found Jesus in prayer. They noted that He really met somebody. To Him, prayer was not a Farce nor a Fetish but a Force. The disciples felt the need of such an experience. Jesus taught them the Lord's prayer, and told them a story. A man received an unexpected guest at midnight. He was greatly embarrassed because he could not provide true Oriental hospitality. He went to a sleeping friend with his need. With much persistency he gained his request.

I Prayer Denotes Dominant Desire

The man in the story knew exactly what he needed. Much unanswered prayer is due to lack of feeling of definite need. Prayer is the plea of our all-controlling desire. This desire must be definite and very real. Common desires which may grip us: yearning for fellowship with God; for cleansing and forgiveness; for courage to adequately meet life; strength for daily tasks; spiritual resources to share with others. The Psalms voice many such moods. This consciousness of imperative need which we are unable to supply, will inspire the spirit and determine the form of our prayer.

II Prayer Means Persistency

The man's desire led to action. He went at the unseemly hour of midnight. He was desperately in earnest. So we. Prayer is not mere wishful thinking but persistent action. To the persistent seekers come the desired ends. If we really "hunger and thirst", we will not give up until we are "filled". Jacob wrestling with the angel, "I will not go, except thou bless me". Jesus in Gethsemane sweat drops of blood until victory was His. We must prove to God that we are sincerely in earnest in this matter of Christian living. No grace is bestowed upon cheap devotion. God answers only persistent quest.

III Prayer Implies a Friend

The man of the parable knew where to go for help. He had a friend. Our trouble is not that we have no friend, but that we do not make use of Him. Here the teaching is by contrast: the friend in the story was sleepy, ours never "slumbers nor sleeps"; this friend was reluctant to give, our Friend spared not His own Son; the friend of the story was a grudging friend, ours is more anxious to give than we are to receive. If sometimes our Friend seems not to heed our requests, it is for a purpose. Perhaps our patience needs to be deepened; our needs clarified; our desires purged. But if an earthly friend grants a worthy and persistent need, "how much more" our Father who is in heaven.

Doctrinal --- Devotional

IN HIS PRESENCE

IV. The Bible—How To Read It For Profit.

We must at all costs make for ourselves a Quiet Time. We must give up our work if needs be. Men need life. The Bible contains for us a way of obtaining the Bread of Life. There are a number of reasons why we want to study the Bible.

1. The Bible gives to us the language of devotion—It is our best literature.
2. It expresses the aspirations and hopes of the soul.
3. It is our rule of faith and practice.
4. It gives us the knowledge as the manner in which many souls through a long period of time have found communion with God.
5. The Bible is rich in instruction as to the spiritual life.
6. This Book of books is one of the main channels through which the Holy Spirit reaches the souls of men.

But why should we go on telling what the Bible can do for us. The late Franklin K. Lane was once asked to express his opinion of the Book of Books. "Endorse the Bible!" he said, "Why that would be like endorsing your mother." What we need is to arouse an appetite for Bible reading, and that is best done by giving a complete surrender to Jesus Christ and then in the joy of this experience read it much and often in the spirit of reverence and prayer. One might here quote the experience of a strong and sincere man of God:

"Never have I turned to it (the Bible) in vain. It has been for me the book of the valley of sorrow and death, the book to answer my questions, to solve my deepest problems, to stimulate my ambitions, to feed my heart, to satisfy my mind and to challenge my soul. It has never failed and it is forever rich and new."

There are certain qualifications if we would profit from our Bible study. The Psalmist could say with joy "Thy word have I hid in my heart." Since the Bible is a spiritual book it is necessary that the reader have spiritual qualities. "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him, neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned." When men are not interested in Bible reading, it may be because they are only the "natural man," spiritual truths are revealed only to him that is spiritual. There are blind minds as well as blind eyes, their understanding is darkened. The Bible is the revelation of the mind of God to men.

There must be a spirit of readiness to obey the will of God as it is made known through the study of the Bible. Obedience is an essential to the growing Christian life. Disobedience will close the Bible. Jesus says "If ye love me keep my commandment."

The third qualification for Bible study is prayer. Before we begin our daily study of the Bible we should have a regular place where we can be alone with God. Then we should come to our Father in prayer so that we may become spiritually attuned to Him and be directed by the Holy Spirit. Prayer is the key that unlocks the divine treasury of spiritual knowledge.

If we would read the Bible for profit we must study the Bible itself. It demands sincere study. We need to encourage regular habits of reading it. Various methods may be used. Every Christian should read through the Bible at some time or another, not for the sake of doing it but for what it will do for you. Some read until they come to a verse that attracts and challenges and then meditate upon it. Others read a whole book at a sitting, still others read by chapters and some other serious students delight in reading large portions of Scripture as the Holy Spirit directs them from day to day. The most rewarding methods of Bible study call for reading and rereading many times the passage under consideration, jotting down the observations you will have with each reading. Mark your Bible, jot down notes into a notebook, pray it in and work it out in living the Christlike life. You will be surprised at the exent and measure of peace and power you will experience from dwelling "In His Presence."

Rev. W. R. Augsburger and wife, pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church at Albany, Oregon, met with a car accident while returning from a C.C.C. Camp at Cascadia, Oregon. A tree had fallen accross the road, and the brakes being frozen, the car could not be stopped in time to avoid a crash. Mrs. Augsburger was hurt to the extent of a fractured shoulder and several severe cuts in her face. Rev. Augsburger escaped injury with a few minor cuts and bruises. We are glad to report that Mrs. Augsburger has recovered sufficiently enough to return home after being in a local hospital for a week. Rev. Augsburger has been conducting services at this C.C.C. Camp every Tuesday evening for sometime.

I would rather aim at perfection and fall short of it, than aim at imperfection and fully attain it.—Gordon.

GOD IN THE LIFE OF MAN

Dean J. S. Schultz, Bluffton College

William II of Germany during the World War became notorious for his "Ich und Gott," I and God. He took himself so seriously that God was given second place and how much of a place that was, anyone can guess.

It is assumed that we all give God some place in our lives, but how much and what place? Have we ever attempted to analyze? Does God supply us with food, clothing, shelter, or is that a human achievement? Who is responsible for our personal health, capacity to work, read, study? Does God help us to solve our problems, make our decisions? Do we decide, does God lead us or force us to become Christians?

If it is hard to determine these spiritual matters, how about human inter-relations? If you have good judgment or a keen sense of right and wrong, is that a special gift from God, a heritage from your parents, the influence of environment, or your accomplishment?

Even if it is hard or utterly impossible to determine the source or the proportionate quantities of influence and strength, it would be folly to deny the existence of influence and power of God in our lives.

Though likely each one of us has accepted God in his life and we admit that He has some part in what we believe, do and are, we differ in our belief as to the degree and the manner of His power in and through us, both as to individuals and as groups. Certain churches emphasize much the position that we humans are but dust and the matter of our becoming His children rests entirely with Christ. The contrasting conception of our relation to God is that we have a great deal to do with the making and remaking of our lives, some going so far that they leave only a very small part to God.

Since this thought had reoccured again and again in my mind, we recently read the gospels during our family quiet hour in the light of this question. The first rather striking find we seemed to make was that Christ used many more verbs and phrases applying to us humans than those referring to the Divine. Otustanding among those spoken to us are: believe, repent, be born again, come, follow, pray, worship, hear (my word); confess me before men, go bring fruit, give, do no violence. On His part he says: God loves, heals, calls sinner, forgives, is light.

Christ emphasizes in the gospel that salvation is free but He also says: "He that would come after me, let him deny himself, take up his cross, and follow me." Those of us who have tried that will never say that this comes without serious effort on our part. In our study and meditation we found considerable help on this question in Paul's statement to the Philippians where he emphasizes the human part in one verse and follows immediately in the next with God's part: "2:12—work out your salvation with fear and trembling:" (13) "for it is God who worketh in you both to will and to work, for his good pleasure." The latter was especially cleared up in another translation as follows: "For it is God who in His good will is at work in your hearts, inspiring your will and your action." It is a beautiful thought to me that we humans put forth our best effort to believe, pray, follow, hear, forgive, deny ourselves, but God is at work constantly in our hearts, inspiring our will and our action.

THE PEACE PAGE

Aim: A vital, Christian, intelligent peace program

MEDITATION

"Then Jesus said unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place: for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Matt. 26:52.

"Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." Heb. 12:14.

Let us meditate on these verses as we move into the New Year—a year filled already with ominous forebodings of world conflict.

PROSPECTS AND PROGRAMS FOR PEACE IN 1937

The Peace Committee of the Western District Conference has printed a four page tract on "Principles of Christian Peace and Patriotism with Scriptural Basis." These are now available for distribution. Apply to the secretary, Rev. Walter Dyck, Burrton, Kansas.

The Peace Committee of the General Conference has agreed in principle to the following program of purpose and action:

PURPOSE:

1. Formulate and disseminate widely a statement of the Christian position on war and peace as held by Mennonites and later historic peace churches.
2. Formulate and discuss widely a statement of our conception of Christian patriotism and our relations with our beloved country.
3. Secure a voluntary personal commitment of our people to the above statements.
4. Cooperate closely with the Brethren, Friends, and other historic peace groups on the basis of the above points.
5. Instruct our members in times of peace so that they will be able to act together in a Christian and intelligent manner in case of war.
6. Foster a program of peace education which will strengthen our historic peace beliefs; furnish our members with information which will enable them to act intelligently as Christian citizens in a democracy; and teach others to accept the position of the historic peace churches.
7. Stimulate sacrificial giving for peace as a part of our Mennonite mission to the world.
8. Study the possibility of sacrificial service in times of peace and war.

The same outline with minor changes, has been officially adopted by the Western District Conference at its recent session at Beatrice, Nebraska.

Some of our readers have expressed interest in learning about the peace issue as it will come up for discussion in the new Congress. For these we give a brief summary of the issues likely to be confronted in 1937:

1. Neutrality Legislation. The present law expires next spring. A new bill is now being formulated which will be introduced early in the new session with the President's approval. The questions now being debated are: a. shall the President be permitted or required to place an embargo on shipments to warring nations; b. shall embargo be placed on loans and raw materials; c. what effect will such a policy have upon the settlement of disputes in Europe?

2. Trade Agreements. The law authorizing these also expires in the spring. The issue here is simple in meaning but difficult to apply: Shall we continue a policy of gradual lowering of trade barriers so that nations can buy essential raw materials instead of feeling compelled to obtain them by conquest, or shall we increase barriers and hasten war?

3. Mobilization Plan. The War and Navy Departments will propose legislation to provide in advance for the conscription of man power, labor, industry and the economic resources of the entire country in the event of war. The advocates call it a peace plan bcause it "takes the profits out of war." It should be noted that such a plan may also gear the whole country to the war machine and may pave the way for autocratic power.

4. National Defense. December 31 saw the expiration of the terms of the naval limitation treaties. The mad armaments race is now on. Our country is engaging. Appropriations are likely to increase. More battleships, cruisers, airplanes, and fortifications for our Pacific possession will be demanded. Our naval building program is now a close second to that of England.

a. An attempt will be made to have Congress define our defense policy as defense of the soil of the United States.

b. A bill will be introduced to amend the Constitution so as to require a popular vote on the declarathe western hemisphere from European quarrels.

tion of war.

5. Inter-American Peace Conference. The new Congress will be asked to ratify the agreements reached at the conference at Buenos Aires last December. Further attempts will be made to isolate

PROJECTS

1. Watch the next issue of the Peace Page for activities for individuals and church groups.
2. Send more materials to the editor of this page. Especially would he appreciate one-minute sermons from the ministers.

Macaulay tells of the rich Brahman who saw a drop of sacred Ganges water under the microscope, and bought the instrument and dashed it to atoms that it might not, by its revelations, rebuke his superstitious practices.

MAKE IT!

Mrs. Adam Mueller
Enid Mennonite Mission Church
Enid, Oklahoma

Ancient man was certainly more fortunate than we. When he needed some new tool which he could not acquire by bartering for it, he made it with his own hands, by his own ingenuity.

"So you consider that necessity good fortune?" you will ask.

And the answer is Yes, for it is truly nothing else or less than just that. The ancient used his abilities, and as a result those talents he had were developed, and they carried him forward to a more advanced civilization.

Thou shalt declare a decree, and it shall be established unto thee.

. . . And so we made our own tools—we wrote a pageant expressly for our Mission Sunday School, using the material we had . . . . "

The chronic grouches that are SURE that modern youth flaunts all authority to the winds will find food for thought in this thrilling report of an enthusiastic leader of children and young people. She flaunts the stereotyped, hand-me-down programs to the wind, indeed! and lets the creative spirit of God within her creatively express itself in "a thing of beauty."

Are YOU living creatively?

Today we are living "soft" and would rather pay cash for something we want than to put any effort to produce it ourselves. However, there are times when our necessities are not to be had for hard cash, and we are driven into the wilderness to manufacture our own tools. Such excursions into the wilderness are scheduled for us for the express purpose of giving our ingenuity, our imagination opportunity for a little exercise. Such opportunities for the exercise of our mental and spiritual resources are, indeed, a God-send, for left alone, these potential abilities would soon deteriorate and die.

At Christmas time we found ourselves in such a wilderness here at our Enid Mennonite Mission. Could we plan a Christmas program for our Sunday School which would reflect the reverence and dignity a Christmas celebration deserves and at the same time make it simple enough and interesting enough for our group of children? We had about two dozen children, most of whom were boys, and each one must have a part in the program. There was no outstanding talent. Of course, we could make it a Friday-afternoon-school-program, with recitation and songs and dialogues, and recitations and songs and dialogues—continued indefinitely. But that kind of program would lack the reverence and dignity which we were so anxious to instill.

Obviously the next question was, "Why not order a pageant?" That sounded good: we would try it. Now to find a pageant with parts for twenty-four children, most of whom are boys—well, that is a job in itself.

Thus we sat in our wilderness, and finally we realized that such pageants were not to be had for money.

And so we made our own tools — we wrote a pageant expressly for our Mission Sunday School, using the material we had. Each child had a part. The pageant was not too difficult to handle, but it was elaborate enough to make the practices with the children very important and interesting.

Probably none of the children had ever had any part in a pageant; perhaps some had never SEEN a pageant presented. But each child did his best and when the Christmas program ended, we felt that the parents and other friends had been led a little farther into the peace and good will of the Christmas season.

(Editor's Note: This pageant is now in the hands of the Literature Committee of the Women's Home Missionary Society. Inquiries regarding it may be addressed either to the editor of this department, or to Miss Luella Krehbiel, Secretary, Clarence Center, New York City.)

A PRACTICAL NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTION

(Excerpt from Special Letter to Business Executives, by Roger W. Babson, through the courtesy of Mr. J. C. Regier, Buhler, Kansas)

First, let me say that I am not interested in any Church or other institution just to keep it alive. Unless it performs a real service, it—like the famous fig tree—should die. There are so many good ways in which to us our time—and of time we have but a very limited amount—that we can do only a fraction of what we would like to do. Furthermore, I do not attend Church primarily to be entertained or even "inspired." An eloquent preacher, an enticing choir, or a beautiful auditorium are all to the good; but they are not essential to me. Certainly no radio or magazine can take the place of any Church with a consecrated, minister priest, or rabbi, why, then, do I go to Church?

I perhaps go to Church for selfish reasons. I enjoy my Church as I enjoy my daily walk. I never listened to any priest or preacher from whom I could not learn something. I even enjoy a plain service of worship from the Prayer Book without any sermon. Yes, I sometimes attend a Quaker meeting with only silence. But to get good from church-going one must make it a habit. It is the systematic daily walks that do us good—not the occasional walk. Church going is like advertising in one way. We must keep constantly and incessantly at it to make it pay! . . .

There is another reason why I go to some church service every Sunday. This is to encourage my children and grandchildren to acquire the habit of church going. We oldsters may check out before real trouble comes to our nation. But let me tell you that the younger generations will need to have something more permanent than real estate, bank accounts, insurance, or even democracy. Unless they have a sane spiritual foundation, they are licked. We can do for them far more by setting them an example of church going than by bequeathing them land, securities, or any other property. Moreover, I am just talking hard-boiled common sense. Go to Sunday School with them. Take an active interest in the Young People's Work of the Church. It's the biggest thing you can do for your family.

. . . . . Yes, friends, make a New Year's Resolution to acquire the Church-going Habit.

—Roger W. Babson.

P. S. One thing more: Use your influence to have your children and grandchildren attend a small college of high standing, one to which your Church denomination contributes. Avoid big colleges, especially those "popular" colleges which have thrown religion out of the window. —R. W. B.

February 7, 1937—"Christian Youth Face the Future Together" I Tim. 4:9-16.

She led me first to God;
Her words and prayers were my young spirit's dew;
For when she used to leave
The fireside every eve,
I knew it was for prayer that she withdrew.
How often has the thought of my mourn'd mother brought
Peace to my troubled spirit, and new power
The tempter to repel!
Mother, thou knowest well
That thou hast bless'd me since my natal hour.

JON PIERPONT

Moody's address to the graduates at Northfield once consisted of these two words: "Consecrate and Concentrate," and he added a motto that he saw in England:

Do all the good you can,
To all the people you can,
In all the ways you can,
As long as ever you can.

E. monogram and C. E. colors. Decorate your invitations and programs the same way· A poster can be made showing a large birthday cake. Lettering, "Help us celebrate the birthday of C. E.

Pre-prayer Circle

Use I Tim. 2:1 as your prayer verse. This was written to the young man Timothy by Paul. Explain what each of the words means in making our prayers. Pray for C. E. and its leaders in all lands and for your own society.

Worship Service

Use the splendid worship service outlined in the C. E. World Quarterly or plan your own, using C. E. songs and choruses. Make your song service a real inspiration by having a good pianist and song leader who are prepared.

Topics for Discussion

1. The Leader's remarks. Refer to 1 Tim. 4:9-16. Paul wrote these verses to the young man Timothy. V. 10, Christian young people who stand true will be persecuted. This is easier to bear united with other Christian young people. But after all the Christian life is a personal matter. V. 12, Each one of us must be an example in the Christian virtues. V. 15, to grow in the Christian life we must take time for prayer and Bible reading. We must give ourselves completely to it.

2. How did the organization of the first C. E. society help the young people? Will it do as much for us today? Fifty-six years ago (1881), a group of young people in the Williston Congregational church in Portland, Maine, were called together by their pastor, Dr. Francis Clark. These young people had become Christians, but in the words of Mother Clark "were not doing anything about it." Through this new organization of Christian Endeavor they were to be a help and inspiration to each other as they sang and prayed together and gave their testimonies. As Christian young people they were also to learn to work together and serve others. Above all they took the C· E. pledge, in which, "Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength" they promise to do whatever He would have them do. Bound together by this covenant they challenged each other to live up to it.

3. What unchristian acts or attitudes have you observed in your school? In your community? What can Christian young people do about it? Christian young people are not responsible for the way they find the world but for the way they leave it.

4. Are the Christian young people united in any way? How does it help them? Can you name some instances in which they have stood together?

5. How does Christian Endeavor Union work to unite Christian youth? In what ways does it help them?

6. The motto of the Mennonite young people is, "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ." What efforts are being made to unite the Mennonite Young people? Why is it necessary?

Closing Consecration Service

A short talk on the pledge. (By the superintendent or a consecrated endeavorer. Explain the part that is to follow.)

CORRESPONDENCE

First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas
January, 1937

We once more have closed the door of the old year behind us. To some it brought happiness, while others experienced sorrows. What will the New Year bring us? Whatever it be, if we start out with the dear Lord as our Guide we can rest assured that he will help us to overcome all the difficulties that may assail our pathway.

As a congregration we have received manifold blessings. During the months we were without a pastor we were fortunate in always getting someone to bring us the message. Then Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Dirks came here with the deire to serve, and they made themselves right at home with us, just the way it should be, and at the same time we have tried to make them feel at home with us. We hope and pray that we may always pull together in the great work of building the Kingdom.

On the Sunday before Christmas in the evening we had our Christmas program. On Christmas Day we had services in the morning. Starting December 27 and continuing to January 3, we had revival meetings, conducted by our pastor. I think this is a fine time to hold those meetings and an appropriate way to close the old year and start the new year. We had blessed times at these meetings. Rev. Dirks had inspiring and timely subjects for this series of meetings. On January 6 we had our annual business meeting. All went well.

On every Wednesday evening we have prayer meeting, with Bible classes for the children in the basement. The children take an offering at every meeting. The money is used to help along a Bible woman in India. On Thursday afternoon and evening our church is open to working girls. Mrs. Dirks always tries to meet with them. There are quite a number of Mennonite girls working in Hutchinson, and they appreciate having this privilege of having a place where they can get together on their afternoons off.

Mrs. Schmidt, who suffered very severe injuries in an auto accident in which her husband, Mr. Herman Schmidt, was killed, is still at the Halstead Hospital. The family expects her to be able to come home in a few weeks.

We have had very fine weather up till now, but January started in with cold weather.

We wish you all a happy and blessed New Year.

Mrs. J. K. Froese, Correspondent

Sometimes books exercise undue influence in shaping our views. We lose our own independence in imbibing the opinions of others, and are like sponges that simply absorb whatever they are soaked in.

Golden Rule. Confucius, being asked if any word formulates the duty of man to man, replied: "Reciprocity." Our Lord rises far above that: "Do not even the publicans so?" He bids us adjust our conduct, not by what men actually do, but what they should do, to us.

DEATHS

Mary Elizabeth (Conrad) Aeschliman, daughter of John and Mary Conrad, was born at Pulaski, Ia., June 5, 1885. She attended school in her home community and also college in preparation for teaching. She later taught school in Iowa and also in the state of Washington. In her early youth she was baptized upon her confession of faith in Christ and received into the membership of the Mennonite church. She was united in marriage to William Aeschliman of Colfax, Washington on Sep. 2, 1922. They resided on a farm near Onecho until two years ago when they moved into Colfax. She always took an active part in both Church and Sunday School work. She passed away at her home on Dec. 22 after a short illness at the age of 51 years, 6 months and 17 days. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Betty Jean age 11 years, one sister, Mrs. Edw. Reinhardt of Colfax, and two brothers, Arthur and Edward J. Conrad in the state of Iowa.

Funeral services were held at the First Methodist Church of Colfix, Washington on Dec. 24, conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. Harley King, using Phil 1:21 and John 11:25-26 as a basis, and were attended by a large congregation of relatives and sympathetic friends. Interment at the Colfax, Wash. cemetery.

Christian B. Stucky, son of Benjamin Stucky and Veronika Georing Stucky, was born at Moundridge, Kansas on November 5, 1886, and he lived in the Moundridge community all his life.

In early life he accepted Christ as his Saviour, was baptized on July 5, 1903 and united with the First Mennonite Church of Christian at Moundridge, Kansas. Of this congregation he was a quiet but faithful member until death.

On the 17th of May, 1911, he was married to Susie Toews of Newton, Kansas. They established their home at the Alta Mills, ten miles southwest of Moundridge, Kansas, where for twenty-five years they spent a happy married life. By adoption they took a daughter into their home and gave her their love and a good home. In addition two daughters and one son were born to them. As a devoted husband and loving father, Brother Stucky was ever thoughtful for the welfare of his dear ones.

But suddenly death entered into the happy family circle. On Monday forenoon, January 11, 1937, he died quite suddenly of heart failure. His age was 50 years, 2 months and 6 days. He leaves to mourn his departure his bereaved wife, three sisters and many other relatives and friends, who have the sustaining hope that he is now with Christ in glory. "Precious in the sight of Jehovah is the death of his saints." Psalm 116:15.

Funeral services were conducted from the home and from the First Mennonite Church of Christian on Thursday afternoon, January 14. The pastor, Rev. P. P. Wedel spoke words of comfort on I Samuel 20:3 in the German and on John 6:20 in the English language.

Helena Dyck Klassen was born April 12, 1865, in Lichfelde, Southern Russia, where she received her education. In 1884, at the age of eighteen, she came to America with her parents. They established their home in the Alexanderwohl neighborhood, Marion county, Kansas. In 1886, upon confession of her faith, she was received into the Alexanderwohl Church, through the holy rite of baptism by elder Jacob Buller. On November 24, 1885, she married G. L. Claassen with whom she shared joy and sorrow for thirty-seven years until April 12, 1923, when Father passed away. Ten children were born to this union. They are all alive with the exception of one daughter-in-law.

In 1897 our parents moved to Hillsboro, Kan., and joined the Mennonite church at that place; and Mother remained a devoted member of this church to the end. She was a dear, true mother, thoroughly devoted to her family and loved ones. With her quiet, devoted, Christian life, resigned to the will of God, she set for us an example that has been a blessing to us all. She bore her suffering without a murmur, and was ready to meet her Savior, whom she had tried to serve with child-like devotion. She went quietly to sleep December 11, after a brief illness of only fifteen days, the result of a paralytic stroke. She leaves behind to mourn her parting ten children, thirty-one grandchildren, two great-grandchildren, one brother, and other relatives and friends.

—The Children

Peter P. Reimer died in the hospital at Tulare, California, on January 12 at the age of 69 years, 5 months, and 12 days. He was born at Kleefeld, South Russia, and came with his parents to America at the age of seven years. They made their home at Alexanderwohl, near Newton, Kansas, where he was received by baptism into the Mennonite Church in 1889. On April 9, 1893, he united in marriage with Eva Hiebert and the Lord blessed this union with eleven children, two of whom preceded him in death. A year after their marriage they moved to Medford, Oklahoma, where he resided with his family until they came to California in 1926 and made their home near Reedley. Three years ago he was afflicted with heart trouble which caused a dropsical condition. He was tenderly cared for by his children until his condition became such that they could no longer care for him, and he was taken to the hospital at Tulare. Here he bore his suffering patiently until the Lord called him home. Funeral services were held in the Reedley church on January 15, at which Rev. H. J. Krehbiel spoke upon Job 14:14 and Rev. J. H. Langenwalter on Zech. 14:6-9. He leaves to mourn his death nine children, five sons and four daughters, a brother and a sister, twenty-one grandchildren, and many friends.

NEWS AND NOTES

Rev. P. A. Wedel, now pastor of the First Mennonite Church at Aberdeen, Idaho, who for two successive years has conducted teacher training courses in the rural church at Beatrice, Nebraska, is scheduled to teach the remaining two elementary courses in that church during the last week of January and the first week of February. The good people there have found the work interesting and profitable and the attendance has been good. Brother Wedel also serves with evangelistic sermons at the same time.

Bowmansville, Pa.—On January 17 Rev. Freeman Swartz, president of the Eastern District Conference, was at the Pine Grove church, Bowmansville, to ordain Brother Arthur J. Groff as deacon of the congregation. Brother Groff is also superintendent of the Sunday school. In connection with this service there was also a dedication service of the new Hymnals which this congregation received as a present from two of its members.

Dr. J. E. Hartzler, who while giving Bible lectures at Hillsboro, Kansas, was suddenly taken ill and had is slowly getting better, and has been taken to the home of Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Kreider on the Bethel College campus. This will be good news to his many friends who have been praying for his recovery. At first his ailment was diagnosed as peritonitis, but later rather serious heart trouble and other complications set in. Mrs. Hartzler is constantly at his bedside, and he has the best medical and nursing care.

Mrs. Ruth Wheatcraft Miller of Lancaster, Ohio, has been appointed home economics teacher at Bluffton College for the second semester to enable the present instructor, Miss Edna Ramseyer, to do advance study at Ohio State University. The Bible Lectures at Bluffton College this year will be given by Dr. C. Wieand, former president and now professor of New Testament at Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago. Bluffton is to be congratulated on her choice of this splendid Christian scholar for her lecturer. He gave the Bible lectures at Bethel College a year ago and endeared himself to all who heard him.

Rev. M. M. Lehman, a graduate of Bluffton College, for a number of years a teacher in the schools of Ohio, and more recently engaged in religious work in Canada, has just passed through Newton with his family—wife, four daughters and a son-in-law—on his way to Monroe, Washington, where he will shoulder the duties of pastor of the First Mennonite Church at that place. Rev. S. S. Baumgartner, who served that church a number of years, resigned some months ago. The church has about 150 members.

Rev. Edison Habegger, a son of Berne, Indiana, who is doing evangelistic work in England and Scotland ,is writing some interesting letters to the home folks and papers. He, with wife and company, recently closed a series of services in Edinburgh, then, another in Aberdeen. He says, "Aberdeen is a city of granite: all the buildings, sidewalks, and streets are composed of granite; and when the sun shines, they sparkle like diamonds. Our services there were held in a John Knox church. The people are very earnest spiritually." The Habeggers are now at Dundee for a three-week period of service.

Rev. H. A. Fast, field secretary of the General Conference, held a series of meetings at the Halstead church, beginning Sunday morning and concluding Tuesday evening. Tuesday evening he spoke to the three mission societies, explaining the work of the women's association and encouraging the societies in their future work for missions. His talks on the various phases of conference work were uplifting and inspiring, urging us on to greater service for the Master. Let us not grow weary in well-doing for in due season we shall reap if we faint not.

The reporter from Henderson, Nebr., writes: Our Sunday school now has an enrollment of 860, with 38 classes and that many teachers. Our quarterlies and teacher's helps cost $264.88. Total collection for 1936 was $692.62, making an average of $13.32. The largest number of classes are in the German language so are our opening exercises. At times parts of these exercises are presented by young people, in a song or presenting some topic on the lesson.

The Moody Centennial Celebration in 1937 in honor of the one-hundredth birthday of the noted evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, will soon be on at the Moody Bible Institute. Founder's Conference will be held January 31 to February 7. Through the evangelistic efforts of this man thousands of souls have become Christians. What was the secret of his power? Not learning, for his education was limited; not any outstanding native abilities, but rather his unbounded faith and reliance on God. Twelve years after his conversion on a visit to England for the purpose of studying the methods of Christian work there he met a noted British evangelist in a park in Dublin, who said to Moody in a conversation, "The world has yet to see what God will do with and for and through and in and by the man who is fully consecrated to Him." These words left a lasting impression on Moody. And he said to himself, "What did he say—'a man,' not a great man, not a brilliant man, not a learned man, but simply a man." And he resloved to be that man.

Our co-worker, Rev. J. H. Janzen, Vancouver, British Columbia, has written a set of so-called "Biblische Geschichten" (Bible stories) in two volumes. He now plans to write three teachers' helps—one to be used with pupils of junior age, one with pupils of intermediate age, and one with pupils of senior age.

The Pan-American peace parley at Buenos Aires has resulted in four proposals which should mean a great deal for the well-being of the people on this hemisphere. They are: (1) That in the event of a threat to the peace of this hemisphere, the nations will confer, consult, and collaborate to check it; (2) that in the event of actual war between two American nations, all others will adopt and maintain a common attitude of neutrality; (3) that intervention by one American republic in the domestic affairs of another will be deemed an unfriendly act by all the others; (4) that an unfriendly act by some other nation towards an American nation will be considered an unfriendly act against all other American nations.

Taking glory to ourselves is like plucking the ripe fruit to carry to the Master, and picking off on the way the best grapes of the cluster.

BOOK CHAT

Devotional Books

F. J. Wiens

A book store engaged in selling religious books is often asked to recommend a devotional book. Next to the Bible a good devotional book is the most useful book in a Christian home where family and personal devotions are a part of the daily schedule. There are many fine devotional books and it would be hard to say which is the best because each family has its own peculiar interpretation of the great Christian truths. Space does not permit me do more than discuss one or two books and list a few others. Some families use the same book year after year and do not care to change. Others prefer to buy a new devotional book every year until they have a good selection and then use them in rotation. Some of us have become so attached to a book that we would not use another, but I believe that as a result we often miss the blessings we could derive from using other books which are as good or better.

Each generation has its favorites and it is not at all difficult to pick the favorite devotional book of our day. Mrs. Charles Cowman's STREAMS IN THE DESERT is so far ahead as today's favorite that no other book can compare with it in popularity. Since it was first published in 1925 it has gone through seventeen printings of 25,000 copies per printing and sales are increasing every year. The beautiful poems scattered throughout the book have found for this deeply spiritual book a place in many homes which would not use it if it did not have these poems. STREAMS IN THE DESERT is an excellent book to read during your personal Quiet Hour. It also makes an excellent gift for all occasions—baptisms, weddings, deaths, graduation, etc., because it is printed in good readable type and is well bound in durable fabrikoid.

Mrs. Cowman's newer book, CONSOLATION, is similar to her earlier book but it is not yet as popular and probably never will be. But everyone who has read STREAMS IN THE DESERT will also want a copy of CONSOLATION.

COME YE APART by J. R. Miller is an older book but one of those rare books whose message never grows old. Of all devotional books this is probably the best suited to the needs of the average Mennonite family. Some families have used it for over 15 years and still read it every year. The sale of this book too is increasing and it deserves even greater popularity. The subtitle of COME YE APART is "Daily Bible Readings in the Life of Christ" and that is all we need to say about its subject matter. Each day's portion is a gem.

VICTORIOUS LIVING by E. Stanley Jones is a new book that is rapidly becoming a best seller. Dr. Jones is one of the world's outstanding Christian missionaries who has written several other books which are best sellers in the religious field.

A devotional book should never be allowed to take the place of the Bible in personal or family devotions. An appropriate passage of scripture should always be read before or after the daily portion from the devotional book or calendar.

FORUM

Under this heading the brethren and sisters may ask questions and call for answers, or explanations, or there may be brief discussions of real problems. But let it all be brief and in a brotherly spirit. There will not be space for long drawn-out controversial essays.

Brother J. J. Decker, Moundridge, Kansas, writes: "In the Mennonite of January 12, is an article by Rev. M. Horsch, entitled, 'He Maketh Wars to Cease," quoting Psalms 46:9. May I ask either you (editor) or Brother Horsch to also consider Psalms 144:1, "He teaches my hands to war and my fingers to fight." I would also like to have him explain Psalms 109 and 148. I have not yet heard these Psalms explained or preached. I am only interested to know the meanings as construed by different interpreters. Would like to see it in The Mennonite." Will Brother Horsch give Brother Decker a brief explanation?

South Dakota, a state which is blessed with many fine artesian wells, is alarmed at the greatly diminished rate with which the water flows. No doubt this phenomenon is connected with the extremely dry weather the Western states have recently experienced. It is said that from an average of 90.6 gallons flow it is now down to 6.04 gallons.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, FEBRUARY 2, 1937 NO. 5

The Fragments that Remained. When Jesus had fed the five thousand he said to his disciples, "Gather up the fragments that remain that nothing be lost....and they filled twelve baskets." This passage is very suggestive. It teaches that Christians should be saving and shun all waste. The Mennonites have been known for their simple life and for their frugal, economical habits. Do we still practice these characteristics? It also states that the disciples got all that was left. Does that suggest anything to our churches? The people got all they wanted, but the disciples, the preachers, got what was left over. Wouldn't it be wonderful if our ministers were to get, as their share or remuneration, all that is left over when their flocks have taken all they need! Some of our churches should make amends, repent, resolve to turn over a new leaf, and give their ministers at least a decent share of the net gains of their labors. What did the disciples do with the fragments? No doubt they kept what they needed for their immediate use, and passed the rest of it on to others who were in want. The lesson here is, that if the members of the church do what they can to enable their minister and his family to live comfortably, the minister, too, should unselfishly give and help others as far as he can. The minister is supposed to set a good example in all things. Many a minister is strenuously struggling to educate the members of his church to give liberally for missions, relief, Christian education, and other good causes; and, in order to make his efforts count, he deprives himself and his loved ones of the comforts they are really entitled to. Is that right? Shouldn't the minister be given enough to live decently with his household and have enough left to give his "tithes into the storehouse of the Lord"? But the other miracle of Jesus, that of feeding four thousand, also has a fine lesson for the minister. There the left-overs weren't quite as plentiful, only seven basketfuls. So in times of poor crops or depression when incomes dwindle down, the ministers should have enough grace and sympathy to make sacrifices and voluntarily take less.

Knowledge and zeal. Fuel does not make fire, but feeds it. No amount of missionary information will create zeal if there be no Spirit of Christ within the man. Knowledge will not take the place of zeal, but will increase it when it is enkindled.

Peace on Earth. During the Christmas season the whole Christian world talked, sang and preached peace. Yet there never was a time, except during the World War, when there was so much envy and malice surging through human breasts as today. How can children who have grown up in such an atmosphere become embued with a desire and will to live peaceably with all man? Mankind is a collection of individuals, and it is the attitude of each separate man, woman, and child that makes the attitude of the world. Parents would not knowingly teach envy, hatred, and malice to their children any more than to incite them to war and bloodshed; yet, a great many do it unconsciously every day. Peace parleys do little good when neighbors are harboring rancor and ill will, when the poor hate the rich and the rich take advantage of the poor, when Mrs. Brown resents Mrs. White's having more comforts and more luxuries than she has and when their children are forbidden to play together. It is the mass of all the petty individual spites and jealousies going on everywhere that breeds world wars. If we want a warless world we must begin with the children. A child brought the message of peace, and children educated the Christ-way must carry it. But this cannot happen until Christendom has been swept with a genuine revival or rebirth in the lives of individual adults.

A short definition of what it is to be a Christian: He is a Christian in whom the ruling idea and image is Christ.

Augustine, in his "Confessions," tells us of a dream in his early Christian life, when as a young lawyer he was intensely absorbed in Cicero, and all his tastes were Ciceronian. He thought he died and came to the celestial gate. "Who are you?" said the keeper. "Augustine, of Milan." "What are you?" "A Christian." "No; you are a Ciceronian." Augustine asked an explanation, and the angelic gatekeeper replied: "All souls are estimated in this world by what dominated in that. In you, Augusine, not the Christ of the Gospel, but the Cicero of Roman jurisprudence, was the dominating force. You can not enter here." Augustine was so startled that he awoke; and resolved that henceforth, Christ, and not Cicero, should rule in his thought and heart and life. The dream is not all a dream. He only enters the heaven where Christ is supreme and central, whose life gives Christ here its inner shrine and throne.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

The Mission Page

This page has been kindly granted to the Mission Boards by the Publication Board gratis for mission material fresh from the field, or other inspiring and instructive mission articles.

In general, our readers appreciate short gripping articles more than the long ones. So our policy is to give the short articles as a rule the preference.

We believe that whatever grips the missionaries on the field in the way of needs, opposition, success, or failures will ordinarily also grip the readers if presented in a warm and hearty way.

We urge our dear readers to read these articles regularly. Even if now and then one is long or less inspiring than others, it pays to read them all for information and inspiration. And, dear parents, please urge your children to do the same. The Bible and the church papers should have the first place in the reading in a Christian home. The first mission command of Christ was: "Lift up your eyes and look into the field, for it is ripe." O that all our church members would obey this command, the other mission commands would then become much easier. One cannot help but be interested in a ripe harvest field that has not enough laborers. Therefore, "Give attendance to reading" as Paul puts it in I Tim. 4:13. That will also lead to intercessory prayer. Our missionaries write that "if prayer ever was necessary, then it is now." P. H. Richert

Foreign Mission Board Meeting

God willing, this year's annual Board meeting is to be held February 17, 1937, at Bethel College, Newton, Kansas. Usually the officers of the Women's Missionary Societies are also invited.

All mission friends are requested to remember us and the whole work in their prayers. Some difficult problems are again before us, which can be solved only by the Lord's help, whom we can trust for the future as he has helped in the past. We praise Him for this, and thank also all mission friends for the support during the past year. The Lord has again added hundreds to his church on the various mission fields. Brother Moyer writes that at Basna alone, 100 were baptized last year, and another 100 is about ready for it. May we all remember these young converts by intercession for strength and zeal to stand firm and to win others.

From the reports we see that the requested budgets from China and India are larger than last year. It will be hard to decide whether we can allow all they ask for or not. If the tithers would increase, there is no doubt that we could allow an increased budget, provided the Lord gives us a harvest. But the good harvest of souls we had last year should also help to increase gifts of gratitude. We will need such increase also for the pension fund.

MINISTERS' CONFERENCES AND OTHER SPECIAL MEETINGS OF MENNONITES IN CANADA

(Reported by Rev. Benj. Ewert)

A general Mennonite Ministers' Conference was held in Arnaud, Manitoba, November 6-7, 1936. The main subject was: "The Evangelical Minister." Several papers were read and discussed regarding this subject. About fifty ministers were present.

November 18-20 a Ministers' Conference of the Mennonite Churches in Saskatchewan convened in the city of Saskatoon. Ten papers were read and discussed on the topic, "Reviving the Church." Besides this, a discourse on John 10 and reports on different matters pertaining to the churches were had.

The Ministers' Conference of the Mennonite churches in Manitoba convened in the city of Winnipeg, November 26-28. A variety of topics were discussed and reports were given on different matters pertaining to the churches. A good deal of time was devoted to the need and caretaking of the young people in general, especially in Winnipeg and other large cities. On two evenings there was a general discussion of Romans 12. About forty ministers took part at this conference.

A Ministers' Conference of different branches of Mennonites in Alberta took place at Coaldale, Alberta, December 7-9. Six papers were to be delivered on self-chosen subjects. Experiences were told regarding the work done. There was also a discussion of 2 Timothy and reports. Particulars are not known to the reporter.

No doubt there have also been Ministers' Conferences and other special meetings of Mennonites in Ontario and in British Columbia during the same time, of which the reporter, however, has no information.

During January and February it is customary, with a number of Mennonite churches in Canada, to come together at the different places of worship for one or more days for a general discussion of a chosen portion of Scripture. For such occasions a number of ministers are invited to be present to lead in the discussion. Some of our churches have a whole week of special evangelical meetings at the different places of worship. A number of them are also observing "the Week of Prayer," as is customary with other churches.

William Booth said that he found choirs infested with three devils—the quarreling devil, dressing devil, and courting devil. He might have added the aesthetic devil.

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

3. Regarding the world.—Jesus knew the truth regarding the world. He knew that His mission was to the whole world and that the world needed what He had to give. His vision encompassed the whole of humanity: "Other sheep have I; them also I must bring into the fold"; "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me"; "The kingdom of heaven is as leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal until the whole is leavened"; "Go ye into all the world and teach all nations." Although Jesus dealt with smaller groups and individuals, He never let the larger world view out of sight. Although He was immediately concerned with individuals, He was conscious that ultimately He must reach the world; the world would be helped by His teaching and sorely needed what He was.

CORRESPONDENCE

First Mennonite Church, Berne, Ind. Again we stand upon the threshold of a new year. 1937 and we have met. What will 1937 bring to us, and what, we may well ask, will we bring to 1937? Will the experiences of 1937 make us better men and women, better Christians, will it make us stronger, nobler, kindlier than we were in the past—in 1936? Will our contributions to 1937 be worthwhile, or will it make no difference that we are here?

As a church we bestirred ourselves early, as on the morning of New Year's day we held our yearly business meeting. The usual business was transacted, reports made, etc., after which some new business was brought up. One item was the matter of German services. Considering the comparatively few who no longer understand the English language, and further considering the vast number of young people who do not understand the German preaching, it was deemed wisest, and was so voted, that the monthly German service be transferred to a Sunday afternoon, so that hereafter all morning services will be in the English language. No more excuse, young people, from this angle for you to absent yourself from the Sunday morning worship service!

Another item of business was the proposed change in constitution concerning the matter of pastor election and deacon service. The matter was discussed with the idea in mind to have pastor election every three years, and that deacons serve not longer than two terms in succession. These matters were left open for thought and discussion, and will be voted upon at the next semi-annual business meeting of the church.

With the opening of the new year, the Junior Department of the Sunday School found itself in the newly transformed basement of the church, with a superintendent of their own in the person of Miss Frieda Lehman.

Two new classes in catechetical instruction have also been formed and are in progress each Saturday morning, with a large enrollment of boys and girls.

Sunday, January 17, brought to a close the thirty-first annual series of Union Meetings of the churches in Berne. All the services were held in the Mennonite Church. The speaker this year was Dr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, president of the Evangelical Seminary, Dallas, Texas, and the pianist was Paul Beckwith, a student there. The song leader was Freeman Burkhalter, one of our own young men. These two weeks were a time of rich spiritual feasting indeed, and it is with deep gratitude we turn to God for bringing this servant of His, whom He has so richly taught and is using so greatly, into our midst, and we feel this was a preparation better than which none could have been provided to give us a proper venture forth into the new year, and shame on us if because of this preparation we are not the stronger and better able to cope with the duties and experiences of 1937. Martha Gilliom, Correspondent.

Eden Mennonite Church, Schwenksville, Pa. From the Church Messenger, published monthly by the pastor Freeman Swartz, we cull the following: The annual meeting voted to continue the envelope system of making contributions, adopt daylight saving, join in Union Lenton Services with other churches, salaries to remain the same. The pastor preached sixty-one sermons, made three hundred and three visits, served at nine funerals, three weddings, baptized five, received six other new members into the church, and conducted one infant consecration; made numerous trips in the interests of the Eastern District Conference, as its president, and other Christian efforts; helped compile the New Franconia History, assisted Brother S. M. Grubb with several issues of "The Mennonite," attended several peace meetings, and was otherwise kept busy. The church served as host to three conference affairs, took part in a musical festival at Perkasie Park, has had the best missionary offering in its history and good attendance at its services.

Then the pastor holds out some possibilities for the new year:

1. A Soul every two weeks, twenty-five in all for the year
2. Greater missionary interest as well as offerings
3. An attempt at every-member-attendance
4. The Mennonite in eighty per cent of the homes of the church
5. Greater influence in community affairs
6. A pipe organ fund—not an impossiblity
7. Further beautification of the meeting place

Immanuel Menn. Church, Los Angeles, Calif.

Rev. D. D. Eitzen, pastor of this church, sends us copies of their Sunday service bulletin which we appreciate very much. Would that all pastors might follow his example! Recently the package contained a mimeographed copy of the many different reports given by the boards, organizations, and committees of his church at the annual meeting. The whole report contains more than four thousand words, the contents of which give a vivid testimony of the life, zeal, and activities of this wide-awake church and its consecrated pastor.

The pastor's report says in part, "The spiritual welfare of every soul connected with our church is of grave concern to the hearts of the deacons, the church worker, and the pastor. According to the city survey of 1932 there are 1634 homes in our district. Then there are in Los Angeles an unbelievable number of Mennonites whose church membership is a matter of a certificate somewhere in the bottom of a trunk. In some instances they are active in other evangelical churches, but in many the religious life has been choked by the many alluring interests of a large city. To see these with the eyes of Jesus hanging on the cross—that is a part of the mission of a Los Angeles pastor. Then there is the membership. Some "sheep" have strayed. They are in strict spiritual terms not in the fold—not one with the others in the Lord. The church worker, Miss Lavina Burkhalter, is busy with meetings of various groups during each week, looks after the Vacation Bible School, the week-day Bible classes, and reports 535 calls made during the year in the interests of the Lord's work.

The roster of the officers of the church, known as Immanuel Mennonite Church, contains forty-six names. The budget for the year 1937 is as follows:

1. All pastoral salaries	$1750.00
2. Janitor services	480.00
3. Taxes	70.00
4. Church worker	775.00
5. Other running expenses	$600.00

Second Church, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Sunday morning, January 12, we had a distinguished visitor in the person of Dr. Isaac of Harbin, Manchuria. Dr. Isaac was a noted eye specialist in Russia before the War. He succeeded in saving his life by escaping into China and has again established a large practice. Hundreds of Mennonites escaped from Russia into Manchuria and Dr. Isaac was instrumental in having them cared for by Mennonites in Europe and America and finally placing them in Paraguay and Brazil. There are now only two other families besides Dr. Isaac's in Manchuria.

Sunday, January 17, we begin a class in catechetical instruction. The purpose of the class is to impart a knowledge of the Word of God in the minds of young people. Catechetical instruction does not make church members, but it is a preparation for church members.

The Ladies' Aid Society has been gathering labels from Unity and Frankford products. This has netted ten dollars.

Mrs. Sautter and Mrs. Huffman reported a profit of $42.75 on the candies they sold for Christmas for the benefit of the church.

West Swamp and Flatland Churches, Pa.

The closing of the old and the opening of the new year was most fittingly celebrated by the Christian Endeavor societies of West Swamp and Flatland. The meeting was held jointly by the two societies. The opening service was a Junior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor promotion service. The above was followed by a social hour. The last hour was a Watch Night service in which we got glimpses of highlights in the log of 1936 until the Chimes announced the close of the old year.

The West Swamp congregation was greatly blessed by evangelistic services during the Week of Prayer, January 4 to 8. These services were conducted by Rev. John Nussbaum of Berne, Indiana. The clearly expounded messages from the scripture were food for hungry souls and sources of future meditation. Our prayer is that many may have been led much closer to Christ.

Immanuel Church, Pratum, Oregon

Greetings to all the readers in the various churches at home and abroad! We wish to sound a note of praise to our heavenly Father for the many blessings He has bestowed upon us during the past year.

Thanksgiving Day we observed according to our regular custom by a union service with our neighbor church in the forenoon. Dr. Sidney Hall was the speaker. On Sunday evening November 29 the choir gave a song service.

December 6 being Universal Bible Sunday our pastor gave a special message on the Word of God which was very instructive as well as inspiring. He showed how it should cause every child of God to rejoice to know that God's word stands forever and that we can build our hopes thereon, knowing that no power can ever mine it away. In the evening of the same Sunday our senior Endeavor Society went to the Zena community church and presented a regular service just as we do in our own society every Sunday evening. It was well received and we believe that it will bring fruit unto eternity.

December 20 all the services of the day were conducted in keeping with the season. The pastor gave us a sermon on the "Wonderful Jesus." The endeavor program was followed by the annual Christmas song service by the choir and a short message by the pastor.

The Sunday School program was given on Christmas eve to a full house and was greatly enjoyed by all present. Many had come from a distance.

On New Year's eve we gathered in the house of God for a fellowship and prayer service. First of all fellowship with our Lord and then with one another. A number of short talks were interspersed with vocal and instrumental music after which there was time for testimony followed by a season of prayer. How it encourages our hearts and inspires us anew to be more zealous for our Lord and Master and increases our love for one another when we have thus met together!

Besides the privilege of entertaining the Pacific District Conference in June we were visited by twenty-two ministers and missionaries who gave us thirty-seven messages. However, we have not only taken in these good things, but the Lord has also permitted us to carry blessing to other hungry hearts. Our pastor, J. M. Franz, held thirty services in other places and some of our other workers also served in a number of places with messages from the Word and in song. Some of our young people have had the opportunity to sing the Gospel over the radio which has been much appreciated.

The annual business meeting of the congregation convened on Tuesday evening, January 5. We were made glad to hear the reports from the various departments of the church. Truly the Lord has been gracious to us. Shall we not make this year the best year, if Jesus tarries, by each one permitting Him to have His way in our individual life?

We trust that all our sister churches will join us in prayer for a real spiritual revival.

Mrs. Jno. L. Merryman, Correspondent

Hereford Church, Bally, Pa.

Our energetic correspondent of the Hereford church, Bally, Pennsylvania, Miss Mae Latshaw, sends a brief report of the 50th anniversary of the founding of their church, from which we cull the following:

After the opening song, "Awake, my Soul, and with the Sun," Dr. E. S. Johnson, the pastor, preached on the text: "Why stand ye here all day idle? They say unto Him, Because no man hath hired us." Among other things he spoke very fittingly of the service that Rev. C. H. van der Smissen, the first pastor, and the elders rendered to the church by organizing a Young People's Society which was later changed to Christian Endeavor Society. A most beautiful bouquet of mixed flowers adorned the altar, the gift of Dr. and Mrs. O. W. Berkey, a son and daughter-in-law of the first chairman of the congregation, Andrew W. Berkey. This bouquet was given to sick members of the parish.

At the afternoon service an early history of the Christian Endeavor Society, written by Rev. van der Smissen was read, also salutations by some of the original absent members, also greetings from the Christian Endeavor Societies of the Mennonite churches at Summerfield, Illinois; Berne, Indiana; and Dr. Daniel A. Poling.

Dr. O. W. Berkey, who was a small boy when the interested parties met in the parlor of his father's home to discuss the problems of the young people and a Christian Endeavor Society, spoke of some of the occurrences at that meeting.

Music was furnished by a young men's quartette, a sextette of "Oldsters"—some of the older members of our Christian Endeavor Society and church—and a vocal solo by Mrs. Elmer E. S. Johnson. Miss Flora K. Heebner, who is a missionary of the Schwenkfelder Church in Shansi, China, since 1904, spoke in an interesting fashion of her work there. She divided her remarks into the three "W's", where, what, and why—Where she was stationed, What they tried to do, and Why she was a missionary. Her very modest, unassuming manner at once won her way into your heart.

Ralph W. Berkey also wrote an anniversary hymn suitable for the occasion which was sung for the first time at the afternoon meeting. He is a son of the first president.

This most interesting, but perhaps rather lengthy program, came to a close by singing the Christian Endeavor hymn, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and the Mizpah Benediction.—Corres.

JESUS THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD

Printed portion, John 8:12, 31, 32; 9:1-11
John 7:1 to 9:41

Jesus the Light of the World v 12

Jesus here gives himself another title, Light. No one fully covers his greatness. Jesus not only brought light, He is the Light. He not only is the guide to life, He is the true life itself (J. 1:4). Jesus, the Light, illumines, reveals, cheers, brings life, light and happiness. His Spirit dwelling within us gives us spiritual sight. We grope in darkness without the Gospel light (Acts 4:12). Jesus the true, spiritual, eternal light illumines the soul (2 Cor. 4:6). This light is free to all (Is. 55:1). This verse states a very definite promise. He who accepts Jesus as Savior and follows his example and teachings will have his soul illuminated, will know as did the blind man, "Whereas I was blind, now I see".

Marks of the True Disciple. vs 31, 32

Discipleship begins with receiving the word of Jesus, but to continue is the thing that counts. Two sure tests of true discipleship are; (1) Continuance, obedience to his word which is the soil in which his life roots itself (Matt. 24:13, Acts 14:22, Rom. 2:7). Do we really follow out His commands, continue in his word? (2) Results in the Christian's life. Jesus makes two promises to those who continue (v. 32). Knowledge, He promises, not guesswork—the Truth itself. Real bondage is from within—result of sin. Knowledge of the Truth strikes at the roots of sin in the heart, delivers from its tyranny. The Gospel of Christ sets the soul free from the bondage to Satan.

Jesus Passed by, Saw, Helped. 9:1-7.

Jesus here demonstrated his power to banish physical darkness and bring light to those living in total blindness—another proof that God sent him.

The blind man of the lesson suggests the unsaved sinner—his healing reveals the saving power of the Gospel. The man, blind from birth, was beyond all human help. His case, totally helpless, was without sympathetic friends, despised (vs 2, 34) a beggar, an outcast. His great need offered an opportunity for manifesting God's grace in Christ (2 Cor. 12:9). Jesus in passing by saw the man's need. He sees our need and distress. The disciples (v2) saw in the man's blindness only the penalty of sin; Jesus saw an opportunity to help, an occasion in which the love and goodness of God could be shown. Not all suffering and misfortune is the result of sin. In this man's case the works of God were manifested in his healing (v3). At times they are made manifest by his sustaining grace in continued affliction.

Jesus plainly considered delivering men from evil as far more important than speculating about the cause of it. The man's very need was a prayer for help and Jesus helped him before he asked. Jesus anointed the blind eyes, the man must go and wash (vs 6, 7). His obedience was the best possible evidence of his faith in Christ. His blind eyes were opened through Christ's power made available through the man's faith. Jesus is passing by our way, we may have our spiritual eyes opened.

Christ's coming into a life breaks the power of spiritual darkness.

The Healed Man Witnessing vs 8-11

The healing of the man created much commotion and discussion. The Pharisees in their dark prejudice saw only a supposed break of the Sabbath laws. Their dark souls rejected the clear evidence that God was working through Christ. Dark souls, unbelievers, reject the light because they prefer the darkness instead.

The discussion gave the man the opportunity for witnessing for Jesus (vs 11, 25, 27, 30-32). His ready testimony led to his excommunication (v 34) but it led also to a real growth in his soul. His faith increased under questioning and opposition. His understanding and knowledge of Jesus became fuller, he sees Him as a prophet (v 17). He affirms that Jesus must be from God (v 33). Later when Jesus reveals himself to him, he accepts him as the Son of God (v 38).

As men walk in the light they have, the light increases. If they reject the light, even that which they have becomes darker increasingly. As we bear witness to the light given to us, we are led into deeper, fuller knowledge of the TRUTH THAT SETS US FREE.

Practical Truth: Christ is the source of light, both physically and spiritually, the light of life to those who will accept Him as such.

Prayer. God helps us that our spiritual eyes may be opened widely so we may see clearly. Amen.

Our desires determine which way of life we choose. The two paths of life are before us. We choose whether we will travel the high way or the low.

Practical Truth: Money spent for alcoholic beverages is worse than wasted; so also is time spent in making them.

Golden Text: Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread? and your labor for that which satisfieth not? Isaiah 55:2.

SERMON SKETCH

A. E. Kreider

THE NEARNESS OF GOD

Genesis 28:10-22

Jacob was undoubtly lonely and weary as he lay down to rest for the night. Home and kin were left behind. He was fleeing from before the anger of his brother whom he had so grieviously wronged. The perils and dangers of a long journey were before him. We wonder what Jacob's thoughts were as he closed his eyes in sleep.

The Unrecognized Presence of God

He awoke to a new realization. Although there was neither temple nor altar on that stony hillside, yet he became aware of a wondous presence about him. He knew he was not alone. God had come near. He exclaimed in great joy, "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not." It was more than he had expected. That was a glorious hour for Jacob. The thought of that hour attended him and strengthened him as he went his way.

God Is Near

The Bible never grows weary in its insistence that God is always near. He is with us But we are not always aware of his presence. We have no vivid sense of his nearness. We do not recognize the signs of his comings and goings. He is here but we know it not.

The Signs of His Presence

Why have we missed Him and failed to recognize his attending presence? Perhaps we have to often looked for Him in the unusual experiences and in the unusual events. We look for Him in the earthquake or in the wind or in the fire. He is in none of these, as he is to be found in the whisperings of the still small voice within. God is in the commonplace, in the familiar, in the quiet experiences of life.

In these days we have made another fatal mistake. We are inclined to assume that if we can account for a thing, that God then has nothing to do with it. If we understand or are able to explain it, that eliminates God. We keep God as our last resort, not realizing that He works in and through the familiar processes of life. Over the fireplace in a Medical Room, frequented by physicians, there is this inscription: "We dress the wound, God heals it". That is a recognition of God's part in life itself. In the things for which we are able to account we ought to see God's hand all the more clearly. Why should we not often exclaim, "Surely the Lord is in this place and we knew it not"?

Perhaps we fail to see God about us because we do not know what to look for. On one occassion a godly man with a radiant soul came into the fellowship of a conference group. The members of that group went away knowing beyond a doubt that the presence of God had been with them. God had drawn near in the person of this noble man who had come among them. It is undoubtly often true that we fail to see God, because we do not know what to look for. The people of Nazareth knew not that God had visited them when Jesus came to their city. They said of Him, "Is not this the carpenter's son?" That is all they could see.

Surely God does not hide himself. He is making himself known in unmistakable ways. He that has eyes shall see and cry out, "Surely the Lord is in this place and I knew it not".

Bethel College Church, Newton, Kansas

At the annual meeting of the Bethel College Church held on New Year's Day, the clerk in the opening statement of a brief chronicle of church events during the past year read this significent entry, "On Sunday January 19 the new pastor, Rev. J. N. Smucker, preached his first sermon as our chosen pastor, on the text, 'Go forward,' taken from Exodus 14:15. It was a powerful sermon, full of the Spirit and the spiritual food. God has been very kind to us in providing this godly man as our pastor and spiritual leader. Our pastorate is difficult to fill. But we have the feeling that this man is just what we need. At the installation of the pastor, one of the speakers remarked, 'The pastor should preach the word in purity and power.' Our pastor has been doing that and the good results are plainly noticeable." Yes, the life in our church has been remarkably quickened during the past year. Our greatly enlarged chapel is filled each Sunday with people eager to hear the sermons which, though only fifteen minutes long, are full of fresh, interesting food for the soul, with heart-gripping applications to everyday Christian living. Forty-one new members joined the church last year, four have withdrawn, and two have passed away. The total membership is 313.

IN HIS PRESENCE

By A. R. Keiser

V. Prayer—The Power of God.

It is impossible to offer our lives afresh without a daily look into the face of God. Jesus said, "When ye pray," He did not say "If" ye pray. The health of our body, especially the well-being of our nervous system, and the cure of our souls demand that we spend some time in quiet fellowship with God.

To go through the motions of prayer does not help any, we must become attuned to God. Pretense never takes the place of actual experience. This failure in prayer may be due to a wrong time—we cannot pray well when we are physcially fatigued. Or it may be due to a wrong place—the bed room for many is not a good place to pray, the bed may remind one too much of sleep. Without a doubt the two greatest reasons why we do not fellowship with our Heavenly Father while in the pretense of prayer are: (1) We feel that there is no one at the other end, and (2) our minds wander.

We do not at all times feel devotionally inclined, but we should pray all the same, that we may become attuned to things divine. It is but natural that we do not always feel emotionally the same. Neither do poets. They work laboriously for days at a time; their best poetic inspiration comes at rare intervals. But we may experience that God does hear and answer prayer—and revelation declares it in no uncertain terms.

The ability to concentrate on things divine comes by discipline and perseverance. The following experience of a small boy praying is not strange to any of us:

"God bless Mummy, I know that's right,
Wasn't it fun in the bath tonight?
The cold's so cold and the hot's so hot,
Oh! God bless Daddy, I quite forgot."

What shall be our technique of the morning Quiet Time? In the first place we must have a definite time each morning. The first moments of the day are the best. For many of us this means going to bed a bit earlier so that we can arise earlier. A certain student who found it difficult to get up in time for his Quiet Time struck upon this plan. He was a poor, hard-working young man earning most of his way through school. He decided to throw a guinea into the river every time he overslept. Needless to say he did not need to throw many guineas into the river.

The place too should be where you can be alone. Many delight in beginning this Quiet Time in quietness and prayer. Praise God, pray to Him, tell Him of your joy in His Presence, meditate upon devotional hymns like "My Jesus I love Thee, I know Thou art mine." Then tell God about your wrongs, make a moral search and lay all before Him until you feel His peace and a sense of forgiveness.

We may next wish to rise from our knees and bathe ourselves in the thought of His Word, this will help to wash the dust from our eyes and give us a sense of balance and security for the hard hours ahead of us in the work of the day. After that we will wish to pray again and we should give the Holy Spirit time to speak to us—Every word He gives us is precious; we need to take these messages and be obedient unto them.

Prayer is not bending God's will to ours but bending our wills to God's—when one is out in a boat he does not throw out a boat-hook to draw the shore unto himself but that he may pull himself to the shore. Prayer is not so much asking for things but for Him. If we seek the kingdom of God, our Father will be quite eager to give us the good things we need. The well-disciplined boy will not say "I love my daddy, he gives me pennies every day." Prayer is getting our eyes on God and not on men—it is getting into communion and fellowship with God. Let us by all means come "Into His Presence" even if we must wrestle like Jacob of old.

"DIVERSE BAPTISMS"

Heb. 9:10

P. H. Richert

It should not be necessary to say and publish anything on the form of baptism, but when one hears how here and there confusion is caused in our churches by students who have been in schools which teach that immersion is the only right form, then it becomes our duty to help in clearing up such confusion.

All denominations, even the Baptists, admit that the word baptism is a Greek word which has more than one meaning as to form. In Hebrews 9:10 we read of "diverse baptisms" (Greek: diaphoris baptismois). What are these various baptisms? The context shows that they are all the religious cleansings in the Old Testament, which include sprinkling, washing, pouring, and bathing. All these cleansings are here called baptisms. When we add to this the consideration, that the letter to the Hebrews was written to the Jews from whom we have received the baptism, this is doubly important, because the Jews knew best what they meant by this word. If they called all those forms of religious cleansings baptism, we have no right to restrict this word to one form.

If Bible teachers know all this, why then do so many insist, that immersion is the only correct form? Does it not almost look like dishonesty? Not necessarily, but it does look like the mistake which the apostles made about those scripture passages in the Old Testament that foretold Christ's suffering: they passed them by, and held only to those prophecies which told about his glory and power. Christ accused them of "slowness of heart" to accept all that the prophets had spoken, which was the cause of their confusion about Christ's death, Luke 24:25. It was a superficial study of the scriptures that caused confusion, and the same thing is true today. If we go to the bottom of things in the Bible, all confusion vanishes, including that about the form of baptism.

What are some of the scripture passages on baptism that are being superficially studied?

1. Rom. 6:3-6. This is one of the most used passages by immersionists to prove the form of immersion, because in verse 4 Paul speaks of being buried with Christ. But they skip verse 3, which is the beginning of Paul's teaching on baptism, and shows clearly that the first meaning of baptism, and its fundamental meaning, is not burial but crucifixion: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death?" And in verse 6 he emphasizes even the form of this death, saying that we were crucified with him." That is the first and real meaning of baptism. What Paul says in the next verse about burial is only an inference introduced by "therefore," as a second thought.

A close study of this passage shows, that Paul does not here wish to teach any particular form, but the meaning of baptism. Because if we wish to find a form here, then the first form would be crucifixion, and the secondary form would be burial.

We are compelled to find here either two forms or no form. To pick out one of these forms as the Catholics and the immersionists do, and deny the other form, is inconsistent and confusing. (The Catholics have chosen the crucifixion form, and the immersionists the burial form, but both misinterpret this passage, because no form is intended by Paul to be taught here. But whoever insists that Paul does teach a form here, would have to take the first one as the Catholics do, because death is the fundamental meaning.)

2. Acts 1:5—"John baptized with water." Immersionists claim that this should be translated, "John baptized in water," because as long as we use the word "with," we cannot use immersion. It would make no sense to say "John immersed with water." That is impossible. So they change with to in. But in the Greek there is no preposition here before water, but only the dative case for water, "hudati," which is the dative of instrument, and cannot be translated by in. It must be by with. Consequently, we cannot use immersion here.

In other passages where a preposition is used with baptism, it is one that has the meaning of both with and in, and we would have the right to chose either one, if it were not for such passages as Acts 1:5 and some others, which show that we must choose with, in these passages, and that it would be consistent to do so also in the others.

3. Acts 8:38—It is often asked here, how the eunuch came to ask for baptism when they studied Isaiah 53. The context in Isaiah shows that Philip must have explained to him the prohecy about "sprinkling many nations." What would be more natural here than speaking about baptism, and who would want to deny that Philip did not use the form which the prophet prescribes here? Isaiah 52:15.

4. Going back to Heb. 9:10 with its four forms of religious cleansings, it is well to note that only the sprinkling was done by the priests, all other forms could also be done by others. Each one could wash, or bathe himself, but no one could sprinkle himself. This was left to the priest, which shows that it was the most sacred of the four. This is not surprising when we consider that the cleansing by the blood of Christ is also called sprinkling.

So while the word baptism in the scriptures includes all these forms of religious cleansings, it is very evident, that sprinkling is the outstanding form with the richest meaning, namely death with Christ for the purpose of cleansing, as Paul explains in Rom. 6:7—"For he that is dead, is freed from sin" (not "he that is buried.")

It is therefore absolutely unnecessary and unfair to cast doubt on the validity of our form of baptism by sprinkling. We do not call immersion wrong, but we find more scripture for sprinkling. Both forms are good, but if one is better than the other, it is sprinkling. Besides, it is the form which can be used all over the world and at all seasons and all places, which cannot be said of immersion.

If any confused soul has questions which this article does not answer, let me hear from you. I shall answer as best I can. My address is Goessel, Kansas.

OUR SURETY

A surety is one who gives sureness. If we owe a debt or if a debt is owed us, he makes the payment of the debt a certainty. If we are attacked by an enemy, he makes us confident of victory. If we are weak and discouraged, he comes to our aid with unfailing strength.

Much of the good of this world is very unsure. It is precarious in its existence, doubtful in its extent, uncertain in its quality. We seize it and then we lose it, and we are never quite certain of it.

But when we are servants of God, He is surety for us for all good. Not for a single instant, then, are we in doubt regarding our blessedness. We are confident of it today and tomorrow. We are certain that it will not fade, or change, or deteriorate in any way, but our lot will be better and happier to the perfect day.

DEATHS

Abraham C. Reusser, son of Abraham and Veronika Welty Reusser was born near Moundridge, Kansas, on June 28, 1891, and passed away at the Halstead Hospital, Halstead, Kansas, January 21, 1937, at the age of 45 years, 6 months and 23 days. Confessing his faith in Christ he was baptized July 26, 1908, and became a member of the First Mennonite Church of Christian at Moundridge, Kansas, where he retained his membership to the end of his life.

On June 12, 1912, he was married to Mabel Schlender and for 2 years they made their home on the farm where he was born. Then they lived at Simpson, Saskatchewan for five years, at Shallow Water, Kansas, for one year and near Cheraw, Colorado, for two years. In January of 1923 they returned to Moundridge and since then have lived in this vicinity, in McPherson and Harvey County. Seven children, three daughters and four sons, were born to them, all of whom survive the father and are still at home.

The deceased was in poor health for about two years, bedfast two months. A week before his death he was taken to the Halstead Hospital where he succumbed to his sickness. Heart trouble and other complications caused his death. He expressed himself willing and prepared to die.

Those mourning his departure are his bereaved wife, three daughters, four sons, three sisters, four brothers and many other relatives, who with his friends rejoice that he had faith in the Lord.

Funeral services were conducted from the home and from the First Mennonite Church of Christian. The pastor, Rev. P. P. Wedel used as his text Deut. 32, 29.

Mr. Joseph E. Davis, the new U. S. ambassador to Russia, and Mrs. Davis arrived in Moscow January 19. Mrs. Davis is very wealthy. So the couple tried to make a showing for themselves and the country which they represent. At the station they were met by a large company of government officials. Twelve photographers were kept busy taking pictures. The Davis baggage consisted of fifty large trunks. Finding that he had lost his pass, Mr. Davis was told that he didn't need any. When the pair had collected themselves somewhat, they saw, staring them in the face, large posters in gold letters and in four different languages with the words, "Workers of the World, Unite!" The streets of the city were then cleared and the couple escorted to the mansion which the U. S. government had recently bought after it had been previously confiscated by the Soviet government.

CONCERNING COOPERATIVES

The Beginning

In 1844, in Rochdale, England, twenty-eight weavers founded the first successful consumers' cooperative when they opened a grocery store with an investment of $140. The business that first year totalled $3,500, and the net surplus was $160. Thirteen years later the membership had increased to 1,850, with a capital of $75,000. That year the business totalled $400,000.

Ninety Years Later

Today there are consumers' cooperatives in Great Britain, Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, Russia, Switzerland, Japan, United States—in all, forty-three countries, representing 100,000,000 families.

The United States

The growth of consumers' cooperatives in the United States has been slow, but since the World War, has taken a decided spurt. Starting from the Mid-West, it has spread west and east. At the present time there are 6,500 cooperative societies, with a total membership of 1,800,000, doing an estimated annual business of $365,000,000, or a million dollars a day. Cooperation is the enemy of poverty.

A Way of Life

Said a public spirited teacher:

> Cooperatives appeal to me because they are more democratic than anything I've known; but more than that, they make possible living the Christian principle otherwise best forgotten for success in our highly competitive, capitalistic world.

Directly in line with this thought, one is reminded of the words of Edward A. Filene, speaking before the Synod of New York of the Presbyterian Church. "Has it ever occurred to you, as you have observed poverty in the midst of plenty, that you must cry out against the injustice of it all?" He then went on to point out that the REAL problem in relating our spiritual lives to the economic system in which we find ourselves lies in the WILL TO COOPERATE—that religion is not merely a matter of Sunday-morning cooperation, but seven-days-a-week cooperation.

> . . . . But human nature, as I see it, is basically the will to survive, and I don't know how we could ever do without it. If people think they can survive best by getting ahead of one another, I shall expect them to go on trying, as a general rule, to get ahead of one another. When they come to see, however, that their best chance of survival is through getting ahead with one another, they will inaugurate cooperation. (bold face ours).

Aye, there lies our bitter need—the grace of God in our lives which shall enable us to stand before a situation, knowing that we have the power to turn it to our own ends, but because of our love for God's plan of life, we turn it to the good of those who walk down life's road with us. A great experience lies ahead of him who makes that great choice!

ASKING AND ITS ANSWER

He asked for strength that he might achieve; he was made weak that he might obey.

He asked for health that he might do greater things; he was given infirmity that he might do better things.

He asked for riches that he might be happy; he was given poverty that he might be wise.

He asked for power that he might have the praise of men; he was given weakness that he might feel the need of God.

He asked for all things that he might enjoy life; he was given Life that he might enjoy all things.

He has received nothing that he asked for; he has obtained all that he hoped for. His prayer is answered.
He is most blessed.

(Said to have been written by a Confederate soldier out of his own experience.)

A thing that is bought or sold has no value unless it contains that which cannot be bought or sold. Look for the priceless ingredient.

THE LEADER'S BOOKSHELF

This department welcomes brief, concise reviews from readers of books which have been a help to them in work of leadership or in their own personal lives.

SWEDEN THE MIDDLE WAY, by Marquis W Childs, Yale University Press, 1936.

An easily read 165-page, well-illustrated book on Sweden's consumer and producer cooperatives, tracing the history and notable achievements such as low cost housing and the breaking of an international monoply, including chapters on timely subjects, such as "The State in Industry," "The State as Monopolist," "Liquor Control that Works," "Socialist, King, and Capitalist," and "Recovery."

Sweden is almost the only country in the world in which capitalism has "worked" during recent decades. Capitalism has been held in check by consumer's cooperatives which do one-third of the retail business in Sweden and by State competition with private enterprise preventing the establishment of extortionate monopolies. Also, "One must add the fact, the very important fact, of an all-powerful trade union movement."

Contrasting the contentment in Sweden with the tension in Middle European powers the author states:

> The wisdom of the Swedes lies above all in their willingness to adjust, to compromise, to meet what appears to be reality. They have not been bound by a "system," nor have they been committed to a dogma. In a sense they are the ultimate pragmatists, interested only in the workability or the social order . . . . . Sweden has offered the world a very salutary example of peace and prosperity.

A Prayer:

O Lord, we commit ourselves once more to the guiding Spirit of Thy Holy Word. Strengthen our will that we may yield ourselves to its precepts, to obey its commandments. We put out of our minds this day all thoughts of evil and littleness, that Thou mayest speak to us through Thy Book, and that its power may flow through and through our lives to meet the needs of a world that is far from Thee. Amen.

Problems and Projects

1. The Bible is spoken of as man's finest library. Great writers have frequently used it as a model for their literary efforts. What examples can you cite of model literature, model poetry, model biography, model short-stories in the Bible?
2. We speak of "reading habits." What does the term mean with reference to Bible study? Is it possible to read your Bible "habitually," and still get very little good out of it? Does this mean that the habit of reading the Bible is not worth while?
3. What evidence can you cite from the study of history to indicate that the records as given in the Bible are true records?
4. A scholar of history points out that certain very significant events in secular history books are not mentioned at all in the Bible. He says, "If the Bible were a true record, it would certainly have mentioned these things." How would you answer him?
5. List in one column traits of character which do not check with the character of Jesus. Opposite each trait give the names of some Bible characters who are good examples of that trait.
6. List in one column all the traits of beauty and loveliness of character which you find in characters of the Bible. In the second column list people living today who, in your estimation, have these traits developed in a large measure. In your estimation, are these people Christlike?
7. Have each member of your society, as a finishing part of the program write out on a slip in what ways the Bible has helped them personally. Then when the slips are gathered, edit them carefully, group them, and attractively mimeograph them for distribution at the next meeting.

KINDLY TAKE NOTICE

Feb. 14 Why is missionary work necessary? Acts 16:9-15

Something Special

The missionary committee should plan at least one of the missionary meetings this month. The first suggestion is to have a missionary speak to the society, if possible. Discussing the topic for an hour will not impress the group half as much with the need for missionary work, as the experiences of one who has been a missionary. Have a fitting worship service leading up to the talk. Decorate the room to suggest the country which is to be presented.

The second suggestion is that the missionary committee dramatize their meeting in preparation for this missionary meeting. Have the platform arranged like a home. The chairman receives the other members of the committee. They have previously been asked to write to different missionaries on "Why is missionary work necessary?" As they arrive they are seen carrying letters in their hands, and make some comment about the interesting letter they received. They gather about the table to plan their meeting, opening with prayer. The chairman may suggest the worship service that is to be used. Then each one is asked to read the letter they have received. (If you do not have time to actually write to the missionaries, splendid material from which letters can be taken will be found in the January number of Missionary News and Notes). After the letters have been read, the members make remarks about how little they had realized the need for missionary work and the hope that the other members may feel that way when the letters are read in the society. Close the meeting with your worship service.

A FAMOUS GIFT

Some things have material values which can be paid with dollars and cents, others again have sentimental value which cannot be weighed with money equivalents. The famous painting Mona Lisa is considered so valuable that The Louvre in Paris would probably turn down any money offer. Recently Andrew W. Mellon of Pittsburgh donated to the United States his entire collection of paintings and other works of art, for which Mr. Mellon is reported to have spent nineteen million dollars. Experts declare that this is the largest and rarest collection ever acquired by a private collector and they also estimate the present value of the collection at about $50,000,000. It includes the work of masters in art for the past four or five hundred years. Maybe it sounds very foolish or amateurish to say this, but how much more good would such a vast sum of money have done if it had been spent in saving immortal souls and bringing them into the Kingdom of God, and making them eternally happy. Mr. Mellon also intends to erect, at his own expense, a magnificient National Art Gallery to house the collection, and to provide an endowment to cover the care of the building and the treasures.

S.O.S. Pastors! Teachers!

More About Jesus

Topic 7: Jesus the Giver of Life

1. Setting
   Let the word LIFE be the key verse for the evening. The verse of the month will show the word. On the blackboard, too, you could let it stand out in the portion of the verse: "Ye will not come to me that ye may have life." (John 5:39, 40 R. V.)
2. Pin-ons and posters
   Pin-ons could be in the form of keys on which are verses pertaining to spiritual life. The poster, too, could be a large key with an invitation to come and see how Jesus unlocks the door to life eternal.
3. Opening song service in charge of junior chorister
4. Call to worship: A trio singing "Open My Eyes". Let each one sing one verse, then join voices for the chorus.
5. Worship service
   1. Scripture reading John 5:19-26
   2. Response—in unison sing "Grace Greater Than Our Sins"

From Sunday Service Bulletin, Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California: Three weeks age the pastor was called to Arlington, Kansas, to serve at the funeral of Rev. John P. Linscheid. It was my God-appointed privilege to work under his fatherly and thoroughly Christ-consecrated guidance the first four years of my preacher experience during and immediately after my college days. His life reveals to us understandably and acceptably the purifying, redeeming, and victorious effect of a single-minded faith in Jesus Christ. In his history of the Arlington Mennonite Church he wrote in effect: "Keep us from temptation, false teachings, and self-righteousness. May we always realize that 'there is none other name....whereby we must be saved.' Upon that foundation we build this church for our own edification and the salvation of others. 'Und nach vollbrachtem Pilgerlauf, nimm uns von dieser kaempfenden Gemeinde in die Triumphierende.' "

A brother minister writes: "I note in the last Mennonite that six Kansas churches are looking for a pastor at this time. One wonders just how hard some of them are looking for one. Why do some churches find it so difficult to find a pastor? Others, who seem to go about it in earnest, do not seem to have so much difficulty. Why do some of our churches find it so hard to come to any agreement in this and other very important matters? Is the desire to be and act harmoniously possibly not as pronounced at times as it should be? Is the group spirit always as well developed as it should be for the good of the Church and the work in the Church? One wonders at times.

Hesston College is conducting a special six-week Bible school in which ninety students are enrolled, so that the management of the school had some difficulty in finding room to take care of this unusually large number. Several special teachers and lecturers are serving on this course.

Freeman College has recently been very fortunate in receiving large donations, among which the following are of special note: Dr. Isaac Tieszen, $1742; Ben P. Miller, $1300; P. R. Schroeder $750; D. S. Wipf, $500; B. P. Waltner, $500; J. D. Unruh, $500; Miss Caroline Waltner, $300; the total of all donations amounting to $6227. Most of these were amounts that the College owed these good people. Knowing the difficulty through which the College had passed during the years of depression and poor crops, we rejoice with the institution over these splendid gifts.

Tabor College at Hillsboro, Kansas, held its annual Bible Institute this past week. Three meetings were held daily, morning, afternoon, and evening. Rev. Wm. J. Bestvater and Rev. R. C. Seibel were the speakers. The meetings were all held in the spacious college chapel.

Early in January Mr. and Mrs. Henry Banman of Aberdeen, Idaho, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary in company with their children and grandchildren and a large company of friends. A beautiful program was then given with Rev. P. A. Wedel as the leader. Part of the program was a splendid sermon by their pastor. Some of the thoughts in this sermon were as follows: It is unusual for a couple to walk together fifty years in peace and happiness; it is an occasion for praise and thanksgiving to God for his loving kindness and faithfulness. There is a beautiful promise in the verse, "That though the day is far-spent they who trust in God may expect his abiding presence."

The 1937 Year Book just out shows in its statistical reports that the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America now has a membership of 36,144. Of this number 25,434 reside in the United States and 10,710 in Canada. By distracts the membership is as follows: Eastern district, 3,371; Middle district, 5,323; Northern district, 4,214, Western district, 10,382; Pacific district, 2,144. In Canada, Ontario, 1,050; Manitoba, 3,922; Saskatchewan, 4,794; Alberta and British Columbia, 944. Brother Benj. Ewert, statistician of the Canadian churches, reports that the General Conference churches number 20,132 souls, which is almost double the membership (10,710). Upon this basis we are pretty safe in assuming that with a membership of 25,434 the churches in the States would number at least 45,000 souls. Adding this number to 20,132, we see that our conference numbers at least 65,000 souls.

Maude Boyden, the famous woman evangelist of England, is in America assisting in our "Emergency Peace Campaign," which is now in its second year. Many heard her in a broadcast Sunday, January 10. She opened her meetings January 11 at the Brooklyn Academy of Music. From there her tour extends to thirty-seven principal cities of our country. Her appeal to America to prove peace by example is powerful. She has had the courage to declare that she wishes this country had not gone to the relief of the allies in the war, for two reasons: (1) America has thus lost a part of its soul; (2) our participation led to a smashing victory, which resulted in a dictated treaty, instead of a treaty of peace.

In December the Mennonites of Winkler, Manitoba, and surrounding country dedicated the hospital which had recently been built. This is the fourth institution of this kind owned and maintained by the Mennonites of Canada, the other three being located at Altona, Winnipeg, and Steinbach.

January figures of the Social Security Board, which are based on reports for the past 10 months, indicate that approximately 1,478,400 individuals—1,132,800 aged, 313,900 dependent children, and 31,700 blind—are receiving assistance in 43 States and Territories which have established public-assistance plans in cooperation with the Federal Government. In February of last year, the first month the program got under way, 326,126 individuals were receiving assistance in the 23 States which had then had plans approved by the Social Security Board. This included 245,430 needy aged, 68,638 dependent children, and 12,058 needy blind. In February of last year, the total Federal, State and local expenditure for assistance to the needy under approved plans was $4,614,328. This January, it is estimated that well over $25,000,000 will be expended for this purpose, an increase reflecting not only the larger number of persons being aided but also a definite rise in the average monthly amounts granted individuals. The average amount paid to aged individuals under all approved plans has increased from $15.18 last year to an estimated $18.70 this year. In the case of aid to dependent children, there has been an increase from $8.78 per month to an estimated $10.60, and in the case of the blind, from $23.77 to an estimated $24.70.

BOOK CHAT

Two Best Sellers

People with a little curiosity regarding books often ask which books are the best sellers of all time. At least the first three are books of a religious nature. The Bible is by far the best seller but few people could guess which book written during the past 400 years ranks next to the Bible.

Accurate information is not available in regard to certain books, but there are two books that certainly are far ahead in the race for second place—PILGRIM'S PROGRESS and IN HIS STEPS.

The oldest, and probably best known of these two books is John Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS. The most reliable information available would indicate that in its numerous English editions and in its translations into over 50 foreign languages and dialects the total for PILGRIM'S PROGRESS is somewhere in excess of 22,000,000 copies. In recent years the demand for this book has declined. Bunyan's style and subject matter do not appeal to this generation in which many religious leaders gloss over or tone down sin, hell, and damnation, the very things which were terrible and dramatic realities in the Puritan England of John Bunyan's time.

Bunyan, a humble tinker, was imprisoned for twelve years, 1660-1672, in Bedford Jail for preaching the Baptist faith, this faith not being in accordance with the established church. While in confinement he wrote for his entertainment "The Pilgrim's Progress from this World to that which is to come." This allegory is so rich in Bible References that it is usually classified in libraries under Religion rather than Fiction. The first edition was licensed for publication February 18, 1678. Three editions appeared within a year, and eleven within Bunyan's lifetime. Good recent editions of PILGRIM'S PROGRESS may be had at prices ranging from 80c to $7.50.

IN HIS STEPS by Charles M. Sheldon is a newer book. It had a phenomenal sale at the time it was first published and is still selling. More than 8,000,000 copies have been sold in America alone and more than 12,000,000 abroad. In the foreward to the most recent authorized edition Dr. Sheldon makes the following interesting comments:

The Story "In His Steps" was written in 1896, and it was read a chapter at a time to my young people, Sunday evenings in the Central Congregational Church, Topeka, Kansas. While it was being read it was being published in the Chicago Advance, a religious weekly, as a serial. The publisher did not know the conditions of the copyright law and he filed only one copy of the Advance each week with the department, instead of two, which the law required. On that account the copyright was defective, and the story was thrown into the "public domain" when the Advance Company put it out in a ten cent edition. Owing to the fact that no one had any legal ownership in the book, sixteen different publishers in America and fifty in Europe and Australia put out the book in various editions from an English penny to eight shillings. Mr. Bowden, the London publisher, sold over 3,000,000 copies of the penny edition on the streets of London. The book has been translated into twenty-one languages, including a Russian publication which has been banned by the Soviet. A Turkish translation in Arabic is permitted circulation by the government and is being read all over Turkey.

Many additional facts regarding IN HIS STEPS are available but there is no room for them here. The regular authorized edition of IN HIS STEPS sells for $1.00.

Copies of John Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS and Sheldon's IN HIS STEPS may be purchased at $1.00 per copy, postpaid, from the MENNONITE BOOK CONCERN, Berne, Indiana.

CORRESPONDENCE

Pendle Hill, Wallingford, Pa.

Dear Friends:

Let me introduce myself as a graduate of Bethel College with the class of 1935. I have many friends and acquaintances in that section of the country.

My reason for writing at this time is to tell about a wonderful experience that I am having this fall. I am enrolled as a student at Pendle Hill at Wallingford, Pa. Pendle Hill will be a new name to many of you. I hope it will become more familiar. Pendle Hill is a school—a Quaker graduate center for religious and social study. It is a new type of school where no degrees, grades, or examinations interrupt the self-chosen study selected by each student. The emphasis is upon the development of a religious life which will help one to live effectively in the world today.

One reason why I call my experience here wonderful is because it is my first close contact with the Society of Friends, or Quakers.

I think we all know of the active work for peace which the Quakers have done and are doing now. Their stand against war and violence is definite and strong. We Mennonites feel close akin to any group that takes this position.

My being here becomes more meaningful as I think of the steps that are now being taken to unify and strengthen more closely the action of the Quakers, of the Church of the Brethren, and of the Mennonites, especially with regard to effective peace activity. I want to voice my hearty approval of such an undertaking.

During this term Pendle Hill has fourteen resident students. These students represent eight states and one foreign country which is Finland. It happens that I am the only Mennonite here, and I believe also the first Mennonite that has been enrolled at Pendle Hill as a full-time student. It is hoped that hereafter each year some interested member of our church may be associated with this center of religious and social study and practice.

In closing this brief statement I want to send greetings to all friends and readers of The Mennonite.

Sincerely yours, Arthur Landes.

The Mennonite farmers of the Bluffton-Pandora neighborhood in Ohio have been raising a hybrid type of corn with great success. At first they tried it as an experiment; but, on finding that the corn stands long periods of dry weather and sends its roots deep into the subsoil, they have been able to gather larger crops from it than from ordinary varieties.

The Mennonite

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, FEBRUARY 9, 1937 NO. 6

The Editor's Policy. The editor thought he had given out the "Magna Charta" of his policy in the Mennonite of January 12 in the article "What the Mennonite Should Bring." It is hoped that many of the readers have preserved this number and will refer to it from time to time. The editor has discovered, however, that there are some who seem to feel that writing for or using the Mennonite is monopolized by just a few. No, the columns of this paper are open to any one who can write and has anything to say that is worth while reading, anything that tends to build up and further the growth of God's kingdom. It is to be the mouthpiece of our conference boards and our conferences to the churches. We already have "boxed" headings for Foreign Missions, Home Missions, Publication, Schools and Education, Relief, Doctrinal and Devotional, Peace, Sunday School Lessons, Sermon Sketch, Correspondence, Deaths, Jottings, Book Chats, and shall soon have another, Book Reviews. We have a mind to change the heading Deaths to Family Chronicle, under which head we would like to bring not only deaths, but also brief mentions of marriages.

Yes, the Mennonite wants to serve all conference interests. Its function is to feature the different conference activities, the plans, projects, and doings of the various conference boards and committees, as well as of the various churches. Through its columns we want to tell each other of our experiences, our joys and our sorrows, for "geteilte Freude ist doppelte Freude und geteiltes Leid ist halbes Leid." (Shared joy is double joy, and shared sorrow is half sorrow.) We want to relate our successes, and even our failures, our dreams and our visions, as we busy ourselves with the upbuilding of the Kingdom. We are one huge family scattered all over this Western hemisphere, and The Mennonite and Der Bundesbote are to be the carriers of our messages one to another. If more of our homes will takes these papers and read them and contribute to their value and contents, the service that these messengers bring will be much better. In order that we may have space to hear from all, from time to time, we should write often and briefly, rather than seldom and lengthily. Now, come along, you conference boards and committees, tell us what you are doing; you churches, through your reporters or correspondents, tell us what is going on. Help put life into this paper with your contributions! Make your papers mean something, and get your families to read them and profit through them. God wills it.

Fifty-fifty. The deeper and more concentrated our soul-life, the more we feel the need and the urge to practice our Master's injunction, "Love thy neighbor as thyself." We take this to be our duty as individuals, and each of us is his own judge in the interpretation of this command. Just what did Christ mean when he gave it? Did he mean that of every dollar of our income we should spend fifty cents on ourselves and use the other fifty to aid those that may be in much greater need than we, both physically and spiritually? One of the most serious of human weaknesses is selfishness. We are primarily concerned about our own comforts. We are developing new needs every year. A little while ago it was the telephone, then the auto, then the phonograph, then the frigidaire, then the radio, then the airplane, and what not. Always self! although we read and know how millions are living in misery and want, are merely struggling for their existence, to keep soul and body together.

As churches we are behaving even more selfishly. Yet, as churches especially, we ought to be our brothers' keepers. There, even more than with individuals, it would seem that our Christian duty ought to make us share on a fifty-fifty basis with those who are not able to help themselves, physically or spiritually. When we make our annual church budgets we budget only our own needs—so much for pastoral service, Sunday school support, janitor service, music, repairs, etc.—and don't even think of making any estimates whatsoever for our "neighbor's" needs—those who have fallen prey to the robbers, the sick, the naked, hungry, those who grope in heathen darkness and need salvation. If we set up a budget for $3000 for home use, should we not at the same time make vows to the Giver of all that we will strive to the utmost to give an equal share toward the relief of suffering and for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom at home and abroad? It is reported that the Quakers do this. And there isn't a denomination on earth through whom God has blessed more people than through the good Friends.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

November 25, 1936

Dear Members of the Foreign Mission Board:

In taking a bird's eye view of our school for boys, we can say the Lord has wonderfully led us during the year. The various phases of work which are outside the classroom have continued. The students take an interest in the shops and field work, but the hardest opposition is from some of the parents. They feel that they send the boys here to study, not to do field work and manual labor. We hope they will soon learn to see their mistake, because India needs youth who are not only intellectually equipped, but whose hands are ready to do anything.

The work in the classroom has not been hindered by these outside occupations. In fact, we notice the contrary; the boys are more alert and responsive. In the eighth class we noticed that the chap who did the most work outside of school also got the highest grades in his class. Those boy who are eager in the classroom are also eager in the shops; and some who are very dull in the classroom are slow to learn in the shops. There were a few chaps, however, who could not progress fast in class even though they were faithful, so they have given all their time to learning a trade—weaving or carpentry—and have excelled in those lines. So the new openings helped these chaps to make their lives worthwhile and purposeful.

The agricultural phase of our work is like an open door into which we have barely entered. The opportunities ahead are enormous. With agricultural work we connect animal husbandry and gardening. Since the boys are constantly in touch with the farm and the producing of foodstuffs, we hope they will not become strangers to rural life, even while they study. Some of the crops raised here this year are sugar-cane, potatoes, corn, improved rice, hemp, peanuts, and napier grass. It appears to us that the napier grass will be the solution in overcoming cattle starvation in India. The grass is exceedingly succulent and profuse in its growth. If it receives some water in the dry season, it easily yields twelve crops or cuttings per year.

In connection with the school there is also a teachers' training department where the young men get experience in teaching the children. We have two chaps who are beginning now, and two in the second year of training. Several chaps have finished the two-year course and are now teaching elsewhere in our schools.

Day in, day out, our chief concern about all the boys is their spiritual welfare. Our desire is that they may all become workers in His Kingdom. For this reason we request the prayers of intercession, because we always need wisdom to guide and to direct.

Sincerely,
Mr. and Mrs. J. Thiessen

Women's Missionary Society

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER

The first Friday in Lent is the day selected for the church women of all denominations to unite in prayer. This year the date of the "WORLD DAY OF PRAYER" falls on February 12.

The day begins in New Zealand and the Fiji Islands and as the day progresses new groups join in praise and prayer until in the course of some forty hours the day ends in Hawaii with evening services for young people; all these groups praying that we may be one in our service for Jesus Christ—that barriers of race and class may be broken down—that we may truly learn to follow Him whose way is the way of life for all men—that we may be faithful witnesses of His love and His life-giving power—and that men may find the way by which individuals and nations can live together in peace and understanding.

The subject this year is "Thou Art The Christ." Programs are 2 cents each. The name of the childrens program is "Children of Every Land Come Unto Me." Price, 1 cent each or 75 cents a hundred. History of the World Day of Prayer "1936 and Before" is free.

These programs can be ordered through our Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana; but since it is already rather late, I am also giving the addresses of the four Presbyterian Distributing departments in different parts of the country.

Central Distributing Department, Board of Missions, 85 Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

Eastern Distributing Department, Board of Missions, 156 5th Ave., New York City.

Northern Distributing Department, Board of Missions, 1040 Plymouth Building, Minneapolis, Minn.

Western Distributing Department, Board of Missions, 234 Mallister St., San Francisco, Calif.

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

Ed. Kaufman

2. Its relation to the church.—"If Christianity is to survive it must survive in an environment made by Christian leaders. It cannot survive in the atmosphere that is thickening with modern paganism. Out of that paganism come the cross ideals of the tyrants who are ruling Europe . . . And don't think America is free of that atmosphere. We are still the land of liberty, 'the land of the free and the home of the brave.' But unless the free are brave, they will no longer be free. Unless those who believe in a Christian civilization are willing to sacrifice of their good, hard-earned cash to educate Christian leaders, they will find in a few generations that their dream has vanished, that tyranny with its hard and fast, ruthless rules of life will be substituted for the good life . . . It is not a question so much of churches and preachers as it is of colleges that will make leaders who will create a world in which churches can thrive, leaders in all walks of life, in all callings and professions. If American churchmen fail to support the kind of colleges that turn out Christian leaders, American life under another leadership soon will close the churches."—From an address delivered in 1936 before the Kansas Council of Church Colleges by William Allen White of Emporia, Kansas.

CONFERENCE ON MENNONITE HIGHER EDUCATION

A gathering unique in the history of Mennonite Higher Education was held recently in Bluffton, Ohio, when the General Conference Board of Education called together faculty and board members of Bethel, Bluffton, and Freeman Junior Colleges. The officers of the General Conference also invited to be present were represented by President P. R. Schroeder. Members of the Seminary Board were also invited but none were able to attend.

Bethel College was represented by President Ed. G. Kaufman, Dr. E. L. Harshbarger, Dr. A. J. Regier, Rev. J. M. Regier, Prof. B. Bargen. Freeman was represented by President J. D. Unruh. Members of the Bluffton College faculty and board, members of the Board of Education and local Mennonite pastors were also in attendance.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss Mennonite higher education in the General Conference. Three specific problems loomed up for consideration as the conference got underway. These were (1) the relation of the colleges to each other, (2) the relation of the colleges to the General Conference, and (3) the problem of the future of a Mennonite Seminary.

Naturally a conference of this kind is not an official body and so could take no definite action. The results of such a gathering must be largely measured in terms of the promotion of a spirit of brotherhood and fellowship, better understanding, and heightened inspiration to serve a common God and a common cause. There was a very definite feeling that, measured in these terms, the conference was a real success.

There was general agreement that in the past our schools had not been as close together as they should have been but there was also a conviction that there is a spiritual relationship which should develop closer ties. Various suggestions were made as to practical ways in which this might be accomplished.

Although in the past our schools were started independently of definite affiliation with the General Conference, the feeling exists that our colleges need, and want, to be recognized officially by the conference. A statement was made that "if the schools can actually show that they are the children of the Conference, the Conference will support them." Suggestions made were ample evidence to those present that our schools are striving in this direction.

With regard to the Seminary, the group expressed itself in approval of the plan proposed by the Seminary Board providing for direct Conference representation on the same. This is of course the action of an unofficial group which stated further that the doctrine of the Seminary should not be at variance with any participating conference. The present status of the Seminary movement is that the Board of Education will recommend the representation of the General Conference on the Seminary Board after which further steps will be taken by such newly created governing body. In the meantime ministers groups and district conferences should get information on the plan from the Board of Education and discuss it among themselves.

After recommending that similar meetings be held annually, and closing, as also the conference was opened, with a season of prayer, the first meeting of its type in General Conference circles came to its close.

A. S. Rosenberger, Sec.

PRAYER

I know not by what methods rare,
But this I know, God answers prayer.
I know that He has given His word,
Which tells me prayer is always heard,
And will be answered, soon or late.
And so I pray and calmly wait.
I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the way I thought
But leave my prayers with Him alone
Assured that He will grant my quest,
Or send some answer far more blest.

PUBLICATION

Pastors! Teachers!

S. O. S. The MENNONITE needs young readers—Youth of high school and college age. Youth thant wants to DO things. Youth with purpose and vision. Youth that is groping for God.

YOU, and YOU ALONE know who these young people are who should be reading the MENNONITE. Send us their names and addresses now, and we shall send them sample copies.

The MENNONITE can't help YOUR young people, if YOUR young people don't read it.... Help us to help you!

The above distress call appeared in the Youth section of last week's number of the Mennonite. And it is indeed a distress call. The young people that edit the Young People's pages feel that their and the general editor's efforts to produce something worthwhile are almost in vain unless pastors, church leaders, and parents see to it that the paper gets into their homes and is read in their families. They feel like giving up unless serious efforts are made by the churches to use the paper and thus show their appreciation of the efforts put forth. There are still too many families that are without the one or the other of our church papers. T.

JOY BRINGING NEWS

Brethren, sisters, rejoice with us! Our kind heavenly Father has put it into the hearts and minds of Brother and Sister L. M. Ledig, Upland, California, to give the munificent sum of one thousand dollars toward the establishment of a Conference-owned printing plant. The gift was entirely voluntary, because the donors feel that publication has not been given the attention and support that it deserves, in comparison with other conference activities. They think that the work of publication is basic, Missions, Education, and Relief depending largely on the appeals and on the presentation of their needs made through the Conference papers.—J. R. T.

PUBLICATION, IS IT A MISSION?

J. J. Balzer

We live in a materialistic age. Everything is carried on in a business-like way. Look at our daily papers and you notice that two-thirds of their space is taken up with advertisements or awry politics. These papers declare that they publish such material because "it pays." Yes, our publishing houses become great million-dollar establishments. And the Jew is controlling most of them and feeds the minds of the people according to his notions and wishes, for he is anything but a blessing in this Christian dispensation. Thus he has the power to dominate the world's thinking through the means of the press.

What about the Christian press? Are the Christian people as alert and active in publication as the world at large? More particularly, are we as the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America realizing the great and far-reaching mission of publication work?

In 1860 at the first Conference in Iowa, the three churches present adopted a resolution to take interest in the publication work. Seventy-six years have passed and we—150 churches—as a so-called General Conference have not even a printing press of our own, nor a book-bindery, nor have we begun to catch the vision of what good may be accomplished in this line. Listen! Is the publication work our step-child? In home and foreign mission work we have accomplished great things by the grace of God; but the publication work we have not only neglected too much, but we have also made it a mere secondary proposition—a feeding station for the other activities.

What have we accomplished in these seventy-six years? I leave the answer to my dear readers, for it is so little; and at the same time it is the main cause of the losses of our dear church's membership. Why have we not been growing during this time, except by the occasional addition of non-conference churches?

To my firm belief it is the lack of interest in our own publications few as they are. In many churches I find the Sunday School quarterlies of Scottdale, Pennsylvania. In others I find thirty-five to forty KING'S BUSINESS and one MENNONITE and that in the pastor's home. Should I cite more concrete examples? No, but I have a lot of them on hand.

Here is one that should strike at our indifferent hearts and unintelligent minds—excuse the expression: The Seventh Day Adventists celebrated their seventy-fifth Jubiliee Festival in the fall of 1935. They are seventy-six years old, and we must admit that they are the growing church of today, preaching the Gospel of Christ in over one hundred languages, sending 160 missionaries into heathen lands in 1935-1936, publishing in as many languages, and having some of the largest publishing houses of any church denomination, besides their hospitals, sanitariums, and traveling home mission workers. And what rich literature they have, though their teaching of the Roman Pope being the anti-Christ while Paul, the Apostle, teaches that he is to appear in the future, and others of their teachings are anti-Biblical, they have, we must admit, marvelously increased in number and in influence, especially in Roman Catholic countries.

We are four hundred years old as a Mennonite denomination. What have we accomplished regarding our teaching of the doctrines of the Word of God? Is publication our step-daughter? Is it a mission? Yes, the foremost and first. Did you ever realize that you would not have a Bible in your house, if it were not for publication? Think of the first Gutenberg Bible printed some four hundred years ago, a copy of which edition, now very rare, may be seen at Huntington Park Museum, Pasadena, California, and its present-day publication in over nine hundred languages.

SEEN THROUGH ANOTHER'S EYES

A wealthy man, who owns a country residence, recently became dissatisfied with it, determined to have another, and instructed an auctioneer famous for his descriptive powers to advertise it in the papers for private sale, but to conceal the location, telling purchasers to apply at his office. In a few days the gentleman happened to see the advertisement, was pleased with the account of the place, showed it to his wife, and the two concluded it was just what they wanted, and they would secure it at once. So he went to the office of the auctioneer and told him that that the place he had advertised was such an one as he desired, and he would purchase it. The auctioneer burst into a laugh, and told him that that was the description of his own house, where he was then living. He read the advertisement again, pondered over the "grassy slopes," "beautiful vistas," "smooth lawn," etc., and broke out, "Is it possible! Well, make out my bill for advertising expenses, for I wouldn't sell the place now for three times what it cost me."

MONTHLY REPORT

Of the Committee on Schools and Education of the Western District Conference

We are pleased to report that during the months of December and January some churches and individuals have liberally contributed to the upbuilding of a loan and a historical library.

During the last two months there have been contributed 194 books for the Loan Library of the Western District Conference and 95 books for the Historical Library of the General Conference. We thank all contributors most heartily for these gifts.

As soon as our collection for the Loan Library is large enough to warrant the printing of a book list, the Committee will do so and send it to all churches. It is our opinion, however, that such a list should contain at least five or six hundred items, and if individuals or churches have books which are good and are not read by them, the Committee would be glad to take those books into the Loan Library in order to make them available for churches which do not have access to books for their members.

The collection for Paraguay has been increased from 63 to 155 good books. This number, however, is far too small to make a shipment and therefore the Committee will be glad to receive books for this purpose.

Due to the kindness of Brother J. H. Franzen, Hillsboro, the Committee was enabled to buy three beautiful standard book cases for the Loan Library and three for the Historical Library of the General Conference. It is our pleasure to express our gratitude to the Brethern C. F. Claassen, Newton and J. A. Schowalter, Halstead, and also the Kansas State Bank, Newton, who made the purchase of the book cases for the Historical Library possible.

Besides these activities the Committee has in sevesal places helped organize Sunday School Training Courses and tried to assist pastors who needed books and advice for such courses.

SERMON SKETCH

THE SHEPHERD'S SONG

Lester Hostetler

Psalm 23

I. Introduction. David, the author of this psalm was a shepherd, watching his flocks near the city where the Good Shepherd was born. A very close friendship grows up between an oriental shepherd and his sheep; the flocks are small, the shepherd knows his sheep and calls them by name, and the sheep know the shepherd's voice. He leads them to green pastures and still waters, he rescues them from the ravages of mountain torrents, the attack of wild animals, the assaults of robbers. The tender watchful care of the shepherd is matched by the dumb trustful love of the sheep. Amidst the silences and solitudes of pastoral life, David thinks of God. All that he is doing for the sheep and more, God has been doing for him. Out of his experience he clothes his thought of God. So he sings.

II. A Song of His Shepherd. The notes of the song are

1. Contentment. "I shall not want." He enjoyed no luxury. While his brothers were feasting, David ate his simple fare, reposed on his lowly couch. But he was satisfied. He had what he needed most, a good conscience, peace in his soul, the companionship of the Eternal.

Our modern age needs to hear this note of contentment. Our lives are cluttered with an abundance of things—and we want more. Though we have bread, we complain because we are denied cake. We can still trust Him who feeds the birds of the air and clothes the lilies of the field.

2. Courage. "I will fear no evil." He does not say evil will not come. The shepherd knew that there was pain to endure, persecutions to overcome, perils lurking along the way, and sometimes the shadowed valley of death to pass through. But he was unafraid. He loved God and perfect love casts out fear.

Much of our sickness of body and soul comes from fear. Our modern psychologists confirm this. In his first inaugural address, President Roosevelt said that we have nothing to fear so much as fear. There are many things to trouble us, but most of our troubles are borrowed. We can meet disaster, misfortune, danger, even death if we trust the Good Shepherd who has overcome the world.

3. Confidence. "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." David's joys were deep, his bounties great, he was satisfied and happy. And so he was sure that he was already in his Father's house. But what of the future? Will the passing years and old age empty his cup of joy? He was sure they would not. He believed the goodness and mercy of God would continue forever.

We live in the house of the Lord, here and now. When death comes, we are still in the Father's house, only in another mansion. Death is the passing into another room, the drawing aside of the curtain which ushers us more fully into the presence of the Shepherd of our souls.

III. Conclusion. Our modern life with its organization, progress, things, needs the sense of God's leading, the simple trust of sheep in their shepherd. It comes by plain living and high thinking.

Jesus the Good Shepherd

A. S. Bechtel

John 10:1-42 Printed, Verses 1-16

The Pharisees claimed to be the shepherds, religious guides of the flock of God. They opposed the true Shepherd. Jesus, under cover of allegory, portrays these as thieves, robbers, and hirelings who do not care for the sheep. Jesus gives three distinct pictures: the sheep and the ideal shepherd, the door of the sheep-fold, and the Good Shepherd.

The True Shepherd goes in and out by the door of the Sheep-fold, vs. 1-5

Thieves bent on taking that which did not belong to them, climbed over the wall or fence set up to protect the flock. The very purpose of their coming would prevent their seeking entrance by the door. The thieves and robbers to whom Jesus refers are the spiritual leaders who misled their people. Any one who would win and lead the sheep-people in any other way than through Christ, is a thief and a robber.

A true shepherd, leader, minister does all things openly, leads the people in the only true way of salvation, God's way in Christ. He leads his people by word and example. He, like Jesus, takes a personal interest in each one of his flock. Jesus leads the way, his sheep, his own, follow Him for they know his voice. The voice of "strangers", false leaders, they will not listen to (v5). A true disciple will not run after "cults" and "isms".

Christ, the only Door into the Fold vs. 6-10

Christ speaks of himself as the "door" (vs. 7, 9), the door through which alone we can enter into religious blessings and privileges. The way to divine communion and fellowship is through Christ, the door. This is the only way. Jesus the Christ alone is the door into the kingdom of God. The only way to find the satisfaction for all our spiritual needs is through Christ. Good works, the keeping of the Law, and the traditions of the elders, the Jews thought to be sufficient. They needed and we need Christ for salvation. Others had come with false claims, false motives, to advance their own interests. Such are thieves and robbers.

Christ is the door to salvation (v9), the only door (John 14:6). We enter by simple faith in Him. He is the door to liberty (v9), "shall go in and out"; the door to satisfaction, "shall find pasture", never failing pasture (Rev. 7:16, 17). Christ is the door to the abundant spiritual life (v10b).

Christ is the Good Shepherd vs. 11-16

Jesus, beginning with v 11, contrasts his purpose, conduct and love for the sheep with the attitude of the hireling. Christ's mission was glorious (v11). He came that we might have life abundantly, life beyond measure (John 1:16). In Psalm 23 and Isaiah 40:10, 11 Jehovah is the Good Shepherd. Here Jesus claims to take his place. He gave proof of his being the Good Shepherd in willingly laying down his life that his sheep might be saved. Jesus and his sheep are intimately known to each other (vs. 14, 15). We can not fathom the depth and intimacy of that knowledge.

Note nine great points in our lesson about the Good Shepherd. (1) He knows the sheep even as the Father knoweth Him and He the Father. (2) He is known by his sheep. (3) He has a personal interest in each sheep, calls it by name, v. 3. (4) "He leadeth them out". (5) He overlooks none "as his own" v 4 R. V. (6) "He goeth before them". He has trodden every step of the way that we must take. (7) He careth for the sheep v 13. (8) "He layeth down his life for the sheep" vs. 11, 15. (9) He giveth eternal and abundant life to the sheep vs 10, 28, 29.

The great sacrifice was made, not alone for the sheep in the Jewish fold. It was made for the many on the outside (v16). He looked out into the world and saw the many that would be gathered unto him. They will be brought in through hearing his voice. His flock is scattered throughout the whole world. Jesus, the Good Shepherd, is greatly concerned about the straying, the lost sheep. Do we feel a deep concern for them?

"I am the good shepherd; the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep".

Practical Truth

Christ is the Shepherd in whose care and leadership we may safely trust, and in all times.

THE BEST TEACHER

Curtis Drake was valedictorian of his class. The boys were proud of him. He had shown that it was possible to take part in athletics and work on the school paper and still get good marks.

No one was surprised when Curtis was offered a good job in the bank during his first summer out of school. What did surprise them was that he lost the job just a month after he started work. The principal of the school was so disturbed that he went to see the bank president about it.

"He was one of the brightest boys we ever had in school," the principal said. "I was sure that he had a great future ahead."

"He has a brilliant mind," the bank president agreed.

"But I don't understand why he lost his position," the principal protested.

"He didn't know the difference between right and wrong," the president replied. "He had no religious background; he never went to Sunday School."

The bank president took a ledger-book from his desk. His finger pointed to some entries in Curtis' excellent handwriting.

"In the month that he was here," the president explained, "he managed to steal twenty dollars from us. He was so clever that he might have kept it up for years. It was lucky that we happened to catch him."

The principal shook his head in bewilderment. "It doesn't seem possible."

"It wasn't a lack of schooling," the bank president said. "He learned his lessons well. But he needed something more. He needed the things that the Sunday School would have taught him—which things are right and which are wrong. Only Christianity can teach a person that."—Selected.

THE "LORD'S ACRE"

Long centuries ago, the Children of Israel, the ancient Hebrews, offered up to God the first fruits of their land and the firstlings of their flocks.

Today, in the Carolinas of this country, similar offerings are being made by devout Christians who cannot support their rural churches with cash.

This fact received attention not many days ago in a report by the National Conference of Jews and Christians. The report had to do with the Lord's Acre Movement in the hill section of North and South Carolina. Supported by the Farmers Federation, the movement embraces congregations of hundreds of rural churches.

In the western part of North Carolina, for instance, about three hundred churches are being supported by donations of farm produce and labor. According to the Rev. Dumont Clark, director of the religious department of the Farmers Federation, these donations are cheerfully made by church-goers who can contribute in no other way. In a statement the past fortnight, he said that the Lord's Acre plan had a two-fold advantage: (1) it is of great material assistance to the churches; and (2) it makes the congregations more "church-conscious" than ever.

Because the Lord's Acre idea has been popularly received, it is now a common practice in the Carolinas for groups of as many as fifty persons to devote an afternoon of their time to working on church projects. Pastors, at first fearful that such work would do away entirely with cash donations, have become its enthusiastic advocates. Tangible evidence of the effectiveness of the plan can be found in such brief church reports as these:

"Boys and girls made $47.25 from potatoes on Lord's Acre."

"Women gave eggs laid on Sunday to the amount of $103.75."

"Proceeds at Tweeds Chapel paid off the mortgage."

Thus, it has been found that contributions of poultry and farm produce can be converted into cash and serve to keep church doors open. Accordingly, to encourage the practice, the Lord's Acre Movement uses pamphlets, a special hymn, attractive buttons and other means of obtaining cooperation.

To men like the Rev. Mr. Clark, the movement not only has dollar-and-cent value but also promotes Christian fellowship, builds character and teaches the young to support the church.

This above all: To thine own self be true,
And it must follow as the night the day,
Thou canst not then be false to any man.
—Shakespeare.

IN HIS PRESENCE

VI. The Holy Spirit — The Guide Of God

In the lives of many Christians, God the Father is very real and Jesus Christ is loved and adored, but the Holy Spirit seems very unreal and unnecessary. Many associate Him with religious fanaticism. But in the supreme revelation of the printed word—the Bible—the Holy Spirit plays a very important part, Jesus promised that the Holy Spirit would come upon His followers as a gift and be given without measure.

The mission of the Holy Spirit is to teach us and to bring all things to our remembrance. He will reprove the world of sin, woo men to a life of righteousness and keep us mindful of judgment. "When He the Spirit of truth is come, He will guide you into all truth." How tragic that we Christians rob ourselves of the power which is available through the Holy Spirit.

A careful study of the purpose and place of this Spirit of God will be enriching to the Christian life and it may be the source of untold power. When we can feel the presence of this Comforter in our lives all through the day the Christian life will take on new meaning. To be a Christian will then be an experience. Life will become victorious. Believe that the Spirit of God is in your life, dwelling within you, and He will be in you and He will guide you and direct you through every task of the day be it large or small.

Yes, God does guide men and women who are surrendering their lives and are willing to be God-controlled individuals. Let us permit the Holy Spirit to direct us—He will if we take our hands off our lives and let Him take charge. He is our "Major Partner," let us listen to the word as it comes to us as being the Voice of God and then obediently act on the message given us through the Holy Spirit.

In closing this series of meditations may I direct your attention to two notable incidents which may point us to experiences which may be ours if we surrender our lives fully to God and heed His Spirit.

1. When Jesus had made Himself known to the two men walking to Emmaus they said, "Did not our hearts burn within us while He talked with us by the way and while He opened to us the Scriptures." (Lk. 24:32). We too like they may become men of the burning heart.

2. After the woman of Samaria returned and told her neighbors all that Jesus had told her, "the Samaritans came to see Jesus and pressed Him to stay with them and He did stay there two days, and far more of them believed on account of what He said Himself. So they told the woman—we no longer believe on account of what you said, we have heard for ourselves, we know that He is really the Savior of the world." (John 4:40-42.)

Prayer

Oh God, thou loving Father who art very near unto us and dost understand us perfectly, cleanse us at all costs to ourselves, teach us and direct us through Thy Holy Spirit that we may ever walk as "IN HIS PRESENCE." Amen.

COMING BY NIGHT

Nicodemus came to Jesus by night. Whether he was too timid to come by day for fear of being seen, I do not know. Any way he came by night. And that's a pretty good time to come to Jesus—by night, and especially on a Saturday night. Not that you shouldn't come any other night, or any other time of the day. No, No. But come to Him at the close of the week and make a kind of a resume of of all blessings received during the week. Then pour out your heart in gratitude for all you received.

But there's another good reason why you should come to Jesus by night—Saturday night. It's the night before Sunday—Lord's day eve. Pray that God's blessing may rest upon the services. And remember especially those who carry the heaviest responsibility for that day—your S. S. Superintendent, your S. S. teacher, and your pastor. Not that you can't or shouldn't pray for these servants of God any other time. But make it a special point to remember these on Saturday night. Ask God to give them grace and wisdom for their task. And if you have any criticisms against any of them tell that to God also. But you object and say, "My criticisms are legitimate and reasonable." Perhaps so, I don't know. But anyway tell God about it before you tell anyone else. You will make them less severe before God than you would to any one else. Then too, a dozen words spoken in earnest prayer for them will do them more good than a gross of words spoken in criticism against them before your fellowmen. This principle holds good in other cases also. Pray also for yourself that you may be given a big dose of humility, and that you may become teachable.

Remember that so coming to Jesus works two ways. It makes your superintendent a better superintendent, your teacher a better teacher, and your pastor a better pastor. It also improves you. It peps up your spiritual appetite, and as a result you become a better listener. It will fill your heart with the Joy of the Lord. It makes you want to attend services not by force of habit but by force of heart. Put this simple method of prayer into practice if you have not already done so. It will enrich your soul. From one who knows.—Anonymous.

"SEEING GOD IN THE TEST TUBE"

The Psalmist stood in awe at the greatness of God when he wrote "What is man that Thou art mindful of him? And the son of man that Thou visitest him?" To the chemist he seems even more impressive and convincing. Where the Psalmist saw only the reaches of the heavens with the thousands of stars, he could then have had no conception of the order that existed both in the heavens and in the smallest atom and molecule. Worlds so small that millions exist in each drop of water yet so ordered and true that, "Surely here" must the chemist say, "God must be at work."

When I look into the test tube I see not merely color or form. I marvel at how vast must be God's plan to arrange the molecules in such regularity and the electrons within the atom with such plan and precision. I see darkly, too, for within that realm of worlds within worlds, there are yet so many things I cannot read or understand. I can only stand at the threshold and say, "God, give me eyes that I may see the plan, the thought."

No blind force of nature could possibly have evolved the mighty ordered forces within my test tube without a hand that planned it so. Each new door the scientist is permitted to open but confirms the guiding hand of God. Does science help you expand your conception of God? E. H. K.

SEEING GOD THROUGH THE TELESCOPE

Of course, science cannot demonstrate the existence of God in the same sense as one can demonstrate a mathematical theorem. Yet, the more deeply science penetrates the universe by means of its "big eyes," the telescopes—eyes that are 640,000 times as far-sighted as the human eyes—the more it leads us into a belief in an Intelligent Divinity.

What do the modern instruments reveal? The telescope, together with the photographic plate and the spectroscope, reveal that the Sun is only one among approximately 40 billion suns, called stars, which on the average are much larger than the Sun; that this galaxy of stars is lens-shaped with dimensions of 3000 by 30,000 light-years, a light-year being roughly 6 trillion miles; that beyond this galaxy there are numerous super-galaxies, about 30 million of them; but above all, the modern telescopes reveal that this universe is orderly, it is a universe of law, a cosmos not a chaos, so evidently "a house not made with hands." Does not all this point directly to the Divine Author of the universe? D. H. R.

A Prayer—

We thank, Thee, O God, for this day in which we live! Daily Thou dost reveal Thyself to us; daily we learn to love Thee and Thy Way. Create within us that childlike mind, which looks out upon a world which Thou, in Thy wisdom, didst make so very good. We thank Thee for the power which Thou hast placed in the heart and innermost being of each one of us, to seek after thee and to find Thee. We commit this power, today, to a life-long search for Thee in this world, in our contacts with nature and things, in our contacts with our fellow-men, until Thy will, supreme, is perfected in our lives. Amen.

Each of us is tremendously indebted to science for countless comforts of life. Science measures our time, and by it we keep our appointments—and our lives are filled with planned activities of useful service; science trails man's enemies to their lair, the germs of disease, and brings them into captivity—and we go about our business in safety and wholeness; science penetrates the earth and air and water, discovers materials and processes not previously used by us—and the pains and labors of yesterday are forgotten as we enter upon newer and more significant tasks. Our cars, our radios, our telephones, our vast transportation systems, both on earth and in the air, our machines in office, home, and shop—they are the lengthened and expanded mind-powers of man, at work.

If we could see ourselves as others see us, the chances are we would never take a second look.

We have, unfortunately, a way of saying that science is not morally right; of fearing that science leads away from God, and from the spiritual values of life. Nothing is farther from the truth, and only those people say these things or fear these things who have never had an opportunity to see men of science at their work, to personally know them, or better still, to have had the joy of doing a little of it themselves—scientific work.

> Science deals with the physical universe. It seeks accurate knowledge of everything that occurs within the range of human observation (Note carefully the word observation; not all experience is subject to human observation). The true scientist is interested in facts—observable and verifiable facts. His work is that of gathering, analyzing, and interpreting factual data.
> Because science has to do with the things that God created "in the beginning," we may look to the scientist for help in understanding the manner and magnitude of God's creative work. The amazing findings of modern astronomy and of the other physical sciences fill us with awe. They increase our appreciation of the One who "created the heaven and the earth."

Science is constantly changing, and as it makes new discoveries, by so much it changes our conception of how God works. With each new discovery God becomes bigger, more intelligent, more all-powerful in the mind of man—not that He changed, but we changed in our conception of HIM.

Problems and Projects

1. We are accustomed to think of religion as being a matter of faith. In what sense does science live by faith? When men like Pasteur and women like Madame Curie give their entire lives for the search of truth, despite repeated failure, are they living by a faith? What kind of faith is that? Is it a worth while faith? Is it the same kind of faith essentially as the faith of a man "who leaves all to follow Jesus"?

2. Science, by means of very fine instruments, is able to isolate units of matter so small as to be practically invisible. Science says that, strictly speaking, there is no such thing as solid matter, but that unspeakably small units of energy — electrons and protons—flying in their prescribed orbits at unfathomable speed, in myriad numbers constitute what appears to be solid matter. What force keeps these electrons in their orbits? How does it happen that each kind of matter has its own peculiar system of atoms?

3. A certain preacher says he has no time for science, and that he will not read scientific books, because he is afraid they will destroy his faith. A certain so-called scientist says religion is outside his field, and that he needs no religion to be perfectly happy in his work. Are either of these men in the right? Do you think the scientist is accurate when he says he needs no religion? What kind of religion do you think has he?

4. What scientists can you name who have been most profoundly religious?

5. The 38th Chapter of Job has many thought-provoking verses, to the mind of the man who is interested in nature. Which of these items which Job mentioned are still major scientific problems of our own day? Which of these have been solved through scientific research?

6. What did the astronomer, Kepler, mean when after years of the most painstaking study he finally discovered that the planets move, not in circles, but in eclipses, he cried, "O my God, I think Thy thoughts after Thee"?

7. What fundamental points of view are common both to science and religion?

8. Some of the greatest scientists of our day do not question the mircales of Jesus at all. They say that Jesus did not work by supernatural laws, but that he had a supernatural command of natural laws. Do you know of any practices of the modern teacher, the modern physician, the modern scientist which resemble the techniques used by Jesus?

9. The psalmist writes, "What is man, that Thou art mindful of him?" We often refer to this passage in speaking of the vast astronomical distances of the universe. Where did God show His greatness, His wisdom, most: in the tiny insect, in the germ plasm of life, in the creation of man, or in the creation of the vast physical universe?

10. A Project: Have the physics or chemistry professor from the high school bring to the church some of the physics department apparatus and give a demonstration of some of the phenomena of nature which clearly show the higher intelligence of God. Properly planned, and properly blended with a well thought-out period of devotion and meditation, this little feature could well turn out to be one of the finest things you have ever tried.

re-prayer Circle

In this smaller group that gathers early for prayer there should be very definite prayer for our missionaries. To know their needs you need to keep in close touch with them. If your society has not yet adopted a missionary with whom they keep in close touch and for whom they pray, do so at this meeting. The missionary committee should be in charge of this correspondence. Write at least once a month and do other little favors for your missionary. Keep the society informed. It will help your praying for missions much.

Outstanding Missionaries Today

As Mennonite young people we should spend some time getting acquainted with one of our own missionaries who has made some outstanding contributions to missionary work. If time allows review parts of the book, Twenty-five Years with God in India, or dramatize them.

Missionary P. A. Penner of India, writes, "I will not attempt to describe my feelings as I think back twenty-five years, when there was nothing here—not a bungalow, not a village school, not a boarding school, not a Leper Home, not a Christian, nothing, and now? There are 1200 living baptized Christians, a Christian community of 2000, 5 stations, and the future looming large. Surely, this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes."

Born in a village in South Russia, Rev. Penner, came to America with his parents at the age of four. They settled in Mountain Lake, Minn., where he attended the public and parochial schools of his home town. His father had planned a business career for him, hence he served as apprentice in his father's general store. The Lord, however, had different plans for him.

In 1896, the General Conference passed a resolution permitting the soliciting of funds for a mission across the sea. After churches and individuals had pledged themselves to the amount of $400 annually for five years for the support of a missionary and his wife, Reverend Penner was asked if he would be willing to go to India on the strength of this pledge. "I thought hard, prayed more, and then he said, 'I will.' " he writes.

Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Penner arrived in India, Dec. 9, 1900. Of the first year he says, "At last after ten months of hard, very hard work, with much traveling and expense and continual prayer, I held aloft in my right hand the coveted document which gave our mission the first station in India—Champa."

One phase of missionary activity was begun Apr. 27, 1902. On this day, two of those unfortunate beings (lepers) came begging to the mission premises. Beginning with two lepers, the institution has grown and now has 25 buildings with 500 inmates, with an additional nine buildings for dispensary, homes for Indian staff and church, making it third largest of the Leper homes in India.

The missionary has five objectives in this work with the lepers:

(1) To give the poor people a home, irrespective of cast, creed, or position.

(2) To alleviate the suffering, retard the disease, or effect a cure if possible.

(3) To do "our bit" to rid India of leprosy.

(4) To bring lepers in vital contact with Jesus Christ and thus bring peace, joy, and hope into their lives.

(5) To care for the leprous children.

Because of the outstanding work being done among these lepers, officials from all over India come to Champa to see the Leper Home, of which Rev. P. A. Penner has been the superintendent since it was founded. In 1926, Missionary Penner was presented the silver Kaiser-I-Hind medal for distinguished service by the highest English Regent, the Viceroy of India.—Adapted from "Twenty-five Years with God in India."

This year (1937) will mark the thirty-seventh year of service for Rev. P. A. Penner in India, during which time he has had three furloughs.

JUNIOR SECTION

Note: To the leader who feels the need of a deeper prayer life as she endeavors to guide her little flock into the nearness of the Shepherd, I would suggest that she read chapter one in Prayer by O. Hallesby. "What is prayer? Prayer is to let Jesus come into our hearts." This chapter, so simple, so clear in its discussion of a vital truth, will fill your heart with a new meaning of prayer and a desire that will lead you often in the secret of His presence.

Program Suggestions for February 21, 1937
More About Jesus
Topic 8: Jesus and Prayer

1. Setting

   Make the usual assembly room into a quiet chapel. Candle light will do this. Set into this room a picture of Christ in Gethsemane. On the blackboard in colored chalk print these verses: "Call upon me and I will answer thee" and "Draw nigh to God and he will draw nigh to you." Let the children assemble outside of the chapel until music calls them to enter. Supply each child with a pin-on on which is a verse on prayer.

2. Call to service

   By the music of "Sweet Hour of Prayer" which the children hum as they enter. Let them remain standing at seats while a solo voice or duet voices sing the words of this hymn.

3. Worship service
   1. Prayer of thanksgiving using the two verses on blackboard as object of this prayer—leader
   2. Meditation on prayer—groups' participation, each one quoting verse on pin-on
   3. Call to prayer—a junior reciting

      "Come, my soul, thy plea prepare,
      Jesus loves to answer prayer;
      He Himself has bid thee pray,
      Therefore will not say thee nay.
      Thou art coming to a King;
      Large petitions with thee bring;
      For His grace and power are such,
      None can ever ask too much."
   4. Worship in prayer—sentence prayers by groups
   5. Another voice reciting

      "Jesus, where Thy people meet,
      There they behold Thy mercy seat;
      Where'er they seek Thee, Thou art found,
      And every place in hallowed ground.
      For Thou, within no walls confined,
      Dost dwell with those of humble mind;
      Such ever bring Thee where they come,
      And going take Thee to their home.
      Great Shepherd of Thy chosen few,
      Thy former mercies here renew;
      Here to our waiting hearts, proclaim
      The sweetness of Thy saving name.
      Here may prove the power of prayer
      To strengthen faith and sweeten care;
      To teach our faint desire to rise
      And bring all heaven before our eyes.
   6. Closing prayer in song: "More Love to Thee". Verses 1 and 2

4. Study period. Aim: to teach the necessity of prayer and to create the desire to practice it more
   1. Introductory remarks by chairman; based on the challenge in Matt. 7:70
   2. What is prayer—answered by a junior
   3. What is prayer—answered by leader
   4. What is prayer—answered by a poet. Let a junior recite James Montgomery's "Prayer is the Soul's Sincere Desire"
   5. Is prayer necessary for me?—discussion in charge of leader
   6. Jesus needed to pray—minute talks by juniors
      - a. His prayer at baptism. Luke 3:21, 22

ANTIRELIGIOUS TREATIES

The Soviet Government is proposing to other governments antireligious treaties, according to the Allgemeine evangelisch-lutherische Kirchenzeitung, of Leipzig. This pact is to be offered to all states where church and state are separate and in which the Freethought Movement is active. Affirmative answers are said to have already come from Mexico and the Spanish Red government. From the same source one learns that a Russian factory has received large orders for life-size statues of Christ, Moses, Mohammed, the Pope, Luther, and others to be used as targets at shooting contests.

Goshen College Bulletin—"Who is an alumnus of Goshen College? This is a question that we are still called on to answer. The answer is very easy: If you have been a student of Goshen College or of the Elkhart Institute, you are entitled to all the rights of a member of the Goshen College Alumni Association no matter whether you have graduated or not." To this is added: "The slogan of the Board of Directors is: Every alumnus a contributor every year." (No doubt, the other Mennonite Colleges will say a hearty Amen to the adove.—Editor)

CORRESPONDENCE

Grace Mennonite Church, Albany, Oregon.

Greetings to readers and friends of The Mennonite:

This is, undoubtedly, our first appearance from this community to The Mennonite. This church has been organized for almost six years, but being without a correspondent during this time accounts for our absence in the past. As to our location, we are in the heart of the Beautiful Willamette Valley.

The weather has been exceptionally cold this winter for this part of the state. We have even had considerable snow several times (much to the delight of the children). The thermometer registered ten degrees above zero two or three different times. We realize, however, how fortunate we are when we read of the flood disasters elsewhere.

The past fall, and even the present, finds many from the drought-stricken areas moving to this country. This church extends a welcome to any making such a move to consider this their church home.

Health, in general, has been considered very good up to the present; however, several cases of influenza have broken out the past week or two.

We are glad to report at this time that Mrs. W. R. Augsburger, our pastor's wife, is much improved from their recent automobile accident.

In the recent past our pastor, Rev. W. R. Augsburger, has been called upon to conduct several funeral services in our midst. We realize that the grim reaper, Death, is ever busy; but we know that "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." Psalms 116:15.

We have been privileged to have with us recently Rev. and Mrs. Whitaker and Miss Alma Doering, missionaries on furlough from the Unevangelized Tribes Mission of Africa, who brought us two very interesting and timely messages, also showing slides of the work being done at that place.

Dr. W. P. White from the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago also favored us with a special service recently.

The new and re-elected officers of the church and Sunday School took their places at the beginning of the new year. Our aim is that we, as a church and Sunday School, may go forward at the Master's bidding with new life, hope, and zeal.

Correspondent

From the February Church Bulletin of the oldest Mennonite church in America, Germantown, Pennsylvania, which the pastor, Rev. Howard T. Landis, sends us, we cull the following: From the pastor's annual report: "'Let us go unto perfection.' (Heb. 6:1). Let us thank God for his faithfulness and many blessings upon us as a church the past year. Let us go on to more Christian knowledge. Let us go on to richer experience. Let us go on to higher attainments. Let us go on to larger usefulness." The church has a membership of thirty-one with no loss or gain in 1936. Three communion services were held. Among the special days or services there were: Bach-Home Sunday and Harvest Home Service in September, the Minister's and Deacons' meeting of the Eastern Conference in November, and Preaching-Mission services. The pastor preached forty-three sermons in his church and several times at other places and occasions. He closes his report thus: "Let us as members of our Church and Sunday school have, during this New Year, for our Food, the Word of God; for our Air, Prayer; for our Heart, Joy; for our Light, Hope."

The deacon, Friend Walter H. Temple, urges an increase in evangelistic fervor in an effort to contact those neighbors who are not attending services, this to be done through individual personal work on the part of each member.

The church, small as its membership is and very limited in means, has managed to raise a budget of nearly one thousand dollars, and the Ladies' Missionary Society $125 for various benefits.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

In this column will appear obituaries or death notices, also very brief announcements of marriages.

Wayne, Indiana—seven grandchildren, and three sisters—Mrs. A. J. Welty and Mrs. Leah Studer of Applecreek, and Mrs. Lydia Moser of Orville, Ohio. She was called to her reward on Tuesday evening, January 26, 1937, after thirty-nine years of blissful married life, at the age of 58 years, 3 months, and 2 days.

The funeral was Friday, January 29, in the First Mennonite Church of Wadsworth. Rev. Wilmer S. Shelly officiated and Rev. C. L. Hawk assisted. This was followed by the same service in the Salem Mennonite Church near Dalton, where Rev. A. R. Keiser assisted the pastor, with burial in the adjoining cemetery.

Be your own self at your very best all the time.

BOOK REVIEWS

Order these and other books through the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana Victorious Living. By E. Stanley Jones, New York, Abingdon Press, 1936. $2.00.

How shall the Christian get on top of life and stay there? By deciding whether life is a bubble or an egg, says Dr. Jones! In other words—decide between "the two basic philosophies," that of Buddha and that of Christ. To the latter "the universe is being renewed by a silent and saving bombardment of life-giving rays, so that the last word is not being spoken by death but by life." After contrasting the two philosophies, Dr. Jones illustrates, amplifies, and explains why religion is a cry for life, and why the Christ life offers infinite possibilities of growth. True spiritual religion involves the sense of being "invaded by the Higher." This introduces to us "the Divine initiative—the Cosmic Lover, wooing his creation to himself and thus to its own perfection." The book abounds in practical suggestions for the cultivation of the sense of God and the development in conduct of the implications of the Christian ethic. It may be read from day to day as a book of devotion, or from "cover to cover" as one wishes. It is arranged particularly for the former use.

The God Who Speaks. By Burnett Hillman Streeter. New York, Macmillan Company, 1936. $1.75.

"If Christianity is to save our threatened civilization, its representatives must deflect their interest from theological discussion and denominational rivalries to a practical dealing with those basic infirmities of human nature which are the tap-root of all human ills; and must do so in a way which, whether consciously psychological or not, is likely to be psychologically effective." God, who spoke of old, still speaks to those who listen. Like MacMurray and others, Streeter is impressed with the fact that communism is succeeding in "making the denial of God into something like a positive religion" and yields to its followers what many Christians now miss—a "sense of being able to detect the rhythm of....reality." It acts as if it received a kind of guidance from cosmic sources while much of the Christian world, although professing faith in God's comprehensive plan, acts as if that meant nothing in the individual life. Guidance is available; experience shows that. Conscience, intuitional insight, poetic inspiration, all combine to interpret it, distinguishing right from wrong and the best from the good. But the Bible is the most reliable guide of all.

The Christian Answer to the Problem of Evil. By J. S. Wale. New York, Abingdon Press, 1936. $1.00.

Oppressed by the "stark and mighty fact of evil" the principal of Cheshunt College, Cambridge—one of the theologians to whom Horton refers—confronts the great riddle with a conviction that there is an answer. He dismisses the classic answer that God is responsible for evil, likewise the argument that sin is but an illusion, and the comfortable theory of Satan, asking: "Who is responsible for him if God is sole creator?" Similarly he dismisses the atheist solution. He believes that unless there is the possibility of wrong choice no choice can mean anything. "It is only in a world where the horrors of wars, slavery or prostitution can happen that the learning of self-sacrifice, fellowship and chivalry will happen." This, climaxed by the mysterious redeeming experience of the Cross, makes up the Christian answer. A powerful, lucid, reasonable, timely book; and surprisingly compact.

« « JOTTINGS » »

On account of the severe cold weather and the heavy smudging which was done in an attempt to save our citrus fruit, together with a light epidemic of flu, we have postponed the week's special meetings which were to be conducted in our church by Dr. J. H. Langenwalter. Our people have put up a brave fight against Jack Frost. Warmer weather conditions will soon return to normal.—L. Hostetler.

The last day of last year Mrs. Jacob Linscheid, mother of Rev. Louis Linscheid, pastor of the Mennonite Church at Butterfield, Minnesota, passed away suddenly and was laid to rest on January 4. She was up and about her duties on the day when the call came. Reverend Linscheid and his wife, Agnetha Thieszen Linscheid, are both graduates of Bethel College. We remember them as good students and are glad to hear that they keep busy in doing good, in church and community.

Kansas is having a real winter this year. Ever since New Year the earth has been covered with a sheet of ice and snow, and traveling, except on the main highways, is difficult or even dangerous. As a result of this the Bible lectures held at Bethel College last week suffered considerable in attendance. It was almost impossible for rural folks to come in. That was very unfortunate, for the main speaker, Rev. P. E. Whitmer, of the Grace Church, Pandora, Ohio, gave splendid addresses, with much food for thought and for a deepening of the religious life. The student body particularly liked the speaker and feel that they had received much help and inspiration from the lectures.

On Sunday evening, February 14, Missionaries Sam J. Goering from China, now Bethel College, are to speak to the Christian Endeavor at the First Mennonite Church, Newton, on their work on the China mission field. Mrs. Goering is to speak about conditions among the women of China, while Rev. Goering expects to tell about some of the unusual experiences they have had in the work there.

On January 30, at the Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, took place the wedding of Rev. Peter J. Boehr and Frieda Nettie Sprunger, daughter of Mrs. D. C. Sprunger. Both Brother and Sister Boehr are missionaries on furlough from our fields in China and expect to return there when the way opens up. May the new mother find real satisfaction in mothering the six half-orphaned Boehr children. May husband and children feelingly appreciate God's gift to them in the new mother, and may the new relationship entered into by the family prove a blessing to all. This is our prayer.

A statistical report on Sunday schools show the following:

Country	No. of Schools	No. of Children
Africa	18,605	1,000,000
Asia	3,681	1,750,000
South America	6,564	400,000
Europe	107,765	8,750,00
North America	185,383	20,750,000

Rev. W. S. Shelly, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, reports that the American Red Cross is providing for 550,000 people in the flooded areas. When the organization asked for $2,000,000 Wadsworth's quota was $200. Now that the total has been raised to $10,000,000, the town is asked to raise $1000. He calls attention to the fact that Easter comes early, March 28, and "that the Lenten season should be used by Christians as a time for enriching their souls. More people have accepted Christ as their Lord during these days than at any other period of the year. The Lord's passion climaxing on the Cross does draw men."

The Weather Bureau at the Nation's Capitol reports that the rains that caused the terrible floods were the greatest recorded in so short a time over so large an area. Johnsonville, Tennessee, had 23 plus inches in 26 days, making 2,611 tons of water to the acre. Other parts of the state had more than 20 inches. The Mississippi Valley had 16 inches.

Has there ever been a time when weather conditions were as abnormal as they have been the last couple of years, extremes of heat and cold, unheard of drouths in certain regions, terrible floods with considerable losses of life, and destruction of property running into the hundreds of millions of dollars, and in still other places destructive hurricanes. This may be partly due to certain stellar movements, but we are old-fashioned enough to believe that God is speaking to us in unmistakable terms.

Our young friend, Mr. James Liu, Kai Chow, China, writes that in their mission school they try to meet the spiritual, as well as temporal needs of their pupils. They have a Young People's Association, Gospel Team, a "Love the Lord Society," prayer meetings, and the like. The school has twelve regular teachers, seven in high school, three in the upper elementary grades, and two in the lower elementary grades. Mrs. Liu and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Wang are among Mr. Liu's able assistants, and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker teaches one class in English. The school numbers 206 boys and 41 girls, a total of 247. Ninety-one of the students have Christian homes and there are twenty-five baptized students.

Missionary G. A. and Mrs. Anna Linscheid and Missionary J. B. Ediger of the Oklahoma mission are publishing a very interesting little paper, THE MESSENGER. Many should read it. The Linscheids were instrumental in bringing Jason Beard, an Indian, to Bethel. Their two sons are both graduates of Bethel. Herold is principal of a high school in Oklahoma, and Chester is librarian at the State College, Brookings, South Dakota. Of the Ediger family four of their children have attended Bethel—Alvin, Ted, Gustave, Hilda. Anne Ruth is here now. Gustave is teaching in high school at Turner, Kansas, and Hilda at Clinton, Oklahoma.

Goshen College has set out on a campaign to raise its standards to meet the requirements for membership in the North Central Association of Colleges.

DWIGHT L. MOODY

One hundred years ago February 5, a boy was born at Northfield, Massachusetts, whom God had destined to become the world's greatest recent evangelist. As God had chosen Abraham of old to become the founder of his chosen people who should give the Christ to the world, so He chose this boy, Dwight L. Moody, and prepared him, literally step by step, to become a power in his hands to lead multitudes of people into a new life through faith in that same Christ.

In memory of the monumental work that Mr. Moody did, both as founder of the Bible Institute which bears his name, and as a world evangelist, the Institute arranged for a series of conference mass meetings at the institution's auditorium and at the Coliseum in Chicago, during the week from January 31 to February 7. And on this last day, Sunday before last, hundreds of churches and Christian organizations all over our land and other parts of the world reviewed the work that God has done through this faithful servant, D. L. Moody.

As a boy, Mr. Moody gave little indication of future greatness. He was the son af a poor widow with nine children. He seemed to show only fair intelligence, got little schooling, and was a poor speaker and reader. But God, the Holy Spirit, and hard work made him the man we admire. Many of the incidents and experiences in Mr. Moody's life appear almost mysterious. The first time he went to London, where years later he spoke to audiences numbering ten thousand, he elbowed his way into the high gallery of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, and was so overwhelmed by what he heard that he wept throughout the service, "his eyes feasting on Spurgeon." Some time after that he was speaking in a small mission room in London. Within five minutes a brother minister, Rev. Morehouse, saw through Moody—"That he was just a 'topic talker' "—and after the service told him, "Moody, you're on the wrong track. If you will preach God's words, instead of your own, He'll make you a great power." On another occasion, when he had been speaking in Dublin, Henry Varby, a co-worker there, who accompanied Moody to the steamer that was to take him back to America, uttered these memorable words, "Brother Moody, we have yet to see what God can do with one man who is fully consecrated to His service." (Moody Monthly).

Wherin lay the secret of Moody's power? 1. He had a godly mother and a godly wife. 2. He was an "Atavist." This term means reversion to a primitive type. In Moody's case it means this: There "was a race of ministers called Bible preachers, who put an amazing emphasis upon the supremacy of the Word and refused to call anything a sermon unless it rooted into, and grew out of the text." Moody preached the Word through the Word, and that kind of preaching always grips. We need more "Bible atavism" in the pulpit today. 3. He was under the mighty influence of the Holy Spirit. He believed in the personalty of the Holy Spirit, claimed its power to the fullest, trusted it for guidance, and recognized the lordship of the Holy Spirit in prayer, preaching, and his dealings with men. 4. He was in constant communication with God, his Father, in prayer. 5. He knew no selfishness. With him it was all for God and fallen man! His sole passion was to win souls for Christ.

Here are some characteristic thoughts and remarks of Moody's: 1. It may be some hidden sin that keeps God from using us more. We must be honest with God. Let David's prayer be ours. "Search me, O God"—not my neighbors, nor other people. "Search me." 2. Work and Word, the two W's. You will soon get spiritually gorged if it is all Word and no Work, and you will soon be without power, if it is all Work, and no Word. 3. Jesus never taught his disciples how to preach, but he did teach them how to pray. I would rather be able to pray like Daniel than preach like Gabriel. If men know how to pray, they know how to work for God. 4. Trust in yourself, and you are doomed to disappointment; trust in your friends, and they will die and leave you; trust in reputation, and some slanderous tongue may blast it; but trust in God, and you are never to be confounded in time or eternity. 5. There are two ways of covering sin—man's way and God's way, You cover your sins and they will have a resurrection sometime; let God cover them, and neither devil nor man can find them.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

Reasons for India's Poverty

W. F. Unruh

India is known the world over as the land of the hungry millions. The causes of this poverty are not primarily economic but rather spiritual and religious.

Among the Hindus stealing is not considered bad if it is not discovered. Theft goes on continually. One of the pernicious effects is that the people are discouraged in every effort of self-help except on a most limited scale. When out in the villages we ask the people why they do not plant gardens and raise chickens, they tell us, "What is the use? If we raise a garden the neighbors steal the fruit. If we raise chickens they take them, so why trouble ourselves." Our servant had bought four chickens of a large breed. Shortly afterwards the rooster was stolen. To avoid a total loss they quickly ate the rest of the chickens also. To keep on working under such conditions a person must be either a patient saint or a "bully" with whom people dread to get into trouble.

Another cause is the belief that God wants certain castes to be beggars. One caste of the Brahmins also claims that it is God's will that they shall beg. One day when I met one such Brahmin begging, I asked him how he could make his living. He told me that he farmed many fields and that he had quite a large granary full of rice at home. When he was asked why he then still went out begging his answer was this, "If I do not go out begging the people will lose their opportunity to give their alms for the sake of religion. Thus I would not do my duty if I would stop begging."

Lying in India has developed into an art, one is sometimes inclined to feel. People can upon the spur of the moment lie so plausibly that it takes more than an ordinary missionary to detect it as a lie. It is a generally accepted view that a person cannot get along in any sort of business unless he lies. Even some Christians say this. This sanction on deceit is the cause of much mischief and evil. To get the best of the next fellow is therefore the ruling aim.

India as a country is not poor. When India will accept Christ it is bound to become quite rich because He only is the cure for these impoverishing evils. As long as the people remain Hindus they will be poor.

The Christian churches and organizations of Japan are placing an evangelization campaign of large proportions in all parts of the land. They are planning large mass meetings, Bible courses for Christians, conferences for teachers, educators and leading persons in all walks of life. A huge mass meeting in Tokio is to open the campaign.

Teaching the children. Many persons, some of whom have wandered far from the religious beliefs of their parents, have given testimony to the value of the instruction they received from God-fearing parents—usually mothers. In many so-called old-fashioned homes, Bible teaching was not reduced to pleasing the little platitudes about loving the flowers and being kind to animals. One learned that God exists, God loves even little children, God hates and punishes iniquity, and that Christ died on the Cross to save us.

One of the painful things we notice now is the fear of giving that which is clear, strong and essential to little people. Our experts in religious pedagogy seem to have forgotten that a child will probably accept and grasp more truth about God and his Son than adults. Of course, the truth must be put in suitable form, but it is not necessary to lose the truth in giving a pleasing form.—The Presbyterian.

PUBLICATION

When the General Conference Board of Publication was formally created back in 1881 it was authorized to appoint an editor for its papers, while each of the district conferences was instructed to appoint an assistant or contributing editor to furnish news and information to the main editor. This the district conferences apparently had not done until recently, when the need of some means of communication between the churches of the Pacific Conference prompted that body to start publication of a mimeographed, four-page sheet under the editorship of Miss Emma Ruth. Recently the Middle District has taken the cue and has commenced to issue a similar sheet, with Miss Inda Sprunger of Berne, Indiana, as editor. A copy of the February number of "The Worker's Exchange of the Pacific District" has just found its way to our desk. It is a creditable little sheet, full of the doings of its churches. We hope it will be our regular visitor from now on, and that the Middle District organ will follow suite.

The plan of issuing such papers by the local conference is a good one for these reasons: 1. Each district has its own local problems and experiences in which other districts are not primarily interested. These their papers will feature and may also bring matter more in nature of "local gossip" for which the General Conference papers might not have the space. 2. From the district papers the editors of the Mennonite and the Bundesbote could select and publish all matter of value to the large body of readers. And from the "correspondences" which are often long and have more local than general value they could cull the gist and thus save room for more weighty matters in their papers.—The Editor.

The fellow who thinks he can't is usually right about it.—Spurgeon.

Schools and Education

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

JESUS AS TEACHER

4. Regarding His pupils.—Jesus knew His pupils. He knew what was in the heart of men: "He needed not that any should tell Him, for He Himself knew what was in man." "Why try ye me?" He asks the adversaries even before it is evident what they want. "And Jesus perceiving their craftiness," we are told in referring to those who came to catch Him in His answers to their double-headed questions. "Why reason ye these things among yourselves?" He asks His disciples, thereby pointing out their selfishness. "Behold an Israelite indeed in whom there was no guile" are the words in which He uncovers Nathanael, who comes to Him in a doubtful and skeptical manner. "Thou hast five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband" is the way He reveals His knowledge of the woman who was scarlet to herself. Jesus knew human nature in general, and He knew individuals in particular. He knew the truth regarding His pupils.

MEETING OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Following the Conference on Higher Education, the Board of Education held its annual meeting in the Musselman Library at Bluffton, Ohio. Members present were: President Ed. G. Kaufman, D. J. Unruh, J. D. Unruh, and A. S. Rosenberger.

Much of the business on hand for this session was routine and was related to the numerous projects which the Board is carrying on. Recognition was made of the activity and progress of the young people's work. The project of raising a student loan fund, to which the Board has assigned ten percent of its income, was discussed with the purpose of planning more definitely for its administration.

The progress of the new Sunday School Quarterly was noted. Members of the Board, who were responsible for the selection of the staff, were happy over the apparent success of this new venture. The launching of this project was a matter of prayer and much consideration a year ago and the Board is happy to recommend this quarterly without apology to any Mennonite group, or otherwise. Several constructive suggestions were received, and the staff appointed for another year.

An annual educational issue of the Mennonite is to be continued if such is again approved by the Publication Board and the secretary was asked to edit the issue.

The Board noted somewhat of a decline during the year in the amount of teacher training instruction and classes and wishes to encourage the expansion of this activity. After all, prayer and preparation go together for Christian activity and neither one without the other will suffice.

Bearing the expenses of preparation of material for the Sunday School quarterly, assisting in the support of the field secretary, studying the seminary situation, and other necessary expenses for its activity, among them the creation of the student loan fund, obliged the Board to set its budget again at $1900.00. The Sunday Schools are urged to remember the request of the Board for quarterly offerings which was approved by the General Conference.

Next year's meeting is to be held at Freeman College in connection with which plans are made to spend a day visiting the school, and again arranging for a conference on Mennonite Higher Education at that place.

After a season of prayer, the Board adjourned.

WHY EMPHASIZE EVANGELISM?

A careful study of the word "evangelism" furnishes us every reason why the Church should be wholly evangelistic at all times. Evangelism is the work of telling the good news. If the gospel of God is the hope of the world, and if the preaching of the gospel is the supreme task of Christians, then evangelism is the very heart of the kingdom program. Indeed, it is through evangelism that the kingdom of God is set forward. The gospel has to be preached before it is believed. If it is not believed, it is never accepted. If it is not accepted, it never saves.

But evangelism is far more comprehensive than one usually thinks. We have thought of it through these centuries as being the work whereby we lead individuals to repent of their sins and to believe on Jesus Christ as their Saviour. We have felt that the work of evangelism ends in the experience of a man just as soon as he makes a public profession of faith in Christ. But the Church has suffered terribly from small definitions. Our prevailing fault is that we will not believe enough. The late J. Q. A. Henry makes this significant statement:

"The evangelistic note is the highest every struck by the individual disciple or by the Church. Soul winning is the supreme task. Its dignity is unspeakably great. Efficient evangelism includes the addition of souls to the Christ by a definite and deliberate choice of Him as Sin-bearer, Saviour, and King; the addition of believers to the local church; the addition of gifts and graces to the believer; the multiplication of soul-winners in the co-operating churches, and the awakening of a new social and civic conscience in the community with reference to the great moral questions that confront society. To achieve these desirable results, all evangelistic work must be done in vital sympathy with and relation to the churches and pastors, and be free from everything which would reflect upon the sacred significance of the task and the divine ordination of the Church."—Western Recorder.

If you want some work well done select a busy man; the other kind has no time.

CORRESPONDENCE

Apostolic Mennonite Church, Trenton, Ohio.

Sunday, January 10, our Annual Congregational Meeting was held, and as has been our custom the regular morning services were conducted; afterwards a covered dish dinner was served in the basement of our church where a delightful social hour followed.

Promptly at 1:30 the meeting was called to order by singing of the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers" after which Rev. Amstutz read John 15:1-12 and lead in prayer. Then the minutes of the last meeting were read followed by reports from the various organizations, and the church treasurer, all of which were encouraging.

Rev. Amstutz gave a resume of the activities of the church during the past year. Nine members were received into the church and death removed three members. A short memorial service was held for the departed members and dear ones who were closely connected with members of our church.

At this time Rev. Amstutz was granted a much deserved vacation of one month; and he and Mrs. Amstutz and son John Howard are at present in Florida, and from all reports they are having a pleasant trip.

This community has much to be grateful for, as during the great floods, not much damage was done in this immediate section, due to the Miami Conservancy Dams which were built after the 1913 flood; and we who experienced that flood can truly sympathize with those who have lost all, and every one has responded to the call of the Red Cross liberally. Lydia A. Augspurger, Corres.

Shafter, Calif., Jan. 19, 1937.

Dear Readers of the Mennonite:

Greetings in Jesus name! The year 1937 has come in with real wintry weather even here in sunny Caifornia.

Our church is increasing in attendance as there are always a few more moving to this locality. It is our prayer that we may also grow spiritually.

We heard some remarks over the radio by Dr. Martin Luther Thomas' Co-worker, which impressed us and would like to pass them on. I shall give them in my own words.

It has often been said: Why does God allow our brethren in Russia to suffer so long; why does He not intervene?

Let us go back to the children of Israel, when they were in bondage in Egypt. Had we been there, we would have often seen a bundle thrown into the river. What was it? Why the boy babies of Israel. How the poor mothers' hearts bled. Then in Exodus 5, we read how they were unreasonably burdened with work and asked to accomplish more than what was possible.

They were under bondage about four hundred years. They must have also said, "Why does God allow this; why does He not hear?"

Later we read how all the first born in Egypt were slain and the Egyptians drowned in the Red Sea. Was God merciless? No! He is longsuffering and patient, not willing that any be lost.

There comes a time of deliverance for his people and also a time, when God's wrath falls upon the nation that rejects Him and persecutes God's people. So let us be patient, for his time is coming and we know that He doeth all things well.

Mrs. J. W. Bergen.

Perkasie, Pa., Feb. 3, 1937

Close to one hundred attended the third quarterly conference of the Eastern District held in Bethel Mennonite Church on Monday afternoon and evening of January 25th. The ministers and deacons, the ladies and others of our interested members were in attendance at both sessions. Rev. A. M. Fretz, pastor of the hostess church conducted the opening devotional services by reading the 111th Psalm, and spoke on the theme, "The Church—The Lord's Working Force."

The results of the Preaching Mission held in some of the churches some weeks previous were next discussed. Those in whose churches the preaching mission services were held were enthusiastic in praise of this form of revival. Plans were made to have meetings of the same nature with an exchange of pastors during the coming year. There is little doubt that our people as a whole will favor such a move; and possibly a visiting evangelist will also be secured.

NOTICE

The Annual Meeting of the Mennonite Teachers' Association is to be held on the afternoon and evening of March 7, 1937. The main theme of the convention is to be "The Christian View of the Changing Educational Principles." The place of meeting and the program will appear in print soon.

Easter, one minister remarked that at some places police were needed to keep the throngs in line; but at these same churches a few weeks after Easter, they might need officers to bring the people to the church.

Reverends Gottshall and Neuenschwander of Quakertown were appointed to receive contributions of German books and hymnals for our Canadian brethren.—A paper by Rev. Neuenschwander on "Objectives of the Church" was based on Luke 12:31-37. (This paper will be published in full in the Mennonite.)

Herbert Stauffer made a stirring address on our Home Mission work. Our Conference is a group of 3500 people. At $2 per member we would have the sum of $700 and could support all our missions.—Harvey Baum spoke on problems of our Home for the Aged. The monthly expenses are $600 and each year there is a deficit in spite of careful management and generous contributions. This is because our rates are not high enough. One solution would be to charge guests a weekly rate as do many Homes.

Rev. Freeman Swartz, Schwenksville, read the last paper on "Objectives for the 1937 Conference". "In my county only one out every four Protestants is in church." So we can see our work could easily be four times as large. We can learn lessons from other denominations, but beware of following others in the way of rituals. The Old Mennonites choose their ministers by lot and look upon their pastor with reverence as God's choice. Why should not we look upon our ministers in the same way, as a result of His leading, if we are His faithful followers?

At the close of the afternoon session the ladies of the Perkasie church served a luncheon with coffee to all the guests.

The Perkasie congregation is one of the smallest in the Eastern conference. Because of this they do not have accommodations to entertain the large convention groups. Thus they miss the enthusiasm, fellowship, and encouragement that comes from the large gatherings. For these reasons it was a real treat to entertain and attend this quarterly conference, and we trust we may have the brethren come to Bethel Church soon again. Correspondent

Bluffton, Ohio

The campus of Bluffton College was a center for numerous committee and church group meetings during the week of the Bible lectures from February 7-12.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, February 9-10, the Middle District ministers held a retreat under the direction of President A. R. Keiser. On Tuesday, the ninth, the Witmarsum Seminary Board held its annual business session.

A conference for ministers of the community and those present on the campus was held on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, sponsored by the local ministers association. The ministers to address the group were the Rev. Otis Harter, Pastor of the Olivet Presbyterian Church, Lima, Ohio, who spoke on the subject "The Fascination of the Book"; the Rev. F. B. McIntosh, Pastor of the First M. E. Church, Findlay, Ohio, who spoke on the subject "The Minister, An Effective Speaker"; and the Rev. E. W. Bloomquist of Lima, Ohio, on the subject "A Strategy for Religion." On Saturday, February 13, the Retreat Committee met to plan tentatively its program for this year's retreat.

The Bible lectures were given by Dr. A. C. Wieand, of Bethany Biblical Seminary of Chicago, whose morning lectures dwelt on various aspects of prayer and whose evening lectures were expositions of scripture.

To the readers of the Mennonite: Greetings!

We are happy to report that we are enjoying many spiritual feasts under the able leadership of our pastor Rev. Philip A. Wedel. The sermons are full of gospel truths and offer much food for thought. They are a spiritual uplift and an inspiration. At present Rev. Wedel is at Beatrice, Nebraska, where he is completing a Teachers' Training Course and also conducting evangelistic services. Rev. Edgar Toevs is supplying the pulpit in his absence.

Our church experienced a very sad accident when Betty Lou Tiahrt, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Tiahrt, was fatally injured through a school bus.

During the Christmas season we again had the privilege of listening to a Christmas program by the children. Our choir of fifty voices also rendered a Christmas cantata to an appreciative audience.

We have had plenty of snow and cold during the month of January. We are thankful that the weather has moderated considerably.

The Ladies' Mission Society has been meeting in the different homes for quilting. Proceeds of the work are to be used for missions. Correspondent

SERMON SKETCH

CHOOSING A DEACON*

Freeman Swartz

"For they that have used the office of deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus." (I Timothy 3:13)

The word deacon means—"one who waits or serves."

In the matter of selecting a deacon scripture gives us three great facts which should be considered. They are (1) The Nature of His Work; (2) His Qualifications; (3) His Reward.

I His Work

The office of deacon came into existence early in the history of the church. It was created to relieve the apostles from the strain of administering the material affairs of the church. Acts 6 gives the whole story. The number originally chosen was seven.

Besides administering to the temporal needs of the church, these early deacons, spirit-filled men, soon were active in the ministry of the word as well. Stephen became the great defender of the faith, even to the cost of his own life and Philip, the faithful evangelist, was the first to carry the gospel to the sons of Ham.

II His Qualifications

These are recorded in two portions of scripture, Acts 6 and I Timothy 3:8-13. "Look ye out among you men of honest report and full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom." Later in writing to Timothy, Paul is very specific as to this honest report. It refers to the deacon, his wife and his household—the trinity of the family.

Personal—(1) "Grave"—that is serious minded; (2) "Not doubled tongued"—not using words with two meanings, ambiguous speech, a man of conviction—spoken conviction, not talking on both sides of a question; (3) "Not given to much wine"—which in view of the great curse that alcohol is today—had better be "not given to any wine!"; (4) "Not greedy for filthy lucre"—not taking of tarnished money, tarnished not from age but questionable as to principle—it should be earned money; (5) "Pure conscience"—this refers to matters of faith.

Companion—only four qualities are mentioned for the helpmeet. (1) "Grave"—same word as for husband; (2) "Not slander"—not gossipy—the word is strong—diabolos; (3) "Temperate"—self control, in matters of dress and conduct as well; (4) "Faithful in all things"—this refers to the household duties (cf. Proverbs 31). No mention is made of doctrinal position.

Family—The deacon, as any other head of a family, is responsible for the conduct of his children and his servants. (1) "Husband of one wife"—not polygamous, nor divorced, which is licensed polyagmy; (2) "Ruleth well household"—refering to the business affais—the matter of debts is essential in the life of a deacon; (3) "Ruleth well his children"—of course the deacon's family life and their conduct is important!

III. His Reward

It is twofold. "He purchases" means, 'he layeth up" as a savings account: (1) "A good degree"—an honorable rank is the meaning; (2) "Great boldness"—liberty and freedom of speech, others will listen to his words!

Consider in this connection our two greatest deacons, (1) Stephen—The Martyr—"A good Rank" (2) Philip—The Missionary—"Great boldness".

May Mennonite deacons excell in these!

The Power of Jesus Over Death

John 11:1 to 22:11 Printed, John 11:23-28, 32-44

This outstanding miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead is of absorbing interest. It is an unanswerable evidence that Christ is God's Son and was sent by Him. Jesus' tardy approach to the scene did not in dicate any lack of love for Lazarus. When God allows us to suffer or does not answer our players as we desire, it does not indicate any lack of concern for us. We can not understand his purpose at times.

Jesus Comforted Martha vs. 23-28

As Jesus nears Bethany, Martha, sister of Lazarus, comes out to meet Him. She expresses her grief over his not having come sooner (v21). He comforts her with the promise of v23. Jesus had a great lesson to teach, namely, that against Himself, as Lord of Life, death had no power.

Martha thought He referred to the general resurrection in the dim, distant future (v24). She could not think of a present resurrection. Jesus answered her in the sublimely marvelous and comforting words of vs. 25, 16, "I am the Resurrection and the Life". Do you believe this? He would lead Martha to trust fully in Him who possessed all the power that can produce resurrection and life. He teaches us that eternal life through faith in Christ begins here and now and we may experience some of its joys. Through faith in Christ we begin to partake of it here. Martha declares her faith in his divinity (27). She is still not prepared to believe that He would actually raise her brother from the dead. Jesus is asking us today, "Believest thou this"? The faith we possess is to be used as a stepping stone by which we rise to larger, fuller faith, to deeper understanding (2 Peter 3:18). The person who truly believes in Christ has attained a fellowship with Him which will continue forever.

Jesus' Tender Sympathy vs. 32-36

Mary having been called by Martha, gave vent to her feelings in weeping aloud. She fell at his feet and greeted Him with the words used by Martha (vs 31, 32). Neither sister could understand why Jesus had not hurried to come and save Lazarus. Jesus had given Martha a wondrous promise and a glorious hope. He was moved deeply in heart emotions. He wept tears of love and heart sympathy in the presence of real sorrow, v 35. His heart was large with sympathy. So it is today. Personal sympathy, such as Jesus expressed, is much needed today.

Jesus' Word of Power vs. 37-44

Jesus, with a word of power, performs his most illustrious miracle, calling back to life one who had been dead four days. He alone could and can do that. He will raise the dead. But we must not expect God to do for us that which we can do for ourselves. "Take ye away the stone", v 39. There are many today dead in trespasses and sin whom Jesus would raise from spiritual death. He is calling, "take away the stone". Martha who still saw but "darkly" the truth of that which Jesus had said to her (vs 4,23), protested against Jesus bidding (v39). How little we understand the fullness of God's promises.

Jesus reminds Martha of his promises, v40, to strengthen her faith and then brings his miracle to a most impressive climax. He offers a brief prayer of thanksgiving (vs 41, 42). He knew his prayer was already answered, but that the faith of those seeing Him might be strengthened, he prayed audibly. Then with a loud voice he called unto the dead to "come forth" v 43. With a voice of authority, of assurance, he spoke as though Lazarus were already restored. The dead one, now restored to life, responded v 44. Death was powerless before the Lord of Life and gave up its victim. Many of the amazed spectators believed on Him. Another proof was added that he was indeed the Messiah. With their own eyes they saw Lazarus come forth to new life through the power of Jesus' word. Only Christ, the Son of God can hold the keys of life and death. Whoever joins himself to Christ by faith shall know the life eternal. "He that believeth in Me shall never die."

Both sisters said to Jesus, "Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother would not have died". Over against their "if" Jesus laid another; "Said I unto thee, that IF thou wouldest believe, thou shouldest see the glory of God". If we believe, we shall see and know.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

Karl Badertscher was born in the Jura, Canton Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 27, 1853 and died at his late home in Pandora, Ohio, early Saturday morning of a fall which he sustained from the stairs of his basement. He had gone to the basement to attend to the fires and on his return he fell with such force as to sustain a fractured skull from which he died three hours later without regaining consciousness. He had attained the age of 83 years, 6 months and 9 days. In 1884 he migrated to America with his wife and three small children and lived in this community ever since. Mr. Badertscher is survived by his wife, five children, twenty-six grandchildren and twenty-seven great-grandchildren. He was a faithful member of the Grace Mennonite Church for many years. He lived a reverent, devout and godfearing life, reading the Bible and religious books again and again. Funeral services were conducted at the Grace Church on Feb. 8th by his pastor, Rev. Paul E. Whitmer.

It pleased our Heavenly Father to take from this life Miss Katie K. Augspurger, born in Trenton, Ohio, March 16, 1861. She was a life-long member of the Mennonite Church of that village, always manifesting an interest in the Church and the cause of Christ. She had been in ill-health during the past year, and had been bedfast during the past three weeks. At the time of her death Saturday, January 30th, at 2:30 a. m., she attained the age of 75 years, 10 months, and 14 days, leaving to mourn her death her brother A. K. Augspurger, 2 nephews, 1 niece, several cousins, and a host of friends.

During the absence of Rev. Amstutz, the funeral services were conducted by Rev. H. H. Jung, pastor of St. Paul's Evanglical & Reformed Church of Middletown, Ohio, on Monday, February 1st.

May the God of Peace and Love comfort and strengthen those who are in mourning at this time.

Anna Goering, daughter of John Wedel and Mary Prieheim Wedel was born on August 11, 1864 in the State of Volhynia, Poland. In 1874 she came with her parents to this country. On the site of what is now Moundridge, Kansas, they settled and here she spent her youth.

At her baptism on April 19, 1878 she united with the Hopefield Mennonite Church, transferring her membership to the First Mennonite Church of Christian at Moundridge, Kansas, in the fall of 1883. Her marriage to Joseph C. Goering took place June 25, 1882. This union was blessed with 14 children, eight daughters and six sons. Two of the daughters preceded the mother in death.

About five months ago she suffered a light paralytic stroke. Though she rallied somewhat, her strength again waned, and she passed away on January 30, 1937, aged 72 years, 5 months and 19 days. She trusted in Christ and found comfort and strength in Him. As a kind, god-fearing mother her memory will ever be blessed by her six daughters, six sons, 27 grand children, two great grand children, one sister and two brothers and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held from the First Mennonite Church of Christian, her pastor, P. P. Wedel basing the message on Psalm 42, 3 in German and on Phil. 3, 17-21 in English.

THE TESTIMONY OF THE ROCKS

P. J. Wedel

To the average observer a rock is apt to be just a rock. One rock may differ from another in color, in hardness, in texture and in other ways but to many people rocks are mostly cold, lifeless objects devoid of much interest or significance. But put a piece of an ordinary metal, such as copper, or a common rock, such as marble under the microscope and you may experience the surprise of your life. For what the microscope reveals is not a structureless, disorganized mass but an array of exquisite crystals, more beautiful in form, more artistic in their setting than human mind could conceive or human hand could construct. Examinations of other rocks similarly reveals an infinite variety of structural forms and arrangements, but little if at all, less marvelous than the marvels exhibited in the organization of living beings. No, rocks are not the dull, uninteresting things they may seem to be on the surface. Not only do they generally reveal a definite structure, but by their disintegration they form the soils in which plants grow, and biologists tell us that animals and man are dependent upon plants for their continued existence. Thus rocks form an integral part of the scheme of living things: from rock to soil, from soil to plant, from plant to animal and to man is an unbroken series, the higher depending upon the lower but all a part of a general scheme. They all consist of different combinations of the same elements, they are all definitely organized, some more some less complexly, they are all useful to man in a thousand ways and they are all subject to the same general law of disintegration and decay.

No, rocks are not merely the lifeless, almost meaningless things we may be inclined to consider them. In their texture, in their properties, in their uses, in their life history, in their place in the general scheme of things in nature they point as truly to a Master Mind that planned, and to a Master Mind that executed as do the more varied and complex things of the living world.

IT COULDN'T JUST HAPPEN

Can you imagine a Ford car without a Ford Motor Company to manufacture it; or a Ford Motor Company without a Henry Ford to conceive and direct it? Of what use would one, or a hundred, modern transport planes be without pilots to fly them and mechanics to keep them in flying-shape? A car or a plane is a simple thing in comparison with that realm of things we call nature.

What is there in nature that necessitates a Mind to direct it? Here is one thing that is forceful.

> R. A. Gortner writes in his Outlines of Biochemistry, "Perhaps no more striking illustraton of the exactness with which vital reactions are regulated in the living protoplasm can be given than the fact that, through untold generations, a given organism reproduces the same—proteins which characterize that organism. The fact that each species has a different set of proteins is not the surprising thing. The surprising thing is that nature is able to control the synthesis of proteins within a single species, so that the same protein is synthesized by all member of the species."

Those words take on significance when we learn that a protein is, chemically speaking, a very complex substance. A simple one might be composed of fifty links, each link representing a chemical compound in itself. In order that our problem shall not be too hard, let us say that there are only nineteen different kinds of links among those fifty; that some of them are repeated a number of times. Then how many possible different arrangements would there be of these fifty links? A hundred? a thousand? a billion? A billion would only be the start—the number would be written as two with forty-nine zeros following it. And yet each plant invariably produces its own unique proteins, generation after generation. This explains, in part, what Moses meant when he wrote, "the tree yielding fruit after his kind."

Such things don't "just happen." The implication is obvious.—John S. Congdon.

He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city. — Proverbs.

"In astronomic space, he (man) is a speck of foam on the crest of a single wave in the midst of the Pacific Ocean."

So one scientist explains the relative importance of man in the universe. "How then," asks the college student, "can I expect so great a God as made and rules the universe to listen to me? How can I believe in a personal God?"

Another scientist has answered the question this way. "The law of electricity works the same way for the mighty machines in the great factories and in the twenty-five watt electric bulb in my home. Is God more limited than electricity so that He is interested only in a sun a mile across? There is neither size nor time nor space with the Infinite. Everything is equally important." — C. E. World Quarterly.

TOPIC: Reasons for Praying

Matt. 26:41; Luke 18:1-8

The Quiet Hour

M., Feb. 22: One reason for praying. Matt. 8:1-4
T., Feb. 23: Prayer of thankfulness. Ps. 103:1-13
W., Feb. 24. Prayer connects us with God. Eph. 2:18-22
T., Feb. 25: Prayer brings light. Acts 1:12-26
F., Feb. 26: Prayer in deep need. Acts 12:1-9
S., Feb. 27: Pray when in perplexity. Ps. 73:1-17

A Prayer:

Breathless, from the fruitless hurry of the day, we stop to breathe the freshness of Thy Spirit, Lord. Weary, our faltering, misled steps turn at last into the Way. Starved, in the midst of this world's goods, we let our soul feed on the fatness of Thy Word. Ye, at Thy green pastures we find the satisfactions which our souls desire. Joyously and freely and without restraint we bring to Thee the fruits of our achievement, and share with Thee the joys of our accomplishments, knowing that Our Heavenly Father finds joy in His children. Full of every good and perfect gift, life leaves nothing to be asked of Thee. We thank Thee for the peace, quiet, and power, and fullness of these hours in Thy presence. Thou art our All in All. Amen.

———:-:———

In our last Sunday's discussion we tried to see the scientist at his best. Lo, we found him very near to God! This Sunday we discuss a topic which, on first thought, seems a million miles from that of last Sunday. We can almost hear you say, "From one extreme to the other!" From Science to Prayer!

But is it?

We tried to show last week that the scientist, by a peculiar twist of nature, finds by studying the finite that he ends up with the infinite. Whether he works through the telescope, or through the microscope, or through the test tube—to measure the world's bigness or to measure its minuteness—he comes at last to the conclusion that what we call matter is nothing but a beautiful balance of forces, which are NOT MATERIAL.

The end of the material is become spiritual!

Where science ends, faith begins, and prayer is the heart's way of speaking with its Creator. Do you agree with that rather off-hand definition of prayer: Prayer is the heart's way of speaking with God.

(And when we have said that we have done away with a lot of rigmarole which one often hears from the lips of those who can tell us a lot about prayer, but who never pray.)

"Out of the fulness of the heart, the mouth speaketh." Full of what? sorrow, joy, hope, despair? Whatever it is, "out of the fulness of the heart," the mouth speaks with God as with a fellow-man. Blessed suddenly with the results of his labors after many years of toil, man's heart wells up within him, and his gratitude knows no bounds, and he cries to God as that One alone who can understand his joy. Broken suddenly by the billows of life's sea, not knowing the reason Why or Wherefore, man's spirit seeks fellowship with One who DOES understand. Puzzled by the intricacy of life's pattern of forces, for good and for evil, man's mind looks to a SUPER-MIND, a first cause, from whence flow power, justice, and right. Groping in the half-light of an imperfectly informed mind, he looks for the full light of God within him. Lonely, and without moorings, he seeks something about which he may pivot himself and his life—seeks a permanent and abiding point of reference, so to speak, by which he may take his bearings in a fast-moving world.

Through prayer! As a drop of ink spreads in a moment to the farthest corners of a vessel of water, so the impulses of man rush through the spiritual media of the universe and find God, his Maker.

Why pray? Well, primarily, because you can't help it. Live your life. Live it to the full. Live it any way you please. In the end you will find that LIFE REALLY BEGINS when the heart seeks God. Life begins—WHEN YOU PRAY.

YOUR GOSPEL

You are writing a gospel,
A chapter each day,
By deeds that you do
By words that you say.
Men read what you write
Whether faithless or true.
Say! What is the gospel
According to you?

—Author unknown

Problems and Projects

1. A teacher at a summer school wrote to his wife how he had spent Sunday: "For a long time I have wanted to make a study of various types of prayers in the Bible, and this afternoon I spent the entire afternoon, classifying the prayers. It is amazing how different the prayers of the Bible are when you begin to study them." What types of prayer can YOU find in your Bible?

2. A prominent Mennonite minister said in a series of lectures, "Israel is a TYPE of man growing in his conception of God." Make a study of the prayers of men at widely different periods of history in the Bible, to see whether such a growth of spiritual conceptions reveals itself in the prayers of God's great men and women.

3. Under what conditions did Jesus pray? Do we have a sufficient number of instances given us of various situations to be a guide for us? Let someone search through these prayers and classify them.

4. A lively discussion usually results when you raise the question: Is conscious prayer essential? Is it possible for a person to lead an upright and blameless life without conscious, directed prayer?

5. Has our conception of God anything to do with answered prayers? Give illustrations, either actual or conceivable, showing how our prayers will be governed by our conception of God.

6. What are the pre-requisites of a prayer that will have fruitful results?

7. Search out songs that are prayers and develop them into a program, either by giving history of them, singing them, or praying them.

8. Pick out some great prayer in the Bible, other than The Lord's Prayer, and compare these two. Do you find certain basic likenesses? What are they?

9. What were the prayer habits of the great men and women of history whom you admire? A splendid testimony program can be built around this little question. All of us respond readily to the noble in others; we find it easy to say, "Moody did so-and-so; I find this true also in MY life." There are many people who need just such a little open gate through which to make a personal testimony. The program committee can very often get good results when, like the modern salesman, they make it easy for members to respond.

10. What illustrations can you give of how NOT to pray?

INTERMEDIATE CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

February 28, 1937

Topic: Always Doing our Best. Eccl. 9:10; Prov. 10:4

Daily Quiet Hour Readings

Feb. 22 Jesus, the supreme Worker. John 9:1-7
Feb. 23 Recognition of the worker. Matt. 25:14-29
Feb. 24 Laziness, the road to poverty. Prov. 6:6-11
Feb. 25 Inspired workmen. Ex. 31:1-11
Feb. 26 Honest work. I Thess. 4:9-12
Feb. 27 "Not slothful in business." Rom. 12:9-11
Feb. 28 Always doing our best. Eccl. 9:10; Prov. 10:4

Pre-prayer Circle

The officers and leader meet with the superintendent for fifteen minutes of meditation and prayer before the meeting. Use I Cor. 3:9, "We are laborers together with God," to suggest a few thoughts. We do not work alone. We are dependent upon God. Through prayer we seek His guidance and help

A Suggested Plan

I. Song Service

A. The leader's remarks. Mabel and Ruth were Work"

II. Announcements. President in charge

III. Worship Service

Topics announced, by the leader
Instrumental prelude: "I Would Be True"
Scripture call: "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might." Eccl. 9:10
Hymn: "Give of Your Best to the Master." (Ask three Intermediates to offer prayers as you pause between the stanzas of the song.)
Poem: "Be the Best That You Can"
Offering: "Freely Ye have received, freely give"

IV. Discussion of Topic

A. The leader's remarks. Mabel and Ruth were going down the steps of the school building. "If I had only known," Mabel was saying, "that those papers for English were to be handed in, I would have taken more time to prepare mine." "But she told us to do our best," Ruth reminded her. "Yes, but I didn't know they would be graded," lamented Mabel.

How many times the expression, "If I had only known," reveals that we have not done our best. If I had only known we would have visitors. If I had only known it would be my last chance. The five foolish virgins probably made the same excuse. Our discussion is to help us see what keeps us from doing our best and how we may overcome these hindrances.

B. Bible references from the daily readings

C. Questions for discussion

1. On what occasions are we often tempted to be satisfied with less than our best? Give examples
2. How much does pay or a reward enter into the type of work we do? Should that determine the quality? Why not? Illustrate
3. How does well deserved praise stimulate one to do his best? Do we need recognition to do our best. Why?
4. Is it honest to do anything less than your best? Why then do we fail at times to do our best? Who is the greatest loser?
5. How can we keep ourselves at our best?

What are some things that build up our efficiency?

V. Closing Moments

Quotation: "Never content yourself with doing your second best, however unimportant the occasion." General Sheridan

Hymn: "Living for Jesus." (Let the group read silently the third stanza while the piano plays. Sing the chorus softly)

Benediction prayer: "Let the words of my mouth, and the meditations of my heart, be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength, and my redeemer"

INTERMEDIATES! GET ACQUAINTED

How would you like to have friends in Mennonite churches in other states? Someone to whom you can write letters, and who will write to you. Well, you can do just that. The members of several Intermediate societies have already begun such correspondence.

If you are interested, this is what you must do to get started: send (1) your name (2) address (3) age (4) some special interests, such as music, reading, gardening, etc. (5) the state or states to which you prefer to write, to Miss Emma Ruth, 1049 West Ave., Reedley, Calif. The name and address of an Intermediate, whose acquaintance we think you will enjoy making by letter, will then be sent to you. This is especially for Intermediates of high school age (12-18).

JUNIOR SECTION

Facts

Sometimes we marvel at their absence. They are, as it were, skeletons which we clothe with attributes and attitudes and tendencies and ideals; which we clothe with life. What a sad picture is clothing without something to give it frame! What a sad picture when those who have attended Sunday School since childhood become builders of homes without having a sure foundation to meet the demands of that life; without possessing the knowledge even of simple Bible facts. Where is the fault? Has our teaching been too superficial?

The Junior absorbs facts. He takes pride in accumulating them. It is as though the soil is especially prepared for the sowing of facts which, when rooted surely, bud forth with life in Intermediate years. In our Endeavor work, are we teaching? May God make us not only leaders but TEACHERS, lest we fail to put into the soil the seeds for which it was prepared.

Measuring

Children like to measure growth. They will stand back to back to see who is the taller; they will stand against the wall and leave a pencil mark at the spot of their stretching capacity. The next day a second mark will appear above the first, not because there was growth over night but because the heels were higher or the elasticity was more. Juniors like to measure growth. They will enjoy, also, to measure the growth of mind and heart in things spiritual. It is with this in view that the following program is suggested.

Program Suggestions for February 28, 1937

Jesus and I

1. Pin-ons
   Could be in the form of a miniature ruler with the verse "Grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour"
2. Poster
   Could show someone measuring themselves. Most interesting to Juniors would be not a cut from some magazine but a jett drawing with the question "How much have I grown?" Added to this could be the invitation to come and find out
3. Setting
   Since no books will be needed for the opening songs, the lights could be put out and one candle be placed as the only illumination
4. Seating
   Because of the contest there will be the need of special seating which will safe-guard against later commotion. The children should be seated in two even sides; these sides could be designated by two different colors in the pin-ons
5. Opening service
   1. Introductory remarks by leader using candle as an illustration of Jesus in the midst of the group; how He gives out warmth; how we must draw near to feel Him
   2. Drawing Near: meditation while singing from memory the January and February songs: "Tell Me the Story of Jesus" and "More About Jesus". Lights on
   3. Treasures. Fill a small beautiful box with gem verses from the heart of Jesus. Pass this "treasure chest" with music accompaniment. When each one has drawn a verse, Follow that hunch! Fill in the coupon, clip it, send it, and we'll do the rest!

Bennie Bargen,
Bethel College, Kansas

I want the following to read THE MENNONITE regularly. Perhaps if you sent him a sample copy he would subscribe. Our young folks need it.

Name ....
Street ....
City .... State ....

the music ceases and the verses are read

4. Thanking for these treasures. Use hymn "More Love to Thee" humming it once and then singing verse one

6. How Much Have I Grown?
   1. Make a question box. Prepare questions on material studied in past months. These should be fact questions only and questions based on Bible material. (In the near future we should have a drill on mission enterprizes and "who is who" in our conference.) Twenty-five questions should suffice. To guard against commotion let the groups remain seated. If there is an odd number, let that one do the drawing of questions. Otherwise the leader can take charge. The question is drawn, each group is asked in turn, the one answering right receives the slip. One in each group receives all the slips. When all questions have been drawn, each side counts their slips to determine the winning group. The contest is then repeated. I suggest this repetition for the sake of memory and attention
   2. Measuring the Heart—heart talk by leader or pastor stressing the need of "growing in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour" and making plain the steps by which we grow, closing with the thought: Jesus and I,—we must be one

7. Closing moment
   1. In unison sing "Just As I Am" verses 1,2,5
   2. Closing prayer

FOR ME TO LIVE, by Alice M. Ardagh

Whether you credit or discredit such statements as "She imbibed some of the modernistic heresies that are taught in our colleges"; "The movies are tawdry, I could not ask Him to share my life in them"; "God was behind that World war with a very definite purpose of His own"; or "The Hitler persecution is but one of God's instruments," you will be fascinated by the 200-page love drama in which Christianity, love and consecrated living enter into and transform gay lives in Hollywood.—M. Gratefully acknowledged,

Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz, Treas.

The housing boom in Great Britain continues at a peak despite recent rumors of a slackening. In England and Wales, 340,000 houses were built in 1936, a new record. Britain has just inaugurated regulations which limit the number of persons sleeping in a house in proportion to the number and area of rooms. Two or more persons of opposite sex above the age of ten, unless husband and wife, may not sleep in the same room. British liberal newspapers say these are half-hearted measures, but here they sound startlingly advanced.

In contrast to the terrible persecutions of Mennonites and, in fact all Christians, going on in Russia the Mennonites of Poland are enjoying full religious liberty. A Mennonite, Gustav Ratzlaff, reports that they had excellect Christmas programs consisting of dialogues, declamations, and songs in worship of the great event of Christ's birth. According to an old custom they had church services on three successive days. (Vorwaerts) And Poland is a Catholic country. What a difference between this and bolshevistic Russia!

A meeting of the officers of Christian Endeavor Societies of the Western District will be held in the Bethel College Chapel on Sunday, February 28th, 2:30 P. M. The officers of the C. E. Convention wish to confer with the local leaders regarding plans and aims set at the last convention might be best realized. Last minute information on plans for the forthcoming Retreat, Institute of International Relations, and our Foreign Missions Project will be presented. Each society is urged to be represented.

A free-will offering will be appreciated.

Recently the Mennonite Church at Coaldale, Alberta, Canada, dedicated its newly-erected church. Building operations were begun six years ago when Rev. Jacob Gerbrand, now at Drake, Saskatchewan, was leader of the church. At that time the size of the building seemed to be sufficiently large for present needs, but the growth of the church and Sunday school necessitated the enlargement of the original plan. The work on the church was done mostly by its members and neighbors. The fine large church, sufficient for all needs, stands in a commanding location on a much-traveled highway as a monument to the thrift and devotion of its loyal members and as a great help to the spiritual life of the community.

Professor W. H. Hohman, head of the music department of Bethel College and director of the College A Capella Choir of fifty voices, is also directing the choir of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas. At the Eden Church near Moundridge, Kansas, he is directing a large chorus in preparation for the rendition of an Easter cantata.

The reporter of the Alexanderwohl Church sends in the following: We hav a weekly Bible class under the direction of Rev. P. H. Unruh. Recently the Intermediate C. E. Society and the Junior and Senior Societies have given very interesting programs. Our Sunday school has an enrollment of nearly eight hundred. We have fourteen classes for Juniors, and twenty-two for Seniors. During the month of January the attendance was lowered considerably because of cold, snow, and ice, and sickness. We are pleased to announce that the Lehigh Men's Chorus has recently given us a good entertainment in song. (Notice of C. J. Eitzen's passing under "Deaths")

The First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, has purchased one hundred Mennonite Hymn Books. They were dedicated to the service of the Lord in a short but impressive service on the first Sunday of the new year.

L. L. Harms of Upland, California, was so fatally burned while handling smudge pots to temper the freezing temperature of a citrus orchard that he passed away at the hospital to which he had been rushed.

In the citrus regions of Southern California the damage done by the extremely cold nights for the state is estimated at $60,000,000. Not only the immediate fruit crops have been destroyed, but many of the trees have been killed. The temperature sank as low as 30 and even 20 and 18 degrees Fahrenheit in some localities.

A difficult problem would be created if there were another short crop of wheat. World stocks are low after a cycle of drought years, and European nations are scrambling to build up reserves against war. Italy is reported to be a large buyer, and Great Britain seriously talks of accumulating a year's supply of wheat and storing it at inland points.

OBITUARY

Betty Lou Tiahrt, youngest daughter of Henry and Nettie Tiahrt, was born July 21, 1928, at Aberdeen, Idaho. Betty Lou left home to attend school on January 11 in the morning as usual; she completed the day's school, but she could not return home again. She had left her earthly home for the last time. Because of the injury received through a school bus, she was taken to the doctor who gave her all the possible medical aid; but life ebbed away on January 22, exactly eleven days after the fatal accident. She reached the age of eight and one-half years.

She leaves to mourn her sudden departure her father and mother; two sisters, Valera Mae and Joyce Jeanette, and one brother, Henry Kenneth; one grandfather and grandmother; and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. P. A. Wedel from the First Mennonite Church on January
Wedel from the 1st Mennonite Church on January 24.

Betty Lou

The Master walked in His garden,
A beautiful flower was His quest;
He knew that sin always hardens,
So he looked for the fairest and best.

The Master searched from morn till night,
A white lily was found at the close of school,
With her face all shining and bright
Was it, could it be, our own Betty Lou.

Yes, My friends, the Master said,
I need her in the heavenly land;
And don't forget that she is not dead,
Her voice is heard on the celestial strand.

The Master will come again some day,
Will He take you or will He take me?
Oh, may we all walk in His way,
We should all live holy, don't you see?

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

Central Asia is a region so remote from the regular tourist travel lanes that we seldom hear of it. Guarded by the world's highest mountains and most forbidding deserts it is a land that only the hardiest travellers can ever hope to see. Yet the mere mention of Central Asia conjures up the name of such famous men as Genghis Khan, Marco Polo the Venetian traveler of the Middle Ages, Sven Hedin the great Swedish explorer, Sir Aurel Stein the great English archeaologist and many other conquerors, traders, travelers, scientists, archeaologists and missionaries. For nearly twenty year I have been reading every book on Central Asia that I could borrow or afford to buy. And of all the books on Central Asia that it has been my privilege to read, none has been quite so fascinating and inspirational as the book SOMETHING HAPPENED by Mildred Cable and Francesca French.

SOMETHING HAPPENED is a Christian classic that should be ranked with the greatest books in the field of missionary literature. Of all the missionary books I have read, only John G. Paton's Autobiography, a biography of William Carey and a biography of David Livingstone can compare with this extraordinary tale of adventure, hardship, danger, suffering and joyous witnessing for Christ. It is refreshing in this day of cynicism, religious doubt and moral chaos to read the experiences of these three frail English women who march straight onward through crowded cities and lonely deserts often in peril of their lives, telling even the bandits whom they meet of the world's only Savior. Again and again they come to what an ordinary traveller would consider the end of the road or the end of their lives, but always "something happens" and God mercifully spares them and leads them on to still greater victories because they have put their trust in Him alone.

There are those, even among missionaries, who feel that opportunity and occasion for high adventure and great risk in missionary work is a thing of the past. To them it seems that trains, good roads, automobiles, telephones, electric lights and the other amenities of civilization have reduced missionary life to mere routine. At least that is the impression one gathers when one reads such misleading books as the reports of the so-called Appraisal Commissions which were published five or six years ago. Suffice it to say that the writers of such books have never been far from the beaten track nor have they ever been called upon to see and do what these intrepid women saw and did in Kansu and Sikiang.

After briefly relating the early lives of the two sisters, Evangeline and Francesca French, and their faithful companion, Mildred Cable, the book goes on to tell of the Boxer Rebellion, the return to China, the happy years on a mission station in Northern China, the call to Kansu, the years of labor in this province and in Central Asia, and finally the desparate flight from the terrors of this bandit-infested region by way of Siberia and Russia. Again and again God definitely closes one door and opens another. Again and again they see souls saved and lives transformed. And when they are called upon to suffer, they do so in the spirit of the early apostles. (See Acts V, 41). Always "Something Happened" when human resources could not meet the situation and when they got back to Europe, to Germany and England, they found that in every instance somebody alone or in a group had been praying for them at the very time God stepped in to help them out of their difficulties.

Many otherwise splendid missionary books are ruined by the style of the author or the overemphasis on certain things that may seem mighty important to the author but have no interest for the reader. Such is not the case with this book. These two women have written several other interesting books that might well be included in every private or church library. They are as follows:

AMBASSADORS FOR CHIRST (paper binding)	$ .50
THROUGH THE JADE GATE AND CENTRAL ASIA	2.00
A DESERT JOURNAL	3.00
THE MAKING OF A PIONEER (A biography of another Central Asia missionary, Percy Mather)	2.00

But of all these books none is so well written or so full of appeal for the average reader as SOMETHING HAPPENED. (Price, $2.00)

The Literature Committee of the Women's Missionary Societies of the General Conference has for some time been urging each Sewing Society and local women's group to establish a Memorial library for the use of its members. SOMETHING HAPPENED is an ideal book for such libraries as well as for our various church and Sunday School libraries. This book and the others mentioned in this Book Chat may be purchased from National income for 1936 was sixty billion dollars, an increase of fifty per cent over the low point of the depression, and seventy-five percent of what it was in 1929. But if we reach again an eighty billion dollars national income, we shall not have regained the prosperity of the late 1920's. The population has increased by eight million since 1930, and the average age of our population keeps rising. Our national income would have to be eighty-five billion dollars if we would want to live in the style of the late 1920's.

Germany is tightening her determination to become completely self-sufficient in food supplies, partly by eating less, partly by growing more. New projects are being announced for the reclamation of the three million acres of waste land in the Reich.

Il Duce is grooming a successor—his son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano. Dynastic succession has never been much of a success unless reinforced by the superstition, prestige, ermine, and pageantry which grow up around royalty. Today the crowds are chanting "Ciano! Ciano!" but tomorrow they may be chanting some other name.

The National Safety Council makes the following report of accidents and fatalities: Accidents cost the nation $3,750,000,000 in 1936. Fatalities on the highways and in the home rose to the new record figure of 111,000 as against the 1934 record of 101,139. Motor vehicle accidents caused 38,500 deaths which is an increase of 1500 over the 1935 high record. Fatal accidents in the home mounted to 39,000, an increase of 7500 over the 1935 figure.

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, FEBRUARY 23, 1937 NO. 8

THE OTHER SHOULD NOT BE LEFT UNDONE.—We have a letter from Rev. David Toews, who recently visited the churches of the Eastern, Middle and Western Districts in the interests of Home Missions, particularly the work in Canada and the projected book depository there. In this letter he voices his surprise that some of the largest churches (as well as smaller ones) have not yet taken any collection for the depository, although he says, they have explicitly promised to do this.

It is our duty, better, privilege to give in support of foreign missions, home missions, schools, publication, relief, hospitals, and what not. In order that all these activities may get their adequate financial lift, the conscientious giver necessarily has to observe some system in budgeting his giving. No doubt we will all agree that ordinarily the bulk of it should go to foreign missions. When the writer was conference secretary, 1922-26, the ratio between the budgets of foreign and home missions was four to one. The present secretary says, it is approximately three to one, now. That means that the foreign mission budget calls for three dollars to every one dollar that should go to home missions. May it not be that after we have given the three dollars to the foreign mission work that of the one dollar to be set aside for home missions there could be a small part of this one dollar spared for the book depository in Canada? No doubt if everybody gave systematically that could be done.

Perhaps what Jesus said to the Pharisees, could be made to apply here, "These things ought ye to have done, and not leave the other undone." We have spent tens of thousands of dollars upon Christianizing a few scores of American Indians. And who would dare to say that the money thus used was not well spent, and that it has not brought blessings to the churches? But, if we could so liberally support that work, doesn't it seem as though we should unitedly be able to spare $1500.00 for the enterprise in Canada? In our giving we should strain ourselves to the utmost to support foreign missions, especially now when the fields in India and China appear to be ripening. But, Brethren, let's not forget home missions. For doesn't God's Word admonish us to do it, when it says, "Let us do good unto all men, especially unto those who are of the household of faith." And do not our immigrant Canadian brethren belong to this latter class?

THE MENNONITE is our General Conference weekly paper. It brings to its readers news, inspiration, information, and suggestions from many of our churches and missionaries. Those who read it regularly somehow become a part of a large family who are trying to uphold a great tradition and heritage for the sake of God's Great Kingdom, and for their own sakes. Only as we stand united as one strong body can we effectively uphold that for which our fore-fathers were willing to sacrifice their lives. Let us read the Mennonite regularly and keep that little flame of a great historic faith burning brightly.

If you haven't seen a copy of the Mennonite recently you will be surprised at many changes that should prove to make it a weekly paper of interest and inspiration in the home of every family.—W. H. S.

CHILD LABOR—Apropos the child labor problem, I maintain: Child labor should not be forbidden, but regulated. In factories, it should be seen to that young workers work under healthful conditions and that they are not exploited. In the cotton fields it is different. I grew up in one, so to speak, and so did my brother and sister. Cotton picking is not hard work at all, only somewhat tedious. . . I think back to our childhood days. How happy we were! We usually sang in the field, or hummed a tune, and the livelier the tune was, the faster our hands flew from one fluffy ball to another, often trying to beat each other picking, and making a game out of that . . . I do not know anything about work in the beetfields or factory, but this much I know from experience: that if a child does not learn to work while young, chances are ten to one he will never learn. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, but all play and no work ruins him for life, makes an idler out of him, or a drone who thinks the world owes him a living.—Mrs. M. Becker.

ENCOURAGING REPORT FROM BASNA, INDIA

By Clara L. Kuehny

I can say from a true heart that the Lord has been with us the last three months and helped out of many a difficulty. There have been trying times and busy times, but everything is working out for good. I have not done any great work nor anything that much can be said about.

The school, boarding and hospital, have been under my care as before. There are 120 pupils and the most of them are under ten years of age. This year the fourth class pupils and those classes above have been sent to Janjgir and Birra. Last year at Christmas time there was an upheaval in the school and the teachers are now all local people, children of the first Christians, that were baptized by Mr. Wiens years ago. They had been sent north to the schools and can now help with teaching and other work. It's a very good arrangement, to have teachers and leaders of the same people that are now coming to Christ and have to be taught in school or in adult classes. These young leaders know enough about Hinduism and how they were depressed formerly, what change has been wrought and what Christ does for those that leave the old and follow Him. So now they can really feel for the new Christians, that have come to Him and are seeking better things.

In the Boardings, there are fifty-five children to care for and feed, and it is especially these that have the attention of our teachers and caretakers. About half are children of the new Christians and in some ways they are little heathen in the true sense of the word. The workers appear to have taken an especial fancy to them and show them love in every way. I really marvel sometimes at their patience with them, in teaching them what they ought to do and not to do. The children respond very quickly and most of them are very teachable. It is a joy to see them grow. The physical growth is probably the most outstanding, because the homes from which they come are almost without exception very poor and they need extra food. Even though they are not overfed in the Boardings, it soon tells in their appearance that they are being fed better.

The hospital work needs the doctor very badly and many people are waiting for him in the villages, for operations and other help. It will be some time after the doctor's return, before all can be taken care of. (Dr. Dester has been there now since December.) It takes time for people to do things in India. The last few weeks several very difficult cases have come to the Hospital and some went away very much benefited for which only the Lord receives the glory. There is a great possibility to reach the people that come to the hospital, but so frequently there is not sufficient help to do so when the patients are with us.

WE MUST DO SOMETHING

Recently a clergyman asked a group of school children in Chicago, "Where is Bethlehem and who was born there?" Not one of the children could answer the question. Nicholas Murray Butler, whom we do not usually regard as an authority on moral questions, has become a staunch advocate of unsectarian religious teaching in the schools. He urges that one afternoon each week be set aside for the religious instruction of school children by parents and churches. He pays high tribute to the churches for the work they have done in America, and insists that the Bible and the great teachings of religion are such a vital part of modern life that they cannot be left out of any well-rounded system of education.

Unless the religious educational forces of the country bestir themselves, America is headed straight toward an atheistic state like that of Russia, only by a different road. The decline of religion in that country, and the rise of atheistic communism to the throne, came through the neglect of moral and religious training by the Greek Church. Ignorance and superstition inevitably lean to a godless state and godless society. In this country, literary illiteracy is steadily decreasing, but moral illiteracy and religious ignorance are steadily increasing.

The lack of such teaching in the schools is believed by many of our great educators and statesmen to be the reason for the crime wave that is sweeping the country. Millions of our children come from homes in which no religious training is given. Unless they receive this in the schools, they go out into life lacking utterly the moral training which will fit them to be good citizens. Many of the educators who, years ago, favored the banishing of the Bible in our schools, are now demanding its return as a preventive of the continuance of the crime wave.—The United Presbyterian.

You have to BELIEVE in happiness,
Or happiness never comes.
I know that a bird chirps none the less
When all that he finds is crumbs.
You have to believe the buds will blow,
Believe in the grass in the days of snow.
Ah, that's the reason a bird can sing—
On his darkest day, he BELIEVES in spring!

You have to BELIEVE in happiness.
(It isn't an outward thing.)
The spring never makes the song, I guess,
As much as the song the spring!
Aye, many a heart could find content
If it saw the joy on the road it went,
The joy ahead when it had to grieve,
For the joy is there— but you have to BELIEVE! —Douglas Malloch

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

3. Is it needed? "In the future the world is going to need better-trained men with greater character, and the Christian college is the institution that must produce them. I have sixteen colleges on my list to which I have given large sums."—James J. Hill.

"So far as we know, history has no instance of a national character built up without the aid of religious instruction."—Edward C. Sisson.

"To a man who believes in the Christian religion the Christian college is not a duplication of what the state is doing, but an essential addition. It covers the whole personality of man instead of limiting itself to a part of his faculties."—Pres. J. A. Marquis.

"Christianity has been the mother of all modern education."—James McCosh.

"Religion, morality, and knowledge being necessary to good government, schools and the means of education shall be forever encouraged."—Act of Congress, 1787.

"All the New England colleges were born of the Christian impulse and on the theory that the Christian church owed a duty to society in the matter of education."—Pres. W. O. Thompson.

Bluffton College

The Men's Gospel Team of Bluffton College spent the week-end of February 13-15 in visiting a number of churches in Indiana and Illinois. The group consisted of Donald Gundy, Stanley Fretz, Harleigh Rosenberger, Andrew R. Shelly, Albert E. Bohrer, and Dr. I. W. Bauman, faculty advisor. Meetings in Illinois were held at Washington, Meadows, Flanagan, North Danvers, and Normal. On the way home the group stopped at Berne, Indiana, for a service Monday evening. Harleigh Rosenberger and Andrew R. Shelly were the speakers.

Rev. Grover Soldner who accepted the post of field secretary for Bluffton College some time ago expects to move, with his family, to Bluffton by the first of April.

Paul W. Stauffer, a member of the Bluffton High School faculty for six years and this year a member of the College faculty, has been elected treasurer and business manager. Mr. Stauffer is a member of the West Swamp, Pennsylvania, Mennonite Church.

Bluffton College is broadcasting regularly on Friday of each week over the Lima, Ohio, new radio station.

Bethel College

The fourth annual meeting of the Bethel College Fellowship was held in the college chapel, February 7. In spite of bad country roads, nineteen churches were represented, the most distant being the town church at Beatrice, Nebraska. The treasurer's report showed that forty-four churches secured 1542 Fellowship members who contributed $47,205.41, an average of $4.10 for the 11,504 church members represented. These forty-four churches furnished 190 students for Bethel in 1935-36 and 189 in 1936-37, an average of 1.8 percent per one hundred church members.

The Kansas Institute of International Relations is again to convene at Bethel College, June 8 to 18. Some of the speakers already secured are: Leyton Richards, England, on "The Religious Approach to World Crises"; Sidney B. Fay, Harvard University, on "America and the European Crises"; Y. T. Wu, Peiping, China, on "America and the Far East"; William T. Stone, Washington, D. C., on "Neutrality an Escape from Crises"; and others. In an International Forum like this it would seem proper and fair to secure a German Nazi to tell us his people's side of the story, since our American press gives us mostly the other side.

"THE BOOK"

Sir Walter Scott was right. You remember the story how when he was dying he said, "Bring me the Book." Some one asked, "What book?" His reply was, "There is only one Book. That is the Bible."

Yes, there is only one Book. Only one persistent, powerful, purifying Book. It is persistent in that it has lived through the centuries, sometimes with the whole world lined up against it. It is powerful in that it has altered nations. It is purifying in that it has cleansed the character of world defilement, making the drunkard sober, the prevaricator honest, and the immoral righteous.

How frequently the world makes unintentional acknowledgement of the character of the Book. While riding in a train, after a time of conversation with an attractive young man, the writer gave him a New Testament, securing a promise to read through the Gospel of John three times. As soon as the young man had given the promise, he said, "I suppose I am foolish to promise to read this, as it might spoil my business." Of course, I aked, "What is your business?" "The liquor business," he replied. Aren't you interested that he realized the Book would not fit with his business?

How much time do you spend reading the Book? Have you ever called it to the attention of your friends?—Exchange.

MEDITATION

"The Root of the Peace Problem"

"Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer." I John 3:15. "I pray that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge." Phil 1:9.

Why is it that the war problem has not yet been solved in spite of all efforts? Because by far the great majority of those who work for peace do not go to the root of the matter as the Scripture does.

All peace efforts that do not begin at the heart are like efforts to close a volcano's crater. All men are by nature selfish, and selfishness causes strife and hate. The best law furnishes only restraint, which is all right as far as it goes, but it does not go to the root of the matter, and is no cure for hate and war, as both experience and the Scriptures, and also psychology, prove. Only psychology today makes the mistake of condemning such restraint of evil tendencies as harmful. It is no more harmful than hunger was to the prodigal son, or the Mosaic law was to Paul. Paul says of the law that it is "holy, just, and good," in spite of the fact that he had to confess, "When the commandment came, sin revived, and I died." (Rom. 7:9). So both doctrine and science agree that the law is no cure, however much the two may disagree on other points.

What then is the cure? If hate is murder, as Jesus says, then whatever cures hate will end murder. Love is the antidote for hate and is the main cure. If love solves the peace problem, the next question is how to get hearts filled with love. That makes this problem a love problem, which is the most difficult of all. But even love alone will not solve the problem because many Christians with love in their hearts have participated in war. How was that possible? Because Christ's teachings on war and peace have not been studied sufficiently. Here also Hosea's complaint is true: "My people are destroyed for a lack of knowledge." (Hosea 4:6). Paul saw this need of knowledge also very clearly as a help to solve the problem of love as the above passage shows. Christians generally know that "Faith worketh by love," and often emphasize faith as the root of love, but the connection between knowledge and love is not sufficiently emphasized. This is necessary to solve the peace problem because it solves the love problem.—P. H. Richert. (To be Continued)

A LETTER TO THE PRESS

The editor received a fine letter recently from Rev. H. J. Krehbiel who enclosed the following editorial for the Peace Page. It was previously published in the Fresno Bee.

There is a great danger of another European war. No. 10 Downing Street, London, Wall Street in New York, and the munition manufacturers are already broadcasting their propaganda to get us into that war. The slogan this time is not as it was in 1917, "to make the world safe for democracy," but, "the democracies of the world must stand together." The only thing that can keep us out of the next European war is a strong mandatory neutrality law, and it would be a very helpful thing if every American citizen would write a letter to each of his Senators and his Congressman, requesting them to insist that Congress pass such a law at this session.

RELIEF NOTES

O. O. Miller and A. Warkentin

These notes are being written on Parana river steamer enroute from Asuncion to Buenos Aires. Five years three and a half months have elapsed between the two visits to Paraguay. On both visits we used the special Ford truck on the Casado narrow gauge railway for the ninety mile stretch west from Puerto Casado, the river port. From here, on both visits, we found an auto available for the 67 miles to Fernheim. This time it was an army truck on one of the many new roads built during Paraguay's recent war. However, any possible trip to the colony is still one of the most gruelling, uncertain, tiresome experiences imaginable. The Colony's transport problem is a major one, and must find some better solution.

As we entered the Colony, one of the first surprises was to note the amount of cleared and fenced land—also the better roads within the colony and connecting the various villages. Villages 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and the central town Philadelphia were laid out and built since the former visit. On every hand were multiplied evidences of the tremendous amount of energy and hard work put into the building of their new Chaco home.

January should be midsummer in Paraguay—but again the rains were late, and one felt a fear—almost a panic—as to what a repetition of last season's drouth would mean. Everything seemed to hinge on next season's cotton crop. About 3500 acres had been planted or were ready for planting—this besides the larger than previous acreage of peanuts, kafir, corn, beans, melons and maize. And then grasshoppers—from every direction they seemed to come—immense armies of them—still too young to fly—but leaving a 10 to 15 acre field of cotton plants a foot high, in several hours time without a speck of green. From Philadelphia orders were given that no one was to leave his village for any but emergency reason. The whole village organized to fight the plague. First, second and often third line trenches were dug about the growing fields and, as these filled with grasshoppers, were covered with earth and new ones dug. Men, women and children, through holidays and Sundays, joined in this battle to save next season's crop. During our ten-day's visit about 5 inches of rain fell. As we left, two-thirds of their crop was still safe from the grasshopper—everybody was busy replanting the destroyed areas—and withal there came new courage again.

But our first meeting with the Colony leaders gave clear evidence that because of the past few difficult years many had given up all hope that the new home could be successfully established in the Paraguayan Chaco. This group was still tremendously concerned that the Mennonite Central Committee and the brethren in North America understand and appreciate their position—and again and again expressed their own appreciation of all the help extended them since their exile from Russia—and that in their plans to leave Fernheim for some other Paraguayan settlement, that their fellowship with those remaining at Fernheim and with us in America might continue as Christian brethren; but the decision to leave had seemingly been settled.

In this spirit the further meetings of the ten days were held. The last session showed that about 200 families were determined to stay, about 150 had decided to leave, and the remainder, 50 to 75 families, were still undecided. Our present trip was mainly for the purpose of helping the Colony acquire the land on which they had settled. But now this problem became only one of many. As best we could, we endeavored to interpret the Central Committee's mind and attitudes. With the staying group a plan for land purchase and payment was worked out, the final outcome of which depends on later developments in committee contracts, at home. In the interests of those who want to leave, we interviewed the President of Paraguay as to available lands and the implications of their Privilegium. To all the Paraguay brethren we expressed the feeling that the North American brotherhood is above all else interested in seeing church and spiritual interests maintained, conserved and developed, and of our feeling that in the time ahead any help from America could possibly serve those interests in Paraguay best through their church and mission organizations at Fernheim—the mother colony.

The neighboring Mennonite Colony (Canadian) has similar problems. A large part has already moved further north.

The total Mennonite population in the Chaco—including those who plan to leave—is about 2125 Russians and 1800 Canadians—and in the other settlements together perhaps 250.

It is getting to be more and more apparent that the three great nations of the old world—Japan, Germany, and Italy—which are doing all they can to ward off Communism are gradually drawing together and getting ready for an attack upon Russia, the hotbed of Communism and Atheism, with its terrible meance to the Christian faith. The same Reds are largely the cause of civil war in Spain.

France is said to be ready to return to Germany her former colonies in Africa over which she has a mandate, namely Togoland and Kamerun, provided that Germany will promise to be good forever after and give up all plans of expansion in Europe. These colonies furnish iron, rubber, oils, lumber, furs, and agricultural products which Germany so badly needs.

IS THERE NEED FOR MISSIONS IN THE WORLD TODAY?

Mabel Bechtel

A paper read on the evening of Nov. 8, 1936 in a Student Volunteer deputation program in the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas.

While thinking upon this topic I began asking myself, just what do we mean when we speak of Missions and Missionaries? I can readily recall when the word "missions" to me meant some place in far away India, China or Africa where missionaries went to preach to the heathen people about Christ. I did not realize that it might be some place right near us, and that in reality I was a missionary myself every day of my life. True, one who goes to the foreign field to preach the Gospel of Christ to those who have not had the opportunity of hearing of Him, is a missionary. However, we need go little farther than our own back door to find groups of consecrated Christian people who are giving their lives so that others who for one reason or another have not yet found their Savior, might do so, and then organizing these people into groups or churches where they may continue to grow in spiritual life and receive Christian training and fellowship with others who love Christ too. Is this not a mission?

Someone may ask, why take Christ to these people, they are quite satisfied with their religions as they have them. What effect does the Gospel have upon the countries or parts of countries to which it is taken? It is more to these people than just their religion. It raises the social and economic status of the people and gives them something to live for. Tribal warfare is greatly reduced or abolished. Education is brought to them and, as a result, people can rise from the mass of illiterates and find something worthwhile in life. Thus these groups have an uplifting effect upon their country and slowly but surely the government will be forced to take notice.

When we pause to think about this topic, we feel quite ashamed that anyone should have any doubt about it. Christ, in his great Commission to the Church said, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature". Are we doing that today? In the nations that we call Christian are we really doing it? Let us make a brief survey of the world and see how much of it has had the message of Christ brought to it.

Outer Mongolia, Russian Turkestan and other Asiatic Soviet Republics, Tibet, Nepal, Bhutan and Afghanistan are all provinces in Asia into which missions and missionaries have never penetrated. Out of the five hundred and sixty-two states in the Indian Empire at least five hundred have not been entered by Christian missionaries. During the last fifty years most of Africa has been open to missions, but recently difficulties created by Roman Catholic governments are raising barriers and are making work by Protestant missionaries well-nigh impossible in their territory. Many South American Republics are following the example of Mexico in prohibiting most of the activities of the foreign missionary. The major part of the interior is without evangelical witness, and the position of the foreign missionaries is becoming increasingly difficult. In China large parts of the country can not be reached.

Why are these facts so? In many places in India the rulers of the provinces refuse to let the missionaries come in. Mongolia and some of the other Asiatic Soviet Republics have always been inaccessible and because of religious fanaticism have never been occupied. In Africa the message of Christ has at times been brought to the natives, but flatly refused. Mr. Jenkinson, of the Unevangelized Fields Mission, tells how he came into an African village one afternoon and soon realized that much good might be done there. The village chief listened to him for two or three hours and then told him he would hold a council meeting with the head men of the tribe that evening, have them hear the message and then decide whether they want to hear it further. The council meeting was held and then a meeting of all the people in the village. Their decission was, "We do not want you; we do not want your message."

Now let us come to our own United States and look at it. We are called a Christian nation, meaning that we, the American people, are true followers of Christ in our social and economic as well as spiritual lives. Yet, are there not places in our own country where many people have never truly heard about God and Christ, and seldom speak of Him unless it is to take His name in vain? Go into the slums in New York or Chicago. Have the little street urchins and poverty-stricken people there, the scum of the earth we call them, ever had the chance to hear the Gospel of Christ or have it taught to their children? Go into the mountains in Tennessee. Have many of those mountaineers had the opportunity to hear the Gospel regularly and enthusiastically? I wonder if while striving to Christianize other countries, we are not overlooking those in our own country who have a hunger for the Gospel message if we would bring it to them.

Is not the Mass Movement of the Untouchable Caste in India toward Christianity one of the most positive evidences that these countries not only need but want the Gospel of Christ brought to them? These people are turning away from Hinduism toward Christ in such large numbers, because their religion has placed them so low down in life that they can barely eke out a mere existence and it is impossible for them to rise above it. In looking for that which would bring them up to the level of human beings rather than that of a dog, they are turning to Christianity because they see in it a new life, the life for which they are hungering but can not have in Hinduism.

After thinking of these things, can we any longer question whether there be a need for missions in the world today? Rather let us ask ourselves what we can do to reduce that great need.

SERMON SKETCH

H. Albert Claassen

SO GREAT A SALVATION

"Work out your own salvation with fear and trembling: For it is God that worketh in you both to will and to work for his good pleasure. R. V. Phil. 2:12, 13.

1. Our own salvation, what does it mean to us?—Have we made sure of it with fear and trembling? Do we care for it? We live in an age of careless ease. To care for our welfare beyond the limits of this present life is rarely the burden of our efforts. The philosophy of an ever enlarging number of people is, "The world owes me a living," and "a God of love cannot condemn anyone." So people sit back and partake of every sort of pleasure that comes along, discriminative of nothing that is base and evil. In this attitude of our day lies the peril of losing our salvation. The Holy Spirit bids us, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling.

2. Salvation a work of God, rescuing us from all that's involved in our sinning. The Scriptures teach and we believe that we are saved by faith in Jesus Christ and his shed blood. Salvation is the free gift of God to all them that believe. Yet this salvation must be worked out in the life of the believer to produce in him a new creation (creature). A faith that produces no change in the believer is no salvation. If our faith does not regenerate us into the likeness of our Saviour we have not yet experienced its saving power.

3. Faith that saves changes the destiny of our lives, from hell to heaven. For which destination are we bound? Jesus bids us travel on the narrow way. Did we enter by the strait gate? By what do we reveal this? Is our present life a testimony of the power and reality of our salvation to those who deal with us daily? If its power is not sufficient to change us then we had better stay in the world.

4. Salvation is a way of life. Its power must be worked out with fear and trembling in our every day manner of living. A believer's life must be faced Godward and his back upon the world, the flesh and all its lust. Fear and trembling must characterize our devotion, service and worship by which we please God.

5. Salvation is a way of life. Its power must be treasure given us by God. By this we are become God's very own. Not that we wear it as an ornament, but we use it to prove God's power to save us, to keep us saved and to make us a blessing. Someone has to put it this way:

> Salvation is free but not cheap.
> It costs God the best He had to give, to provide it.
> It cost Jesus His all to bring it.
> It costs the sinner all he has to receive it.
> It will cost man his soul if he does not accept it.

Sunday School Lesson

The New Commandment

John 12:12 to 13:38 Printed: 12:20-33; 13:34,35

Jesus has returned to Jerusalem for the Passover festivities in the triumphant Palm Sunday procession. On Monday occurs the second cleansing of the Temple and on Tuesday He is again in the Temple, teaching. In our today's lesson, John singles out a notable incident of this day.

Certain Greeks would see Jesus vs 20-23

These Greek-speaking proselytes had come to Jerusalem, to the Temple, to worship (v20). They much desired to see Jesus, speak with Him and hear Him. Likely they did not realize the full significance that lay in meeting Him. On our really seeing Jesus depends our salvation, eternal life, and our likeness to Him (John 3:14; 6:40; 20:20).

The seeking Greeks desired Philip's assistance in meeting Jesus. The followers of Jesus should always be able and ready to direct a seeker to the Christ. The words of these Greeks express the deep heart yearning of human hearts everywhere. People do want to see Jesus and they expect us, his followers, to direct them to Him.

Life through Death vs 24-26

Jesus sees in the seeking Greeks a foregleam of the Gentiles seeking to learn to know Him. Before this was possible, the wall of partition between Jews and Greeks must be removed by His atoning death on the Cross (Eph. 2:13-16). He sets forth the law of life through death, about to be fulfilled through Him. This was His last day spent in public. The great hour, the climax of His life, is now at hand. His death on the Cross, followed by His resurrection and ascension to the Father would reveal His glory. His death is a triumph, not a defeat.

The grain of wheat, in dying in the ground, gives life to more grain (v24); so Jesus must die that He may give the abundant fruit unto eternal life to all who believe in Him.

In order to bear worthy fruit in our lives, we must be willing to die to self, to sacrifice selfish desires for the good of others (v25). If we set our hearts upon our own lives, hoarding up our powers and opportunities, using them selfishly, we shall lose all (v25). If we spend our life freely for others, for Christ, we shall increase our lives and keep them unto eternal life. The servant of Christ must willingly follow where He leads, even to Gethsemane and Calvary, if he wants to be with Him in glory and honor (v26).

Struggle and Victory vs 27-33

Up to verse 27 Jesus has spoken of the glorious side of His death. Now, as He thinks of the critical hour, the awfulness of it stirs His soul to its depths of agony for a brief time (v27 cf. Matt. 26:38). His humanity is clearly revealed. However, this did not cause Him to waver for a moment in doing the Father's will. "For this cause came I unto this hour." He came to accomplish redemption for man; His life was lived for that purpose. In His prayer He is not seeking deliverance from suffering, but the Father's glory. The prayer is answered at once and audibly by the Father Himself (v28). The answer was for the people's sake (v30), that they might believe. The voice speaks today in God's Word, but not all hear and believe.

The New Commandment vs 34,35

In these verses, spoken in the upper room on His last night with the disciples, He leaves with them a new law of life—the law of love for one another (v35). This commandment is new in the sense that it is based upon a new motive—Christ's love for us, even unto death. Moses had said that we should love our neighbor. Christ says that we shall love one another even as He loved us. We are to put our neighbor before ourselves, live sacrificially in behalf of others. This love is leading people to the ends of the earth to serve others. This is our Lord's all-inclusive commandment, the one unfailing proof that we are indeed disciples of Jesus (v35). Such love sinks all of self into the background and Christ becomes the central reality in life.

There is but one measure of Christian love—the Christ of Calvary. He is the only one who has ever constrained sinful men to give up their sins. His is a love that really does conquer and redeem.

Some men wear a uniform, badge or button to show who they are. Others reveal their occupation by their clothes or tools. But the mark of a Christian is love for and towards others.

Practical truth

True love for Christ will cause us to love others to the extent of sacrificing for them.

Prayer

Dear Father, Help us so to love others that we can forget self more. Help us to be willing to love others. In Christ's name. Amen.

CORRESPONDENCE

Burrton, Kansas, February 16, 1937

Our pastor Rev. W. Dyck has started a catechism class. We are indeed happy that so many of our high school girls and boys are attending.

A Junior C. E. is beng organized. This is our first attempt to organize our Juniors. We hope through lively interest to be able to educate the children in Christian ideals. The Senior C. E. is sponsoring the indexing of our church library. We are grateful to the members for such a liberal donation of books. Special Bible study service will be held soon in our church under the direction of our pastor.

A mixed quartette of young people gave a program of sacred music over a Hutchinson radio station recently. We hope to hear these young folks again in the near future.—Minnie Richert, Corr.

This is the first news to go to the MENNONITE from the Enid, Oklahoma, Mennonite Mission, so I believe we may quite properly tell our friends throughout the country something about our "church." The Mission is a Western District Conference Project under the direction of its Home Mission Committee. Rev. H. N. Harder is in charge locally and is admirably fitted to handle the situation as it presents itself here.

Our services are held in a residence which is so arranged that it can be adapted to use of the church needs. The "house" is becoming too crowded with our increasing attendance, and we will soon have to have larger quarters for our meetings.

At the beginning of 1936 we had only two Sunday School classes. Now, in the second month of 1937, we already have six classes. Our attendance is steadily increasing. During the last quarter it has increased from an average of 35 to about 50.

The annual meeting of the Mission was held on the afternoon of December 27, following a "family" dinner in which most of the group participated. At this meeting the Mission Committee, which handles the business affairs of the church, was elected. The election of Sunday School officers also took place, as well as the transaction of other necessary business.

During the past year the following missionaries and ministers have visited the Mission: Rev. P. H. Unruh, Goessel; Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Dester of India; Rev. and Mrs. W. F. Unruh of India; Rev. J. H. Epp, Hillsboro; and Rev. H. A. Fast, Bethel College. We enjoy such visits very much, and the attendance at these special meetings is always very good.

First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minn.

Barely has the new year begun and we hear about the tragic floods of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys and again of the flood of Southern California. At the same time we have not forgotten the severe drought of the Northwest during the past summer. Everywhere comes the cry, help! and the plea, give! I believe God speaks to humanity in this way to draw our attention to him and to the higher realities of life—the soul and eternity. In our church eight people passed into the great beyond during the past year. 1937 already has claimed three. One of them, Miss Marie Rempel, was totally helpless for many years. She could not move herself nor could she speak above a whisper. The time for her departure came February 2.

At our Annual Business Meeting it was again unanimously voted to have the Secretary's Report of the church published in booklet form.

The following information is taken from this report: Church membership, 348. Eighteen young people were baptized and added to the church during the past year, in addition five were received by letter. The total enrollment in the Sunday School is 367. Financially 1936 has been the greatest in the history of the Sunday School. All the other branches of the church, such as the Christian Endeavors, mission societies, choirs, etc., were more active, both spiritually and financially than before. The total income for the entire church and its organizations was over $4,000. However, when we survey the fields of service we must cry out, Lord give us eyes to see and willing hearts to do and to give, for what we have done is but little of what there is to be done.

At the annual meeting the question regarding English services was also considered. A language census was later conducted and in all probability action will be taken on this matter at a special business meeting in the near future. It was further decided to purchase a new organ. The Committee has under consideration the Hammond Organ and Everet Argatron. Whether one of these or a still different organ will be purchased also will be decided in the near future. A considerable amount of money has already been donated for a new organ.

Visitors at our church were frequent, both in the pew and in the pulpit; of the latter we mention the following: Rev. Albert Claassen, Marion, S. Dak.; Rev. P. P. Wedel, Kansas, chairman of the Mission Board; Rev. Wall from Nebraska; Rev. J. B. Epp; Rev. Henry Fast, field representative of the General Conference and others.

As it was 25 years ago Nov. 12, that the present church building was dedicated, the congregation celebrated this event Nov. 15, with special services. This is the second church building on the same place, the first having stood exactly 28 years.

A YOUNG MENNONITE LOOKS AT HISTORY

by Theodore Voth

"The only means by which the Church of the Mennonites can keep its spiritual entity and increase the scope of its influence is by infusing the world at large with its doctrines, its practices, and its followers. . . ."

History is an interesting study in itself. The great value of history, however, lies in its application to present-day and future affairs. It is true, indeed, that history never repeats itself. There are certain factors which will forever remain unknown, perhaps the most important of which is the human mind. Nevertheless, there may often be so great a similarity between present times and a particular situation of the past that certain courses of action may be definitely eliminated as unfit for consideration and certain others may be considered as the only means through which a beneficial outcome will result. One may deny the value of history as much as he will. The simple fact remains that every individual's actions depend upon a knowledge of his past life.

Let us observe some actual illustrations of the use to which history may be put. History is subject to the law of continuity. This makes it impossible for any sudden change to occur in our social and political order. This truth should prevent us from being discouraged at the seeming slowness with which a more equitable social order, culminating in the Kindgom of God on earth, makes inroads into our present system. The law of continuity must be supplemented by the law of development. There was growth in the transition from the submerged, enslaved individual of feudalism to the free, enterprising individual capitalism.

In many respects this transition was desirable. Now we see this growth being continued in the curbing of an exaggerated individualism, whose expression is at the expense of other individuals in society. We can do our part in promoting this growth.

A third law of history may well be discussed in considering the position of the Mennonite Church. This is the law of change. The nature of the Period of Reformation made it necessary that the Mennonites preserve their spiritual heritage by strict resistance to secular authority. Both Catholic and Protestant princes bitterly opposed their teachings and persecuted their members. To maintain their spirituality, particularly their doctrine of non-violence, the Mennonites were obliged to resort to group seclusion.

Through the centuries, however, changes have occurred. Man has had successively to adjust himself to his ever-changing environment. Since severe religious persecutions by secular authorities are now a thing of the past, we, as Mennonites, can no longer make our greatest contribution to civilization through forced isolation. The Master Himself said, "He that would save his life shall lose it." The Mennonite tradition, if not offered to the world, will stifle itself. The only means by which the Church of the Mennonites can keep its spiritual entity and increase the scope of its influence is by infusing the world at large with its doctrines, its practices, and its followers.

In such fashion, then, history should not be regarded as a relic of antiquity. It should rather be regarded as a subject of vital necessity in solving the problems of mankind.

MEET TED VOTH

For convention's sake we had to say this article was written by Theodore Voth. The plain truth is it was written by just plain Ted Voth, one of the finest young chaps the Mennonites ever produced. He is a son of Missionary Voth. He had his early schooling in India, and there is reason to believe it was good schooling.

Graduate of a Mennonite College, he is now in Kansas University, doing graduate work in History. But he will never distinguish himself more than he did as a college student—interested always in the good, the fine, the true; teachers and students alike are uniformly proud of Ted.

COLLEGE YOUTH MOVES OUT

"If ever college students are to become leaders, they might as well start in early. Let the College serve its people."

From our Mennonite colleges come more and more frequently news items indicating that the NEW EDUCATION is taking hold. The NEW EDUCATION is really not new, and yet it is new—new in our own generation. The new idea in education is that school is not a preparation FOR LIFE—it IS LIFE. And the new trend is not so much bringing life to the classroom, as taking the student out where men live, and learn life at its source.

Freeman Junior College sponsors a fifteen-minute program of gospel singing on Sunday afternoons. The program goes on the air at 3:45 o'clock, Sunday afternoons, over station WNAX, Yankton, South Dakota. The Gospel Singers sing each Sunday except the fourth Sunday of the month. The singers are a girls trio and a mixed quartet, made up of college students. The two groups alternate in rendering programs. Their director is Mrs. Grace Hermanson, music instructor at the College.

At Bethel, the S. C. M. (Student Christian Movement) moves ahead with definite plans for serving the churches of her area, as well as new, different, vital programs through which beats a new pulse. One of these is a worship program; another a peace program; and the third will be built around the theme of the Mennonites. The last named will probably consist of a panel discussion on the questions "Being a Mennonite," and "Why I Should Be Proud to be a Mennonite"

Such activities in our colleges may suggest worth while programs and projects to local committees for Young People in our Churches.

A Group Conscience

It is to be noted that the saints in Caesar's household were plural; they were a group. They stood together. How else could they have stood their ground in Caesar's court?

T. H. Green once said, "No individual can make a conscience for himself. He always needs a society to make it for him." Do you believe this? Is a man's conscience created by society? Does it help for him to choose the sort of society that stands for the highest ideals? Is it easier to keep following Jesus if we are friendly with people who are going in the same direction?

"But," argues someone, "to merely be a Christian group within a wicked world is selfish. It means introspection; always looking inward for our own good. This is a selfish sort of religion."

Is it? What happened to Caesar's household? It was abolished. The early Christian movement, made up of just such groups as those within Caesar's household, finally conquered the Roman Empire itself. The ancient glory of old Rome is gone; Nero's magnificence has crumbled to ashes; but the ideals of that little group of saints lives on! Because they were true to what they believed was the best, they changed the world. —C. E. Quarterly

"FOLLOW JESUS? IN A WORLD LIKE THIS?"

"Can anyone truly be a Christian in the World Today? Wars. Poverty. Sickness. Unemployment. Materialism. Machine Age . . . " .In the face of all THESE, you still say, "Be Christian"?

W. Mar. 3 — Following Christ's faith in God. Matt. 6:24-34

Sun. Mar. 7 — Topic: Answering "Follow Me" Today (Consecration Meeting)

A Prayer—

Our Father, Thou hast placed us in this world to live, not to escape life. In Thy plan it was, that we should have "life and have it more abundantly." Today, amidst world conditions that challenge the finest thought and spiritual fibre of man, we still believe that Thou art at the helm; that Thou art guiding man as his finer nature struggles upward to Thee; from Thee we can receive the power to live life right. We ask not for greater tasks, but for the God-guided WILL to do the tasks as we know they should be done; for the will to yield ourselves to that higher Mind which is ever good, just. and pure—yea, the Mind of Christ in us, and through us, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

The freer you feel yourself in the presence of another, the freer is he.—Lavater.

I Wonder—

Does Christ mean that we shall leave our tasks where we are and find other tasks? Shall we leave our homes and opportunities of service where we now are, and go into the foreign field of mission work? Does he mean we shall leave all and go elsewhere?

Or does He mean that we shall leave OUR OWN plans for our homes, OUR OWN plans for our jobs, OUR OWN plans for the office, shop, bank, or whatever it is, so that they may become so full of HIS presence, HIS power, HIS plans that men may know and recognize whose we are, and whom we serve?

What kind of a football team would it be, if all the members of the team were facing different directions when the signals were being called?

Did God place man in a wicked world, and then say "Follow Me," or did He place man in a good world, which has become bad through man's actions?

If through man's actions things have become all twisted out of shape, is it possible through man's actions to twist them back into shape? (Man's actions guided by God's spirit)

Is it possible to be a saint in Caesar's household?

While early Christians burned at the stake, Nero's court made a holiday of it, to watch them burn. Do you think it is more difficult to stand up for clean, straight-from-the-shoulder business dealings, than to walk up to the stake to be burned?

What would happen in our Mennonite communities if one young man or one young woman in every community would fixidly determine in his heart, "From now on, it's CHRIST ONLY." (And your editor suggests we Mennonites strike up a new song; let the term "C. O." mean, not "Conscientious Objector," but "Christ Only.")

"Can you follow Jesus today without trying to right the sins of society?" asks a young man.

Check the excuses which YOU have made yourself for not being as Christian as you ought to be:

1. I am too busy
2. I would lose my job
3. My family never insisted on it
4. No one else is
5. Not worth it
6. I am going to; I intend to
7. I was born with handicaps which make it impossible
8. Not expected of me
9. Our schools are to blame
10. You can't be Christian in an unChristian world
11. I'm too young to know better
12. I'm too old, it won't do any good any more
13. The way the laws are today, one can't do it
14. What would happen to my loved ones?
15. I think I AM a pretty good one, even if you don't
16. Mind your own business
17. What mankind hasn't been able to accomplish in two thousand years, must not be possible to accomplish
18. I am merely a little cog in the wheel; what does it matter?

Advance Preparation

A week before the meeting announce the topic. Ask the Intermediates to come prepared to answer this question, "What does Christ expect of me?" in the consecration meeting with a Scripture verse or in their own words. Have verses written out on slips of paper for those who may come unprepared.

To make the consecration meeting more impressive, place a large framed picture of Christ on the piano or on a table in front of the room. Illumine with a spot light or concealed flash light. During the consecration service, dim the other lights.

A suggested plan for your meeting

1. Praise in song
   A. "I've Found a Friend" B. "Trust and Obey" C. "I Am Thine, O Lord"
2. Society announcements. Tell something of interest about your next meeting
3. Quiet Worship
   Topic announced. Explain the plan of Scripture reading that follows
   Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us," stanza one
   Read Matt. 8:18-22
   Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us," stanza two

Read Matt. 10:32-42

Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us," stanza three

Read Matt. 16:24

Hymn: "Jesus Calls Us," stanza four Sentence prayers. Give brief suggestions for prayer written on slips of paper to several members before the meeting. Ask the superintendent to close the prayer time

Offering: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

4. The Topic Presented
   - A. The leader's remarks. The topic is a personal one. We must each answer it for ourselves. In detail it will be different for each one, but in general it will be the same as for the first disciples. We go to the Bible to learn what Jesus expected of them. We can also learn from later followers of Christ
   - B. Use the daily reading references for topics and others that you may select. Let each one answer the following guestions: 1. What did Jesus expect of his followers according to this passage? 2. How would you apply that today?
   - C. Assign to a few members the task of finding out what such men as St. Francis, St. Paul, Luther, Wesley, and Kagawa thought Christ expected of them

5. Closing Consecration Service

Solo or duet: "I Gave My Life For Thee" (Dim the lights so that the lighted picture of Christ may be more impressive.)

Testimony: "What Christ expects of me." Let each one take part with a verse or testimony. See advance preparation.

Hymn: "Have Thine Own Way Lord"

Benediction prayer: Ps. 19:14

HISTORY OF THE CHURCH TO BE SUBJECT FOR JUNIOR C. E. PROGRAMS DURING MARCH

As suggested in the issue of January fifth, programs dealing with the Church will be submitted for March study. It is our hope that these programs will clarify the child's idea of the Church, the place of the Church in the world and the place of the child in the Church; and that they will also awaken an appreciation of the Mennonite branch through the teaching of the principles which gave it birth.

General Outline for March

Theme: The Church

March 7: The beginning

March 14: Living still in spite of dungeon, fire, and sword

March 21: Faith of our fathers, holy faith!

March 28: Go ye therefore into all the world

Verse for the month: My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life. John 10:27,28

Song for the month: Faith of Our Fathers

The Beginning

Pin-ons and poster

Could be in a form suggestive of a church. The pin-ons could bear the verse for this month. The poster could show, besides the invitation, a corner stone with the words of Ephesians 2:20b and a foundation with the truth of I Cor. 3:11

Program Suggestion for March 7, 1937

Opening service in songs selected by chorister and prayer by leader

Study period. Aim: to acquaint the Junior with the historical founding of the church and what constituted the same

1. Introductory remarks as to study for the month by the leader
2. The beginning of the church foretold by Jesus—three juniors using the following scripture:
   - a. Matt. 16:16-18: first mention of the church
   - b. John 20:19-23: the preparation of a few
   - c. Acts 1:7-9: the birth of the church to be by means of the spirit
3. The beginning of the church—by a junior retelling Acts 2
4. Who is the Holy Spirit?—by leader. In a simple way make clear the work of the Spirit in the building of the church; His work in each human heart
5. Special music: "Spirit of God Descend upon My Heart", verses 1,2,4
6. Prayer spoken from the seat using the words of "Holy Ghost, with Light Divine"
7. Who could become a member of the church?—answered by two juniors
   - a. those who repented and were baptised, Acts 2:38-41
   - b. those who believed Jesus to be their Savior and were saved, Acts 2:47; 16:31
8. Three pictures of the Church found in the Bible —by three juniors
   - a. The Church as a body with Jesus as the head. Let this junior picture the relation of the members to the Head (Eph. 1:22,23; Col. 1:18; Col. 2:19) also the relation of member to member (I Cor. 12:12-27)
   - b. As a building of which Jesus is the cornerstone and foundation; a temple, a dwelling place for the Spirit, Eph. 2:20, 21. Let this junior also mention the false and true foundations, I Cor. 3:9-17

c. As a bride of Jesus, the Bridegroom, John 3:29; Rev. 7:6-9

9. Special music: "The Church's One Foundation"

10. What is the work of the church? This study could be put on the blackboard previous to the meeting as follows:

Would You Like to Help in This?
The Work of the Church

1. To worship God and glorify Him,—
2. To proclaim the gospel to all the world,—
3. To make each Christian grow more like Christ—
4. To be a constant witness for Christ and His Word—

At this time, the four juniors having been assigned these truths, come to the board in turn. Let them read the statement, fill into the blank space the reference supplied them, and then read the reference. These are: 1. Eph: 4-6; 2. Matt. 28:19,20; 3. Eph. 4:11-15; 4. Acts 1:8

11. The call. Sing in unison two verses of "Whosoever Will May Come"

12. Quiz. The subject of this program is difficult for juniors. It, nevertheless, presents truths that they should know. To make these their own will require drill. I would make a list of questions on facts presented thus far and drill them until there is ready response

13. Sing in unison last verse of "Whosoever Will"

14. Heart talk by leader on the subject: "The Church and the Junior in the church." Stress the truth of One Church. Show the child that in the church he is to learn the way to the Church of Christ and having found and entered, he is to lead others to find. Close with the thought that none shall enter heaven save they that are written in the Lamb's book of life; they who have washed their robes in the blood of his love

15. Closing meditation. Sing in unison "Is My Name Written There?"

16. Repeat in unison verse of month

17. Closing prayer

—The Upland, California, Church recently gave Mrs. Valdo Petter a shower of fruit and other things.

—I see the Mennonite is so full of good newsy and otherwise articles and items that I have just been silent and enjoying them all.—Mrs. J. B.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Dr. H. E. Dester wishes to have his address published in the papers as follows: Dr. H. E. Dester, Basna via Raipur, C. P., India.

—Here is a notice followed by good news: "Will you please change my address from Wooster, Ohio, to 99 Sherman Street, Harford, Connecticut. We go to Hartford about February 20, and I will take up my teaching in the Seminary about March 1 in the department of Systematics, Ethics, and Philosophy. The Seminary officials have been very gracious to me in granting me all the time I desire to recover my health. Recovery has been rapid and entirely satisfactory. Have gained seven pounds in weight and am again driving my car. I feel fine, sleep fine, eat fine—can hardly get enough to eat. Certainly I appreciate what the good people of Newton did for us." J. E. Hartzler.

—Prof. J. E. Balzer of Northfield, Minnesota, dean of Bethel College from 1913-1918, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Congregational Church of Crete, Nebraska. A graduate of Carleton College in 1910, Mr. Balzer took his theological training at the Chicago Divinity School and was ordained in 1914. He was assistant professor in sociology and also served as acting chairman of the department of religion at Carleton College. In going to Crete Mr. Balzer will participate in the life of another College town. Crete is the home of Doane College, and the church which has called Mr. Balzer as its minister is closely identified with Doane College, which was established by the Congregationalists.

—From the Annual Bulletin of the Swamp Charge of churches, Pennsylvania, we glean: The M. S. Rosenberger family presented a two-manual organ to the West Swamp Church. The Women's Organization bought and presented the chimes. The organ was dedicated with two largely attended musical services. The church is also featuring a Sunday School Teacher training class, with a membership of twenty-six. Two courses are given: "The Pupil," text Our Pupil by E. Leigh Mudge; and "The Old Testament," text Israel's Religious Development by F. B. Oxtoby.

—In the Church Messenger, Schwenksville, Pennsylvania, we read that the Editor is trying to condense in less than twenty-five hundred words what in newspapers and less arduously edited news would cover three times the space. Therefore he hopes that this effort in condensing will be accompanied with a care in reading. (The editor of the Mennonite has a similar experience and the same wish.) The same paper also says, "The Mennonite which gave us a shock in the first issue of the year has certainly improved in the last few issues."

—In accordance with a resolution passed at the last annual meeting of the Sunday School of the First Mennonite Church of Christian of Moundridge, Kansas, a Sunday School Teachers' Training course has been undertaken. Rev. P. P. Wedel is teaching the classes. They are following the courses outlined by the committee of School and Education of the Western District Conference. The courses being taught are Old Testament and The Pupil. Over thirty pupils have enrolled.—W. W.

—The Zion Mennonite Church of Donnellson, Iowa, has joined the three other churches of the town in union services which are held each Sunday evening through the winter months. A number of special programs have been given—one was a concert by the Griffith family of Fairfield, Iowa; the other a concert by the community choir. Both concerts were enjoyed by large audiences.—E. K.

—We certainly like the "new" Mennonite and, in response to your request for contributions, we enclose herewith articles . . . . W. C. A.

—In the Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska, Rev. A. W. Friesen is instructing a large catechism class on Sunday mornings during the Sunday School period. The four choirs of the church have been combined into one massive chorus for the rendition of a special musical program on Easter Sunday. The Bethesda Bible School will give its closing program Sunday evening in the church. Last Sunday the church took a collection for the Red Cross which amounted to $180.—J. J. F.

—The Mennonite Messenger for this month, editor Rev. W. H. Stauffer, Sugar Creek, Ohio, is again a remarkably artistic paper. It reports that the Young People of the church have organized a Dramatics Club, to study dramas, to prepare sketches and plays for study, for the dramatic development, and for the spiritual and moral welfare of the community.—The paper is again full of good, wholesome things. One of the articles entitled "Pastoral Letter" is so good that it is to appear in The Mennonite in the near future.

—Rev. Elmer Basinger of the Summerfield, Illinois, Church attended the Annual College Bible Lectures at Bluffton, also the Ministers' Retreat at the same place.

—English dealers who stocked up on souvenirs bearing the name or the likeness of King Edward—spoons, inkwells, china, and the like—thought they were in for severe losses. Instead they are now sold out, the public having seized the trinkets as souvenirs of an extraordinary historical event.

—European travel this year will equal that of 1929. It was feared that Edward's abdication might make a difference, his successor being a less colorful figure. Not so; all North Atlantic ship lines already have capacity bookings for Coronation sailings.

—Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Methodist missionary to Asia, is making a lecture tour of this country. One thing that he stresses very much is the need of all real Christians to make war on Fascism and Communism. It would seem that our first assault should be against our chief enemy, Communism, with its terrible fight against religion, specifically Christianity. Once we had rid ourselves of this evil, we could then take up issue with Fascism.

—I rejoice in the decided improvement and arrangement of material in the Mennonite.—L. H.

—The Missionary societies of the Halstead, Kansas, Methodist, Mennonite, and Presbyterian churches observed the world day of prayer for missions in a joint meeting on February 12. The meeting began at eleven o'clock with a prayer service. This was followed by a luncheon and a round-table discussion on various mission problems. The afternoon program was devoted to missions, the societies of each church discussing some phase of the work. A mission playlet was presented by a group of children. May God give us a missionary spirit; whether it is in home or foreign missions, church or community work, let us do what we can and remember Longfellow's words so applicable in these blessed days: "Out of the shadows of night the world rolls into light; It is day-break everywhere."—K. B. S.

—The Grace Church, Pandora Ohio, is planning a series of pre-Easter services with Rev. E. W. Bloomquist as the speaker. Following are the subjects of his sermons: "The Fool Hath Said," "The Hands of Jesus," "The Eyes of Jesus," "The Mind of Jesus," "The Strength of Jesus," "The Inevitable Christ," "I Saw the Lord," "I am the Way." The general theme is: 'Who Is Christ."

The Board of Managers for the Home for the Aged, Frederick, Pa., was holding a special Board meeting in Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, February 6th with the Executive Committee of the Eastern District Conference. Certain problems of admission and other related subjects will be considered.

The Women's organization of the Eastern Dstrict Conference composed of Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander, Pres.; Mrs. Jacob Unruh, Vice-Pres.; Anna Weiss, Secretary; and Margaret Stover, Treas. had a meeting at the home of the President on Saturday, February 6th to make a program for Conference which convenes in May.

The Program Committee of the Eastern Dstrict Conference, composed of Mr. V. C. Backensto, Allentown, Rev. W. S. Gottshall, Quakertown and Rev. Ernest J. Bohn, Souderton, together with the Conference President, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, held the first session, Feb. 4th, to prepare a program for the 139th Session of Conference which is to convene at the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, April 29th to May 2nd.

The Central Conference of Mennonites which made common cause with our Conference for two years, in publication, when our "Mennonite" and their "Christian Evangel" together appeared as a bi-weekly under the dual name, "The Mennonite and "Christian Evangel," are now publishing their paper as a monthly, with Rev. Wm. B. Weaver as editor. The "Evangel" brings wholesome material. A good deal of attention is given to Bluffton College, which the Central Conference has been supporting liberally with money and students.

A MAN IS POOR

If he is without friends
If he has low ideals
If he has lost his self-respect
If his morals are questionable
If he has lost his grip upon himself
If he is selfish, uncharitable or cruel
If he has forfeited his health for wealth
It his mind and soul have been neglected
If he has traded away his character for money
If he has a disagreeable disposition that makes enemies or repels his friends
If love of money has hardened him until the love of Christ and his Gospel fail to stir him to do his best for missions
If all his investments and possessions are laid up on earth and he has no treasures in heaven.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Mrs. Katherina Franzen (nee Quiring) was born March 28, 1882, at Goessel, Kansas. In the Christian home of her parents she received her early training. In addition she attended the district schools, private Bible schools, and Bethel College. On May 26, 1901, she was baptized upon the confession of her faith in Christ as her personal Savior by Rev. Peter Balzer, elder of the Alexanderwohl Church, and received as a member.

On August 23, 1908, she was married to J. H. Franzen, with whom she was privileged to share the joys and the sorrows of life for twenty-eight years. In 1917 the family moved to Hillsboro and joined the Mennonite church there, of which the departed remained a faithful member until her end. Three children were born—Dorothea, Wanda, and Ruth.

On Sunday morning, January 26 she suffered a light attack of the flu. On Monday February 1 she became seriously ill and after severe suffering, she passed to her reward at the Salem Hospital, February 4 at 8:00 p. m., at the age of 54 years, 10 months, and 6 days.

She was a faithful loving wife, a devoted Christian mother, and manifested deep interest in the church and its welfare, willing to lend a helping hand where possible. But owing to her weak health, she felt that her first duty and strength belonged to her family, where she served with a devotedness possible only to a Christian mother. And she looked forward hopefully to the time when her hopes and ambitions for her children should be realized. Gladly she would have stayed with the family, but faithfully trusted in God to her death. She passed with the assurance, "My Savior is with me." Her last words were, "Are we all here?" And it thus shall be our earnest endeavor to meet her in that heavenly home above. Besides her family she leaves behind her father, Frank Quiring, three brothers and three sisters.

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon February 7. At the home Rev. C. C. Wedel spoke words of comfort. At the church Rev. J. D. Jantzen led in scripture reading and prayer. Dr. E. G. Kaufman spoke in English and Rev. J. H. Epp spoke in German.

Daniel S. Krehbiel, son of Rev. J. C. and Ratie Krehbiel, was born at West Point, Lee County, Iowa, March 21, 1857. He moved with his family to Upland, California, thirty years ago, where he was a widely known and respected citizen in the community and a faithful member of the First Mennonite Church. He died February 6, 1937, leaving his wife, Jennie Eberle Krehbiel, and a daughter, Esther Krehbiel, at home, and a son, Elmer Krehbiel of Santa Monica, California. Funeral services were held Wednesday, February 10, at 1:30 p. m. at the home, and at 2 o'clock at the church, the pastor, Rev. Lester Hostetler, officiating. Interment was made at the Bellevue Cemetery.

He lives in fame who died in virtue's cause.

FORUM

Rev. M. Horsch's explanation to Brother J. J. Becker's query how to interpret passages like Ps. 144:1 and 148:1 in connection with, "He Maketh Wars to Cease," is as follows:

In reading such passages we must remember that we are standing on Old Testament ground. This means not in the bright noon-day light of God's fuller salvation through Christ our Savior. In the Old Testament God's people had the shadow, in the New Testament we walk in the light. In the Old Testament we have the type, in the New Testament the reality. In the Old Testament we have the prophecies, in the New Testament their fulfillment. The Old Testament is the foundation of the great Principles of Peace which the Prince of Peace, in the fulness of time, brought into this strife and war-ridden world. God took his people, stiff-necked, hard-hearted and idolatrous as they were, and by a slow and painful process prepared them for the coming of the Prince of Peace.

Reading Ps. 144:1 in the light of the above, we have no difficulty in reconciling it with Ps. 46:9, for David was a man of "God's own heart," for with all his faults his life tended heavenward. The process of his spiritual development must be judged in the light of his time. He was not permitted to build the Temple because he was a man of war and had spilt blood, I Chron. 28:3. In the slow and troublesome training of his people God gives us a faint conception of his incomprehensible love and patience.

Reading the imprecatory Psalms in this light and applying them to our spiritual warfare, we have no difficulty with them. No, we cannot understand it all, but we do understand the way of Salvation through Christ our Lord and Savior. This is sufficient.

"GET SOMEBODY ELSE"

The Lord had a job for me, but I had so much to do,
I said, "You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."
I don't know how the Lord came out, but he seemed to get along;
But I felt kinda sneakin' like, 'cause I know'd I done him wrong.

One day I needed the Lord; needed him myself, needed him right away;
And he never answered me at all, but I could hear him say,
Down in my accusin' heart, "Nigger, I'se got too much to do;
You get somebody else, or wait till I get through."

Now when the Lord he have a job for me, I never tries to shirk;
I drops what I have on hand and does the good Lord's work.
And my affairs can run along, or wait till I get through;
Nobody else can do the job that God's marked out for you.

Paul Lawrence Dunbar.

BOOK CHAT

During the month of February America and England have been celebrating the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dwight L. Moody. Although Moody has been dead more than 38 years, he still lives in the hearts of millions of humble Christian people. The institutions he founded, the books he wrote and the sermons he preached are still witnessing for the Savior he loved so well and served so faithfully.

It is remarkable to read the sincere and sympathetic tributes to D. L. Moody in the better grade newspapers and periodicals. One of the leading articles in the NEW YORK TIMES MAGAZINE for Sunday, January 31, gave a touching portrait of Moody that must have been read by hundreds of thousands of highly-educated people. Many metropolitan dailies have carried and are now carrying editorial comment on the life and works of Moody.

Perhaps the best commentary on the true greatness of Moody is the list of outstanding men that were influenced by him. The list is long and I will mention only two, Dr. Wilfred Grenfell of Labrador and Dan Crawford of Africa.

But this is a "Book Chat" so I had better take up the consideration of good biographies of Moody. There are only a few that merit consideration.

The best and most recent is BUSH AGLOW by Dr. Richard E. Day. (Judson Press, $2.00). This is the centennial biography of Moody by the author of the already well known biography of Spurgeon, THE SHADOW OF THE BROAD RIM, which appeared two years ago. Dr. Day has had access to a vast amount of original documents, letters, source materials and photographs, which have never before been available to those seeking to write a biography of Moody. This has made it possible for him to write a dramatic book that gives us a fascinating picture of Moody. But the author in so doing does not whitewash his hero nor hide the fact that Moody had to overcome sadly unnecessary limitations of education and training. One reviewer has this to say about this biography: "It is a book that will break the hearts of Christian workers and ministers as well as ordinary folk and the unsaved. One cannot read it through and be what one was before reading it." If you can afford to buy only one biography of Moody, by all means buy this one. It will thrill you!

MOODY STILL LIVES by Arthur Percy Fitt. (Fleming H. Revell, $1.50). This biography written by Moody's devoted son-in-law and former secretary, is impartial and challenging. It tells the story of the great evangelist's life in simple, powerful language, full of enthusiasm and passion for lost souls. The author gives us an insight into Moody's life such as only one who knew him so intimately could give us.

MOODY: WINNER OF SOULS by A. Chester Mann (Zondervan, $1.00), with an introduction by Dr. H. A. Ironside, pastor of the Moody Memorial Church. This book was written specially for the Moody Centenary. It omits nothing of essential character related to the personal ministry of Moody, the institutions he founded and the priceless heritage he has left to mankind. Written in popular, narrative style by a trained journalist, the book is without a single dull or prosy paragraph. From its concise, colorful pages, a reader can acquaint himself with more engrossing data concerning the public life of the great evangelist, than he can from any other Moody volume ever published at this low price. An ideal book for Church and Sunday School libraries.

DWIGHT L. MOODY, THE SOUL WINNER by A. T. Rowe (Warner Press, 75c). This older but excellent biography is one of the twelve in the Christian Hero Series written especially for Junior High School and High School age. The large, bold type, the simple, concise language, the short chapters make this an ideal book for children and young people. It is beautifully bound in maroon fabrikoid and makes an excellent gift for birthday, graduation or Christmas. No Sunday School library is complete without it.

There are other biographies of Moody which we might mention but the above four are the outstanding books on Moody written in recent years. Moody himself wrote many small books. The best of these are found in the inexpensive Moody Colportage Library series which sell at 20c per copy. A complete list will gladly be sent upon request. All these books and the biographies described above should be ordered from Austria, which after Luther's reformation had largely become Protestant, is now almost entirely Catholic. Against the more than six million Catholics there are only about 310,000 Protestants who complain of a great deal of suffering at the hands of the Catholic majority, as well as the government, which is carrying on a sort of counter-reformation.

The Mission Call

Why should I give? What can God need from me?
When His are all the earth and sky and sea?
What worth to Him my little all would be?
He wants me to.

Why should I go? Archangels He could send
To bear His word to earth's remotest end;
Yet "Go ye!" came the call to me, His friend.
He wants me to.

Why should I pray? My feeble voice Him move?
Bends He a listening ear to me in love?
Yet when I cry He answers from above.
He wants me to.

"Am with you always", "All the power!"
"Then go!"
His final message. Am I, then so slow
I shall not do His will? Enough to know
He wants me to!

The Child at Worship. One of the most vital problems which Christian parents and churches are facing, particularly in our urban communities, is how to get children to attend preaching service or to stay for it when the Sunday School precedes it. It is a very common sight, in our cities and villages, to see a regular exodus of children homeward or streetward bound after Sunday School, unconcerned about the rest of the service. This is a serious condition. For, what is to become of our urban churches, many of which are already poorly attended, if the coming generation is not trained in the habit of attending church service regularly? Might it be that the following would suggest some remedy?

1. Some churches find it helpful to hold church service before the Sunday School. That lends an element of importance and primacy to the church service. It gives the young minds the impression that this service is a matter of first and primary concern. Besides, they are fresh and more alert, hence more receptive.

2. The old custom of the family-pew needs to be revived. There is not more beautiful sight, nor one more pleasing to God, than to see parents and their children all seated together in worship. There is a charm and there is power in united family worship, in church, just the same as in the home around the family altar.

3. Our ministers must learn the art of preaching sermons that the children of the elementary school-age as well as adults can understand. Our "teachers in the pulpit" must learn to realize that truth expressed in a simple manner challenges the attention and the thought of both young and old and has the greatest effect.

There is a plan already in use in some churches, where the minister gives a short sermon to the children while the adults are at Sunday School and then conducts church service with the adults while the children have Sunday School. This plan is commendable. But it divides the family and thus robs the members of a good share of the blessing.

The Real Remedy. We are living in a sinful, reckless world. What a panorama of crime, war, rebellion, and other odious perpetrations do not our papers daily unfold before our eyes. All over the world statesmen and national leaders are groping in the dark, as it were, not knowing which way out. To many, the world appears to be at its worst, and maybe it is in some respects. But, go back four or five centuries, and history will tell you of appalling disorder, the rule of might for right, of pillage, revelry and debauchery on the one hand, and of extreme poverty and dire want on the other. Everything seemed to go wrong then much as it does now. But something happened. A group of brave, reborn Christians appeared on the scene—Wyclif, Huss, Luther, Zwingli, Knox, and others—spiritual reformers all! They began to put "first things first." The primacy of the spiritual over the material again came to be recognized. Christian civilization had a renaissance. Everywhere there was a rebirth of spirits. Life again became worth living. Order took the place of chaos; not the order of armed force, but the order that heaven would have, expressed in Christ's great command, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind, and thy neighbor as thyself." Only in the exercise of this new law and through the salvation offered us by the divine Saviour can the world be saved and humanity be made over.

God's Promises. God's promises are as "great" as their Giver. Open thy casket, my brother; pour out the golden ingots stamped with the image and superscription of the King. Count over the diamonds that flash in thy hands like stars. Compute, if you can, the worth of this single jewel: "He that believeth on me hath everlasting life"; or this other one; "Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." . . . The smallest promise in our Bible casket is too much for us poor sinners to deserve; yet the largest promise is not too large for our heavenly Father to make good. He scorns to act meanly by His children and wonders that we so often act meanly toward Him.—T. L. Cuyler.

Experience of Mr. K. T. Johnson

My name is Tuwaletstewa. When I was thirty years old, I was living in the Hopi religion. My relatives wanted to put me into the ceremonies, so they prepared me for them. I should not be a fornicator, a thief, nor a murderer. I learned from the chiefs about these things. When I would be forty years old, I should be the leader of my ceremony. If I would disobey my gods, they would punish me; so I tried my best.

At one time Mr. Frey came from Tuba City (about fifty miles from here) to show pictures over here. My wife went to the meetings, but I did not go. Mr. Frey had put up a tent. In the daytime he visited the Hopis. I hated the missionaries and my heart was aroused. When my wife started to go to church, she began to talk to me; but I paid no attention. Prior to the opening of the meeting, the village crier would call out for the people to come. I did not go for several days. I began, however, to think about the Hopi prophecy. It said that some one from the East should come to deliver us from our enemies and set us free. He would also bring a looking-glass with him and in it we could find out what kind of a man we are. He would be somebody who would have great power. So I began to think that the prophecy is like the Bible which says that when He comes, everybody would be free. The gospel must be the thing we have been waiting for. I did not know that it was the Holy Spirit talking to me, but now I know.

Now it started to work in me from both sides. I was trying to find out which was the best. I also began to realize that this was the One the Hopis were waiting for. I didn't go to church yet, but my mind began to stick to the gospel. I wanted to know more about the gospel and myself. When the last meeting in the tent came, it was at night. This time I was going to know. So I dressed myself up like a Navajo Indian. Soon there was singing in the tent. As I came to the tent, I looked for a hole where I could peep through; but I found none. So I took my knife and cut a little hole into the tent so I could look through. I tried to find out what people were there. The missionary was just showing the heart pictures and it made me angry. That evening my wife again wanted to talk to me, but I stopped her. Mr. Frey went from here to Polacca, about seventeen miles farther east. Then I began to think more. No sleep came to me because there was a fight in me. I did not know that it was the devil and the Spirit. I did not know what to do.

At that time I was a great song-writer. They honored me by that and used these songs in the dances. I wanted to write many songs yet. I also wanted to be converted, but not baptized. In my heart I believed the story of Jesus. I had in my mind three plans. My first plan was to write songs, but not dance. I thought I could see them, but not take part. My second plan was to be baptized, but not before my people. I thought I could be baptized at Phoenix. But then I began to think, why should I not make it public, because it was time to fulfil Hopi prophecy. Nine others were converted. I went to one of them, an old blind man, and talked with him about it, and soon everything began to be very real to me. I dropped my two plans and wanted to be baptized before my people before I would be in my old ceremony. Then I began to think about my past life, about the snake dances, the Hopi medicine, to whom I had prayed, the ceremony offerings, and the unleavened bread. But now I am a new converted man. That night I went to the missionary, Mr. Duerksen. I visited him, and he talked with me until I had more understanding. (To be continued)

JESUS AS TEACHER

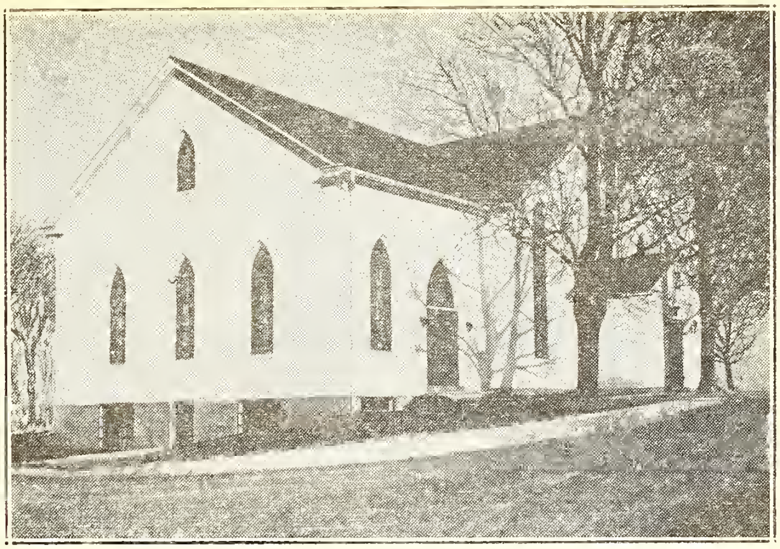
5. Regarding His subject—One may know oneself and know his pupils and still not be a teacher because of not knowing his subject. Jesus did not attempt to teach history or science or literature. He taught what is infinitely more important, namely religion. Jesus knew the subject He was trying to teach so that people said, "Never man spake as this Man." "He taught them as one having authority and not as the scribes." In bewilderment they asked, "Whence has this Man letters, never having learned?" On another occasion, we are told, "And no man was able to answer Him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask Him any more questions." Jesus was supreme authority in His field of religion, morality, the spiritual nature and capacity of the human soul, as well as God and the relation of the spiritual realm to the life of man here and hereafter. Jesus knew His subject.

OUR UNCHANGING OBLIGATION

Our obligation to give the gospel to this dazed, confused, and groping world has never changed. Through the ages men have felt that responsibility. It has never been lifted. John Knox in his prayer room prayed, "Give me Scotland, or I die." Luther Rice, laboring to keep Judson in Burma, lay down exhausted after a generation of tireless work, leaving a few books, his horse and buggy to Columbia College, and crying as he died, "My poor Burmese." Horace Tracey Pitkin could send back a message to his young wife as he stood before his butchers in the Boxer rebellion, "When our little son is old enough, send him out to take his father's place."

These and countless others heard the imperial command and responded. The obligation rests upon us now, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (Mark 16:15). Notice the inclusive words, "all" and "every." How they shut out excuse and cut away all refusal. Moody Monthly.

A VENERABLE CHURCH BUILDING



The East Swamp Mennonite Church near Quakertown, Pa., is one of the older churches in Eastern Pennsylvania. The cemetery was started before a house of worship was erected over two hundred years ago. The first church was erected about the year 1771. This building was destroyed by fire and it was succeeded by a substantial log meeting house which also served the purpose of school house, one part being partitioned off for school purposes, yet so that it could be opened for services.

In 1850, a large brick building with a gallery was erected and this part is standing today. Some alterations were made in 1927, but during the present pastorate the Sunday School grew to such proportions that it was necessary to make more room and an addition of 20x40 was added with a basement. Other improvements were made, new stained glass windows were put into the building and it is now a good sized house of worship which is a credit to the congregation. Dedicatory services were held on October 25, 1936, at which time a number of the ministers of the Eastern Conference and of the Community participated. W. S. Gottshall is the present pastor. The back part is the old part.

PROPHECY

By C. H. Suckau

The purpose of the column under this heading is to bring from time to time brief items that may be considered as signs of the times in the light of prophecy.

The scriptural injunction to heed prophecy is found in 2 Pet. 1:19: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place."

Prophecy is history pre-written. Sixteen books in the Old Testament and one in the New are prophetic in character. At least one fourth of the Bible was predictive prophecy at the time it was written. A large portion of the prophetic scriptures has become history. Other prophecies are now in the process of fulfillment, while still others await their fulfillment in the future ages.

Some say they accept Christianity but will have nothing to do with prophecy. They seemingly are ignorant of the fact that all of Christianity was up to the time of Christ only prophecy. At the present time much of the prophecy regarding the church has become history, which after all is prophecy fulfilled.

In the study and interpretation of prophecy it is important to distinguish carefully between the three classes of people mentioned in the Bible, the Jews, the Gentiles, and the Church. Because of confusion in this scriptural distinction many Protestants today still hold to the teaching brought over from the Roman Catholic Church that the church is the kingdom, and it is therefore her mission to conquer and rule the world.

Menno Simon and other reformers gave back to the church many of the fundamental doctrines of the Bible which had been practically lost. Prophecy had been almost completely ignored and neglected since the rise of the papacy and remained unheeded even in the Protestant Church until the last part of the nineteenth century.

Today the world at large is, as it were, intuitively expecting a great event to take place that will change the whole world order. The church is also looking for that great event. In view of this fact we do well to take heed unto the "more sure word of prophecy", for only there do we find revealed the universally expected event—THE SECOND COMING OF THE LORD JESUS CHRIST.

"The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

WHAT CAN I DO FOR PEACE?

E. L. Harshbarger

Last month we promised to respond to requests for lists of peace activities in which peace workers may engage. The following are a few suggestions.

I. For the individual Christian:
  1. Settle for yourself the questions of the sinfulness of war and of the adequacy of the teachings of Jesus to end war
  2. Live a consistent, peaceful, Christian life as an example to others
  3. Ask your pastor to preach frequent peace sermons
  4. Support your conference peace committees with prayers and finances
  5. Subscribe to some peace news sheet like Peace Action
  6. Help to build up the peace libraries at Bethel and Bluffton
  7. Attend and support the Kansas Institute of International Relations held under the auspices of the Friends and Mennonites at Bethel College, June 8 to 18, 1937. Gain for yourself expert information and inspiration
  8. Vote for peace-minded officials
  9. Keep in touch with your Congressmen and urge them to support peace measures in Congress. Ask them for copies on matters of neutrality, reciprocal trade agreements, fortification of the islands of the Pacific, increased military appropriations, nationalizing the munitions industry, and taking the profits out of war. Inform yourself on these matters and petition them accordingly
  10. Don't become discouraged when your efforts seem feeble

II. For the groups:
  1. Send delegates to peace conferences. Every church organization in the Western District Conference, at least, should have representatives at the Kansas Institute next June
  2. Provide books and magazines on peace for your members
  3. Sponsor projects to raise funds for your church peace committees
  4. Sponsor essay and declamation contests for the youth
  5. Prepare and render periodic peace programs for your group and the public
  6. Keep an up-to-date peace bulletin board
  7. Form week-day study clubs to study:
     a. The Biblical teachings on war and peace
     b. The historical Mennonite position
     c. Historical development of peace movement
     d. Peaceful settlement of international disputes
     e. National policies which lead to war
     f. Causes of war
     g. Consequences of war.
     h. An effective peace program

Please report any peace activities which you have done, whether suggested here or original with your group. Only by constant and cooperative effort can we build an effective program of peace and goodwill.

—Contributions to churches, education, and philanthropy were smaller in 1936 than in any year since 1925—even smaller than in the depression depths of 1932-1933. Preliminary income-tax figures indicate that such gifts amounted only to 2.083 percent in income, although as much as 15 per cent of income can be contributed, tax-exempt, to such causes. Behind the decline in private philanthropy is probably the widespread feeling that government has taken over many of the functons of private institutions and is spreading their cost over the whole population through taxes. Implications of this changing attitude are profound. It may be perfectly sound to argue that all such things as hospital service, poor relief and education should be socialized, that it is not fair for society to rely upon the generosity of the few for benefits to all. But if this feeling spreads, the problems of a transition period will be serious and painful.

Let us not run out of the path of duty, lest we run into the way of danger.—Rowland Hill.

Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, Calif.

Greetings! With thanksgiving to our Father we look back upon the year 1936. It was with genuine joy that we welcomed those who yielded themselves to their Saviour and joined the church. Several times during the year we were called upon to show our loving sympathies to the families of such whose loved ones went to be with the Lord. We miss them, especially old Father Paulus who with Mrs. Paulus regularly occupied a front seat in the services—a fine example of faithfulness.

We shall long remember the extended visit among us of two missionary families—the Duerksens of India and the Mannings of Africa. We also appreciated the visits from Miss Goertz of China, the Misses Nickel and Wiens and the Unruh family of India. It has been a "Foreign Missions Year" for us.

Besides the missionary visitors, we have happy memories of the large number of other guests from various States in our homeland. We are so thankful that Mennonite visitors to Los Angeles from churches in other States are pleased to look us up, and sometimes take part in the service.

Many of you will be wondering how we fared in the severe cold spell of weather during January, since we are not used to it nor prepared for it. About the only complaints one heard were that so many plants were killed by the frost (including some damage to trees). For days the air was dark with smudge and the sunlight was dim, calling forth our deepest sympathy for our friends in Upland and vicinity who were in the midst of the battle to save the citrus groves.

On Sunday morning, February 14, our pastor, Rev. D. D. Eitzen, had an especially happy smile, and soon the secret leaked out—the addition of a big baby boy to the parsonage family. Mrs. Eitzen and A. Donald are doing well.

For the new year our trust is in Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever.

Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Editor and Readers:

Our little church here is not a member of the general conference, but as this church has furnished two of the Missionary helpmates we feel that we have an excuse for writing.

A few words should be said about the passing of Rev. Wiens, our pastor here. He passed away on January 10 of heart attack. He was in his thirtieth year of Chicago Mission work. Although somewhat weak, yet he was active to the last. He taught his Sunday school class on the morning of his passing. His mission work and that of Mrs. Wiens have passed thru many trying times but the work has been blessed. The mission here is located in a neighborhood of few churches. The nearest church is a half mile away. Our Sunday School has a field of almost a square mile. The building is only small. For the morning service and Sunday School the rooms are used to full capacity. The average Sunday morning attendance is 125.

The pastoral work now has descended on to the writer. I had planned to solve life's problems with Algebra, Trig. and the Tee square but now God has given me a different problem to solve. This problem would be a suitable one to put in your "Peace column". Here it is: Our membership is composed of Germans, French, Irish, Swedish, Norwegian, Polish, Greek, Jews, Dutch. Besides these we have neighbors who are Croation, Bohemian, Lithuanian, Italian and others that are hard to classify. I am glad for being a Mennonite. It has pointed the way for me to the teaching of Jesus who alone can solve such a problem.

May we have an interest in your prayers.

Life Here and Hereafter Through Christ

John 14:1 to 15:27 Printed: John 14:1-15

Jesus, in speaking to his disciples in the upper-room discourse knew that sorrow, doubt, and discouragement would come to them. He tries not to excite them needlessly. The words of our lesson, among the most comforting ever spoken, bring solace, strength, and comfort throughout the centuries. There is an assured reunion.

Jesus and Troubled Hearts, v. 1

This fourteenth chapter of John is a very rich vein in God's holy Word. The keynote is in the first clause of v. 1. The remainder of this verse gives Jesus' infallible prescription for heart trouble—"believe in God." This was Isaiah's message to the Israelites (Is. 26:3), was the essence of the message the world needs, we all need today. The true believer in God, in Christ, will not be troubled in heart.

Believe that God lives, that he loves you. "Believe also in me"; though all hope may be dashed to pieces, yet believe firmly in Jesus.

Jesus and the Hereafter vs. 2-5

Jesus soothes the disciples' hearts and assures them of the life after death (v. 2, 3). Heaven, the Father's house, is a large place—there is room for all. He is going to prepare a place for each one. He promises to return personally, to receive and take us to the place he has prepared, and we shall be with him eternally (v. 3). Christ does not send for them. Jesus is the Way to and the Revelation of the Father. vs. 6-11.

We know the place where Jesus said he was going and also how to get there. He tells us that he is the only way through which men may approach the Father (v. 6). This way is open to all (John 10:9). He is the one all-sufficient mediator between God and men. He is also the "Truth" incarnate. Others teach the "Truth." He is also the "Life," he doesn't merely give life.

He says that he who knows Him knows the Father also (v. 7). Jesus is God manifest in the flesh. To know Jesus is to trust him fully as Redeemer, Friend, and Helper. God, the Father, revealed himself fully and perfectly in Jesus (v. 9; John 1:18; Col. 2:9). God's Father-heart is clearly manifested in Jesus. Jesus' words and deeds are those of the Father dwelling in him (vs. 10, 11). These prove to all who will believe that He is in the Father.

Jesus' Promise to Believers vs. 12-15

His followers are to continue through the centuries the work which He began (v. 12). Not greater miracles were to be done, but greater spiritual results were to be achieved. In his and God's sight, a soul won for Him is a greater work than a miracle of bodily healing, even opening the eyes of the blind. We have the privilege today of sharing in Christ's highly exalted spiritual ministry.

In verses 13 and 14, Jesus tells of the prayer that gets anything it asks. The request must be in the will of God, "in my name." It is the prayer of those united to Christ by a living faith (v. 12), showing itself in obedient love (vs. 15-17).

Praying in Christ's name is not merely using a formula like "for Jesus' sake" or "this we ask in Jesus' name." It means praying as Jesus leads us to pray by his Spirit and for the things he desires, and that God's will should be done. Jesus himself will answer us (v. 14; John 15:7, 16).

Life in the hereafter is promised through Christ. Let us not forget about the living now. A good life here is a life hid with Christ in God.

Practical Truth

Through Christ we may have spiritual life here and heavenly bliss hereafter.

CONDEMNATION VS. RESTORATION

It is so easy to point a condemning finger at one who has sinned. But Paul in Galatians 6:1 gives Christians the principle by which they are to be guided. He writes, "Brethren, even if a man be overtaken in any trespass, ye who are spiritual, restore such an one in the spirit of gentleness."

CONDEMNATION

How it must grieve the Lord Jesus to know that many of his followers go about finding fault and condemning the work of their fellow men. We know how severely he upbraided the Pharisees for seeking the mote in others. Usually if one is looking for the faults in another person, one will find them. The Pharisees found nothing by which they could condemn Jesus, so they had to manufacture something. But the worst they could think of was that he ate with the publicans and sinners.

Too often folks pass hasty or snap judgment, not knowing all the facts and thus much harm is done. Some people seem to delight in scandal. They are not happy unless they can tell of the short-comings of their neighbors. No wonder newspapers print scandal sheets. Fault finding, passing judgment, and talebearing can only bring trouble and never led anyone to Christ.

This does not mean that we are to compromise with evil or to belittle sin. But our work is not to judge or condemn others, for God will sit in judgment and mete out punishment as He sees fit.

RESTORATION

Our work as Christians is to restore sinners, to reclaim the lost. Christ has shown us the way. When the Jews brought a woman taken in adultery, they were not interested in her but instead were hoping to trap Jesus. Then he said, let the one without sin cast the first stone. And when they had silently slipped away he pardoned her. Are we all too ready to throw stones or are we willing rather to remove the stones that are a stumbling block to a weak brother?

It is not hard to tell the world that someone has done wrong, but to go direct to the person and seek to set him right requires much tact and prayer. Our text not only says we are to restore one who has actually been apprehended in a sinful act, but that we are to do it in a spirit of gentleness. The better than thou attitude will not succeed. For are we not all sinners saved by grace and not by our own righteousness?

Christ has forgiven us in many things, so we ought to have a forgiving spirit, too, and rather than condemn, seek to restore the fallen in a spirit of gentleness.

Should Easter or Pentecost Be Utilized as the Spiritual High Tide for a Church Program

H. G. Nyce

Read before the Eastern Dist. Conference

As we think of the pre-Easter days, we think of activity in a very special sense. Perhaps this thought is the result of the things that happened prior to the scene of Good Friday.

The life of our Saviour was indeed a busy one as a minister. It was not a busy life perhaps in the sense that he did so much, i. e., He oftentimes seems to have been withdrawn, so to speak, to spend much time alone with his Father prior to the doing of certain things. Thus, when he sat on Jacob's well and the disciples went on to the city to buy meat, we have every reason to believe that He did not simply while away the time. Undoubtedly before the woman of Samaria came to the well, He was in communion with His Father.

Starting with Palm Sunday when He made His triumphant entry into Jerusalem, we see the hustle and bustle of excitement. That sort of activity is very noticeable among church people today, whereas, there should be a calmness, and a spirit of reverence that should lead us to Good Friday night, at which time we should try to feel the pain of heart that those who were near to Him experienced when He was taken from the Cross. We should never forget that He came to die in our stead, as the sacrifice acceptable to God, for our sins.

From the beginning of Lent, we should slowly be ascending to a great mountain-top experience with Christ. It should be at this time that we might have the most intimate fellowship with God through Christ. Here there should be an emptying of self as at no other time. The grade may be hard, but as we lie prostrate at His feet, seeing ourselves as He sees us, we shall reach the mountain top in due time. This is reached on Easter morn. Behold, Christ is risen!

Rapidly we may descend from the mountain with hearts filled with great joy. The burden of our soul has been taken away. We are free in Christ. This is a great day for the church. Sad, yet too often true, this is the end of the church's program. Lent has passed, Easter is gone, and now what? It seems that special emphasis has been put on Lent and after Easter people feel that a great burden has been lifted and so heave a sigh of relief. To me, Lent should not only mean the sacrificing, or giving up of something for a period of time, but to be truly sorry for, and that this sorrowfulness should lead us to a closer fellowship with God after Easter.

Years ago, services were not held nearly as frequently as they are now. In the country, indeed, there are places where services were held only once in four weeks. Of course, people did not have the conveniences that we now enjoy. Ministers had anywhere from three to six churches, depending on distance to the various churches; but, when services were held, people came, and not only did they come, but they came in a reverent spirit that they might worship. When the preacher preached, they accepted and believed. If the sermon hit, well; after all that is what they came for. They were the better for it.

Later, in town services were held oftener, and in later years, every Sunday. Then started a competition among the churches, and some started to have evening services. Others followed. Times changed, and with the change and because of discoveries and improvements, other things started to draw people from churches. That is our condition today. I'll venture to say that if there was but one service in the church every Sunday, the attendance would not have fallen off as it did.

We agree therefore that in pre-Easter days, people as a general rule should and do go to church. But I believe that Pentecost should be utilized as the spiritual high tide for a church's program. I must confess that I had not given this serious thought until I read the program, and I must confess that it immediately struck me as being not only timely, but most important. Why? For two reasons. In the first place, it is not difficult to put on something different as a spiritual drawing card, before and up to Easter; but shall our work cease with the singing of "Christ the Lord is risen today" on Easter morning? I am convinced that it shall not!

Since I suggested that Pentecost should be utilized as the spiritual high tide for a church's program, I must also give my reasons and state how this might be done:

Ascension Day of course marks the day when in a very special sense Jesus became our great high priest. Then there should be a period of silent waiting in a prayerful attitude for that which God would have us do. On the Day of Pentecost, the Spirit came; but not only did it come, it also moved the hearts of people. The angel moving the water in the pool, as we studied yesterday, was typical of the Spirit moving the hearts of people in our day. Then it was one day, now it may be any, or every day. The Lord added to the church daily, those who should be saved, or gave evidence of having accepted His Spirit.

Pentecost as the spiritual high tide should be the beginnig of a closer walk with God for us and a special effort put forth on our part to see that others might be converted. Every great effort in the church has been the result of what took place on Pentecost; and yet we dare not lose sight of the fact that had there been no Good Friday, there would have been no Easter; and had there been no Easter, there would not have been a Pentecost; but further, had there been no Pentecost, no coming of the Spirit of God, where would we be today?

The Pentecost program in a very definite manner is our responsibility as ministers. Since the day of Pentecost, souls have been born into the Kingdom through the preaching inspired by the Spirit of God. As the result of Spirit-filled sermons, there are more Christians in India today than there were in all the world at the end of the third Christian century. At the end of fifty years of mission service in Korea, there are more Christians there than there were in all the Roman Empire at the end of the first Christian century. Why relate this? Simply because I am trying to point out the importance of Pentecost; where men and women are being born into the Kingdom of God everywhere as the result of personal evangelization.

This brings me to the how Pentecost should be utilized as the spiritual high tide. Personally, I am planning this year as never before to follow up Easter activities in my charge with personal visitation. I do not mean door-bell ringing with the hope that no one might be at home, so that I could quickly go to another place and receive credit for two calls instead of one as seems to be the method of some ministers. In passing, I just learned last week of a minister, who, when he goes down town and happens to meet four people standing together, shakes hands with them and gives himself credit for four calls. I am convinced that personal work is more important at present than ever before. Many people are confused because of what they hear over the radio, as well as from what some so-called Bible teachers or Bible expositors say. To me, a person may be ever so good a Bible teacher; but if his life is not what it should be, he is an inconsistent man. Paul very definitely declares in his letter to the Ephesians that we are to live and act as becomes those who have received the Spirit of God.

People see these inconsistencies. I therefore would like to urge it is vital that our Christian lives exemplify that which we believe. It is necessary today, as never before, to live a balanced Christian life. To say that we are spiritual in the sense that we have nothing to do with anything in this world is folly.

I have come to the conclusion that some people have become so good that they are actually good for nothing. And again and again have I seen that those who are so good have caused the most trouble in the church. It is therefore important and necessary that we as Christian ministers utilize our time from Easter on through Pentecost in a very definite manner, preaching through personal evangelization, that we might build up, not a large membership, but men and women growing in the grace and in the knowledge of Jesus Christ our Saviour.

Our grand business is, not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.—Carlyle.

NOTES ON THE AMISH

In your issue of January 2, I note with interest your story on the Amish nuptials, on the Religion and Society page. I might say that, if everybody lived as the Amish do, there would be no need for an army or navy, or even a police force; there would be no need for relief and Social Security.

The peculiarity of Amish dress is due to the fact that Amishmen retained their styles while others changed. Long ago, to dress differently from the soldiery, they used hooks and eyes instead of buttons. Likewise, because they are strongly anti-militaristic, when it was the fashion for soldiers to wear mustaches, Amishmen grew full beards, an Amish custom which is followed to this day. Members of the sect do not claim any special virtue in wearing their strange garb but feel it helps them in binding them together as a separate group in the world.

The Amish are strictly farmers, the only exception being that there be some who are carpenters, machinists, etc., who find a rightful place on farms. They are prosperous but frugal and, while they do not go in for higher education, they could teach in any agricultural college, so carefully do they study their subject, the soil.

In some Amish sections, such modern inventions as tractors, power and light, telephones, etc., are looked upon as inventions of the devil. In very few Amish communities do you find autos, and radio is not sanctioned in any true Amish church as yet.

You would not be barred from any Amish wedding. They do not believe in any kind of secret orders, do not have any special custom of putting the bridegroom over the fence, as you report, though in their playfulness they might try to deprive him of his shoes for the day. In some communities, the Amish marry in the winter time after the fall work is done but this is not true at all in some states.

All in all, the Amish are a people who mind their own business and do it well, will not harm anyone, stick to their work, and have a desire to be left to themselves. They are a people who have been dropped out of 17th Century Europe into modern America, have retained their identity and are slowly catching up with the rest of the world in the use of what science offers in the way of making life more comfortable and pleasant.—Dr. J. E. Miller, Washington, D. C. (From the Pathfinder)

BE THE BEST

"If you can't be a pine on the top of a hill
Be a shrub in the valley,
But the best little shrub by the side of the hill.
Be a bush if you can't be a tree,
If you can't be a bush, be a bit of the grass,
And some highway happier make.
If you can't be a muskie, then just be a bass,
But the liveliest bass in the lake.
We can't all be captains, some have to be crew,
There's something for all of us here.
There's work to be done, and we've all got to do
Our part in a way that's sincere.
If you can't be a highway, then just be a trail,
If you can't be a sun, be a star,
It isn't by size that we win or we lose,
Be the best of whatever you are."

Mennonite Youth Looks at Psychology

By John Warkentin

"One of the most surprising discoveries to a Christian student of psychology might well be the fact that the conditions determined scientifically for the maintenance of sound mental health are more and more approaching the directions presented in God's Word for the attainment of the abundant life."

Is Modern Man in search of a modern soul? Is the Christian doctrine under repair? The answers to these questions, by some of the more liberal church leaders, have aroused considerable concern among Christians. Psychology is one of the branches of science which have been held responsible for the modernistic exodus of recent decades. But psychology is the systematic, objective study of behavior, and affects existing systems of thought only in so far as the objective results obtained by experimentation are interpreted by the individual observers.

We bring this week another article by a young Mennonite as part of a series "Mennonite Youth Looks Out."

Other articles in preparation are entitled, "Mennonite Youth Looks at Medical Missions," "Mennonite Youth Looks at Education", "Mennonite Youth Looks at Science," "Mennonite Youth Looks at the Ministry," and so on.

The article this week, by John Warkentin, shows the penetrating analysis of a young man now doing graduate work in the field of psychology. He is now at Rochester University, N. Y.

Clearly, therefore, psychology as such can never assail the Christian faith, but the study of human behavior may add greatly to our understanding of religious experiences. If the study of nature can yield a partial knowledge of God and His ways with men, certainly the systematic study of God's image, though a fallen one, should bear directly on many problems of our religious life.

It is psychology which has upheld the value of a correctly balanced emotional adjustment towards life problems in general. One of the outstanding characteristics of the true Christian is that he has achieved an emotional stability and balance which must shine as a light among his fellows. Although many psychologists may not know this peace which passeth understanding, yet they readily acknowledge the extreme importance of the resulting joy of the Lord in the life of the individual. The wide prevalence of skepticism, cynicism, and agnosticism in educational circles might well be due largely to the loss, on the part of the individual, of a belief in God. It seems that frequently a loss of belief in God entails a loss of faith in one's fellow creatures.

Men are what their beliefs make them. Although the assent to the reality of a supreme Being and immortality has been repeatedly denounced as a childish nursery melody by those who know not the power of God unto salvation, nevertheless the transforming effect of the Christian faith must be recognized by psychologists. Whether such a faith involves a primitive credulity and acceptance of a higher authority without serious thought on the part of the believer, or whether there be a reasoning basis for it; or whether the acceptance of the belief be due to a purely emotional upheaval in an individual's life, in any case it seems clearly demonstrated that supernatural changes take place. Psychological descriptions of conversion have served to emphasize the conditions involved, but a thorough explanation has not been offered in entirely mechanistic terms.

FRIENDSHIPS are held together by the cement of integrity and square dealing.

One of the most surprising discoveries to a Christian student of psychology might well be the fact that the conditions determined scientifically for the maintenance of sound mental health are more and more approaching the directions presented in God's Word for the attainment of the abundant life. According to the prevalent psychological thinking it would seem that modern man isn't looking for a modern soul at all, but simply desires the rest and security promised so freely in the Old Book. Paul's great claim, that godliness is profitable unto all things, seems to be psychologically well founded.

A specific instance of Biblical and psychological agreement is the question as to the advisability of the use of such terms as sin, and salvation by means of the acceptance of the vicarious suffering of a Substitute. It is extremely rare to find patients in mental hospitals who were happy Christians previous to their disease. Another instance of psychological support of a Christian doctrine relates to prayer. In the present psychologies of religion there seems to be almost complete agreement that prayer is a highly beneficial activity for men. The old phrase that a prayerful life is a powerful life is well borne out. Whether prayer is answered subjectively only, or also objectively, is of course, not a problem for psychological investigation. Psychology has never offered valid opposition to the experience of Christians, that God does answer prayer in an objective as well as a subjective manner.

It is the conviction of the writer that the trend of psychology is not to put the Christian doctrine under repair, but to emphasize its more enthusiastic support and application. Christian experience can be definitely enriched by a thorough understanding of the fundamental principles of psychology, and it is entirely possible that God may use this science as a means in lighting new "altar fires" among our Mennonite young people.

LEARNING TO SAY, "THY WILL BE DONE"

Senior C. E. Topic, March 21, 1937

Matt. 26:36-45; John 6:38

Daily strength for the inner man:

M., Mar. 15—Pleasure in pleasing God. John 8:29
T., Mar. 16—Helping to do God's will. Matt. 6:10
W., Mar. 17—Noble submission. 2 Tim. 4:6-8

S., Mar. 20—God's will in the daily grind. Eph. 6:5-9
S., Mar. 21—TOPIC: Learning to say, "Thy will be done."

A prayer—

Father, we need so desperately the unifying influence of a complete yielding to a single purpose. During these blessed weeks of the Lenten season, we want to seek and to find that fuller satisfaction which comes with greater obedience; that greater strength, which comes with greater yielding; the fuller enjoyment and mastery of life, which comes with more perfect renouncement of the smaller self, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

Problems and Projects

1. Someone has said that "to have no will of one's own" means that one must lose his entire individuality and personality. When you examine closely the most "yielded" Christians you know, do you feel that they are men and women without "personality"?

2. A child, completely yielded to play, plays as a "whole." When you examine yourself critically, do you find that your entire being pulsates with the joy and thrill which you get when you are completely engrossed in a game which challenges your "whole" attention? Is it centered around a SINGLE PURPOSE of life? What IS that CENTER?

3. When a litle brook, at last flows into a mighty river, it loses its identity as a brook; its power to sweep grasses and twigs before it now becomes lost in the power to float log "booms" and ships to the sea. Is losing oneself in Christ, something like that, do you think?

4. Is it true that a thing has only as much value as that which we give for it? If so, does it follow that the more we give up our OWN powers, and the more we let HIS power work in us, the more meaningful Christ will become to us?

Purpose of the Meeting

May we ask God to give us a deep concern for those who do not know Christ and a desire to help them find Him. The discussion of the topic should help us know how we may begin.

A suggested plan for your meeting

1. Praise in Song
   a. "Sing Them Over Again" b. "Gospel Bells"
   c. "Win the One Next to You"
2. Society announcements. Let the president call on each committee chairman to make his own announcement

3. Quiet Worship
   Piano prelude, "Jesus Calls Us"
   Leader: "Jesus said unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

   Response: (on blackboard)

   "In the early morning,
   Still as of old he calleth, Follow Me,
   Let us arise, all meaner service scorning,
   Lord, we are thine, we give ourselves to thee."

   Scripture Reading: John 1:35-51
   Hymn: "Lord Speak to Me." (Sung or read)
   Prayer. (Ask three members of the lookout committee to offer prayer.)
   Offering: "All good gifts come from Thee, O Lord, And of Thine own have we given to Thee."
4. Discussion Period
   A. The leader's remarks. Refer to the Scripture lesson and show how naturally the first followers brought their friends to Jesus. Speak of the purpose of this meeting as given above.
   B. Lessons from the Bible on Soul-winning.
      a. Jesus as Soul-winner. John 4:19-26.
      b. Paul as Soul-winner. Acts 16:11-15
      c. Philip as Soul-winner. Acts 2:26-35 (Ask them to bring out what we can learn from each of these.)
   C. Topics and questions
5. Closing Moments
   Hymn: "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy." Stanza one.
   Silent prayer. With bowed heads, let each one,
      a. Think of a friend who does not know Christ
      b. Ask God to show you what you can do to help that one.
   Closing prayer, by the superintendent. Benediction

Questions for Discussion

1. What preparation must I have to help someone else to know Christ? Is a knowledge of the Bible important? Why?
2. Suggest some ways in which you would go about helping your friends to know Christ. Which is the most important?
3. A young man stood up the last night in the meeting at a summer conference and said, "The first thing I'm going to do when I get home is to talk to Bob about Christ. He has worked at the same labratory table with me all year. I knew he was not a Christian and yet I never talked to him about Christ." Why did this young man find it hard to talk to his friend about Christ, even though he worked with him every day? What gave him the courage now? Why is it easier to talk about religious subjects at some times than at others?
4. The story is told about a pastor, who was much troubled about the indifference of his members. He began to pray about his congregation. But he didn't have much faith that such a general prayer was doing much good. Then he began to pray definitely for a neighbor who was not a Christian, who abused his family and played cards on Sunday. Before long he noticed that he began to have real love in his heart for this man and he couldn't help being friendly toward him. The neighbor responded with many kindly acts. Then one Sunday the pastor found him in church. He sat listening with tears in his eyes. Before long he came and begged the pastor to pray for him and his family, that they too might become Christians. Can you win anyone to Christ who is not your friend? Give your reasons.
5. How can we win our friends to Christ through Christian Endeavor? What can we as a society do to help others to find Christ?

Attendance Contest

This would be a splendid time to begin an attendance contest. Divide the society into two sides and list the names on an attendance chart, with a captain for each side. Call them "Golden Rule" and "Winsome." Give one point for attendance and two points for attendance, when on time. Two points for a visitor. Their name can be added to the side that brings them.

The chief object in the contest will be to put on the very best meetings possible during this time. Make them definitely Christ-centered. Ask the members to pray definitely for the meetings. Hold a pre-prayer circle. The contest may be closed with a social time in one of the homes. Ask the sides to live up to their names.

So nigh is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to man.
When duty whispers low, thou must,
The youth replies, I can.

Father-Mother Program Special Feature of Junior C. E.

It would be best to have this subject treated by a guest speaker; by one who understands children, who is a teacher of children, and by one who can lead the juniors to say within their heart:

Faith of our fathers, holy faith!
We will be true to thee till death."

For subject matter I had in mind Sketches of Church History for Mennonite Schools, by C. H. Wedel. If you are not familiar with this book, you will surely find it in some homes of the members of your church, or write for it to Bethel College Book Store. For the leader to read this brief treatise, would be a good preparation for this program. The speaker should be asked to present this material with the objective of not only awakening interest and love for the church but also with the view of planting into the child's memory some of the facts of importance, at least the names of some of the outstanding personalities which God could use to keep His church a living church. Concerning the scope of the subject, please remember that suggestions for a program dealing with the Mennonite church will appear in next issue.

Mother-Father Night

Why not have it so? Make this a special night. The children could prepare the invitations under leader's supervision and each child could mail the invitation to his own parents by slipping it into the mailbox of the home. Do not let the juniors sit with their parents for that would be too much like church. Have a reserved section for parents to which the juniors can escort them.

Pin-ons

could be with suggestion of a chain and on this the words: "Faith of our fathers, holy faith! (I) would be true to thee till death."

Sometime in the course of the evening, perhaps as a closing thought by the leader, these chains should be mentioned. The truth these pin-ons should teach is: God wants us as strong links in the chain that keeps faith from generation to generation. Woe to the chain whose links are weak! One link makes the chain weak if that one is deficient. "Christ within" makes the link strong.

Opening Moments And Worship

Opening

1. Prelude
2. Words of welcome to parents closing with quoting of first stanza of "Come Ye that Love the Lord."
3. Sing in unison the above mentioned hymn.

Worship

1. Prayer spoken with music using "Break Thou the Bread of Life."
2. Praises in the "Court" spoken by juniors rising in their seats: Psalm 84:1; Psa. 84:4; Psa. 84:5; Psa. 84:10; Psa. 111:1; Psa. 134:1
3. In unison sing: "The Lord is in His Holy Temple" and "Holy, Holy, Holy Is the Lord God of Hosts."
4. Promises by leader: Psa. 91:1
5. Response by group: Ps. 86:1, 5, 11, 12
6. Praise God from Whom All Blessings Flow—in unison.

PARABLES OF GOWAHN NENDUIT

Once upon a time there lived in a dry and arid country seven men, who called a committee meeting.

Now it came to pass, as the meeting wore on, that it was moved that a certain letter be written.

One said, "It seemeth a difficult matter."

Another, deeply moved, spoke out of the fulness of his heart: "What will others say?"

That one, who always sits most comfortably on the fence, rolled his eyes, after the fashion of an owl, and was observed to be in deep thought, while his ponderous thumbs moved majestically through their charted orbits.

The fourth one, chary of time, thought it would take too long to write it.

Yea, and the fifth would have consulted those much wiser and more able.

The sixth one would refer it to a sub-committee, to ponder the matter and to write the letter.

The seventh one, much wiser than his tribesmen, reached for his Scripto pencil. Swiftly it moved, and with grace and with wisdom. And when the writing was finished, they all were greatly cheered, and each one said, "That expresses MY idea exactly."

And when the letter was read to the assembly of their countrymen, the committee was greatly applauded.

Put thou thy trust in God;
In duty's path go on;
Fix on his word thy steadfast eye;
So shall thy work be done..

Martin Luther.

The Sinner's Second Chance

According to Jesus the praying malefactor entered Paradise, state of supreme happiness, on the same day he was saved and died: "This day," Christ said. It is not given to men to know the degree of happiness that Paradise holds for such. He would seem to be out of his element, but 'twas congenial fellowship: "With me," the Lord said. Both men had pilfered the Roman government and were paying for it; in this they were alike. Both appealed to Christ, but in this they were far apart. "Save thyself and us," was the derisive word of one. With this, Jesus did not interefere. He was not a civil magistrate. "Remember me," was the other's prayer. But what difference this prayer made in his future; what transition from a pain-racked guilty state into one of perfect felicity: "With me in Paradise." He was just in time for the Sin-Bearer to bear all his evils, but too late to give back his life in thankful service. We hear of a "second chance" after death, a false and dangerous teaching which would weaken men. But for every man who has strayed from God there is a "second chance" through the Gospel of Repentance and faith in the crucified One. "Turn ye, for why will ye die," said God. It was the thief's final offer, his "Land of beginning again." He wisely did not ignore it.

The Sinner's Appeal. "Lord remember me." It was enough. We used to sing in revivals an appealing verse, "Remember Lord thy dying groans, and then remember me." In his plea the criminal met the conditions of salvation—penitence, confession, faith in the Messiah, in a future Kingdom, and life after death; all this and more was comprehended in his prayer. Thus was he in the right attitude for forgiveness. The Romans knew not such law of pardon nor parole system as we have for minor offence. This dying sinner also complied, perhaps unconsciously, with a Biblical promise, "Who-so will call on the name of the Lord shall be saved." May every unsaved or doubtful one send up a call to this same answering Friend of sinners. It did not occur to him that this dying Christ could be of present help, but "When Thou comest into thy kingdom." Jesus set the date up: "Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise." What a surprising faith he had in a dying Saviour; Christ's attitude remains the same today—merciful rescuer of every penitent praying soul. "Call upon Him while He is near." Surely men should today accept Him as a Living Saviour.

Jesus also prayed. "Father forgive them, they know not what they do." Was His prayer answered? True, they knew not they were crucifying the Messiah, but they did not know He was innocent . . "Had they known, they would not have crucified the Lord of Glory." To quote, "If ignorance does not free, it does diminish the atrocity of crime." Later, Peter said to them, "I would that through ignorance ye did it, as did also your rulers." He then preached repentance and faith toward God through Christ. But was Jesus' prayer answered? Only on the same ground that others are forgiven—through repentance of sin, and faith in Christ's atonement for all alike, which becomes effective to those who avail themselves of this merciful offer as did the dying thief. All men fell from their first estate; the Gospel provision is a second chance for recovery and the final chance. Don't miss it.—T. R. Gray, Edgewood, Iowa.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Jonathan H. Stucky was born on February 26, 1862, at Kotosufka in southern Poland which at that time was Russian Territory. His parents were John C. and Veronika Voran Stucky. They immigrated to this country in 1874 and settled near Moundridge, Kansas.

His marriage with Katharina Gering took place November 8, 1885. Eight children came into their home, of which three died in early childhood.

For about a year he had been failing in health and was bedfast about one month, during which time he often suffered severely; but he was patient in suffering and longed to be absent from the body to be at home with the Lord. This desire was fulfilled on February 17, when he peacefully passed away, aged 74 years, 11 months and 21 days. Those mourning his departure are his bereaved wife, three daughters, two sons, 17 grandchildren, two great grandchildren, three sisters, one brother, and many other relatives, also many friends.

Funeral services were held on February 21 from the First Mennonite Church of Christian. His pastor, P. P. Wedel spoke on Isaiah 41, 8-14 in German and on Hebrews 3:12-4:1 in the English language.

Mrs. Anna Andres, nee Neufeldt, was born January 14, 1858, near Elbing, Germany. She was the daughter of the Reverend and Mrs. Abram Neufeldt.

Her childhood years she spent in her parental home, where in the Christian atmosphere she developed into womanhood. Her education she received in the Evangelical schools of Germany.

At the age of seventeen years she was baptized upon the confession of her faith and united with the Mennonite Church.

In the year 1883, she was united in holy matrimony with Gustav Andres, with whom, three years later, she immigrated to America where they made their home in Newton, Kansas. Here she joined the First Mennonite Church of which she remained a faithful member until the time of her death. Later she with her husband and family moved to a farm southeast of Newton where she resided for many years. In the fall of the year 1928, she, with her younger children, again moved to Newton where she made her home at 414 East 4th Street until the Lord called her home.

On the 10th day of February of this year she became seriously ill and she fully realized that the Lord had numbered her days. She departed this life on the 18th of February at 5:50 A. M. at the age of 79 years, 1 month and 4 days.

She leaves to mourn her departure, five daughters, three sons, three daughters-in-law, twenty grandchildren and many friends.

She will always be remembered as a devoted and loving mother, grandmother and friend.

"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

Benjamin J. Kaufman, son of Jacob P. and Katherine Schrag Kaufman, was born December 10, 1886, near Marion, South Dakota, and died at his home near Marion, February 12, 1937.

In his childhood days he had the misfortune to lose a foot in a mowing machine which, however, did not hinder him from bravely striving to be of service to God and his fellow-man. In May 1904, he was baptized by Rev. C. Kaufman and became a faithful member of the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church, which he has served as teacher, Sunday School superintendent, and deacon.

He received his education in the country schools, Freeman College, Bethel College, Presbyterian College of Dubuque, Iowa, and the University of South Dakota. He was married to Miss Lydia Schmidt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Schmidt.

He has served in the teaching profession in Freeman Junior College from 1910-17, three years as principal. He served the Marion High School and others in the same capacity and was county superintendent two terms. Twenty years of his life he dedicated to educational work. In 1929 he moved to the farm to seek for himself and his family a more quiet and permanent home.

Following a lingering decline in his health since last spring, he submitted to a major operation toward the last of August. His recovery was only temporary. In December he learned that cancer had developed and that at best only a few months were left for him to live. With courage and fortitude he at once prepared to order his life and family affairs. To the minutest detail he had prepared his departure and the closing of the record of his life. His testimony was that though he would like to rewrite some chapters of the record of his life, he knew it was covered with the blood of Christ his Saviour.

He leaves to mourn his early departure his wife, a daughter and her husband, two sons, his aged mother, two brothers, four sisters, many relatives and friends.

The funeral service was February 14 in charge of his pastor, Rev. Albert Claassen. Rev. Alfred P. Waltner and Rev. John J. Schrag brought messages of comfort to the bereft family and to the many friends who had assembled in the Salem-Zion Church to pay respect to him whom they had loved.

—On Tuesday evening, February 2, at the San Marcos Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, California, the Rev. Don Turner of the Orinoco River Mission brought an illustrated message on manners and customs and the great need in Venezuela for the "Good News." Roman Catholicism has such a grip on these people, and when they are converted by the Gospel, persecution usually follows. Nevertheless most of them stand true.—G. S.

—At a recent all-day meeting of the pastors of Cottonwood County, Minnesota, including seven Mennonites, it was resolved to send a memorial to the state legislature, favoring the passage of a bill designating 3.2 beer as an intoxicating beverage. They also listened to an address on Pre- and Post-millenialism.—Observer.

—"Der Fuehrer" Adolph Hitler has given the evangelical Germans the privilege of voting on the question, whether or not the church is disposed to adhere to the national-sociatlistic doctrine (N. S. Gospel). The adherents of the evangelical faith are to vote upon these questions: 1. Shall the evangelical church become an instrument of the national-socialistic state? 2. Shall the new gospel of blood and race purification be preached in the churches? 3. Shall the Old Testament be revised? All friends of Germany wish that the present government of the land might soon see the need of allowing the adherents of the Christian faith to follow and practice the dictates of their conscience and their Bible. What the country needs is a return to the faith of Luther, and it would win back its former prestige, at least religiously.

— The anti-religious Propaganda Centre of Moscow distributes over a million pieces of anti-religious literature each month. Just recently this office directed the establishment of forty different publishing houses and book depositories for the production and distribution of bolshevistic literature in Spain and Argentine alone. Moscow's budget for the spreading of anti-religious propaganda in all the world amounts to over five million rubles per month. The titles of some of the articles released regularly are: "Twelve Arguments for the Non-Existence of God," "The Religious Pest," "The Crucified Monster." These texts are illustrated with cartoons and pictures of the most obscene type. The arrest and imprisonment of clergymen continues unabated.

— Since August 1933, Germany has made loans amounting to 420 million mark to 700,000 couples of newly-weds. It has also appropriated 123 million mark to help take care of two million children once, and larger sums to groom 300,000 children steadily.

— A group of American Jewish leaders recently launched a campaign to collect a sum of $4,500,000 for the support of an international program for the restoration and rebuilding of the Holy Land for Jewish fugitives from all parts of the world.

— D. D. Bargen, enterprising Mennonite of Mountain Lake, Minnesota, is establishing a factory for the construction of streamlined trailer houses. The houses ride on two wheels, measure 7 by 14 1-2 feet, have a ceiling 6 1-3 feet high, and weigh 1600 pounds. They are equipped with a folding table, wash-stand, two bunks, complete with springs and mattresses, four folding chairs, and electric lights. There is also room for two folding cots, so that four people can be easily accommodated. The trailer house with complete equipment is to cost $250.—Mt. Lake Observer.

THE RAREST TALENT

"Mother, look at this!" fourteen-year-old Emily Stevenson exclaimed, rushing into the room where her parents were seated. "Do you think I might join?"

Her mother took the proffered paper, "Six Weeks Course in Home Economics!" she read. "Open to all women and to girls over thirteen years of age. $10 fee." She looked at Emily. "Seems quite a bit for things you can learn just as well at home," she said. "Joan's music will cost us a lot this summer. Besides, I don't know as we could spare you every morning to attend this class. You'll have to look after Jimmie."

Emily's face showed her disappointment, but she said nothing. The steady rhythm of the piano in the living-room ceased abruptly. Quick footsteps sounded in the hall. Seventeen-year-old Joan appeared.

"Can't you take better care of the baby, Emily?" she demanded crossly. "He's bothering me. I should think you could do that much—"

Emily hurried out, Joan following and still scolding. A moment later, the piano was heard again.

"Isn't she ambitious?" Mrs. Stevenson said proudly. "She certainly ought to get somewhere."

"Who?" Mr. Stevenson turned from the radio he was adjusting and faced his wife.

"Who?" she echoed in surprise. "Why Joan, of course."

"Didn't Emily show just as much ambition by wanting to take that course in economics?"

"O, yes." Mrs. Stevenson dismissed the matter lightly. "I can teach her most of that at home. I need her to take care of Jimmie. With a talented girl like Joan in the family, we all have to make sacrifices."

"Joan's talented," Mr. Stevenson admitted, "and ambitious, and industrious, but to my way of thinking, her talent doesn't compare with Emily's."

"Emily's—talent?" Mrs. Stevenson was genuinely bewildered. "Emily is a dear, sweet child and a great comfort to me, but she hasn't any talent that I know of. She doesn't care to learn music, nor dancing, nor—"

"Those things!" Mr. Stevenson waved them aside. "Any girl can learn them. I can name you a dozen girls right in this block who do one or the other. Emily has the rarest talent there is, these days, and the finest—homemaking. We must encourage it."

"I do," his wife answered promptly. "I let her cook, and arrange the furniture, and fix drapes and—"

"And take care of Jimmie," laughed her husband. "Isn't that a part of homemaking?"

"Certainly; and, of course, it's right and proper for Emily to take care of him some of the time, but Joan should do her share, too, and leave Emily free to 'practice' her chosen work, the same as Joan practices hers."

Mrs. Stevenson was thoughtful for a while. "Perhaps you're right," she said at length. "I hadn't thought of homemaking as a talent to be developed."

She hurried to the window, through which came shouts of baby laughter, mingled with Emily's gay tones.

She called to her. "Come in a moment, dear," she said. As Emily appeared, she continued, "Your father thinks we can manage about the course."

Emily gave a gasp of delight and hugged first one parent and then the other. "May I try out some of the things I learn, at home?" she asked eagerly.

"Indeed you may. I shall want you to."

"O, that will be fun. Thank you both. I had better run back to Jimmie, now."

Her parents gazed after her fondly, as she hurried away.

"You're right, John, she has the rarest of talents," murmured Mrs. Stevenson. "I wonder why you realized it before I did."

"You see," laughed Mr. Stevenson, "her mother has the same gift. That's how I came to know its importance."

Knowledge of our duties is the most useful part of philosophy.

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

Out in the missionfields we do not stress denominational differences as they are usually stressed here in America. It would be very confusing to do so and much harm has been done by those missions that have occasionally done so. Yet, in times like these, when the whole world seems to be at the brink of another war, interest has centered in the study of those Christian groups who have since early times emphasized the doctrines of Non-Resistance. Even such a world renowned Oriental Christian as Toyhiko Kagawa has called attention to the Mennonites and their stand against War as an example for the rest of Christendom to follow.

Surely when others are so interested in our history and spiritual heritage, we should appreciate it more and teach our children and others whom we instruct about the great truths Mennonites have loved and suffered for. Even on the missionfields it is not amiss to do so. It is therefore a pleasure for me to devote the space assigned to our weekly Book Chat to the following letter and appeal for books from our dear friend Rev. S. F. Pannebecker, of China. (Any books sent me will be cheerfully forwarded to China.)

Dear Friends:

During the last semester of our Bible School I had the privilege of leading a group of Chinese students through a study of the Reformation period in Church History. The text that we used contained no reference whatever to the Mennonites or Anabaptists. Perhaps for the ordinary Chinese student it may be unnecessary to burden him with the story of a small group which he may never encounter but for our students I felt it was essential that they know something of the history of the group with which they are allied. We spent several class sessions going over a brief outline which I prepared and the students were interested and amazed at the story of fervent religious life and tenacity to ideals in the face of persecution. Another year I hope to present the story in better fashion and more complete.

To do this properly I need more books on Mennonite history. Instead of purchasing these at considerable expense the thought has come to me that there are probably many who would like to contribute used books for this purpose. If the books are in reasonably good condition they would be just as serviceable as new. Below is a list of the books which I would be particularly interested in securing. To facilitate shipping and avoid unnecessary duplications I suggest that such books as you would like to contribute be sent to Mr. F. J. Wiens, Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Ind., who has agreed to forward them.

While on this subject of books, what happens to your books after they have been read? Some should be kept for future reference no doubt, but a good many could be passed on. When you have such an opportunity remember your missionary friends. They have no access to a library and books are doubly appreciated. Their range of interests are about the same as yours and they have no objection to reading used books. There is an added advantage in that books are not subject to duty, and postage is reasonable.

Following is a list of the books in Mennonite history which would be of special interest in preparing a syllabus on that subject in Chinese:

Bax—Rise and Fall of the Anabaptists
Cassel, D. K.—Geschichte der Mennoniten
Brown, J. N.—Life and Times of Menno Simons
Bender and Horsch—Mennon Simons' Life and writings. Complete Works of Menno Simon
Horsch—Menno Simons
Jones, R. M.—Spiritual Reformers in the 16th and 17th Centuries
Lindsey, T. M.—History of the Reformation. (Volume on The Reformation in Germany)
Newman, A. H.—History of Anti-Pedobaptism
Smith, C. H.—The Mennonites
Smith, C. H.—The Mennonites in History
Smith, C. H.—Menno Simons
Smith, C. H.—The Mennonites in America
Smith, C. H.—The Coming of the Russian Mennonites
Smith, C. H.—The Martyrs' Mirror
Vos—Menno Simons
Wedel—Sketches from Church History for Mennonite Schools

Very sincerely yours,
S. F. Pannebecker

—At the recent conference of Evangelical church leaders of the German Evangelical Church of South Europe, held in Vienna, a statement was drawn up against bolshevism, which was described as "the last consequences of godlessness." "The nations," the statement runs, "are for the most part still only living on the inheritance of thousand year long religious education" which, in the view of the growing godless powers, is not enough. . . The leaders summon "all Evangelical Christians who are conscious of their responsibility to active participation in such a struggle, through a clear confession of Evangelical Christianity, through the preservation of the faith by an attitude of life that is consistent with it and through the active promotion of efforts directed towards the creation of a true fellowship."

Safety Last. Philosophers, sages, poets have left behind many wise statements or maxims that men treasure, observe, and even live by. Socrates, the Greek, said, "Know thyself"; Marcus Aurelius, the Roman, "Control thyself"; Jesus, the Christ, "Deny thyself"; and more recently we are being admonished to look for "Safety first." It is very important to know one's self—one's strength, weakness, capacities, possibilities. It is a splendid accomplishment to be able to control one's self, one's temper and passions, so as to avoid possible explosions. In this mechanistic world, especially, it is the part of wisdom to think of safety first and to make every effort to preserve our God-given lives as long as possible. But the highest art of living emanates from self-denial. "He that loveth his life shall lose it; and he that hateth his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal." Jesus came to save us, to give us life by sacrificing his own. To do that, he had to go through the process which he so fitly portrays in this, the greatest of life-principles, "Except a corn of wheat fall in the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." Applied to man's life, this means positive self-denial.

A life of self-denial is a beautiful life. Was there ever a life more charming, more admired than the life of Jesus, our Saviour, or that of his most worthy follower, Paul, and scores of others whose life was rooted in Him? It is a rich and abundant life; for what is it that gives more inward satisfaction, more genuine happiness than spending one's self in loving service for others? It is the freest life; for it is the only type of life that is not obsessed by fear nor haunted by phantoms of unforgiven sins. It is a victorious life; for there are no barriers that a life of self-denial cannot break, no obstacles that it cannot overcome—think of Stanley, Livingstone, Grenfell, Moody. It is a fruitful, productive life. As the grain in the ground spends itself to propagate a new plant that produces more grain, so such a life sacrifices itself in giving life to others who are dead in sin, ignorance, and superstition. Yes, the Jesus kind of life, the life of self-denial, is not animated by the maxim, "Safety first." It is safety for others that constitutes its chief objective, its foremost concern. Its own safety comes last. That will be amply taken care of by Him who has the life eternal.

Prosperity and Obedience. Efforts have repeatedly been made to link up weather and crop conditions with the movement and behavior of the planets. "Dr. Harlan True Stetson of Harvard University states that periods of many sun-spots result in:

1. Increased heat, hence greater invigoration from the ocean and more rain for the land, bringing farmers bumper crops and money to circulate.
2. Possible ionizing of the air, bringing buoyancy and health to humanity.
3. Emanations from the spotted sun which stimulate human beings and make them optimistic."

This sounds plausible. But let us see what God's word teaches. All through Old Testament history God caused the children of Israel to prosper and gave them good crops when they served and obeyed him, whereas, when they persisted in their sins, they were visited with drouths, famines, and even pestilence. And in Malachi 3:10-11a God plainly shows that in the last analysis he is the author or source of prosperity, provided man meets his terms. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

Pre-Easter Thought.—And thus Jesus had lived, and thus the world rewarded Him! For treachery and selfish greed, for destructive ambition and guilty wealth, the world has a diadem. For perfect holiness it has a cross. His own disowned Him. They had repaid by hatred that life of love. Envy, malice, slander, false witness, had done its work. He had been haunted with a price upon his head, mocked, scourged, crowned with thorns, then hung on the cross. Thus had the world shown its gratitude to its Redeemer. Could there be any greater proof of man's ruin than the fact that this was the sole reward which was requieted to immeasurable love?—Farrar.

Experience of Mr. K. T. Johnson

(Concluded)

I want to tell you something else. Before I was converted, I was the greatest smoker among my people. In my work I had a pile of cigarettes near me to last for the whole day. I liked smoking better than the food I ate. Smoking was to be my dessert. When my meal was not yet finished, I would start smoking cigarettes. I did not care for any fruit. It was hard to put off.

When the day of baptism came, I was also in the group. We were baptized on a Sunday afternoon. We all received the Holy Spirit and came home happy. Our burdens of sin were all rolled away. We were as if we were going out from under a heavy load. When I came back, supper was ready. I began to look around in my house, and in the corner were hanging a bunch of empty tobacco sacks. I did not know that I had my house decorated with thirty sacks of Bull Durham hanging on the wall. I put all of them into the fire. On top of the shelves were standing boxes of Prince Albert tobacco; these too went into the fire. In my closet I found the things I had used in the snake dances. I took down the feathers (prayer feathers) and other ceremonial articles and made a bonfire out of them, saying, "Let it all be burned, for now I am a Christian." I believe that Jesus died for our sins, and that he rose again, went into heaven to prepare a place for His own and that He is coming again to take us home.

After that the devil picked up tobacco sacks and piled them before me that I should smoke. It was a hard temptation. I dreamed at night that I smoked. It was hard to overcome. Not a man can overcome it in his own power, but by the power of the Spirit. This is my own experience. A child of God should be clean as I understand it, "Be ye holy for I am holy. Touch not unclean things."

We Hopis have some kind of teaching of the underworld. When the Hopis were still there, they became very wicked, having many wives, practised fornication, and became murderers. The chief wanted to punish the evil-doers and left with half of the people and came to this place. The elders warned the people of all kinds of troubles. As soon as they came here they should all live a peaceable life.

Now that I am converted, I have received a better life from my Saviour. I began to live a cleaner life. The scripture says that we shall keep away from our mouth everything filthy. I am not ashamed to say that I have not gone to the dances for eighteen years, not even to the white man's dances, nor to picture shows. I have received help from the Holy Spirit to control myself not to smoke. Now I can smell people who have smoked when they are yards away. I think that is the way the Lord Jesus smells the unclean things of sin. Man must be clean and not mix in with other things. Christ was clean and the Christian must be clean also. I could tell much, but this is all I'll say.

Note: As he has indicated, Brother Johnson has been a Christian for eighteen years. I as a missionary can say he is a true Christian. When I came to this field four years ago, the Lord gave him to me as an interpreter. He knows the Scriptures very well and is a help to the other Christians because he understands them.—John P. Suderman.

Bluffton College News Report

The Bible Lectures as Reported for "The Witmarsum"

By Hiram Hilty

"Sometimes I get so homesick for God that I can hardly wait for a quiet moment to talk with him." This remark made by Dr. Albert C. Wieand, formerly president and now professor in Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, is characteristic of the tenor of the Bible lectures this year. In the midst of a work-a-day world in which we as college students necessarily devote the major portion of our time to intellectual pursuits, we have been reminded that God is still in his heaven and that we are missing the vital things in life if we fail to establish contact with Him.

The morning lectures in the college chapel have been devoted to a study of the philosophy of prayer. Although Dr. Wieand avoids the use of superfluous and technical language, he is in no sense unaware of the intellectual problem which prayer presents to the college students. As one who has himself studied widely in addition to having been an educator for many years, he is familiar with the student mind and presents his subject in the light of current as well as historical science and philosophy.

"Religion is fellowship with God" . . . "Prayer is putting one's mind in tune with the Infinite. God is not a prankster who does things according to whim. He is orderly. He established a cosmos and can be depended upon to follow pre-established laws. Why then pray? Because our feeble intellects cannot fathom the infinite wisdom of the will of God. By praying we attune ourselves to God in such a way that we are willing to accept His will and by so doing free ourselves from the hazards of an unguided life."

Dr. Wieand has been to us an apostle of personal religion. In sharp contrast to the current emphasis on social ethics, he has stressed the necessity of a vital personal relationship with God. The lecturer's own calm mysticism cannot help having influenced our student body.

The Vesper lecture last Sunday afternoon on "Practicing the Presence of God" and the evening lectures at the First Mennonite Church have been well attended by the general public. The Vesper Choir sang preceding the lecture on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. This group of lectures has been entirely expository in nature and was based on choice portions of the Bible, such as the Twenty-third Psalm, the Lord's Prayer, the Book of Philippians, "Paul's Love Letter," and the eternally alluring and baffling Book of Revelations. In the course of many years of personally studying and teaching Biblical Literature, the lecturer has accumulated a wealth of information on the subject. He has also travelled extensively in the Orient.

In addition to his lectures, Dr. Wieand has been open to interviews by students and on Thursday afternoon held a question-answer period with the "Y" men. In his concluding lecture he presented a thrilling acount of his personal experience in the Orient, "Kidnapped by the Arabs."

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

4. The Teacher.—"The teacher is a lighter of torches amid the darkness of earth, that his fellow-men may follow and find the way.

The teacher enkindles the candles in the souls of men, that they may learn to know the hidden places of their own spirit.

The teacher is a learner who has sat at the feet of the aged and garnered from their golden treasuries in silence.

The teacher is the friend of little children, molding their gentle spirits after the heavenly pattern of the angels.

The teacher is a cupbearer, not only to earth's kings, but to earth's slaves, that all may drink of the wine of wisdom and be glad.

The teacher is he whose eyes have been opened to see the stars and whose ears have been touched that he may hear the weeping of the willows.

The teacher is he for whom a book is a jeweled casket and a printed page is a mystic messenger of the soul.

The teacher's heart has been quickened from the death of self-interest and made aware of the anguish of his fellow-men.

The teacher walks with God and with man in reverent wonder that so great a privilege should be his portion.

The teacher feels with joy the touch of Time's fleeting hours upon his cheeks, but his spirit lives and breathes in the quiet heights of Eternity."

ABOUT FREEMAN COLLEGE

Our Friend J. J. Mendel, veteran editor of the Freeman (South Dakota) Courier, has an article in the Feb. 25 issue of his paper that is so pertinent to the life and experience of that school and to our Mennonite colleges in general that we reproduce it here in full:

"In our last article about Freeman College we said the big question nowadays is "Are you able to pay" and that a Mennonite membership of approximately 8000 ought to be able to pay the debt, if they feel like doing it. We have never lost faith in the common people. The only thing that is needed is to convince them that the institution is needed to give our young people a Christian Education. School work is mission work because we cannot have churches without Christian Schools. If the churches need the school the ministers of the churches must be the biggest boosters for the school, because they are the leaders of the congregations. If you find a congregation that is not for the school you will find, as a rule, that the school does not have the support of the minister. The ministers have put the school on the map and have kept it on the map by creating sentiment for the school in their respective congregations. Ministers who have a wrong impression of the school work here ought to be visited by ministers who are convinced that the school is an absolutely necessity. We have an element, and always had it, that advertises the weaknesses of the school, and the less they know the more they blow. If you are a friend of the school and see something you don't like, tell the school, if you see something you like tell others."

Here is an interesting and encouraging letter from a brother in Altona, Manitoba:

This is just to thank you for your prompt attention to my complaints in regard to THE MENNONITE and also for the sample copies which reached me in perfect condition.

Enclosed find draft for which I would like THE MENNONITE to be sent to:

Henry J. Siemens, Brandon, Manitoba
The Winkler High School, Winkler, Manitoba
The Altona High School, Altona, Manitoba

Further would like to encourage you and your Board of Publication to "peg away" at the gates of our Mennonite congregations in Canada. We are dead, it is true, but only as dead as a tulip bulb in the fall. Wishing you our Master's richest blessings, I am, Sincerely yours, John Siemens

Who will emulate the fine example set by this good brother in having THE MENNONITE sent as a gift to one or two high schools in his vicinity?—Editor.

Representatives from Historic Peace Churches Present Position to Government

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary
General Conference Peace Committee

Friday afternoon, February 12th, 1937, saw the culmination that has been growing in the hearts of many; that a formal presentation of convictions on war and peace ought to be made by the Historic Peace Churches, to the President of the United States of America, and through him to our Government.

A member of the Society of Friends made the arrangement whereby the representatives should have the opportunity to present their beliefs to the President in the While House library. President Roosevelt met us in an informal manner, with no reporters or attendants present. The cordial manner in which the meeting was conducted by the President served to make it a pleasant and we trust profitable conference.

You may ask: "How was the statement drawn up?" No single individual is the author. Various representatives from different branches of Mennonites labored in compiling and revising the statement. The Biblical principles, in the attached statement, which was also submitted, can be found in the Mennonite Articles of Faith compiled by Cornelius Ris.

Delegation of Brethren, Friends, and Mennonites who presented to President Roosevelt Memorials of our joint Convictions on Peace and Nonresistance, February 12, 1937.

Alvin T. Coate, A. J. Neuenschwander, C. L. Graber, Rufus M. Jones, Paul H. Bowman, Rufus D. Bowman.

A copy of Dr. C. Henry Smith's book: "Menno Simons, Apostle of the Non-resistant Life," with pertinent passages marked, was also presented to the President.

When the twenty minute conference came to a close, the chairman of our delegation, Dr. Rufus M. Jones, asked whether it would be permissible to publish the contents of our statements in our Denominational papers. This permission was graciously granted and so without further comment, we submit the combined statement of the three groups.

February 12, 1937

Dear Mr. President:

We welcome this opportunity to associate with representatives of the other historic peace churches in extending to you, Mr. President, our earnest sympathy and encouragement in your efforts for peace. But with the drift toward war in the world, we feel constrained to express again our fundamental convictions upon these great issues.

For almost three hundred years the Society of Friends has labored to do away with war by first doing away with the causes and occasions for it. It has endeavored in its own circle to remove the roots and seeds of war by forming an atmosphere of life that makes war unthinkable.

During the World War, Friends carried on an experiment of love and service by reconstructing many destroyed villages in the war zone of northern France. As soon as the Peace Treaty was signed they went to Germany and fed the German children who had been starved by the blockade, and carried on extensive relief and rehabilitation also in Poland, Austria and Russia.

Friends as religious people have always tried to keep to the ways of peace and have endeavored to be peace makers both in peace time and in war time. Their message is a personal conviction, based on the Christian way of life, revealed in the New Testament, the voice of conscience revealed in the soul and on the conviction that love is the greatest power in the world.

Insofar as they are true to these principles, Friends will make heavy sacrifices to transmit their spirit of love and faith, but they cannot, as followers of Christ, endorse war methods or support them, or be themselves a voluntary part of a system engaged in making war.

We feel an obligation to make this conviction a matter of record with our Government now, in peace time, not only in behalf of members of the Society of Friends, but for any others who, for religious or conscientious reasons would take a similar position.

Respectfully yours,
Signed on behalf of the Society of Friends

Dear Mr. Roosevelt:

As representatives of the Mennonite Church, one of the churches historically known as opposed to war and in favor of peace for the sake of Christ, a position held for four hundred years, we welcome the opportunity to address you on the matter of peace and nonresistance, particularly because of your generally recognized favorable attitude on this momentous question.

Your recent utterances at Buenos Aires, as well as your other declarations on this subject, we trust will be epochal in helping to usher in a new era of good will among nations and to replace the now prevailing attitude of mutual fear, suspicion, and in some cases, even hatred.

We wish to assert again our patriotism and wholehearted loyalty to our country, even now as we appear before you to state our inability, on the grounds of our conscience and religious convictions, to participate in war or military service of any type. As a matter of record now, we humbly state to our Government that, before God and our conscience, we cannot assume responsibilities or services, the purpose and end of which is the destruction of human life.

In the attached manuscript we present for your consideration a statement of the principles of the Mennonite Church, bearing on the matter of war and military service.

We thank you most sincerely for this privilege of expressing our convictions before you as President of the United States of America, and wish to assure our Government once more of our loyalty to our country, and our cheerful willingness to serve it in any capacity, the purpose of which is the protection of life.

Our age-long opposition to war is indicated by the fact that many of the Mennonites who first came to this country did so because of military conscription abroad. During and since the World War, in the emergency relief work, we have assisted in the migration of many thousands of people to the United States, Canada, Paraguay, and Brazil, from countries where political, religious or military persecution exists today. We are always willing to help in the common good and welfare of those who are in distress or need.

Very respectfully yours,
A. J. Neuenschwander

Dear Mr. President:

The Church of the Brethren numbers approximately one hundred and sixty thousand members in the United States. We are chiefly a rural people, emphasizing the sanctity of the home, honest toil, plain spiritual living, and our daily duty toward helping humanity.

We love our country and endeavor to be worthy citizens by living honorable lives and working for that which makes for the highest welfare of our country. It is our conviction that true love for our country does not mean hatred of others, and that only the application of the principles of peace, love and international goodwill will make for the highest welfare of our country. Our faith is in security through love.

As a people we have consistently opposed war throughout our entire history of over two hundred and twenty-five years. Our opposition to war is based upon the plain teachings of the Gospel of Christ. It is our conviction that all war is incompatible with the spirit, example and teachings of Jesus; and that it is wrong for Christians to support or engage in it. We give our supreme allegiance to God and believe that this allegiance commits us to the highest standard of Christian citizenship by which we can serve our country and our God.

We are actively interested in the prevention of war, and are doing our utmost through peace education and service to foster goodwill between individual citizens, groups of citizens, and nations. We strongly favor all efforts of our government to keep the United States out of war, to pass a strong neutrality law, and to establish peace in the world.

We earnestly solicit your cooperation, Mr. President, now, and if, or when a war comes in discussing and dealing with the types of service in which those of us with deep religious convictions on peace may serve in the spirit of Christ with constructive benefit to humanity and without compromise of conscience.

Mennonite Principles on War and Non-Resistence

(Copy presented to President Roosevelt)

The following is a summary of the attitude of Mennonites on the subject of War and the principles of non-resistance which have been adhered to by Mennonites for more than four hundred years and some of the Biblical grounds upon which the same are based.

1. The spirit of sacrificial service, love, and goodwill promotes the highest well-being of man and society, whereas the spirit of hatred, ill-will, and fear—inherent in war—destroys. Matt. 5:9—Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. Rom. 14:19—Let us therefore follow after the things which make for peace.

2. Through faith we have become partakers of the character and Spirit of our Lord, Jesus Christ, who lived among us as the incarnation of the God of love, and we are thereby constrained to love all men, even our enemies. Matt. 5:44; Luke 6:27—But I say unto you, love your enemies, do good to them that hate you. Rom. 12:20, 21—Therefore if thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink; for in so doing thou shalt heap coals of fire on his head. Overcome evil with good.

3. War is sin! The destruction of life is wrong. It is contrary to the Spirit of Christ and Christian charity, indeed to everything that Christ represents. War is wrong in spirit and in method, since its object and practice is destruction, hence we hold it inconsistent to participate in war. Matt. 26:52—Then Jesus said unto him, put up again thy sword into his place; for they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

4. Christ forbade His followers not only all practice of revenge, but even all vindictiveness from which we draw our principles of non-resistance. Rom. 12:19—

Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place to wrath: for it is written, vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Matt. 5:38-39—Ye have heard that it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, that ye resist not evil, but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

5. Our first and highest allegiance is to Christ whom we are determined to follow in all matters. Acts 3:29—Then Peter and the other apostles answered and said, We ought to obey God rather than men.

6. In keeping with the above expresed principles we believe ourselves sincerely loyal to our country and believe that we can thus best serve its interests and highest welfare.

Under God, whom we serve, we commit ourselves to set forth in this true way of life this statement of position and to declare ourselves willing to assume the obligations and sacrifices attending its practices.

A LETTER

2956 N. 12th St., Philadelphia, Penn.
February 19, 1937.

Dear Brother T.:

For some time I had in mind to give a write-up of how THE MENNONITE came into existence as a contribution to Mennonite History. At last I came to it, but I am sorry that my mind fails to function as it used to. The paper needs editing and correcting. That is not due to carelessness, but rather to my failing eye-sight—a cataract. Then, too, physically, I am on the downward grade and slipping fast. But what else can you expect when you are on the edge of the eighty-seventh year? . . . It is twenty-two years today that my wife passed to her heavenly home, and I still feel the loss of her companionship.

With sincere regards I beg to remain your,

N. B. Grubb.

Friend Grubb, who has been in the ministry for sixty-five years, is the nestor among our aged pastors. He has lived a very active and fruitful life. He was pastor of the First Church, Philadelphia, for almost a generation, has been a member of the Board of Publication, and was its chairman for a good many years. Just a few years ago he finished the translation of the minutes of the Eastern District Conference, from 1847-1910, into English; he has also made a record of eighteen Mennonite cemeteries, including about 25,000 persons who have died since 1700.

Should we not brighten this good brother's declining days with a message of cheer occasionally? You older brethren, especially, who have known and loved and worked with him in Conferences and on Boards, won't you kindly remember him?—Editor.

JESUS PRAYING FOR HIS DISCIPLES

John 16:1 to 17:26 Printed, John 16:5-7; 17:14-26

Jesus Promises the Comforter vs 5-7

In his last intimate conversation with his disciples, Jesus tells them about the coming Comforter. Christ has been their comforter while with them. Now he promises to send another Comforter who will be with them forever (John 14:16). Now he was ready to go his way (v. 5), the way of the Cross. It was profitable for them that He should go, (v7) for he was sending another Friend, who could be much closer to them than Jesus could be in the flesh. It is more important to have the Holy Spirit with them in all his fullness than to have Christ remain in his bodily presence. The Comforter was to take the place held by Jesus himself in their lives. By his help they could continue to enjoy a richer fellowship with Christ than while he was bodily present with them.

The Master at Prayer 17:1-5

In these verses Christ prays that God may glorify him, that He may glorify the Father. He has glorified the Father in faithfully doing the work given him (v4).

His prayer now is that through the crucial events in his life, the work of redemption may be fully accomplished. Jesus gave special time to prayer in the pressing hours of his life. The more serious the work before him, the more time he gave to prayer. On the last night he went out into the garden to pray (Matt. 26:36). The Calvary victory was won in the Garden prayer-meeting with the Father.

Jesus Prays for the Apostles vs 6-19

Jesus prayed for his beloved Twelve for two definite things. First, that they may be kept from sin and Satan. While with them He had kept and guarded them (v12). Now He tenderly entrusts them to the care of the Father. He knew they would be disliked, even hated, by the world and would need sustaining strength. He would have them remain in the world (v15), so they might be useful in his work. He prayed that they might be kept safely from the power of sin in this world. The true disciple is IN the world but not OF the world.

Jesus' second petition is that they may be sanctified (vs 17-19). Jesus had willingly sanctified himself (v19), set himself apart for the great work of redemption. God's word, "thy truth" (v17) is to be the means of their sanctification. Jesus set himself apart that we might be set apart by God for His service (v19) in full surrender and consecration, enriched through the power of "the truth"—God's life-giving Word.

Jesus Prayer for His Own, the Church vs 20-26

Jesus' prayer looked far beyond the group of the Apostles. It included all who should in all future time believe in Him as their Saviour (v20). Jesus' disciples are to be witnesses and win others. Jesus' first petition for the Church is "that they all may be one" (v21). He dearly longed for the harmony and unity of his followers in all ages. The unity of His followers will help to convince the world that God sent Jesus (v21). A truly united Church is an unanswerable argument for the Christian faith. The true disciples of Christ shall possess the glory He had from the Father (vs 22,23). God loves those in Christ even as He loves Christ himself.

His second petition for the Church is that they may be with Him in his heavenly glory (v24). Here He reveals the final purpose for his disciples. Jesus shared all with his disciples here. He wishes to share all the glory of the other world with them.

There is no voice which has ever been heard, either in heaven or on earth, more holy, more fruitful, more sublime, than this prayer offered by the Son Himself."—Melanchton.

Practical Truth

There is a oneness of spirit among all true Christians, in whom the Holy Spirit dwells.

Sermon Sketch

J. R. Thierstein

"Behold My Hands" John 20:27

When the risen Christ appeared to the Apostles the second time, he said to the incredulous Thomas, "Behold my hands." The Bible has much to say about hands and the use to which they are put. The hand is used to bless and to curse, to save and to destroy, to smite and to soothe, to heal and to wound, to express joy and displeasure, and what not. The hand is said to serve as an indicator of certain characteristics in man. Thus a hand with short, stubby fingers is said to indicate the mechanic; one with long, slender fingers, the artist; one with rather large, spreading fingers, benevolence and open-mindedness; one with fingers close together, secretiveness. But our Scripture passage directs us to behold, to interpret Jesus' hands.

Jesus' hands are toiling hands. "And what mean such mighty works wrought by his hands." Mark 2:6. When on earth, he was constantly mending broken, maimed, frail human bodies; or again, he was extricating sinners from their fallen positions, or breaking bread that thousands might be fed, or extending his hands while dealing out blessings. Can a true follower of his be a drone, an idler?

Jesus' hands are praying hands. During his earthly pilgrimage he prayed much, extending his blessed arms and hands to his Father in prayer and supplication. Day-in, day-out, often far into the night, he kept on working and praying, not for himself but for others. Work and pray! What a fine example placed before us by our Master!

Jesus' hands were accustomed to search the Scriptures. His fingers were habituated to leaf through God's word in search of the truth. O how well versed he was in it! How fittingly he could quote it! Do our Bibles show unmistakable signs of use? Are the leaves worn by being turned over and over again? If not, our Christian life is impoverished, lacks much of the comfort and charm that it might have.

Jesus' hands are pierced hands. He shows us his bleeding hands, his wounded head, and his opened side and says, "See, all this I have done for thee, what dost thou for me?" Are our hands wounded? Have they ever been really hurt by giving, by working for Christ's sake? Are we bent on doing the things that he did? Are we going about doing good?

Jesus' hands are beckoning hands. In spirit he is still beckoning us, saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Matt. 11:28. "Behold, I stand at the door and knock; if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him, and he with me." Rev. 4:20.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska

The Bethesda Bible School gave its closing program in the Bethesda Church, February 21, to a large and appreciative audience. It was interesting and impressive, and a good testimony for the teacher, the students, and the work in general.

If there ever was a time when sound Bible instruction was needed, it is at the present time. We should have more schools where Jesus is not only stressed as an ideal, example, or great teacher. but where he is stressed as our only Saviour, the Son of God, with his virgin birth, his death on the cross, his ascension, and his coming again to receive his church in the air and for the judgment before the great white throne. The gospel of Jesus Christ includes these four major parts with additional minor parts.

Some forty years ago we heard Rev. C. Showalter of Iowa, say, "Einigkeit in den Hauptsachen und Freiheit in den Nebensachen," or unity in the essentials and liberty in the non-essentials. Only in Christ, the son of the living God, can we be one and possess the real essentials.

But, unfortunately, men so often stress the non-essentials which have no saving power. They place the ideal and the exemplified Christ in the foreground and don't even mention His saving power as the real esential. He is an idealistic Christ, but He is more than that—He is a Saviour whom we must accept as such or we are eternally lost.

Psalm 133:1—Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity.

About seventy serenaders, according to custom, ushered in the New Year of 1937. Starting from the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, some from sister churches participating, they sang good wishes for the New Year, especially to the sick, aged, and shut-ins.

December 28 Rev. P. R. Schroeder addressed a union meeting of the four churches on the European situation.

Friday, January 1, 1937, the yearly congregational meeting was held. We have a membership of 535; in 1936 there were seventeen marriages, nineteen births, six deaths, eight new members received, and eight transferred by letter. All business was disposed of in a pleasing way. Most books closed with a fair balance on hand. Our minister, Rev. P. A. Kliewer, was again elected. All told, we have a blessed start for 1937, for which we praise God from whom all blessings flow.

On January 17 we dismissed church services in the evening to attend the Swiss Mennonite Community Men's Chorus' sacred concert directed by Alvin Burkholder. This was enjoyed by all because of the wholesome and inspiring singing.

Our prayers are continuing for Fanny Amstutz who has spent some time in the hospital at Bluffton. May we admonish our readers to pray for the young maiden according to James 5:15.

At this writing Mrs. P. A. Kliewer is convalescing from a serious operation. May God add His blessing is our prayer.

The Gospel Team programs are very beneficial to our young people. The chorus is rehearsing for the Easter service. It is also looking forward to begin on the rehearsal of the "Elijah" after Easter. This mixed chorus is under the direction of Miss Mabel Amstutz.

The illustrative lessons by the minister, prior to the sermon are of interest. The interesting discourses after Sunday School by our Superintendent are very much appreciated.

Some of our active organizations in the church are: The Ladies Missionary Society, the Girls Missionary Band, the Senior, Intermediate and Junior Christian Endeavor Societies, and the Gospel Team.

The Gospel Team met at the home of David Niswander on Tuesday, February 9. The speaker was Ezra Steiner, a returned missionary from India and Tibet.

Every Thursday evening the Sunday School teachers meet to study the lesson. At 7:30 to 8:00 we have a prayer service. Correspondent

Salem Mennonite Church, Wisner, Nebr.

Greetings! There is not so much to report from a small congregation which is without a minister. We have Sunday School services on Sunday mornings, and we try to call ministers from our sister congregations from time to time. At times a minister chances to come through here and of course gives us a message.

I would like to take this means of thanking our Foreign Mission Board for sending us missionaries now and then who give us encouraging reports concerning the work, a well as the needs, on the various fields.

We are located in the north-eastern part of this State, which is generally known as the place where crop failures are unknown. This, however, did not hold true last year, as we were visited with a severe drouth. So we had very little small grain and no corn, except along the river bottoms and on some irrigated land. The fodder which could be cut was used mostly as silage.

Although we had a general drouth last summer, we surely enjoyed many rich spiritual blessings. In January our hearts were gladdened by the visits of missionaries Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Suderman. Their messages and slides about the Indians in Arizona were interesting. In May we called Rev. M. Horsch who conducted communion services and gave us some inspiring messages.

Through the months of June, July, and August we were very fortunate in having as our pastor, Rev. Erland Waltner, student pastor of the Biblical Seminary, New York City. He gave us spirit-filled sermons on Sunday and Bible study and catechism instruction during the week.

Early in September we celebrated baptism and communion services. Rev. Horsch again officiated. We had the pleasure of welcoming two members into our church. Soon after, we had Rev. P. R. Schroeder with us. He gave us a fine lecture on Walls and Bridges in connection with his European trip. Later in September we had Rev. and Mrs. J. R. Duerksen in our midst. Both gave us encouraging reports concerning their work in India.

Last Tuesday we laid our church brother Harry E. Leisy to rest. Rev. P. R. Schroeder officiated. Brother Leisy had been suffering for two years from cancer.

Shall close with Micah 6:8. Hearty greetings to the editor and all the readers of THE MENNONITE.—Henry Boehr.

Dr. Wieand Lectures at Bluffton . . .
. . . Bethel Students Give Peace Play
Special Discussion Groups at Freeman

Bluffton

Dr. Albert C. Wieand, former president and now professor of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago, gave Bluffton students one week of wonderful inspiration.

"Sometimes I get so homesick for God that I can hardly wait for a quiet moment to talk with him.... Prayer is putting one's mind in tune with the infinite ....God is orderly. He acts through laws of nature which he himself has established. By praying we accept God's will and thus are aided in passing over the hazards of everyday life...."

In addition to his regular schedule of programs, Dr. Wieand held an open forum for the members of the YMCA, discussing problems of the college student.

Bethel

Furnishing the evening program for a Sunday evening, the S.C.M. (Student Christian Movement) presented the play, "Operation at One," the first of what promises to be a series of renditions among the churches in that vicinity. The play—a missionary play—paints dynamic, modern Youth on a Chinese mission field, living Christ, in the face of a deluge of communism, as it threatens to sweep into the mission compound.

"I never knew what Christianity meant, until I saw YOU people live it like THAT," cries out a young communist at the close of the play, as he finds to his amazement that the Operation at One is to save the life of a COMMUNIST, a fiery enemy of the Christian Mission.

Freeman

Through one of the worst snow storms of the North, Freeman College students keep right on going. Unable to get through drifted roads, they find "homes" in town for the night, and in the daytime go right on with their college work. Special discussion groups of the season, in the YMCA and the YWCA concern themselves with topics like, "The Christian and his obligations," "Christian friendship," "The Christian and his leisure moments," "Dating," "Conduct in public meetings," "Manners," and "Undesirable habits."

Faculty group leaders are: Miss Waltner, Mrs. Hermanson, Miss Loewen, Miss Waldner, Mr. Unruh, Mr. Congdon, and Mr. Wipf.

Risen Christ! arise now in my soul. Take possession of it and keep it. I see today as never before that with Thee there is no beginning, no end—only love, power, justice, and right, always. Thou art the perfect expression of all that is beautiful as the mind of man can conceive it, timeless, spanning the present moment of eternity. With Thee, these humble efforts of mine take on timelessness; with Thee, I become a co-creator, to share with Thee the joys of Heaven forever. I thank Thee, O Christ. I do thank Thee. Amen.

Problems and Projects—

1. One of the basic concepts of biologic science is the idea of the permanence and unchangeability of the germ plasm, carried on from individual to individual, generation after generation. In what sense is that immortality?

2. In the last analysis just what DOES a man consist of? Is the body the REAL man? Or are things like friendship, hope, love, understanding, sympathy the REAL things of life? What evidence is there to believe that these things live on after death?

3. Do you know of people who were spiritually dead at one time who are now spiritually alive? What caused the change?

4. What things do you hope to accomplish after death which you could not accomplish here?

5. If there is no life hereafter, on what basis do you explain all the suffering on the part of some people here on earth, and the relatively little suffering of others?

6. "It is finished," cried Jesus. What is finished, and what is just beginning? Is Easter a day, or is it an experience? Have YOU had that experience?

THE LEADER'S BOOKSHELF

This department welcomes brief, concise reviews from readers of books which have been a help to them in work of leadership or in their own personal lives.

LIFE WITH A CAPITAL "L" by A. Lindsay Glegg, Marshall Morgan & Scott, Lt. D.

A compilation of lectures addressed especially to younth. I would turn these "heart-talks" on the "Life more abundant." Each one so simple, so short, so full of the life which one spells with a capital "L." Quote: The vertical line of the L represents the life in contact with God; the horizontal line, the life in contact with our fellow men. The vertical line by itself is the letter "I" and represents a life that is self-centered and egotistical . . . A life that leaves God out, and is concerned only to serve mankind, this the horizontal line represents,—it is a dash or a blank. But life with a capital L is a combination of the two: first, the life that is right with God; and then, as a consequence, a life that is spent in serving others. One hundred and twenty-seven pages.

Pre-prayer Circle

Read Mark 14:32-42 quietly and reverently before prayer participation. Pray for a deeper understanding of the meaning of the events of the last week of Jesus life. Pray for the leader and the meeting.

Room Arrangement

Hang one of Hofman's pictures, "Christ in Gethsemane" in a prominent place in the room. It can be made more effective by dimming all lights during the worship service and focusing one light on the picture. The seating of the group can be arranged in the form of a cross. Let the piano play quietly for five minutes hymns suggestive of Passion Week while the group is assembling.

A Plan for Your Meeting

1. Opening Song: "Tell Me the Story of Jesus"
   Prayer, by the leader
   Society announcements and offering
2. Worship Service

   At this point the leader should announce the topic and explain the plan of the worship service. Make this part of the meeting a devotional portrayal of the last six days of Jesus life with Scripture and song. Prepare large placards with the days of the week from Sunday to Friday. Let the leader quietly change these as the program moves from one day to the next. Have one member who remains at the front of the room or behind a screen, read each of the Scripture passages.

   1. Sunday
      Song, "The Psalms." (Sung or played)
      Reader: Mark 11:1-11
   2. Monday
      Song, "Nothing but Leaves"
      Reader: Mark 11:12-19
   3. Tuesday
      Song: "More about Jesus" Reader: "In the morning they come again to Jerusalem: and as he was walking in the temple, there came to him the chief priests, and the scribes, and elders asking him questions. And he reasoned with them, answering them well and speaking unto them in parables." Also Mark 13:1, 2.

4. Wednesday
   Song: "There Is a Place of Quiet Rest"
   Reader: "Jesus spent the day in quiet retreat."

   This can be done by chapters, by incidents or by characters.
   1. Peter's experiences during the six fateful days
   2. Judas' experiences
   3. Pilate's experiences
   4. The experiences of Philip and Thomas
   5. What were some of the last things Jesus said to his disciples?

   Ask each one to read the chapters suggested for the survey and make his report in his own words.
4. Closing Moments
   Song: "Jesus, Keep Me Near the Cross"
   (Read the third stanza while it is being played softly)
   Benediction verse: Ps. 19:14.

Faith of Our Father's; Holy Faith

Junior Topic for March 21, 1937

THE CHURCH

Boys' Night

Let the boys have charge of this program. The girls could be seated before the call to service, the boys marching in at the call.

1. Call to service by a trumpeter using "Onward Christian Soldiers". For the first verse let the boys mark time, beginning to march in with the second verse. Let the girls rise to join in the third verse.
2. Opening worship
   1. Prayer spoken by a junior using "Lord, I Hear of Showers of Blessing
   2. In unison sing "The Lord Is in His Holy Temple"
   3. A voice speaking "Who shall stand in his holy place?"
   4. Another voice answering with Ps. 24:4
   5. Leader speaking Ps. 24:5 (Be seated)
   6. Sing in unison "I Am Coming, Lord"
3. Study period. Aim: to give the child an idea of the history of the Mennonite church and to lead to a fuller appreciation of the same. As in previous study, so also now the subject is too broad, too deep for thorough study. And that is not the aim. We are only introducing juniors to these "fields rich and fertile in such a way that there remains within the heart an appreciation of the toil that made them fruitful, and a desire to study the history of the heritage that is theirs.
   (For this brief introduction I refer again to C. H. Wedel's "Sketches from Church History")
   1. Introductory remarks by chairman connecting last study with evening's theme
   2. Remembering. Let a junior ask the group questions covering points of importance studied at last session
   3. How Many Can You Name? Let this question be the heading on the blackboard. The leader asks the group to name the various denominations familiar to them. Write these on the board. When no more can be thought of, underscore our denomination and thus introduce the study for the evening. This will offer a splendid opportunity to emphasize again the truth of One Church
   4. Why are we called "Mennonites?"—a junior introducing Menno Simons. If the parents cannot help the children in the preparation of these themes, the leaders will have to spend extra hours to copy the material used
   5. Darkness Yet Light—a junior giving a picture of the first years of our church, the years of faithful witness inspite of persecution and death
   6. Special music—"Under His Wings"
   7. Banners Around the World. Let each boy participating in this, take his turn at a map of the world, stick his little miniature banner at the point of the Mennonite settlement which he is to discuss, and then give his brief talk
      a. Mennonites in Holland
      b. Mennonites in Germany
      c. Mennonites in Russia
      d. Mennonites in Switzerland

  e. Mennonites in America
  f. Mennonites scattered abroad since World War

8. "Ye are the light of the world." Let a junior state this truth: Satan hinders the Church; the more he hinders, the more the Church grows, for persecution scatters the "lights" and intensifies them
9. Sing in unison "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus"
10. Faith of Our Fathers, Holy Faith!—In this talk by the leader, explain in a very simple way the principles of our Mennonite church. Lead the child to appreciate the cost of the heritage which is his when he is grown "of age" and to feel his responsibility as a link that must keep this heritage pure, that must add to its enrichment, that so, still pure, still enriched, it may fall as a blessing upon the coming generation. Close with the truth: to make this heritage ours WE must find the Way, Jesus our Saviour; We must study His Word, believe it and obey it; WE must stay in close touch with Him that we can become lights in this world of darkness
11. Repeat in unison verse of the month: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life. John 10:27,28
12. Sing in unison "I Am Coming, Lord"
13. Speak in unison "Faith of Our Fathers"
14. Closing prayer

Fretz officiated, using as text Titus 3:5-7, which was the same one he had used on May 27, 1899, when he baptized her and received her as a member of the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton. She, with her family, later become members of the Deep Run Church. When the church in Lansdale was organized in 1930 they were among the charter members. Loved by all, she was a faithful, conscientious worker in the church she loved, evidencing that the fruits of a regenerated life are the "works of righteousness."

He had attained the age of 53 years, 8 months and 25 days. On Oct. 2, 1910, he was united in marriage with Viola Hilty, who with five children survive him. Mr. Sommer was a good husband and a good father who was deeply concerned for the welfare of his family, religious leadership and guidance as well as to provide well for their temporal needs. For some years he was a member of the Grace Mennonite Church council and was always faithful and active in the discharge of his duties as a church officer. In recent years Mr. Sommer conducted a dairy and supplied milk to Pandora and neighboring towns. He was respected and loved by all who knew him for his kindness and courtesy, his generosity and cheerfulness. Funeral services were held at the Grace Church, Feb. 28, 1937, in charge of his pastor, Rev. Paul E. Whitmer, assisted by Rev. E. B. Steiner.

—The states of the middle west have received an unusual amount of snow this winter. In the more northerly states people have been snowbound for weeks, and traffic was laid lame for days, if not weeks. Even in sunny Kansas there have been sights where scores of autos were stalled by snowbanks on national highways.

Objectives for Individual Churches for 1937

A. J. Neuenschwander

(Paper read at the Eastern District Conference)

Luke 12:31-37

The Church Herself

Before enumerating other objectives, let us first regard the Church as an objective. What is the church? According to our Catechism, the church is a collective body of believers in the Lord. According to Col. 1:18, Jesus Christ himself is the head and we are the body. In another figure in Ephesians 5:27, Paul speaks of the church as a bride of Christ, which is to be without spot or wrinkle, holy, and without blemish. Jesus presents himself as the vine and the believers as the branches in John 15:1-7.

A church, therefore, is a body of believers which accepts Jesus Christ as head, wherein every member seeks to respond to His call and also seeks to remain clean, holy and in constant vital touch with the Head. A church is first and always a company of believers who have a religious purpose, namely to propagate the Gospel of Jesus Christ so that lost men might be saved; and those who are saved be built up in their faith, encouraged in service and anticipation of eternal life.

The Entire Church a Missionary Organization

Our Master's parting injunction to "go ye therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," has been heeded by only a "remnant" according to Dr. Robert E. Speer who has been closely connected with the missionary enterprise for a half century. This ought to constitute a real challenge to the church and to mission leaders everywhere.

In many churches there seems to be only a small group of women known as the missionary Women's missionary work. We like to think that in our Mennonite Church there is a more whole-hearted interest in missions, surely more than a "remnant." Is this assumption correct? In 1926-29 there were 27,312 members in churches in the General Conference. Statistics show that we gave $455,880 for home and foreign missions. That averages $5.50 per member per year. Remember that this was before the depression and includes both home and foreign missions! During the 1933-35 Conference period there were 31,551 members, and we gave $156,420 for missions in the two departments, or $2.46 per member per year! Was the depression the cause for the entire decrease, or is our mission interest decreasing? Are all the members in our individual churches mission-minded? What an opportunity we have to help in a most wonderful work! India is open for the Gospel as never before with a mass movement on now. Our China field is growing so that the workers call for new forces. Our Canadian brethren are calling for support to purchase abandoned churches or school-houses which can be made into places of worship. Let us, as under-shepherds of the great Shepherd lay the cause of missions on the hearts of our people as never before and seek to enlist the whole membership in this great work.

Christian Citizenship

A third objective that we as Mennonites ought to strive for is a greater up-lifting influence in our Christian citizenship. By this objective, I do not mean that the church should stand as a unit and act together like one of the many lobbying machines. By no means, but I believe that the church members individually should give expression to the high and noble citizenship as taught and exemplified by the prophets like Amos, Hosea, and Isaiah need to be studied and applied to our present-day problems. Taxation, class rivalry, undue importance of wealth and race hatred, all came in for stern denunciation and indictment by Jesus himself. By precept and example he showed how to combat these evil forces. These problems are still with us. In a democracy like ours where each adult individual has the privilege and duty to exercise his citizenship, there should be a more nearly uniform reaction toward these and similar menaces to society. Without permitting partisanship to invade the pulpit, but by keeping our message above, we can inspire our people to exercise their convictions regarding citizenship. A fact that we need to emphasize to our people is this: Every Christian ought to be a better citizen because he is a Christian. Some one may say: Our citizenship is in heaven. This is true, but while we are here on earth, I am convinced that it is our Christian duty to bring heavenly principles on earth.

Youth Program

Since the youth of today constitutes the church of tomorrow, it is essential that in the fourth place, we set up and work toward a youth program in our churches that is purposeful and uplifting. This objective is so big and so involved that the easiest thing for the church is to sit down piously, wait and hope for the best. If the church wants to build for the future, there must be a youth program as a definite objective.

A program of unifying action might be based on the plan and principle of the Christian Endeavor. This will assure of social contacts with other similar groups in conferences and conventions. The program is built on the principle of "learning to do by doing." Christian Endeavor is a Christian training school. Therefore every individual in our church in that age-group ought to be encouraged to become an active member in the organization. What better training could be suggested than the "four-fold plan" requires?

This is good in itself, but it is not all that needs to be included in a youth program. Certain social subjects, as the evil effects of intoxicating liquors, gambling, improper sex-relations between opposite sexes, should be included in a well-rounded program. The pastor needs to express his own and Biblical principles on these and related subjects repeatedly. More than than that, speakers who are specialists on these subjects should be brought to our churches so that our youth might know of a certainty what the church's attitude and position is on these moral questions. A purposeful youth program includes making use of our young people whenever and wherever feasible in our church work. Let there be a youth program. Let the objective be purposeful and uplifting.

Establishing and Maintaining Christian Homes

Because of the basic significance, the church needs to have as a fifth objective the establishing and maintaining of Christian homes. In our general and specialized schools our youth is trained for business, the arts, and what not. We seem to be training youth for everything but for the most essential task, the establishing and maintaining of a Christian home; yet the vast majority of our youth will sooner or later be engaged in this challenging task. Therefore, let the church help our youth in establishing Christian homes.

Where shall we look for help? To the Christian's guide-book, the Bible. Turn to Jesus' teaching—there we find the highest conception ever given to the world of what constitutes a Christian marriage. Christ taught that marriage is a spiritual unity in which "two people are not linked to each other, but to God." Jesus taught that the union was to be permanent and not experimental, and only death shall terminate the obligations. In his book, "Youth and the Homes of Tomorrow," Dr. E. T. Dahlberg says: "Sin in extreme instances may sever the marriage relationship. But divorce, even for such a cause, is a thwarting of the highest purposes of a family, and involves certain obligations not to remarry."

A further objective for Christian homes is the emphasis that needs to be put on Christian child training. With so many agencies bidding to draw our children to themselves, it is imperative that parents be on their guard and that they train and nurture their children in Christian principles. The Kingdom of God needs always to be kept in the foreground in every Christian home.

Support All Conference Work Proportionately

The sixth and last objective that I shall offer is that each church should support all our Conference activities in a proportionate manner. By this I mean not only the activities of the District Conference where the church is located, but also the activities of the General Conference. To do this requires effort; but if it is good work, why not support it in proportion?

It is not fair to others that some churches should shirk their responsibility and thereby load the obligation onto others. If and when the Conference has accepted an obligation for missionary or benevolence work, the majority has accepted it as an undertaking. It then becomes a proportionate obligation for every member, and it ought also to be met as such. When some churches and some individuals fail to accept their share of the task, it is to fail to be in the way of blessings that come when duties are sincerely accepted and met as the Lord has prospered. There may be occasions when it is difficult or almost impossible for individuals or churches to meet their full share of an obligation. Let there be proportionate giving as the Lord has prospered.

Added to the District Conference activities are the needs of the General Conference. The various General Conference Boards might be named in the order of the amount or size of their needs—(a) Foreign Mission Board; (b) Home Mission Board; (c) Emergency Relief Board; (d) Publication Board; (e) General Conference Executive Committee; (f) Board of Education. Some one needs to furnish the funds for the work that is to be done. If some one needs to do it, why not you? Again I hear some one saying, we cannot do our full share in all the projects. Perhaps so, but again I make my appeal that it be done in proportion as the Lord has prospered.

The Kingdom of God is a great enterprise. God is the designer. He has a plan. It can be established as you, I, and thousands of others form our plans and objectives to fit into His great plan. As ministers and as leaders, we need to have definite objectives. Let none say, we are too small or too weak. Remember the words of the Master: "Fear not, little flock; for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

ANNOUNCEMENT

On Sunday, March 14, Brother George Kopper will be ordained as Minister of the Arlington, Kansas, Mennonite Church. An all-day program is provided for the occasion. Friends are cordially invited.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—A good brother in the East thinks that his section of the General Conference isn't sufficiently represented in the columns of THE MENNONITE. We feel that with the jottings and the correspondence that the paper has brought from churches there, we cannot plead guilty to any shortcomings, especially since the person had not taken the trouble to send in any contribution up to the time he wrote.

—Church weddings are becoming more general, as is perfectly proper, in our Pennsylvania churches. Pastor A. M. Fretz reports two in the Deep Run Church during the past year. Young people who love their church may well desire the sacred sanctuary for the holy rite.—At a recent business meeting of the Bethel Church, Perkasie, Pennsylvania, Miss Fannie E. Landis was appointed correspondent. The interesting article in Mennonite No. 7 was from her pen. Her modesty, it appears forbade her signature. Her pastor, however, herewith desires to introduce her to her fellow-correspondents. You may look for more news from Perkasie.

—The Deep Run (new) Mennonite Church was chartered and organized as a separate congregation in 1849; the spacious brick building then erected, with several alterations, is the same still used in worship. The ministers serving during this interim chosen by the congregation were Martin Fretz, three years; Enos F. Loux and Joseph D. Rosenberger together, a number of years: Jacob S. Moyer from 1871 to 1883. Since then Allen M. Fretz, a son of the congregation, has been its pastor. The deacons serving through the same period were Samuel Atherholt, William Meyers, Aaron M. Richert, and Samuel W. Gross, who is still in service, with Levi S. Moyer as assistant deacon.

—From News Letter No. 4. Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, Rev. P. R. Schroeder, pastor, we glean the following: "Easter comes March 28 this year. During the next six weeks the Passion of our Lord will therefore occupy our attention. Whereas: "He was wounded for our transgression, he was bruised for our iniquities; . . . and the Lord has laid on him the iniquity of us all.' Isaiah 53:5, 6. Therefore: 'Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon.' Isaiah 55:7.—Rev. Schroeder was in Oklahoma in January, speaking thirty-six times in the Bible Academy and in the 'Neuhoffnungstal' Church at Meno; Saron Church, Orienta; the Churches at Medford and Deer Creek, Oklahoma; and at Pretty Prairie, Kansas.

—The report has come that Missionary and Mrs. Wiens, with family, are leaving India, March 12, for a furlough in the United States, which they have earned, after being held down by their work nine and one-half years since their last sojourn here. Altogether the couple has now been on the India mission field thirty years. With them come their two youngest children, twin daughters. Mieka, an older daughter, is a senior in Bethel College; Ferdinand J., their older son, is manager of our Book Concern: and Rudolph P. is superintendent of schools at Lehigh, Kansas.

—Prof. and Rev. J. J. Voth of Bethel College has been called to serve the Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, for the next three months. During the summer vacation, J. F. Schmidt, a son of the church who is a student at Hartford Theological Seminary, will probably serve the church. Rev. G. N. Harms, who has served the community and church for about fifty years, feels that he deserves a rest.

During the recent meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions at Newton, Kansas, two of the members addressed the students and faculty of Bethel College during the chapel hour. Rev. M. Horsch, Beatrice, Nebraska, had for his theme, "Fear not." He showed that the origin of fear is sin. Three things give rise to fear—life, death, eternity. To overcome fear it is necessary to be born into a new life through Jesus Christ, our Saviour, and to establish a true and perfect relationship with God and our fellowmen. Rev. H. G. Nyce, Allentown, Pennsylvania, showed through a number of illustrations from the life of Jesus the far-reaching influence of Christ's great work of love and redemption.

—From Bluffton, Ohio, comes the report that the Swiss churches in that place and vicinity—First Church of Bluffton; Ebenezer Church, two miles west; St. John's Mennonite Church, a mile east of Pandora; and Grace Church of Pandora—are planning to celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the first Mennonite Church in that neighborhood. The celebration is planned for next summer, presumably in July.

—On February 16, the Mennonite Board of Education, made up of representatives of the seventeen Conferences (old) in North America, met at Goshen College for its annual session. Reports showed that the Board had received some land in Illinois and legacies amounting to several thousand dollars, and that Goshen had this year the largest enrollment in its history.

—In a recent radio address heard by millions of American people, Dr. Stanley Jones made a strong plea for the union of the Christian churches. The address was occasioned by the successful launching of the million-unit fellowship movement sponsored by the Methodist Episcopal Church. The great missionary maintains that, unless the Christian denominations unite in a struggle royal against fascism and especially communism, they are almost doomed. He suggested that the denominational labels be dropped, and that we organize ourselves into "the Church of Christ in America," with a Methodist branch, a Presbyterian branch, a Mennonite branch, etc.

—J. J. Friesen, Henderson, Nebr., writes: "Our elder A. W. Friesen moved to town a few weeks ago. This will enable him to do his pastoral work more advantageously in the church and community. Prayer meetings are held each Wednesday evening, divided into two groups—one the young people and the other, the more elderly. These meetings are held in place of the prayer week, announced by the General Conference at the beginning of the year."

—The reporter of the Aberdeen, Idaho, Church says: "We are happy to announce the Aberdeen Mennonite Church broadcast every Tuesday evening at 8:15 over KSEI, Pocatello, Idaho. Last Tuesday our men's quartet, consisting of Herbert Hege, Gus Klempel, Edwin Becker, and Rev. Philip A. Wedel, sang some very well-chosen selections.—Due to the very cold weather and piles of snow our different societies have not been very well attended. But from now on we expect everybody out again. Rev. David Toews of Rosthern, Sasakatchewan, is with us at present."—G. M. C.

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

The invention of printing nearly 500 years ago made possible the rapid spread of Christianity, and to printing we owe much more than we generally realize. Second only to printing in its power to spread Christianity is the radio. Radio is no longer a novelty but an everyday necessity and we venture to say that in the United States more than half the Mennonite homes have a radio.

Radio preachers are also no novelty. In every large city there are at least one or two radio preachers who daily or on Sunday exhort their radio audiences to follow this or that faith ranging all the way from the emotional tabernacle builder begging for money half the time he is on the air, to the ultra-liberal Unitarian who speaks only of the goodness of human nature and forgets entirely the fundamental questions of sin and salvation.

Personally, I have no use for most of these radio preachers, but some of them are doing splendid work in spreading the Gospel and merit our attention. Of all these better type radio preachers I feel that Dr. Walter A. Maier who speaks on the Lutheran Hour is making the most constructive use of the radio and his preaching has been a blessing to millions of listeners all over the world. His sane, simple messages go right to the hearts of his listeners and glorify Christ. His practical suggestions given in clear, ringing tones have already saved many a sinful and wayward person from a shameful life of degredation.

Dr. Maier's messages are non-sectarian and emphasize no particular creed or doctrine to the exclusion of other great Christian truths. He is thoroughly evangelical and missionary in his outlook on the problems of life. He is a voice crying in the wilderness of modern life, pleading for the world to accept Christ and to live righteously. There are few sections of the United States and Canada where Dr. Maier cannot be heard Sunday noons. Tune in next Sunday when you get back from Church and Sunday School services. If you listen once, I'm sure you'll want to listen again.

Many people would like to have copies of Dr. Maier's inspiring messages but perhaps failed to write in to get them free of charge at the time he gave them over the radio. Fortunately the best of these messages are now obtainable in book form for your personal or church library. Here is a list of the three books of Dr. Maier's gripping radio addresses already published:

THE LUTHERAN HOUR: The Thirty-six October, 1930, to June, 1931, Broadcasts. Third printing! Bound in rich blue cloth binding. Price $1.50.

CHRIST FOR EVERY CRISIS: The Sixteen February to May, 1935, Broadcasts. Bound in gray cloth binding. Price $1.50.

There are few personal or family problems on which Dr. Maier does not give sound advice based on his own wide experience and on the Scriptures. Advice is plentiful these days—we find it in the magazines we read, in the advertising which stares at us from the gaudy billboards and in dozens of new books on almost every subject. But the radio is the most constant source of advice. Every day we must listen to it. Before and after almost every program there is advice, most of it poor advice from a prejudiced source. It is therefore a pleasure to recommend another grand book by Dr. Walter Maier which is being welcomed by thousands of thoughtful Christian people. Although written from the standpoint of a Lutheran, the advice given applies to all Christian people. The book I refer to is FOR BETTER, NOT FOR WORSE, A Manual of Christian Matrimony. Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged! A frank, complete, yet Biblical discussion of marriage and its many related subjects. No Christian adolescent will willingly lay this enlightening book aside until the last page has been read. Indispensable to every conscientious parent, pastor, teacher, and young people's counselor. Over 500 pages. In two editions.

Regular Edition, beautiful maroon cloth binding, $2.00 per copy.

Gift Edition, same binding, but with lustrous gift-wrapped and packed in a gift box, $2.50 per copy.

"Render unto God the things that are God's" (Matt. 22:21). The other day a little girl told me she was going to give her father a pair of slippers on his birthday. "Where will you get your money?" I asked. She opened her eyes like saucers and said, "Why, father will give me the money." And just for half a minute I was silent as I thought the dear man would buy his own birthday present. And the father loved his little girl for her gift, although he had to pay for it. She had not anything in the world that he had not given her. You have not anything of your own to give to Jesus Christ. You can give Him back what belongs to Him.—Rev. W. Kingscote Greenland, in the Sunday School Chronicle.

HOME MISSIONS

EXTRACTS FROM REPORTS

W. S. Gottschall

CANADA

Funds for building or buying churches in Canada are frequently demanded, especially in Vancouver and the Swift Current district. Very modest churches are being built in Coughlin and Black Creek, Vancouver.

There are different shades of Mennonites in Canada, coming from various countries and from different methods of training; but when the trials of life come and they are perhaps isolated from the others, they lose all bigotry and attend the meetings and are friendly. In the winter they arrange for the discussion of Bible subjects and sermons, which are always well attended.

Johannes Regier, an itinerant preacher in the Laird district, writes that in two months he preached 38 sermons, conducted 4 Communion services, and visited 88 families. This was done besides his work in the home congregation. And some of the people live far apart. The lack of spiritual care and leadership exposes the people to proselyting by other denominations, causing some contention. He mentions the Seventh Day Adventists as being especially annoying.

The itinerant preacher is a very welcome guest among the people who are so scattered. They have no one to minister to them in many cases. Efforts are made to provide ministers for them. In some places they can organize Sewing Societies and Young People's Societies. One man reports of having organized 7 Societies of both kinds for the purpose of teaching young Christians to work for the Lord.

Here is the statistical report of one of our faithful itinerants, F. F. Enns: "From August 1 to December 31, I visited 15 groups—several twice. Of these 15 groups, 7 are without ministers. The time spent in serving these groups was from two to seven days. During this time I averaged two sermons daily. I served at 3 Harvest Home and Mission Festivals. In 10 places I administered Communion services; I visited 51 families and preached 15 times in my own home congregation. I used the hours of the night to do my correspondence. With us there is no time to be idle."

Brother Janzen of Vancouver reports rapid growth of the work in British Columbia, for which he thanks God, the Board, and the contributing churches. More girls are arriving and the bonds in the home are tied closer. The meeting places are becoming too small, notwithstanding the fact that some do not come to the services because of the earnest way in which the Gospel is preached. They would rather have a religion that allows more swing. A new Conference of British Columbia churches was organized in November in Sardis; and in January the first Ministerial Conference convened in Yarrow, and a treasury was created which is to take some of the burden from the Home Mission Board, since the traveling expenses for the churches and groups exceed the income.

The Girls' Home, Winnipeg, Manitoba

This Home is known as the "Ebenezer Home." In the fall it celebrated the tenth anniversary of its existence as an occasion of special thanksgiving. A number of ministers were invited and asked to participate. This brought much happiness to the Home family. A sad case of nervous breakdown occurred in one of the girls whose parents live in British Columbia, and she had to be admitted into the hospital. They do much work in the hospitals in visiting the sick and bringing tokens of love and good cheer to them.

Saskatoon, Saskatchewan

J. J. Thiessen writes: "The year 1936 solved a great local problem for us. We have a new church which answers our purpose exactly. To realize this in this day of money stringency is nothing short of a miracle. We make good use of our church—Monday and Saturday the basement is used for German school, on Wednesday for the Young People's Bible class, on Thursday for various gatherings, the assembling of girls, the mission, or other meetings, the choir rehearses here, and on Sunday morning it is used for Sunday School and church services. On Sunday evening Young People's meetings alternate with services. The morning services are attended by 75 to 90 persons; for the evening services at which the girls can participate we have as many as 170 persons present. At the last Young People's meeting there were 250 present. The church has already attracted many people who seek the salvation of their souls.

November 18-20 the Saskatchewan Ministerial Conference convened in our Church with 34 workers present. One evening the Girls Home and a group of singers rendered the stirring declamation, "The Prison-keeper of Philippi," which was listened to with the closest attention.

At the Christmas service 86 pupils, 30 children, and 10 families received presents. On Pleasant Hill the children who are without any Christmas presents because of the poverty of the parents were especially overjoyed when they were told that the love of Christ had prompted a group of Young People from the Eden Mennonite Church of Schwenksville, Pennsylvania, to prepare 22 packages for poor children and forward them through Miss May Markley who had asked for addresses. Greetings were received from India, the United States, and all parts of Canada.

Swift Current

This is one of the neglected fields where thousands of Mennonites are left practically without spiritual care. I. W. Bahnman, in visiting the meeting places and homes, walked from 7 to 12 miles a day. With Brother Toews he drove one hundred miles through the field .

On November 4 they opened a Bible school in the city. This was entirely a work of faith, for there were no means on hand and very little to be expected. The Board sent them $200 which caused great joy and thanksgiving. Until Christmas they had 29 students so that all the space in the two houses was filled. The rent and the coal bill was the greatest expense. Groceries were practically all donated by friends of the school. Some of the students went out to many communities to conduct services which were very much appreciated. Many invitations are received, but they have neither the means nor the transportation facilities.

The Board has assisted them in buying a meeting house 30 feet by 53 feet for $500 and is negotiating for another one. Services are held in about a dozen places and are well attended.

UNITED STATES

Altoona, Pennsylvania

A change was made in the Altoona Mission. Owing to sickness, Brother Glass was obliged to relinquish his work there, and he requested that Brother Grover Klink be appointed as his assistant, which was done. He is to be ordained as their pastor in the spring. Sister Stiffler also resigned and was married to Brother Glass and moved into his house.

East Freedom, Pennsylvania, Mountain Mission

Three weeks of special services were held in which Rev. Stephen Yoder and Rev. Sylvan Lehman assisted. One soul was added to the mission. The weather was very disagreeable and the roads were in bad condition. The attendance was from 36 to 150. The willingness and activity of the young people was especially mentioned; all their meetings are well attended. At the first District meeting, they captured the banner. With few exceptions the spiritual condition of the people is very good.

Mechanics Grove, Quarryville, Pennsylvania

Brother Sylvan Lehman writes: "A number of people have united with the church during the year. As a whole, the services have been quite well attended; but we are not satisfied — we pray the Lord to strengthen our forces, especially in spiritual power. We spent $180 for repairs and there is considerable more work to be done."

Portland, Oregon

The mission is still supplied with such preachers as can be secured from time to time, but a regular man would be far more desirable. They have an orchestra that is a great help in the services. Some time ago, after the weekly Bible class, a girl asked how to be saved. After the way of salvation was pointed out to her, she asked Sister Niswander to pray with her; they kneeled, and the girl first prayed for her own salvation and then for salvation for her people. God graciously met her, and she gives evidence of change in her life. Subsequently four more have accepted Christ during the Bible hour. A sick mother with a bitter feeling against God was prayed through to a different attitude.

Old Minds on Young Heads. In dealing with children and young people, older persons are constantly making the mistake of super-imposing their minds upon the young heads. They find it difficult to adjust their thinking and their feelings to the level of the child. In school we talk about teaching over children's heads. That simply means that the subject matter is presented in a way not readily comprehended by the child. That may be due to the use of the wrong language or wrong teaching method. To learn to enter into the realm, or into the sanctum, as it were, of the child's mental set-up requires much effort, careful thinking, yea prayer. But once learned it is an art that yields rich returns.

Parents and Sunday School teachers need thorough training in child psychology and elementary pedagogy to learn the secrets of the workings of the child's mind and the best ways of getting at them. Not all have opportunity to do this, but we can all go to the Gospels and sit at the feet of the world's greatest teacher, Christ. He was a master in the art of grasping and understanding his listeners' minds. His dealings with the woman at Jacob's well, for instance, is a little textbook on pedagogy in itself.

The income last year was $82,564.09.

48. Resolved to thank the Lord of harvest who permitted us to return during the last year eight laborers into the harvest field, and we are encouraged to undertake to return four more this year together with at least one new worker, and perhaps some more if health permits. For all this we solicit also increased intercession and thanksgiving, especially for the awakening in China and India.

49. Resolved to adjourn.

Close by a brief season of prayer.

SOME PROBLEMS OF THE BOARD

P. P. Wedel

1. From our mission fields in India and in China come urgent appeals for new recruits. The Board has decided that, the Lord willing, a new couple and a single lady shall be sent to China this year, and also a new couple to India. Although there are some prospects in view, we do not yet know definitely where we shall find these recruits. May the Lord lead us to them. They are needed very much. Where are they, who, as the Lord calls, "Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" will answer, "Here am I; send me."

2. Because of the financial conditions since 1929, very little has been done in the construction of new buildings. Only the most necessary repairs of buildings have been undertaken. As a result, there are many needs for repairs and for new buildings. Requests for new buildings come both from the fields here among the American Indians and from across the waters. Since we are a small denomination we perhaps cannot expand much by way of undertaking new fields. But shall we not work the fields we have entered as thoroughly as possible? To do so will require more workers, but also the necessary equipment. How far shall we go in the building program?

3. Some of our missionaries have been at work for many years. There is now one couple on the retired list. Two others are either eligible already for retirement or will be very soon, according to the Missionary Pension Plan of our Conference. That plan calls for the establishment of a Pension Fund. Although the plan was accepted by the General Conference in 1926, and although it provides for solicitation of gifts, donations, and bequests, and requires that the congregations belonging to the General Conference hold at least one offering annually for this fund, and although the Mission Board has reminded the congregations at least once a year of this request; the Pension Fund is only small. Its proceeds will not take care of one retired family, much less of three. How shall the Board solve this problem?

4. How is the Board to create mission interest if our people do not read the official church papers? "The Mennonite" and "Der Bundesbote" bring the reports from the fields as well as other material that will encourage those who read. Many do read the papers; but more should do so. Our Field Secretary will give much information and inspiration to those who hear him; but the field of our General Conference Churches is so large that it will take a long time to cover it. Read your church papers. Encourage others to read them.

Things that encourage the Board

1. It is encouraging to have a Field Secretary who is desirous to do all in his power to create mission interest, as well as interest in all of our General Conference enterprises. May he have a warm reception in all our churches. His work is not easy. We are encouraged at the interest he finds for the Lord's work in the churches.

2. We have in all our mission fields conscientious missionaries who are exerting themselves to the limit and sometimes beyond the limit of their strength, to bring the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ to those among whom they labor. In the medical and the educational, as well as in the evangelistic work, they are endeavoring to make Christ's salvation real unto them.

3. On all our mission fields we now have native helpers who are rendering very valuable service. Some of them are quite outstanding in the work they are doing. Of course, we will need missionaries on the fields for many years to come; but the native helpers are a valuable asset to the work.

4. More and more the native Christians are being trained to take responsibilities upon themselves. This is true also of the financial obligations. In most of the churches on the mission field regular offerings are taken. As an example we can point to the report of the church at Oraibi, Arizona. The offerings for last year amounted to $87.14, which practically took care of the household expenses of the church. From other churches similar reports could be given. In 1935 the India churches of our mission field contributed over $1400.00 in their regular offerings; one year earlier the China churches collected $1100.00. Is this not an encouraging factor?

5. The prospects for the future are promising. True it is that the work among the American Indians seems to have become more difficult in the last few years; but it is not without results. Last year there were at least fourteen conversions among the Cheyennes and five among the Hopis. From India and China we do not yet have reports, but we know that on each of these fields there were considerable over one hundred conversions and baptisms in the past year. With the mass movement on in India and an evangelistic wave sweeping over northern China, with natives in both of these fields begging our missionaries that they might come and preach the gospel to them, we feel confident that the outlook is good. Under the blessings of Christ the work will prosper. Souls will be saved to His glory.

6. It is very encouraging to see how our churches are rallying to the cause of missions. There were days of anguish for the Board members in the past year when urgent pleas came from the fields that all missionaries whose furlough had expired might be returned. Where should the funds come from? was our question. "What hath God wrought?" He touched the hearts of our constituency. Our churches and mission friends contributed $82,564.09 to the Foreign Mission Treasury during the year 1936. The furloughed missionaries who were ready to return are now on the field.

7. Surely, the Lord has done great things for us in our mission work. The Lord of missions will continue to help us and bless us. Though the problems sometimes seem to be overwhelming, the Lord is greater than they. It is His cause in which we are engaged. He will give light and strength to occupy till He comes.

THE CHURCH AND MISSIONS

A. E. Kreider

The Christian Church has sent great numbers of her finest young people into missionary service. Year by year large sums of money have gone out for the support of missions. Many in the homeland find their chief joy in the part they have in the furtherance of Christ's cause in other lands. Thought, and prayer, and earnest effort have been spent on the part of many. The church has given herself freely to the preaching and teaching of the gospel to all peoples. The history of missions is a thrilling story. Surely this great expenditure of life and money on the part of the church has not been in vain. The church itself has been enriched. Great benefits have flowed back into the life of the church.

In Isaiah it is written, "My word shall not return unto me void." The prophet assures us that it shall accomplish that whereto he has sent it. The labors and sacrifices spent in the spread of the gospel of Christ are not fruitless. The church has enjoyed rich benefits.

Let us quickly enumerate some of these benefits. The charge which Jesus gave that the gospel shall be preached to all nations has given the church a mission. People have been united in the fulfillment of this great task. It is well that the church has had such a far-reaching responsibility. Among our own churches it has been the chief factor in uniting them. The churches of our General Conference were brought together and united in the common task of missions.

The cause of missions has also given us the names of missionary leaders who are cherished by the whole church. Such names as William Carey, David Livingstone, John G. Paton, Mary Slessor, Hilfred Grenfel are the common possession and inspiration of all. These names and many others are the gift of missions to the church. The names of our own missionaries who have gone out have in many instances become household words. The church is richer because of them. Their lives and their influence have counted mightily.

It would be unfair if mention were not also made of the names of native Christians who have become a blessing to the whole world. Here too there are names from every land: Sadhu Sundar Singh of India, Aggrey of Africa, Leland Wang of China, Kagawa of Japan. These men of God and many others are the gifts of missions to the church.

The reports that have come from the mission fields have again and again confirmed our faith in the power of the gospel. Lives have been changed. Men and women have become new creatures in Christ Jesus. Native churches have arisen. Christian homes have been established. Men and women have learned industry and self-support. The life of numberless villages and communities has been changed for the better. Many sinful and cruel practices of the pagan people have given way to the love that is shed abroad through Christ. Every victory through the power of Christ is good news. We are made to rejoice in the power of the gospel .

The chief reason for missionary efforts is that men everywhere may learn to know Jesus Christ the only Saviour. That should always have first place. But it is also helpful to take note of the rich benefits that have flowed back into the life of the church because of her missionary labors.

A CALL TO THE CHURCH

A. E. Kreider

Sixteen years ago, Dr. J. W. Kliewer in company with J. P. Habegger visited our mission fields in India and China. The Foreign Mission Board has been urged in recent years by missionaries on the field and by people at home to send out a representative to visit our missions again. Has the time come to take such a step? There are those who think that active efforts should be made to do so at once.

One mission friend, believing strongly that the time has come when some one from the homeland ought to visit our foreign mission work, has given a thousand dollars to the Mission Board for that purpose. The Board is holding this gift and has taken action to send out a representative as soon as sufficient funds are on hand for that purpose. At the recent annual meeting of the Board it was decided to announce this gift and make a call for other contributions toward this fund. The Mission Board has no intention of using any money from the general treasury for the sending of a representative to visit our foreign fields. That is the reason this call is made for special gifts.

It is the duty of the Foreign Mission Board to exercise general supervision of our work in China and India and among the American Indians. The Mission Board stands as the connecting link between the home churches and the work on the mission fields. In order to discharge its responsibilities more fully both to the churches at home and the work abroad, it would be helpful to have a member of the Board again visit our work and our workers.

This representative will spend enough time on each field to acquaint himself with the work and its problems. When he returns, he will give to the Board and to the churches a first-hand report of the things he has seen. Sixteen years have passed since the former visit. Undoubtedly the time has come when someone should again be sent on a similar visit. It will be a great encouragement to our workers in China and India. It will renew and quicken the interest and concern for the mission cause in the homeland.

Such a journey will require at least six to eight months. After the representative returns, several more months will be needed for travel among the churches. The cost of the journey, together with some compensation for the time given by our representative, will require a fund of twenty-five hundred or three thousand dollars. Although the gift already received is a substantial one, it is not sufficient to make the visit possible. Are there not other mission friends who approve of this proposal and are willing to make a contribution toward it? The treasurer of our Foreign Mission Board will be glad to receive and hold any special gifts for this purpose.

How The Mission Chapel On The Clinton Station In Oklahoma Came To Have A Bell

M. Horsch

It was in the summer of the year of our Lord 1894 when a small caravan left Darlington, our oldest station in Oklahoma, now abandoned. The destination of this caravan was Arapaho, situated in the upper Washita region. It conveyed the belongings of a young missionary and his beloved companion to their new field of labor. In line with the decision of the Mission Board, they were to begin work in this new region and eventually build a station.

In the small pioneer and cowboy town of Arapaho, a little home, 12 feet by 24 feet with adjoining dugout, was rented and operations begun. The nearest Indian camp was about three miles away. but by means of a stout spring wagon, two very dependable mules furnishing the motive power, lively contact with the Indians was established.

At this time the Whirlwind Cheyennes lived in this region in several camps along the Washita River. Chief Whirlwind was a friend of the mission people and was quite helpful. Missionary Petters, who were stationed at Cantonment, had made several journeys to these people, as well as to the Red Moon Indians, and had won their friendship. The logical result of the faithful work of the Petters was a station among the Whirlwind Cheyennes and, a few years later, also among the Red Moon people.

Till late in the summer of 1897 the young mission family lived in Arapaho. Then they were privileged to move into the new station. This is nicely located upon a hill and may be seen from quite a distance. At that time a number of Cheyenne camps were not far away. Today Brother and Sister Ediger are making their home on this station. Besides this Whirlwind district, they are also superintending the Red Moon and Deer Creek district.

At the very beginning of mission efforts here, frequent calls and help wherever needed during the week were reenforced by regular Sunday services. A small portable organ was a very valuable help. The young missionaries loved to sing and Missionary Petter's translations of songs and Gospel hymns into Cheyenne were of great help. They proved an attraction to many Cheyennes, especially to the young people. Such songs as "Nearer my God to Thee" and "Rock of Ages" became quite popular. It did our hearts good when here and there we noticed that sometimes women at their work chanted these songs.

After the missionary family was settled in the new home, a chapel became a crying need. The Board saw this and sent $500 for the purpose of adding one to the station. With this money a chapel was built. It is still doing its blessed service. The $500 was just sufficient to complete the chapel in a simple manner, and with the addition of a belfry right above the front entrance. All was finished—the chapel, inside and out, and a tower for a bell provided—but how could we or should we procure a bell?

A bell! "Why did you want a bell?" So some one may ask. A bell on a Mennonite church is very unusual and, in the eyes of many, very unnecessary. But please remember that our Indians came to services very irregularly. Some came too early, some too late. It happened that folks from a distant camp came to services on Monday, thinking it was Sunday. All this caused us to think of a bell very seriously and prayerfully. How happy we were later on when the bell rested in the belfrey and faithfully did its duty. Early Sunday morning it sent its melodious invitation far and near, and it was rung once more before services began. The Indians came much more regularly and sometimes some said: "We heard the bell and understood the admonition."

Now where did the bell come from and how was it procured? The chapel was finished, and often a bell was prayerfully in our minds. We had no joy to ask the Board for money for the purpose of buying one, fearing a refusal. One day there came a letter from Germany from the mission society of the missionary's home church. This letter contained a bank draft, representing a certain sum of money. It also contained the news that these dear mission friends in the home church had found out that a new station was to be established among the Indians. It was their desire to have a part in this work, and so they enclosed a gift to be used wherever necessary or most needed. How happy and thankful we were, and our first and oremost thought was about a bell. We felt that our lear Lord and Master had graciously heard our orayers and wanted us to have that bell. It was bought ind raised to its proper resting place in the tower. Yes, t was a happy day when for the first time it pealed orth its invitation.

A letter of thanks was sent to the dear people of he Wuerzburg, Germany, congregation. Eleven years go, the then young missionary who had this happy xperience, had the great privilege of personally thankng these dear mission friends in Wuerzburg, Germany. He was with them in one of their Sunday services and ith them praised the Lord for His goodness and love.

Wonderful, yes, wonderful are the ways of our dear Lord and Master. He saw the need of a mission station in Oklahoma. He moved the hearts of some of His people in Germany and made them willing to supply the need. To Him be praise and glory!

FAITH MISSIONS

H. C. Nyce

Since the members of the Foreign Mission Board have been requested to write an article for our church publications, I have decided to write on "Faith Missions." We have heard so much about Faith Missions in the past; but as a member of the Board, having had the joy of seeing our people respond financially to this great work, I have come to the conclusion that ours is indeed a faith Mission.

It is necessary for us to understand what is implied in this term, and why ours is perhaps more correctly a Faith Mission than the so-called Faith Missions. When a work is done through faith, it requires the launching out with a certain program with the hope that the program may be carried out. To me, this is what we as a Foreign Mission Board are doing. This is where so-called Faith Missions seem to fail. I have met a number of missionaries recently who formerly were employed by such Faith Missions who are today unemployed.

To call a mission work a Faith Mission, and then to beg through the means of the radio, and thus robbing churches that really are carrying on a noble work, is neither a Faith Mission nor Christian. There are some missions that do live up to this name, but they do exactly what we as a Mennonite Board do, i. e., present a program to our churches and ask that God might bless the work to the extent that the money needed might reach the treasury. This was our very happy experience last year; for, while our Budget was a little more than $73,000.00, we actually received over $82,000.00 with the result that we were able to return some who had been on furlough that we really had not planned to return during the past year. For this, as a Board member, I wish to extend my hearty thanks to our constituency. This year our Budget is even larger than last year, and yet all of us felt at our last Board meeting that the money needed would come into our treasury because our work is a noble work. Our missionaries are faithful and need our support, and we have the faith to believe that our constituency will stand with them and support them both prayerfully and financially.

It may be well for us to recall some of the thrilling hours for Christian missions. We think for instance of that hour when Paul and Barnabas set forth from Antioch. This was the first great missionary journey of the Christian era. True, as a general rule, we think of the Macedonian call to the Apostle Paul as the first missionary journey, because Paul gave Europe the Gospel of Christ. Then for many years the Christian church forgot the real purpose of the church, viz., the task of missions, which was the passion of Paul, until that thrilling hour in 1792 when William Carey preached his sermon on Isaiah 54:2, 3, challenging the church of Christ with this cry, "Expect great things for God, and attempt great things for God." As a result of that statement in that sermon, the Baptist Missionary Society was formed and the following year Carey was sent to India. Thus the modern missionary movement was born.

There are many people who say to us, "Why go to India or China, when there is so much to be done right here in America?" Yes, the same old cry has been heard down through the years. Let us not forget that the first missionaries referred to in the Word of God, were sent to new lands from a country that itself was largely unevangelized. This is also true when we think of the sending of the first missionaries, that they were sent out from a church united in life and in doctrine, with leaders who fasted and prayed and waited upon God.

It can be rightfully said, that the sending of Carey to India was a venture of faith, for it was started with the very small capital of $65.62. Then I think of our Board and the large budget adopted for the year 1937, is that not also a venture of faith? And if we grant that, then we must conclude that ours is indeed a Faith Mission. Why should we have less of that spirit of sacrifice than our missionaries who can be compared to Carey or Ward or Marsham, who, together with their wives, pledged themselves never to call anything they possessed their own. It is estimated that these three men with their wives gave for missions in India no less than $400,000 and each glorifield in the fact that they could die poor, for their lives were not their own. The challenge of Jesus is as great today as it was 1900 years ago, "Ye Shall be MY Witnesses."

According to the Southern Christian Advocate, it was a Jew who brought the Gospel to Rome; a Roman, who took it to France; a Frenchman, who took it to Scandinavia; a Scandinavian, who took it to Scotland; a Scotchman who evangelized Ireland; and an Irishman who made the missionary conquest of Scotland. You may not be able to go, we cannot all go; but how true the statement, "Some can go, most can give, all can pray." We believe that prayer is the most important, for the person who prays sincerely for missions, is the one who gives as he prays. Indeed, I am convinced that ours is a Faith Mission. May the Spirit of Him who gave us LIFE, so fill us with the importance of this great work, that through our efforts, others might receive this life.

DEVOTION TO CHILDREN

I would have my children able at each moment from morning to evening to read on my face and to divine on my lips that my heart is devoted to them, that their happiness and their joys are my happiness and my joys.—Pestalozzi.

GOD'S GREAT DESIRE

A. P. Waltner

The Foreign Mission Board makes an appeal with this number to our Conference churches in the interest of our Foreign Mission Work. The expression "Foreign Mission Work," as well as the expression "Foreign Mission Board," is not found in the Word of God. Both of these expressions came in use after the mission work became more fully organized and was carried on more systematically. With God there is no difference between "Foreign" and "Home Mission Work." Both have the same value in his sight. God's greatest desire is, that true, systematic, and wholehearted mission work may soon be done wherever this work is needful.

Approximately 4000 years before Christ's birth, God created Adam and Eve. God created only one pair (Acts 17:26) and from this pair all the races of mankind have descended. God created man in his own image. The reason for this creation was threefold:

1. Man should multiply and replenish the earth. Gen. 1:28.
2. Man should subdue the earth and have dominion over all created beings on it. Gen. 1:28.
3. Man should glorify God through a holy life, lived in fellowship with God.

Man however has become a great failure in the last point. As a consequence of the Fall, man had lost fellowship with God and was henceforth unable to live a holy life since he became a sinner. God in his unspeakable love sent his only begotten Son to redeem mankind. Jesus Christ wrought out this great work of redemption, when He died on the Cross of Calvary, purchasing us by his own blood.

Jesus Christ and his Father were greatly concerned that the tidings of this great redemptive work should be proclaimed as soon as possible in all the world. Jesus therefore gave his disciples one day on a mount in Galilee (Matt. 28:18-20) the great Mission Commandment and emphasized it again on the Mount of Olives on the day of his Ascension (Acts 1:8). When the Holy Ghost came upon the disciples, they were empowered to set this great commandment in action. From that day of Pentecost to this present day we are living in the "Time or Period of Missions."

The many denominations that we have today, and the branches in these denominations, came into being in this "Mission Period." Among these denominations is also to be found "The General Conference of the Mennonites of North America" as a branch of the Mennonite Church. As God in his great wisdom and foresight entrusts unto the different denominations and branches thereof some special mission work or a mission field, He also entrusts unto us, as a Conference, three large, hard, but also promising fields in the Foreign Mission Work. He holds us accountable for these three fields.

The first field that He entrusts unto us and for which He holds us accountable is a mission field in our own country among the American Indians. God has given us three States in which we are to do mission-work among the Indians. These States are Oklahoma, Montana, and Arizona. I fear that we are sometimes in danger to neglect this field somewhat. Our workers in Oklahoma at this time are Rev. and Mrs. G. A. Linscheid and Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Ediger. Their work is among the Cheyenne and Arapahoe tribes. We have three main stations at this place. In the Montana field are stationed Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger, and Mrs. Valdo Petter. There are also three main stations at this place, and the tribe is the Cheyenne tribe. Years ago the Government divided this tribe and placed half of them in Oklahoma and the other half in Montana. In Arizona we have the Hopi tribe. Our workers here are Rev. and Mrs. John P. Suderman, Miss Mary Schirmer, Rev. and Mrs. Fred Johnson (native workers), and Mr. and Mrs. Dan Schirmer (also native workers). Besides the above mentioned native workers there are native helpers on each field. The work among the Indians is not an easy task, nevertheless this work has been crowned with some very encouraging results. Our Saviour says unto us today: "Give ye (church members of the General Conference) them (Indians) to eat." Have we fulfilled our duties concerning this field? Have we given them to eat? Are they filled?

In India God entrusted unto us a field in which more than half a million people are living. A large number of heathen have accepted Jesus Christ as their Lord and Saviour and have become Christians, but in comparison to the many unsaved ones the number of Christians is very small indeed. A mass movement has started in India. The Untouchables (a low caste) are bankrupt with their religion, and they are looking for something that is better than what they had. Under these condtiions Jesus is calling unto all of us anew: "Give ye (church members of the General Conference) them to eat." We have stationed at this place a nice number of true, consecrated workers who are willing to distribute the Bread of Life among the lost and hungry; but unless we are willing to help them in their efforts, they will not be able to reach their goal. Let us therefore give the natives of India to eat by filling the baskets for the missionaries on the field.

The last field that God entrusted unto us is found in the large country of China. The number of missionaries on this field is at present very small, consequently heavy burdens are thrust upon the workers here and much work has to be done by them. This work can only be accomplished by the grace and help of God. This field is also a promising field. The number of people for which we are accountable here is approximately two and one-fourth of a million. A large number of natives here have received the Bread of Life—they have eaten and they were filled—but God looks today at the two and one-fourth of a million who have not received the Bread of Life as yet; and He calls unto us: "Make them sit down . . . . and give ye (church members of the General Conference) them to eat." I believe that Jesus today is moved with compassion as He views the large multitude of unsaved Chinese as a large herd of sheep without a shepherd in danger of eternal death. Do we see the need of the Chinese, and are we willing to heed Christ's command, "Give ye them to eat"?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND MISSIONS

H. A. Fast

1900 years ago a young man in far-off Palestine lighted a torch which in time was to be carried to every corner of the earth. A scarce 2½ years he labored but in the short time that he had revealed his brief ministry he had attracted to himself other young men whose hearts had been kindled by the same great passion and purpose that burned within his own soul.

Then one day when Jesus and his followers were standing on top of a hill and when he knew that his own ministry on earth was at an end he turned to them and in words vibrant with meaning and emotion passed on to them the torch he had lighted, saying: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" . . . "teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world" (Cf. Mk. 16:15; Matt. 28:19-20).

The hearts of these young followers of Jesus, men of approximately his own age, were set aglow with the spirit of the Master and, beginning at Jerusalem, they carried the torch he had lighted through Samaria and surrounding regions on to Damascus and Antioch. And wherever they went other souls were set aflame by the marvelous story of the Christ.

At Antioch the church took the torch and in a solemn dedicatory service handed it to a young man by the name of Paul of Tarsus. (How young he was we do not know but he certainly cannot have been over 40 years). This man and his youthful companions, with a courage and zeal that defied all obstacles and opposition, started for the great centers of the civilized world. There they planted the torch in the great cities of Asia and Greece and last of all in Rome itself and they made that torch glow with such a blaze of brightness that not even the darkest haunts of sin nor the secret recesses of idolatrous temples, nor even Caesar's household itself could escape the brilliance and transforming power of its light. Timothy, Luke, John Mark, Titus, Appollos, Aquila and Priscilla and others carried the torch still further. Then other young men and women, stirred and kindled by its light, seized the torch and carried it on and on, north and south, east and west where other souls were ready to bear it aloft.

Then a strange thing happened. In the effort to protect the light people began to put it, not under a bushel, but in cathedrals and other institutions and they ceased to carry the torch out into the night of wrong and evil. Men were left to grope in the dark because the church had come to be more interested in protecting the light than in carrying it forth. But "four walls (could never) a prison make" for the spirit of the living Christ, no matter whether the walls be those of a church or a creed. The light of the glory of God in Christ Jesus burst through the restraining walls and young men were again set aflame by its glow. They seized the torch and a Luther, Menno Simon, Wesley, Fox, and others again carried it forth from hamlet to hamlet and city to city. And the cross again became the beacon light pointing the way from the darkness of sin and stupidity to the glorious life of the city of God.

One day, years later, four young college students in Massachusetts while engaged in heart-searching and prayer in the shelter of a haystack felt their souls strangely stirred by a sense of mission. The same mysterious inner fire that had burned within the early followers of Jesus seemed to burn within them and they felt as though Christ himself was passing the torch to them charging them to carry it across the sea to the large unevangelized areas of the earth. And they were "not disobedient to the heavenly vision" but then and there dedicated their lives to the service of Christ in foreign lands. From this haystack meeting the fire spread to other young men and women in schools and colleges until by today thousands of them have volunteered to carry the torch of the Gospel to the farthest corners of the earth. And still young men and women with eager, burning hearts seize the torch and bear it aloft with the hope that soon the time will come when the light of the knowledge of Christ shall fill the earth as water the sea.

Of course, young people were not the only ones who were filled with missionary zeal. Older people as well were filled with a flaming passion for peoples and nations not yet subject to the sway of Christ. But how persistently young people have furnished the ardor, the unflagging zeal, the self-forgetful devotion, the courage and the crusading spirit that has carried the Gospel to the far corners of the earth.

But Christianity is not the only cause that is enlisting the devotion of young people and stirring up a crusading spirit among them. Today communism and fascism are bidding with all their might for their interest and zeal and energy and hundred thousands are responding to their slogans and their battle cry. Take youth out of these movements and they would collapse over night. Take youth out of the aggressive communist movement in China and it would be leaderless, for almost all of their leaders are under 40 and most of them under 30.

Who shall prevail in this struggle,—Christ, Communism, or Fascism? A great American business man stated that the great issue of today is "Christ or Chaos." And a great preacher of our day cries: "We must either follow Christ or perish in a world-wide catastrophe." Which shall it be,—Christ or —? It would seem that youth has the answer. What will their answer be? Will youth again seize the torch and with the zeal and courage of crusaders carry it forth into every dark corner of life and light it with the Gospel and the spirit of Christ? If so, we have every reason to look with confidence into the future even in this dark day for the victory belongs to Christ. "In this sign we conquer."

LETTER FROM J. B. EDIGER

Clinton, Oklahoma, February 19, 1937

It is easy this time to obey the order of our secretary of correspondence.

Brother H. A. Fast, Field Secretary of our General Conference was with us, and his visit will not be forgotten by our Indians. He came Saturday, February 13. That day we completed the program and visited our Indian hospital which at the time was filled with patients, mostly flu patients.

Sunday forenoon after the song service and the Sunday school he brought us a Gospel message. After a short noon intermission Guy Heap-of-Birds led the song service again and Kias led in prayer. Then our visitor explained our General Conference activities, using the picture of a tree and other illustrations. The speaker had an attentive audience. Appreciative comments were made by different ones after the services. For example: "I am glad that we have a part in this great work." Another: "Now I understand just where our Sunday collections go." Another: "I did not know that our Conference is so large and that we are really considered a part of it. Even our little Indian churches are marked on the photo with the many large churches." Our native helpers Homer Hart, Hammon, and John Heap-of-Birds, Thomas, had been invited to be with us at Clinton for these services. Homer Hart drew a sketch of the tree and afterwards said: "I am taking this home to my people; they will benefit from my being here today." John Heap-of-Birds, Thomas, who repeated Brother Fast's speech in Cheyenne said afterwards: "I made notes so that I would not forget anything while speaking. I have those notes and intend to use them many times in my speeches."

The weather was disagreeable but Brother Fast "was game" so we went to the boarding school at Concho for the evening services, a distance of 67 miles. It was not our Sunday there, but the preacher for the evening failed to show up and Brother Fast supplied with an appropriate Gospel message.

Monday was one of the dustiest days we have ever gone through, but we made the best of it in trying to

The Bethel Retreat

A Statement and an Announcement

With gratitude and a deep sense of appreciation your retreat committee acknowledges the service and the goodwill which Bethel College has rendered to make each annual young people's retreat of the Western District Conference a success. For each of the eleven years of the existence of the retreat, Bethel College has placed its campus and equipment at our disposal. We believe that in this way, too, Bethel College has served our church nobly and well, and the committee is confident, would continue to serve if given the opportunity to do so.

It is, therefore, with mixed feelings and not a little fearfulness for the future success of the retreat, that your committee, after much thought and prayer, announces that the retreat this summer is to be at Camp Wood, a Hi-Y camp, near Elmdale, Kansas.

This change in location is made solely because we believe that such a camp is much more conducive to the achievement of the real purpose for which a retreat is held; which is to give our youth an opportunity to come apart to some secluded spot, as Jesus frequently did, to commune with God and meditate on the great verities of life. We feel that this move is a venture of faith in the interest of a better retreat. Your committee therefore covets the cooperation and goodwill of all the young people and friends of young people of the Western District Conference for the success of the retreat this year. We can do it if we all work together.

Watch for future announcements.

A Response

Ever since the beginning of our Young People's Retreat it has been held on the Bethel College Campus. The School has been very happy for this arrangement and would be only too glad to have it continue. There seems, however, to be a desire to try a new place in the hope that it will be more possible to keep the retreaters really separated for a few days from the rest of the world. Bethel College can understand this point of view and wishes God's blessing on those who have the Retreat in charge as well as on all of our young people who will be able to avail themselves of the opportunity that it offers. We shall continue to cooperate with the Retreat to the best of our ability, and if after trying another place it should seem desirable to come back to the Bethel College Campus again, we shall welcome them with open arms.

The Good Church Member Worships

Young People's Topic for April 4, 1937

Deut. 16:16; Matt. 18:19, 20. (Consecration Meeting)

Meditation

The capacity to worship—how wonderful it is! What a mighty conception it was, in the Mind of God, to make man so that he aspires ever to something. The ability to weigh values of life: the essence of worship! Some men take the dross, the crumbs, the refuse of life, and value it very highly. Some men labor with might and main after things that are very hard to attain, but not worth having when they are attained—foolish artists, they, who spend the years of their lives, carving the dreams of their lives in chalk, which will not stand the ravages of life and the elements. But others, having once caught a vision of the beauty of the life of the lowly Nazarene, have caught with it a new standard of comparison for every experience, every effort, every aim in life.

They worship!

A prayer

Master, Thou art worthy. Thou hast a right—the right of merit—to claim our finest and our best effort and talent. When we match the low motives of our lives against the selfless love which Thou didst manifest upon Calvary, we are shamed. When we see the lovelight in Thine eyes, even as Peter saw it, we are moved to newer, more whole-souled committment to Thee. When we see Thy courage, courage springs up within us; and we resolve once more to re-order our lives, so that Thy power may surge through us, for the sake of Thy Kingdom upon earth. Amen.

Problems and Projects

1. Is there any similarity between the words worthship and worship?

2. What are the respective areas of individual and group worship?

3. To what extent does the element of honesty enter into the matter of worship? What is meant by the term insincere worship?

4. Where, other than in churches, do people worship? and what do they worship?

    Benediction verse: Ps. 19:14

For the leader

Our religion is different than any other religion because it has a living Christ, a Saviour. A Hindu woman expressed it this way: when you get down into the gutter, the Hindu religion says, we are sorry you ever got down there but we have no way of helping you out. The Christian religion says we are sorry you are down there, but we have a Saviour who will stoop to help you out. The living Saviour makes the difference.

We have many evidences that Christ arose from the dead and is at work in the world today. The disciples are the first proof. They were discouraged after their leader had been put to death, and only after they felt Christ's living presence within them did they begin preaching Christ. The Christian church in all its activities is another proof. His presence in our own hearts is convincing. His answers to prayer is another proof.

Evidences of the living Christ

1. Dwight L. Moody was born a hundred years ago. Someone said to him, Christ has never been able to show what he can do through a man who is completely surrendered to him. Moody said, "I want to be that man." He had no college education, yet he could preach Christ as very few have been able to do. He founded a school for girls and one for boys. Out of his schools and summer conferences alone have gone 1,300 missionaries. See Christian Herald, Feb. '37, for additional information.

2. The story of the beautiful stone church and parsonage built in a thinly-settled country community at Altona, New York is another evidence of the living Christ at work in the world today. Never boasting more than a little white frame box-like church with 18 people attending, when Stanley Brooks came preaching Christ, something happened in that community and today there are 227 on the Sunday School roll. Further details of the story can be found in Christian Herald, Feb. '37.

3. Two irreligious young men were discussing the resurrection, telling each other they could not believe in it. Deacon Myers came along, and in a joking way one of the young fellows called to him: "Say, Deacon, tell us why you believe that Jesus rose again!" "Well," he replied, "one reason is that I was talking with him for half an hour this very morning." Can we have this proof too?

Christ Walks With Me

Christ walks with me today;
Christ guides me on the way;
Christ knows my every need;
Christ helps in thought and deed.

Christ grants me power to do;
Christ makes my words all true;
Christ teaches me to give;
Christ shows me how to live.

Christ heals my ills and sin;
Christ cleanses me within;
Christ talks today with me;
Christ sets me wholly free.

Christ fills my life with love;
Christ turns my eyes above;
Christ leads me in the light;
Christ guards me in the night.

Go Tell

The Mission of the Church

Topic for Junior C. E., March 28, 1937

Weeping at the empty tomb for the One whom she believes dead and stolen, Mary Magdalene received from the living Christ the command: "go and say to them"; soon after, a group of women fall at the feet of their risen Lord and, worshipping Him, receive the same command: "go tell"; and to the five hundred assembled on the appointed mount, the living Christ speaks again the command: "go tell the world." It is fitting then that for an Easter program we meditate upon these words that came from the lips of the risen Lord. In this command lies the chief mission of the church. To lead young hearts to a deeper devotion to Him who gave so great a task, a task that asks of juniors to "remember their Creator in the days of their youth" that He might prepare them for THEIR place in the carrying out of the great commission, this is the aim of the program presented.

It may be that you will lay this program aside because it will take much preparation. Before you do that, remember the joy of that Sunday School teacher who remained faithful in the teaching of a children's class. She often thought her efforts lost but later years yielded rich fruits. Letters had come as the years went by, letters from mission fields thanking for the planting of the seed which, as it grew, caused them to give their life in the service of the King.

John 18:1 to 19:42

Printed, John 19:4-9, 14-18, 25-30

Jewish Hatred Toward Christ

John gives a full account of the trial before Pilate. The trials before the Sanhedrin, Annas (18:13-24) and Caiphas (18:24-28) were but empty farce. From the beginning of His ministry, almost, the Jewish leaders were filled with malice toward Him. His holy life was a stern rebuke to them and they sought His death. The chief priests were murderers at heart and became such in reality. They charged Jesus with blasphemy (Matt. 26:64-66) and determined that He must die (v7, 18:14). They cared not that He was innocent. They wanted only to vent their personal spite on Him. There is no hate so fiendish as religious hate.

The power to sentence to death was in the hands of the Roman governor, Pilate, so they sought by intimidation and outcry to compel him to yield to their wishes (vs 6, 12, 15.)

Pilate's Weak Submission vs 14-18

Pilate was deeply impressed by the majesty and nobility of Jesus' bearing, was moved with pity and convinced of his innocence of the charges brought by the Jews (vs 4, 6, Luke 23:7-16). He determined to release Him. He must make up his mind. Every living soul must make his decision concerning Jesus.

Pilate allows himself to be swayed by the mob and sentences Jesus to crucifixion (vs 16, Luke 23:24,25). Pilate knew what he ought to do. He lacked the moral strength to do it. For fear of the Roman King he delivered the "King of Truth" to his enemies. The Jewish leaders insisted on crucifying their Messianic King. Their sin was greater than that of Pilate. He did not know Jesus as the Son of God.

Jesus Self-forgetting Tenderness vs 25-27

In His severest anguish on the Cross, Jesus revealed His deep thoughtfulness for His mother (vs 26,27). He knew full well the distress of heart and soul that was hers (Luke 2:35). He entrusts her to the tender, loving sonship of the beloved Disciple. His mother then needed the support of a sympathetic friend of hers and of Jesus.

Redemption Completed vs 28-30

John's Gospel is concerned with the deep spiritual significance of our Lord's earthly life. Of the full meaning of the darkness, the earthquake, the loud cry, we should not speculate. Jesus knew (v 28a) that all had now been accomplished, the Divine purpose of redeeming mercy was now finished. The words, "It is finished", thrill our very souls. Jesus on the Cross, had become the spiritual magnet that should draw all men unto Him. God's greatest work, redemption for a lost race, was now finished. The sacrifice of the

THE MENNONITE BOOK CONCERN

Berne, Indiana

Lamb of God, made once for all, was now completed. He gave His pain-tortured body over to death, voluntarily He yielded up His spirit (John 10:17,18). Conscious that He had not failed the Father in anything, He gladly, peacefully laid down His life for the salvation of the world. "It is finished", are the words of the faithful, victorious Son of God. Atonement for the sins of the world was now made complete.

Jesus bore His cross to Calvary. We need to bear our cross. For many the Cross has no meaning as they have had no experience of Christ in their hearts. Jesus accepted the Cross as the supreme expression of God's will in His life.

give our visitor an idea of our field in the three districts. The air was so full of dust that visibility was limited to a short distance and it was impossible to give him a geographic view. But we stopped at the churches at Thomas and Hammon and visited for a few minutes each in some of the homes of our Indians in the three districts. When we got home the speedometer showed that we had gone 192 miles. We called it a day and spent the time after supper in a mutually helpful discussion of our problems.

Tuesday morning he left. His visit is history. But the seed he sowed will come up and grow, and we pray that it may bear fruit to the glory of God and the salvation of many Indian souls.

THE EASTER FAITH

Harris Franklin Rall

The Easter faith is the faith in the living Christ. The Easter faith means, first of all, that Jesus was the one sent of God. We read Jesus' words and say, "This is God's word to us." We look at Jesus' life and say, "This is God showing us what we should be." We hear his words of invitation and his promise of mercy and life, and we say, "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself." The Easter faith gives to the Cross its real meaning. Without Easter day the Cross would have been a tragedy.

The Easter faith means that Christ through the Holy Spirit is a power in this world today, a living presence and not a mere memory. It was this thought that stirred Luther in one of the darkest hours of the Reformation, when he seized a crayon and wrote all over the floor and wainscotting of that room which is shown still today: Dominus vivit! Dominus vivit! (The Lord liveth! The Lord liveth!)

The Easter faith is the assurance of the triumph of Christ. That was the conviction that filed with joy the hearts of those first disciples. Christ is the revelation of God's purpose for the world, and some time the spirit of Christ shall rule all the life of men.

And, finally, the living Christ means that we who trust in him shall live with him. The Christian argument for immortality is not taken from science or philosophy, much less from supposed spirit messages from another world. We believe in immortality because we believe in Christ, and in the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ who raised him from the dead.

TRUTH CRUCIFIED RISES AGAIN. — "But what is truth? 'Twas Pilate's question put."—Cowper.

"Truth forever on the scaffold. Wrong forever on the throne."—Lowell.

"Truth crushed to earth shall rise again. The eternal years of God are hers."—Bryant

What a wealth of thought is hidden in these couplets! Two scenes are readily discernible. In one of them we see Christ, the Personified Truth, in whom the trial court can find no fault, condemned and crucified at the behest of an infuriated mob. The Truth, God, is apparently defeated, nailed to the scaffold, while Wrong, Satan, triumphs and is placed on the throne. Truth has been crushed to earth. Will it rise again?

In the other scene, three days later, the "Word" which is the Truth, tells us, "He (the Truth) is risen. He is not here: behold the place where they laid Him." The table has been turned. The Truth has triumphed over Evil; Wrong has met its defeat. Life has been victorious over death.

But Truth is still being crushed to earth, is still being placed on the scaffold. Can we as Christians crucify Christ, our Truth? Yes, indeed! With every sin that we commit we are nailing Him on the cross. Has the Mennonite church ever crucified the Truth? Yes, indeed! We as a denomination have wisely never taken much stock in man-made creeds. We have held that the Truth as embodied in the utterances of Christ is a sufficient guide of conduct. But the very fact that we have split up into almost a score of different branches proves that some of the leaders of our church, with honest intention, somehow have read their own mind and interpretation into God's Word and have assumed things hardly intended by Him who is the Truth and the Way. May the day come when the Truth thus crushed shall rise again, when we shall have a resurrection and shall be one as Christ admonished his followers to be.

And with great power gave the apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus; and great grace was upon them all.—Acts 4:33.

All that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation.—John 5:28, 29.

HOME MISSIONS

APPEAL FOR HELP

The treasury of the Western District Conference for Home Missions is empty. The Committee does not wish to go into debt, but it also would not like to curtail the work too much. At present twelve groups and smaller churches in Kansas, Oklahoma and Colorado are either entirely, or very largely dependent for their spiritual care upon the financial support they receive through the Conference Committee. And this spiritual care they need so very much.

The Committee for Home Missions therefore kindly requests all the churches of the Western Conference to remember this work with their contributions as well as with their prayers and, if possible, to increase their offerings in size and number. This appeal is made by request of the Committee. "So then, as we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of faith" (Gal. 6:10).—J. M. Suderman, Secretary.

RELIEF

O. O. Miller and A. Warkentin

In April, 1932, a shipment of new and used clothing was sent from Lancaster, Pa., to the immigrant Mennonite Colony in Paraguay. On our recent visit, many still referred appreciatively to that help. These six beginning pioneer years in Paraguay have been so difficult—and the past two particularly so on account of drouth—that many families have not yet been able to provide for clothing replenishment. Bro. Friesen, charged with helping provide for needy widows and orphans, appealed to us to consider whether another shipment could be sent them. The appeal was confirmed by the colony leadership as probably one of the most effective ways just now in which the U. S. A. brotherhood could help the Paraguayan brethren.

The Mennonite Central Committee approved making known this need to the churches. The Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and charities will pack and forward what is contributed on Wednesday, April 21. Any contributions intended for this shipment must be delivered to Mellinger's Meeting house on highway No. 30, one mile east of Lancaster, on or before the morning of this date or forwarded prepaid to Denlinger, Lancaster, Pa., R. R. No. —. Such shipments should be made in ample time to reach Lancaster before April 20.

Heavy or lightweight clothing or bedding, new or used (if still serviceable), and especially clothing for children and women is needed. Headgear, men's overcoats, women's heavy coats should not be sent.

Auhagen, St. Catherine, Brazil, Jan. 22, 1937.

Dear Bro. Miller:

I acknowledge herewith receipt of your letter of December 15, 1936, with enclosed N. Y. draft for $100.00 designated for our neediest families. In the name of the Colony I want to say a hearty "Thank you" for this help. Through it heavy, difficult problems of many of our settlers have been solved and their hearts are thankful. May the Lord bless those who have given and make them a blessing. Thank you also for the greetings and good wishes to us—In the name of the Colony, Franz Fast.

December Relief Notes mentioned this need and appeal and the M. C. C. response.

At the Feb. 13, Chicago meeting of the Central Committee, Sylvestor Jones, a Chicago Quaker, who had just returned from a six-weeks investigation trip to Spain—made for the Friend's Service Committee, Philadelphia, Pa.— to study particularly Relief needs of children and mothers; reported findings of his trip. Jones made a number of contacts in both loyalist and rebel territories and is convinced that outside Relief for Spanish orphan and refugee children should be distinctly Christian in its emphasis and should exemplify and demonstrate the Christian way to reconciliation.

The Friend's Service Sommittee has placed this project in charge of a Spanish Child Feeding Committee to which the Mennonite Central Committee was invited to appoint four members—the other members being Friends and Brethren.

The M. C. C., through which our several Relief organizations have been increasingly cooperating in serving foreign relief needs, believes that the brotherhood throughout will appreciate being kept in touch with the situation and relief opportunities in Spain and that this channel for help is being made available. The suffering and plight of innocent children in Spain's present cruel, heartless, senseless Civil War are wellnigh indescribable. Throughout Mennonite churches to know of need and of a dependable channel for reaching it has always been sufficient to bring a helpful response.

GIVING TO THE POOR

In analyzing the secret of King Edward's popularity among his subjects, a French writer recalls a story worth retelling. He related how, when His Majesty was driving along a country road in Scotland one day he came upon an old market-woman struggling under a load which was more than she could manage. "You might take part of this in your carriage," cried the old woman to the king, whom she did not recognize. "Alas, my good woman," replied His Majesty, "I'm very sorry, but I'm not going the same way. However, let me give you the portrait of my mother." "A lot of good that will do me," was the reply. "Take it all the same," said the king, smiling, and he put a sovereign bearing Queen Victoria's effigy in the palm of the astonished old peasant.—Young People.

Schools and Education

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

JESUS AS A TEACHER

6. His methods of getting attention.—When one mind has something to communicate to another, the first thing necessary is to get the attention of the other mind. Attention must not only be won; it must also be held and kept in order to influence personality. Jesus succeeded in getting the attention of His day, and no one in history has attracted the attention of the ages following as much as He. Those whose attention He tried to get felt the personal interest that He had in their welfare. He used many ways to get attention. He called, "Hear ye." "Those who have ears to hear let them hear." He asked His disciples to serve as advance agents and announce His coming to the various villages which He planned to visit. He spoke in concrete and picture language, so that His hearers might not tire. He used the familiar to explain the unfamiliar. He was interested in people's problems when they brought them to Him. He walked with His pupils in the open fields. He broke through social barriers of His day and mingled with all classes. He had sympathy for all and asked many questions. He wrought miracles and thereby created a sympathetic atmosphere, so that His teaching might be more effective. All these and many other methods He used to get and hold the attention of those whom He wished to teach.

BETHEL COLLEGE TO CELEBRATE FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY

In October, 1938, it will be fifty years since the cornerstone of Bethel College was laid. Cognizance of this fact is to be made by undertaking the establishment of a Memorial Hall on the campus and in making special efforts to wipe out the school's debt. As it will also be sixty-five years since the coming of the Mennonites and other settlers to Kansas, the event becomes one of general interest. So the Board of Directors, the Administration, and friends of the school have decided to inaugurate a campaign with these objectives: To raise $150,000 this spring and $175,000 more by fall of next year. The greater portion of the first sum is to be used to erect a large, up-to-date building to be known as Memorial Hall, which is to contain an auditorium, dining hall and other needed accommodations. This amount is to be raised largely in Newton and the larger community round about it. The rest of $325,000 is to be used to liquidate the debt, to establish scholarships and one faculty memorial. The campaign has already been started.

HOW THE MENNONITE CAME TO BE

By N. B. Grubb

While enroute to the General Conference Session which was to convene at Berne, Indiana, November 6, 1884, A. B. Shelly and I were companions on the Lake Shore Railroad from Cleveland to Toledo. I suggested to Brother Shelly that there was a need of an English Church paper published in the East and under the control of the Eastern District Conference, in order that our young people, who do not read German, may be made acquainted with the affairs of the Church. The date was November 5, 1884. We finally concluded that after our return home from the Conference we would take up the matter with the Brethren. We then invited some of the Brethren to meet with us, December 8, 1884. Those that responded to the call were A. B. Shelly, A. M. Fretz, C. H. A. van der Smissen, Isaiah T. Clymer and U. S. Stauffer. After a long discussion it was decided that any such plan could not be carried out at this time, when the project was entirely abandoned.

Disappointed and still certain of the need for such a paper, I invited Brother Fretz to my study when the whole matter was carefully gone over and then decided to meet again on September 9, 1885, for final disposition. At the postponed meeting, we decided to prepare a 16-page prospectus and have 1000 copies printed with the title "THE MENNONITE" and present it to the Conference which was to convene at Bowmansville, October 6, hoping that the plan would be favorable considered by the Conference. The conference met at the appointed time and the prospectus was presented hoping for favorable action; should the conference, however, not accept the offer, Brother Fretz and I would ask permission to have THE MENNONITE published as a personal enterprise. The Conference by unanimous vote accepted the proposition and appointed a committee which was composed of N. B. Grubb, A. M. Fretz and A. B. Shelly. From the minutes of said Conference we quote:

"The conference recognizes the need of an English paper through which the young members, and our young people in general and all such that do not read our German papers, may be made acquainted with our Church affairs. It therefore greets with pleasure the prospectus of an English paper, THE MENNONITE, as published and laid before the Conference by two of our Brethren. The Conference undertakes the publication of this paper by electing a committee of three brethren whose duty it will be to edit the same and have it published. The Conference further pledges itself, in case a deficiency should occur, to pay for such out of the Conference treasury. As compensation for their labors for the first year the committee is to receive the excess of the income over and above the cost of publication. The committee is to consist of N. B. Grubb, A. M. Fretz and A. B. Shelly. The Conference authorizes the publication committee to draw money out of the Conference treasury to the amount of $150, if necessary to defray current expenses. The money thus drawn is to be paid back into the treasury from the income of the paper at the earliest convenience." For six years I was the leading editor and Brother Fretz assisted and made large contributions. After six years the paper was enlarged in size and A. S. Shelly became the editor until the Publication Board of the General Conference took over the paper. Until then no money was paid to the editor. After the transfer the editor was Rev. H. G. Allebach and was followed by I. A. Sommer. In 1911, Rev. Silas M. Grubb, D. D., was elected and served as editor for twenty-five years.

Doctrinal and Devotional

GOOD FRIDAY MEDITATIONS

C. H. Friesen

The Friday preceding Easter is called Good Friday; in German, also, Silent Friday. Why is this Friday thus set apart? Because Christ our Lord was crucified on Friday before Easter, which made this the most eventful day of all the ages, past and future. It was well for the church to set this day apart as one of the most important Christian holy days. And it behooves us Christians to observe this day in special meditation upon the great love of God toward a lost world.

Good Friday has its root in the earliest history of mankind. The Lord God who put Adam into the garden of Eden commanded him saying, "Of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Our first parents ate of the forbidden fruit, and immediately they experienced a change physically and spiritually. God had pronounced death upon disobedience. This sentence was irrevocable. And though Adam and Eve did not die bodily, they died spiritually. This meant eternal separation from God, their creator. Mankind was doomed.

But God had provided a way of salvation. A two-fold promise was given them; namely, a seed of the woman that would bruise the head of the serpent (Satan), and a more obvious promise which consisted in the coats of skins with which God clothed Adam and Eve. In this act roots our Good Friday. In this clothing of our first parents, God revealed to them how to approach Him in worship and how the promised seed of the woman would be "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world."

We do well to pause here a moment, for this is holy ground. As soon as Adam and Eve had eaten of the forbidden fruit, they knew that they were naked and they made for themselves aprons of fig leaves. Self-righteousness is a garment in every way insufficient. But God in his mercy slew in their sight innocent animals which had to shed their blood and give up their lives in their stead. For the first time they saw what death means. Moreover He showed them how to approach and worship Him by the sacrifice of blemishless animals. There is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood. Here we have true religion as it is revealed by God to me. These bloody sacrifices are ante-types of Christ. Abel knew it and believed when he brought his offering of the firstlings of his flock; Cain rejected God's way and brought his offering in unbelief.

Contributions intended for the Young People's Department should be addressed to the editor of this department.

Noah, Abraham, and Moses, when they instituted the passover as well as daily sacrificial offerings, and the pious Jew when he brought his burnt offerings were all prayerfully and faithfully looking for the real Lamb of God. For us it is an accomplished fact. God in his son Jesus became flesh, dwelt among men, suffered and died for our sins on the cross, once and for all. Good Friday was the day of judgment, the greatest judgment that was ever executed on this earth; for it was the day on which the Lord Jesus was punished for the sins that ever have been committed and that ever will be committed in this universe. He was lost for you and for me. On Calvary we see how God looks upon sin. It cost Him his son. He extends his merciful arms to a lost world, saying, "This I did for you, what dost thou do for me?" Also, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of Man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have eternal life:"

From Calvary's mount of darkness,
Ring, joyous bells of Easter,
Death hath not conquered Life;
Victorious is our risen Lord,
And finished all His strife,
Lo! starry lilies bloom;
For by the cross we conquer
And fearless face the tomb.

Easter Meditation

"If Christ Be Not Raised, Your Faith Is Vain"

1 Cor. 15:17

P. H. Richert

When we remember that Paul speaks here of Christ's bodily resurrection, we can understand why the enemy has from the beginning of the gospel made his chief attack on this very fact of the gospel. The Holy Spirit foresaw this and made provision against these attacks by producing so much and such incontrovertible evidence as perhaps there is for no other fact of the gospel. Whoever can believe in this glorious fact of the resurrection can also believe in the rest of the gospel. Whoever cannot believe it, but tries to believe all the rest, will soon feel the truth of the text above, that his faith is vain; and Paul even adds, "You are yet in your sins." Why? Because then Christ was not the Son of the living God—the "Word that became flesh." And if he was not that, then his death was not what the Scriptures teach; namely, an atonement for the sins of the world. Not only that, but Paul says, then "We are found false witnesses." And how could we rely on the rest of their testimony, if in such an important point they should prove to have been false?

Paul, who saw the risen Lord in his glorified body which blinded him, was the best witness of all. A noted lawyer and member of Parliament in England, Lord Littleton, found this out. He was an infidel who did not believe in the Bible and felt that if he only could prove Paul's conversion to be a myth, he could overthrow the whole gospel. So he set to work to write a book against Paul's conversion through the risen Lord. His friend West, also an unbeliever, at the same time agreed to write a book disproving the resurrection story. They went at it like lawyers, gathering all the evidence. But the result of their separate attempts was that they were both converted by their efforts to overthrow the truth of Christianity. They came together, not, as they had expected, to exult over imposture exposed to ridicule, but to lament over their own folly and to felicitate each other on their joint conviction that the Bible is the Word of God. Their books are among the best on the subject. Let us therefore discard all books that cast doubt on the bodily resurrection of Christ, as so many modern writers do, saying that it is enough to believe that His Spirit lives.

A MEDITATION ON THE CROSS

Rev. James Myers

Industrial Secretary, Federal Council of Churches

Do I think of bearing the cross merely in terms of patient endurance of the inevitable suffering and sorrows which come to me in the course of my life? Does not this fall short of understanding one of the deepest meanings of the cross? Was not the cross of Christ a voluntary assumption of the sufferings of others; an identification of His very life with the interests and well-being of those less privileged than Himself? Though existing on an equality with God, He counted not privilege and power of things to be grasped, but took upon Himself the form of man, suffering with humanity even unto death, yea, the death of the cross.

Do I measure my personal religion by this test?

Am I content with the condition of the world in proportion to my own good fortune, the happiness of my family, and the welfare of the economic class to which I happen to belong?

Or have I voluntarily identified my interests with those of folks less privileged than I am—with the poor; with the unemployed; with those who live in slums; with child laborers; with workers in the factory and on the farm; with women who toil; with negroes; with oppressed peoples throughout the world?

Let me pause and think of the lot of each of these: As I meditate now before the cross of Christ, I do resolve to learn, by personal contact and study, more than I now know about what life is like for the least of these His brethren.

In humility, I ask myself, Am I as truly distressed over their situation as though it were my own?

Am I prepared to say "so long as there is a lower class I am in it; so long as there is a soul in prison I am not free."

Am I personally happy only as my life contributes something to increasing the measure of justice, and the possibilities of the good life for those who are now less privileged than myself? Am I bearing the cross?

Do I have in me that mind which was in Christ Jesus?

SPRING THOUGHTS

Psalm 65:9-10

Spring is a time of resurrection to life in the vegetable kingdom. This reveals the continued life-inspiring power of God.

Spring follows winter and ushers in summer according to an appointed order. This is proof of the continuous control and government of God.

As God renews the face of the earth, so will He renew us by the Holy Ghost, and it reveals the firm foundation we have for hope.

The great and various changes which the spring season involves show forth the unchangeableness of God.

The loveliness of spring is a reflection of the beauty of God. The joyousness of spring speaks to us of God's happiness.

The provision made in spring for present and future supply of food exhibits God's benevolence.

THE HUMILIATION

Text: Hebrews 2:14, 15, 17, 18; 5:7-9.

But none of the ransomed ever knew
How deep were the waters crossed;
Nor how dark was the night that the Lord passed thro'
Ere He found His sheep that was lost.
Out in the desert He heard its cry—
Sick and helpless, and ready to die.

Our Redeemer took the Humiliation upon Himself step by step. He went a long road down, down into the dark night of suffering for us. Meditate on Him.

1. The Incarnation. a. He partook in flesh and blood. "Since then the children are sharers in flesh and blood, he also himself in like manner partook of the same." Hebr. 2:14; Rom. 8:3. b. He bound himself to human society. "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren." Heb. 2:17; Mt. 17:17. c. He placed Himself under the Law. "God sent forth his Son—born under the law." Gal. 4:4.

2. Bodily Trials. a. Deprivations. He hungered. Lk. 4:2. "The Son of man hath not where to lay his head." Mt. 8:20. b. Mistreatment. "Spit in his face—buffet him—some smote him." Mt. 26:67; Is. 53:3-4; 50:6. c. Fear. "His sweat became as it were great drops of blood." Lk. 22:44; Hebr. 5:7, 8; Psalm 22:12-21.

3. Becoming a Curse. a. Betrayal. "Judas, betrayest thou the Son of man with a kiss?" Lk. 22:48. b. Denial.. "I know not the man." Mt. 26:31, 69-75. c. Scorn and mockery. "Hail, King of the Jews! He saved others; himself he cannot save." Mk. 15:18, 31; Ps. 22:7-9. d. Illegal Sentence. "Pilate, wishing to content the multitude — delivered Jesus." Mark 15:15. e. Curse. "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Mt. 27:46; 2 Cor. 5:21; Gal. 3:13.

4. Death. a. The bitterness of death, see Psalm 88:5-8, 14-17. "And might deliver all them who through fear of death were all their life time subject to bondage." Heb. 2:15. b. The Purpose of Death. "The wages of sin is death," Rom. 6:23. "The Son of man came—to give his life a ransom for many." Mat. 20:28; 1 Tim. 2:6. c. The Power of Death broken. "Having despoiled the principalities and powers." Col. 2:13-15; Heb. 2:9, 14, 13; 2 Tim. 1:10; Col. 1:22.

"Lord, whence are those blood-drops all the way
That mark out the mountain's track?"
"They were shed for one who had gone astray Ere the Shepherd could bring him back."
"Lord, whence are Thy hands so rent and torn?"
"They're pierced tonight by many a thorn."

But all thro' the mountains, thunderriv'n,
And up from the rocky steep,
There arose a glad cry to the gate of heav'n,
"Rejoice! I have found my sheep!"
And the angels echoed around the throne,
"Rejoice for the Lord brings back His own!"

JOHN'S RECOLLECTIONS OF THE RISEN LORD

John 20:1 to 21:25

Printed, John 20:19-29; 21:20-24

Topic: Christ's Resurrection a Glorious Fact.

Risen Christ Commissions the Apostles vs. 19-23

Christ's "It is finished" spoken on the cross, indicated the completion of the work of atonement for man's sins. It was needful that the apostles and the Church should understand the full significance of it all. Had Christ's body remained in the tomb, no one would have gone forth to preach the gospel of the good news of life in and through Christ. It was necessary that Christ should rise again, proving that He was victor over death. His resurrection gave to the Church and the world a living Savior.

On the evening of Easter day, ten of the apostles and some other disciples were assembled secretly in an upper room in Jerusalem. Suddenly Jesus appeared in their midst and spoke the familiar greeting (v. 19, Luke 24:33-44). He proved his identity by showing his hands and feet. Doubt vanished; rejoicing filled their hearts (v. 20).

Peace was His legacy to them before the crucifixion and now He renews it. He renews his commission to the apostles (v. 21). As He had been sent by the Father on a definite mission, so are they to go into the world. Having given the commission, He gave the authority and power for accomplishing it (vs. 22, 23). He breathed on them—they must receive—the Holy Spirit. They actually received Him in all fulness on Pentecost. This gift is for all who will receive Him.

Christ's gift gives strong proof of authority to the teachings of the apostles. Only God can forgive sins. The apostles could declare with authority the forgiveness, remission of sins on condition of faith and repentance. Their words were to be recognized, ratified in heaven.

The Doubter Convinced vs. 24-29

The other disciples quickly told Thomas that the risen Lord had appeared to them, "We have seen the Lord" (v. 25). Thomas could not believe it true; he must have proof (25b). One week later Jesus appears again (v. 26). Jesus meets poor Thomas with great understanding and kindness. He satisfies his doubt with infallible proof (v. 27). From the lips of Thomas comes the most sublime confession of faith (v. 28). Thomas, fully convinced, exceeds them all in his full recognition of the true Person of Jesus. The fact that he was so fully convinced is convincing proof that Christ's resurrection was real. Honest doubters when fully convinced usually become very stable believers.

Work for Each Individual vs. 20-24.

God deals with each one individually—Thomas—Peter (8:15-27). Christ has a separate program for each person to carry out. Christ met seven apostles by the Sea of Galilee (John 21:1-19). In a talk with Peter, He predicts a martyr's death for him (vs. 18, 19). Peter, seeing John close by asks, "What shall this man do"? Jesus gently rebukes him in verse 22, indicating that that is no concern of Peter's. "Follow thou Me." When God calls us we are to obey to the best of our ability. We should faithfully follow Christ and not compare His dealings with us with those of others. Serving God is an individual matter and we are personally responsible. Life here is a sacred trust to be carried out as God directs and in full trust in the risen, living Christ.

John wrote his Gospel with the avowed purpose of convincing the readers, so that they may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing they may have life through His name (John 20:31).

Golden Text: Rev. 1:17, 18.

"I am the first and the last: I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."

Practical Truth: Because Christ lives we have courage to live and die in His service.

Prayer: Our living Lord and Christ, speak unto us Thy word of peace, breathe upon us Thy Holy Spirit and help us to follow Thee. Amen.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bethany Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa.

Pre-Easter services for this congregation were conducted March 1-5 by Rev. John J. Plenert, of the First Church of Philadelphia. Speaking on the theme "Finding Reality," Rev. Plenert's sermons covered the topics "Finding Reality in the Word of God," "Finding Reality of God in Experience," "Finding Reality in Jesus Christ," "Finding Reality in the Holy Spirit," "Finding Reality in a Surrendered Life."

The congregation recently elected and installed as deacon John K. Boorse. Mr. Boorse succeeds Uriah S. Stauffer, who passed away last fall after serving the congregation faithfully for many years.

The wedding of Marian Shelly, daughter of the late Rev. Anthony and Mrs. Shelly, and Edwin K. Stoneback took place at the close of the regular morning service on March 7. A full church witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, pastor of the church.

Plans are being completed for complete renovation of the interior of the church, including the installation of new pews. The work will be undertaken after Easter.—Correspondent.

First Mennonite Church, Lima, Ohio

The middle District Conference decided at the last session in August, 1936, to build a basement auditorium at Lima. The work of construction was begun in the middle of October. The building is forty feet by sixty feet.

By the first Sunday in December, it was sufficiently ready for occupation. We gathered for the first Sunday School session with 101 present. In the morning worship the Lord's supper was celebrated with the pastor, Rev. J. J. Esau, presiding. The evening message was brought by Rev. P. A. Kliewer of Bluffton.

The church held the second annual business session the first Monday evening of the new year at which time all the reports of the past year were read and new officers were elected. We now have a complete organization.

The work has progressed nicely thus far and we trust it will continue to do so with the blessing of the Lord. Dr. T. Richard Dunham of Findlay and Rev. D. J. Unruh of Pandora conducted a five-day prophetic Bible conference from February 23 through February 28. These services were well attended.

The Lord has wonderfully blessed us, and we pray that we might do our part to help His work along.—Miss Pauline Sprunger.

Summerfield, Ill., March 10, 1937

We have been here about eight months and are enjoying our work. We have certain advantages here which we did not have at Wayland. Summerfield is only three miles from Lebanon where McKendree College, the first Methodist college in America, is located. This college is in its 109th year. Then we are only about 27 miles from St. Louis which gives us the opportunity to attend some great meetings and programs. In October I attended the four-day Preaching Mission from which I received a great deal of help and inspiration. Several weeks ago, we heard Sherwood Eddy, Maude Roydon, and Senator Clark, who were speaking under the auspices of the Emergency Peace Commission.

I often visit an aged sister who has a remarkable memory. I visited her on her 92nd birthday last fall. On that day she repeated to me the names of the books of the Bible and related to me the history of the children of Israel in their sojourn in Egypt and their journey through the wilderness. She has a marvelous faith in God and his keeping power.—Elmer Basinger.

Drake, Saskatchewan

The congregation of the English Mennonite Church were privileged to hear, on Monday evening in the church here, a message in word and song, "The Life of Christ," by Brother and Sister Tink of Red Deer, Alberta.

The church was crowded despite the bad roads, and sincere attention was given throughout the evening. The pilgrims were edified; and although we have no pastor here, we would like to say to all the readers, "Christ is still on the Throne."

Since Brother and Sister Lehmann, who were with us for nine years, are now with the church at Monroe, Washington, to labor in His vineyard there, we would like to say that their labor here was not in vain. The fruits of their efforts are still working. The Bible study and prayer meeting is being held every Wednesday evening, and the Sunday School is progressing favorably.

The Lord's work goes on. He said, "The harvest is white, but the laborers are few." We thank God for all the efforts of the little band of Christians here who are steadfastly holding on and are carrying out the will of our blessed Lord. We would solicit the prayers of all Christians.—R. C. Sadler.

Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman, S. Dak.

On February 28, 1937, Rev. Walter A. Gering announced his resignation as minister of our church. He leaves on June 1 to accept the leadership of the Eden Mennonite Church at Moundridge, Kansas, a congregation of seven hundred members.

Rev. Gering received his grade and high school education at the Freeman public schools and attended Freeman Junior College for one year. Thereupon he entered Yankton College, Yankton, South Dakota, from which school he graduated in 1929 with high honors, winning a scholarship to attend a theological seminary in New York City. Upon his return to Freeman he was elected pastor of the local church.

For the past five years he has served the church and community in an untiring manner. He loves to work with the young people, organizing and sponsoring organizations such as Christian Endeavor and Junior Endeavor. His ability as a pianist has also been of service to the church. His host of friends and well-wishers here at Freeman wish him God's blessing in his new field.—Paul Kleinsasser, Corr.

First Mennonite Church, Colfax, Washington

As the first quarter of the New Year is here, some news from this community is due the Mennonite.

We had a lot of snow this winter and also wind and drifts. Some of the folks were shut in from the first of the year till the end of February. Consequently our church and Sunday School attendance was below normal. Last Sunday, however, it was about up to normal for the first time this year. Health in general is good; there is only some influenza and some colds. Also the grim reaper Death took one Mother out of our midst in December.

We have our regular worship services, also Bible study class and C. E. meetings, every Sunday except the second Sunday in the month when the Methodists have morning services.

There were some changes made the last of the year. As our pastor, Rev. P. R. Aeschliman, who has faithfully served this church for forty-three years from the beginning until now through the hard pioneer-days, war-time, and depression, felt failing health and age creeping on him, he asked for support to help shoulder the burdens of the ministry. So we called and now have with us, since November, Rev. Harley King and family.

May they be a great blessing and help that through them we may all grow in grace and strength. May God grant it! Correspondent

Second Church, Beatrice, Nebraska

Our church enjoyed spiritual feasts during a season of special Lenten services. Brother Albert Claassen of Freeman, South Dakota, was with us to conduct these services. They began Sunday, February 28, and lasted one week. Besides the evening services, Brother Claassen conducted a series of German Bible studies in the morning. The epistle of James served as a basis for these studies.

The evening meditations centered about the central theme, "Scenes and Signs about the Cross." The subdivisions were, Why Calvary for my Redemption? Why three Hours of Darkness? Why the Rending of the Veil in the Temple? Why the Rending of Rocks and Quaking of the Earth? Why the Opening of Graves and Rising of Many Saints? Why the Fear of the Soldiers and the Testimony of the Centurion? Why was Christ Crucified for Me? We were led to Calvary and brought face to face with our Redeemer and Savior. It is our prayer that lasting spiritual benefit may result from these meetings. We were happy to note that our young people were well-represented in all of the evening and Sunday services. They contributed their share toward the spiritual benefit of the meeting with music and special songs.

During Holy Week we join with other churches in town in evening services. For Good Friday a three-hour service with meditations upon our Lord's Seven Words on the Cross is planned. Also, as usual, we are planning for our own Good Friday services in the morning. May these holiday meditations upon the great sacrifice of our Master help us to consecrate ourselves anew to Him. Then we shall experience a blessed Easter. Greetings.—M. Horsch.

At the age of 13, he was baptized and received into the Christian fellowship of the First Mennonite Church of Summerfield. On December 17, 1902, he was united in marriage with Barbara Bergdolt. This union was blessed with four children of whom only two are living.

At the age of 16, he united with the First Mennonite church of Summerfield. On April 24, 1900, he was joined in the bonds of matrimony with Caroline Haas.

About a year ago, his health began to fail. His ailment turned out to be cancer of the stomach. He bore his sickness with great fortitude. He passed away at his home in Summerfield on March 4, 1937, at the age of 73 years, 3 months, and 1 day.

He leaves to mourn his bereaved widow, one son and daughter-in-law, one grandchild, and many other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held at the First Mennonite church at Summerfield on Sunday afternoon, March 7, conducted by the pastor. Interment was made in the Summerfield Cemetery.

Rudolph J. Kennel, son of Peter and Susannah Iutzi Kennel, was born Nov. 24, 1855, in the ancestral home where he lived his entire life. Early in youth he united with the Trenton Mennonite Church of which he remained a faithful member. On October 25, 1885, he was united in marriage with Miss Emma Kennel of Danvers, Ill. who preceded him in death December 24, 1901. To this union were born six daughters and two sons. The Misses Hilda and Bessie and Otto are living at home. Mrs. H. E. Sprunger of Berkeley, Calif., Mrs. Floyd Byers, Goshen, Ind., Miss Elsie Kennel, Cleveland, Ohio, Miss Erma Kennel, Dayton, Ohio and Peter Kennel of Trenton, Ohio. Three grandchildren also survive.

Mr. Kennel reached the age of 81 years, 4 months and 8 days, thus living beyond the three score years and ten alloted to man once to die. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord".

Peter Preheim, son of Peter and Maria Graber Preheim, was born in the province of Volynia, Russia, Sept. 17, 1848. He grew up in this parental home, received some elementary schooling, and at the age of sixteen was baptized and received into the Mennonite Church. On November 20, 1869 he married Miss Barbara Strauss, and they had lived together sixty-five years, when Mother Preheim passed away a couple of years ago. When in 1874 a number of Mennonite groups migrated to America, they joined these and temporarily settled at Yankton, South Dakota, and later on the farm in the Childstown neighborhood, where they raised their large family and both lived until death. The pioneer life involved many struggles and self-denials. The settlers were poor, winters severe, and crops menaced by insects. Since Father Preheim had a practical bend of mind and good judgment his neighbors drafted him into all sorts of community service, in connection with schools, churches, road-bridge building, and the like. He stressed the need of a renewed life, claiming that a person must be reborn, not merely converted. He often confessed that he, one of the vilest of sinners, had been saved only through the love of God through Jesus Christ. Considering the rather limited sources of literature he had access to, people often marveled at the information he possessed. He was well-read and took a lively interest in the progress of our age. Father Preheim's posterity consists of a total of 95 souls. It is made up of eight children; Anna, Mrs. Jacob Graber; John P. Preheim; Mary, Mrs. Wm. F. Brockmueller; Samuel P. Preheim, Peter P. Preheim, Jacob P. Preheim; Frances, Mrs. Richert Hahnamann, and Henry P. Preheim, three sons-in-law, five daughters-in-law, 48 grandchildren, 14 grandchildren by marriage, and 17 great-grandchildren. The deceased attained the ripe age of 88 years, 5 months, and 6 days. He passed away February 23, 1937, and was buried three days later. Funeral services were in charge of his pastor, Rev. P. R. Schroeder, assisted by Rev. Alfred Waltner. May his ashes rest in peace until Resurrection morning.

"How can one get rid of so many appeals for money?" asked a lawyer. "That is easy enough," was the reply, "just stop giving altogether, and in a little while the public will find it out and will let you severely alone, as they do many others." "Yes," said the lawyer, "I suppose that is so, but what would be the effect upon me if I should stop giving?" "Why, your soul would grow small just in proportion as your bank account grew large."—Record of Christian Work.

The Good Church-Member Practices Stewardship

Young People's Topic for April 11, 1937

I Cor. 4:2; I Pet. 4:10

Meditation

Great souls are those who have learned the joy of holding in trust. Nothing is more inspiring than to see a man with power unlimited, using it gently and generously for constructive good.

"Ye are the temple of the Living God."
"All that I am, or ever hope to be I OWE. . . ."
"Whose we are, and whom we serve."

We spend much of each day's strength seeking to possess. We miss finding the joy of being possessed—by a cause, a higher personality, an ideal. When that experience comes—of being possessed, of belonging to someone or something else—then comes the full meaning of stewardship.

A Prayer

O Christ, save us from the tragedy of dispossessing ourselves of life's greatest good, for the love of that which seems so immediate. Give to Mennonite Youth the full experience of complete committment to Thee, to Thy program, to Thy purposes and objectives for the human family. Beset with fears as to the worthwhileness of the tasks which lie before us, give us only that inner eye of faith, which measures not by man's values, but by Thy values; and which finds all tasks, all trusts, sanctified, when held in trust for Thee. Amen.

Problems and Projects

1. A business man, wishing to buy a certain machine called in the salesman for it for a demonstration. The salesman came, but refused to give the demonstration, or to attempt making a sale saying, "My machine is not suited to your needs. I recommend that you buy another make." What elements of stewardship do you see in this little incident?

2. A friend of a hospital which was heavily endowed, urged the president of the hospital board to use some of the endowment funds to pay debts. The president of the board refused, saying, "The endowment funds are not OUR funds; we merely are holding them in trust for our friends." Any sense of stewardship there?

3. "These talents of mine," thought a young high school senior, "surely have not been EARNED. They may be mine, but mine to use. I shall therefore USE them for the highest purpose which I can conceive." Over what do YOU exercise STEWARDSHIP, right now?

INTERSTATE CONFERENCE DRAWS MENNONITE YOUTH

Bluffton College was represented at an interstate Student Volunteer conference which was held in Muskingum College, New Concord, Ohio.

The three-day conference took up various vital topics. Modern Methods in Missions, Cooperatives, Emergency Peace Campaign, and various other subjects were taken up both by speakers and in seminar groups. Several groups of motion pictures were shown to the group also: "Chinese Youth," "Russian Youth Faces Communism," and "Cooperatives in Scandinavia and England."

Delegates from Bluffton were: Doctor Schultz, advisor, Wilbur Lauer, Rollin Moser, Robert Geigley, and Karl Schultz.

Advance Preparation

Every meeting, to be successful, requires much careful preparation through prayer and work. Let the superintendent and prayer meeting chairman go over the details of the meeting with the leader, writing it our carefully and then making someone responsible for every part of the preparation

A Plan For Your Meeting

1. Praise in song

Use old favorite hymns of the church. Select a number of them, giving the song leader and pianist each a copy. Let the group follow by memory as they are led from one into the other. "All Hail the Power," "How Firm a Foundation," "Rock of Ages," etc.

II. Society Announcements

Give the society something to look forward to. Future programs, socials, missionary activities.

III. Quiet Worship

1. Topic anounced by the leader
2. Piano prelude, "Holy, Holy, Holy"
3. Leader: "I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord." Ps. 122:1
   Response: "Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him and bless his name." Ps. 100:4
   Leader: "I had rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness." Ps. 84:10
   Response: "For the Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly."
   Unison: "O Lord of hosts, blessed is the man that trusteth in thee." Ps. 84:11,12
4. Special music: "The Church by the Side of the Road"
5. Sentence prayers. Ask all church members to take part, the leader closing
6. Scripture lesson: Eph. 3:14-21; 5:15-20

IV. Consecration service

Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised," Stanza one

Testimonies, "What being a church member means to me." (Ask all church members in advance to speak on this subject during this time. Others can speak on, "Why I want to be a church member.")

Hymn: "O Jesus, I Have Promised." Stanza three

V. Topics and Questions

VI. Closing Moments

Ten-minute talk, "How can church membership mean more to young people?" by a member of the church board or the pastor

Closing prayer by the speaker

For Your Discussion

1. Why are you a church member? Is it necessary to be a church member to be a Christian?
2. What has the church to offer that you cannot find elsewhere?
3. What does our pledge say about our responsibility to the church? How can we live up to it?
4. What responsibilities do we assume when we join the church?
5. Many people feel that church membership is a ticket to heaven. What is wrong with such an attitude?
6. Why should a church member be regular in attendance? What are some excuses that might keep him away? What should be our motive in church attendance?

The Leader's Part

Someone has said that church members are either like a post or a tree. Both are stuck into the ground, but the post having no life within, soon rots and eventually breaks off. The tree because of the life in it sends forth its branches which yield shade and fruit for the service of others.

This meeting is to put before us very definitely the blessings of church membership, but also its responsibilities and opportunities. We should all take this step sometime, but to make the most of it we need to understand what it means. We must be sure to have the life of Christ within, so that we may be trees in the church instead of posts.

Arise! Shine!

Topic for Junior C. E., April 4, 1937

"His lamp am I,
To shine where He shall say;
And lamps are not for sunny rooms,
Nor for the light of day;
But for dark places of the earth,
Where shame and wrong and crime have birth,
Or for the murky twilight gray,
Where wandering sheep have gone astray,
Or where the lamp of faith grows dim,
And souls are groping after Him
And as sometimes a flame we find,
Clear shining, through the night,
So dark we cannot see the lamp,
But only see the light,—
So may I shine, His love the flame,
That men may glorify His name."

Arise, shine! is also the call of spring. Nature awakens from sleep and from death. That which became dead in darkness, arises to become life more abundant in light. There, too, "old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

Setting in garb of spring; also picture "Light of the World" by Hunt

Pin-ons and poster could be in the form of a candle. On the pin-ons print the verse "The Lord is my light and my salvation". The poster, besides the invitation to the meeting, could bear the thought:

"Jesus bids me shine
With a clear, pure light,
Like a little candle burning in the night.
In this world of darkness
We must shine,
You in your small corner
And I in mine."

Opening service in song using the thought "light"

Worship period

1. In unison speak Psalm 27:1

2. In unison sing three-fold "Holy" from Gaul's Holy City
3. A voice speaking Psalm 119:105 and verse 130
4. Hymn in unison: "Holy Ghost with Light Divine"
5. Responsive reading: Selection 11 in Mennonite Hymnal. (Matt. 5:1-16)
6. Prayer in unison using the hymn "Jesus I Come"

Study period. Aim: to teach the truth: without light there is darkness; Jesus is the Light necessary to take away darkness.

1. "The Light Shineth in the Darkness." Among your young people you may have someone capable of giving an effective chalk talk using the song "The Light of the World is Jesus." Let this person sketch the world as a black circle upon which falls the light of Christ,—the light which cuts into the darkness. Above this let him put the words "Thou wilt lighten my darkness" (Psalm 18:28).
2. Meditation on Light and Darkness — Group participation with leader in charge using the sketch just drawn. Give out the following verses on the darkness of sin and the light of Christ whch brings the change. Discuss each verse after its reading by a junior. Psalm 18:28; Luke 1:79; John 3:19; Acts 26:18; I Peter 2:19; I John 1:5; John 1:9; Ephesians 5:14. (Read this last verse without comment. It is the verse for the heart-talk)
3. Special music: "Since Jesus Came into My Heart" verses 1 and 2
4. A New Awakening—Heart-talk by a guest beginning with the thought of nature's awakening to life and light, then using Ps. 18:28 and Eph. 5:14
5. Special music: "Give Me Thy Heart"
6. Knocking. Let a junior give the picture talk using 'The Light of the World," giving what he sees in it. He could also ask the group to share what he might not have seen.
7. "Ye Are the Light of the World—talk by junior
8. Poem: This Lamp Am I—a junior
9. Sing in unison "Jesus Bids Me Shine"
10. Closing prayer

OUTLINE FOR APRIL

General Theme: Bearers of Light

1. April 1: Arise! Shine! (Christ in me)
2. April 11: Spots that lessen the light
3. April 18: The bearer of much light (Paul)
4. April 25: Other light bearers

Verse for the month: Psalm 27:1

Song for the month: "Jesus Bids Me Shine"

The Message of Easter for the Youth of Today

Rev. Adolf Friesen, Pastor, Donnellson, Iowa

We have been accustomed to think of Jesus' resurrection as a guarantee and promise that there will be a future resurrection for all of us. It is that, in its fullest sense, but in its wider implication it gives us the assurance of Christ's living presence—a presence which we may experience daily. Thus conceived, Easter assumes greater significance for young and old alike.

The more fully we understand what the resurrection of Jesus meant to the disciples, the better will we be able to comprehend its message for us today. The motivating power which led them forth into fields of action was this conviction that Jesus was risen and lived. The transformation which took place within these men because of their faith in the risen Lord had remarkable consequences. Their faith burned with such intensity that nothing could extinguish or dim it. We are amazed that these inexperienced men should have had such power. Yet their message was so irresistible for the simple reason that it was born of an inner experience. After they had met their living Lord, they were ready to face a hostile world unafraid.

Viewed thus, the story of Easter is not only an historical certainty; it is brought down to date through Christ's living presence in the lives of his followers. Here is youth's inspiration for a program of action which the world needs so much today. There is need, desperate need, everywhere for young men and young women who have faith in the power of the living Christ.

Paul says, "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above." (Col. 3:1). And what are these high things to which a Christian who has risen with Christ should aspire? Paul speaks again, and we know now what he has in mind; "Set not your mind on high things, but condescend to things that are lowly." The risen life moves in lowly places. The ordinary tasks, the ordinary activities, the ordinary relationships of life are touched and transformed.

We can in this life only begin to grasp the profound meaning of Easter. Risen with Christ to a new life, we seek opportunity to serve him to the best of our ability each day that we live. But every act of service will have deeper significance because Jesus has given us the positive assurance that life will not end at the grave. Easter proclaims a new dawn—the dawn of another life that shall never end.

MAKE YOUR OWN BIBLE COMMENTARY

By Christena Harder Duerksen

Study your Bibles, use pencils and scissors and you will be better equipped to witness for the Lord.

In an old song book from which we used to sing lustily in our C. E. meetings there was a song which said, "Have you had a kindness shown? Pass it on! 'Twas not given thee alone. Pass it on!" I want to pass on something that has been a blessing to me.

For quite a while I have had a filing system that takes care of articles and clippings very well. But I had not yet found any satisfactory way of preserving short quotations, pithy comments or interesting cross references pertaining to Bible studies. A wide-margined Bible would have been fine, but I could find no Bible with a sufficient margin to suit my purposes. Then one day last winter, over the radio, I heard just what I needed. A well-known preacher suggested that we all make our own Bible commentary and told us how.

Take two Bibles, exactly alike, either old ones or of the kind carried by Woolworth's and Kress'. To begin with, cut out of both Bibles the particular book you want to study. Take good typing paper—not too light in weight—and paste either a chapter or just one column cut from your Bible in the center of your sheet of paper. Continue carefully until you have all the consecutive chapters pasted on sheets. I generally leave one side blank for future references to use when the one side of the sheet gets filled. Now you are ready to begin inserting your comments with a wide margin for your comments. Number each sheet with chapters and verses so that you can keep them in order.

A good book to begin on would be the Gospel of John since we are studying that in the uniform International Lessons. Watch your quarterlies, Mennonite, and other periodicals for pithy comments or special light on certain verses. Enter in the margin along side of the verse or with an arrow pointing to the verse. Remember that the Bible is the best commentary of itself. As you come across verses in your reading that throw light on other portions or that suggest interesting lines of study, make your entry. For instance, next to John 1:3 write Heb. 11:3, etc. Perhaps your pastor preaches on a text that you knew well enough, but he brings an entirely new line of thought to you. Don't trust to your memory for it may fail you when you want that thought again. Make your note in your commentary and you will have it for future use.

So often one hears topics discussed in a slipshod way, just because a thorough study has not been made or there has been too little time. Is it fair to treat these topics so lightly? Study your Bibles, use pencils and scissors and you will be better equipped to witness for the Lord.

[Editor's note: The above was written en route to India, January 5, 1937. The buoyant spirit of a true follower of Christ wells through and through this little article.]

A EUROPEAN VISITOR

Dr. Cornelius Krahn, born in 1902 in Rosenthal (Chortiza) on the Dnjepr in South Russia, has come to America to get in closer touch with our Mennonite communities.

I met him at the World Congress in Holland last summer. He had just finished his biography of Menno Simons for his doctor's degree at Heidelberg University.

He is a modest man with an earnest disposition and a Mennonite foundation. His visit may become another link in the closer fellowship of the American and European children of the Anabaptists.

Wherever churches can arrange to have him bring one or more of his messages on the Mennonites of Europe, past and present, let it be known.—P. R. Schroeder.

ONE OUNCE OF RADIUM

The Governor General and the Prime Minister of Canada recently ceremonialized a "notable increase" in the production of radium in Canada during the past three years. Total production: one ounce. Market value: $1,400,000.

With this addition, the world's supply of radium is now about twenty-five ounces, not enough to make up a two-inch cube. It is scattered widely, but the whereabouts, the ownership and the pedigree of almost every particle are on record.

Radium is a pure element in a violent state of disintegration. Its atoms are constantly exploding with frightful force, but their number is so great that scientists compute it will take 19,000 years before every atom of any given particle of radium has exploded.

A millionth of an ounce of radium injected into a human body is enough to cause death by the disintegration of the tissues. Yet it is this ability to destory living tissues which makes radium valuable in fighting cancer. If radium can be focused upon malignant growths the cancer is demolished.

About one out of ten persons who reach the age of thirty-five will die of cancer. Because there is so little radium, very few cancer victims will be able to receive radium treatment. Every new radium unit, therefore, promises relief for thousands. Hence the extraordinary importance of the discovery of radium in Canada, and the official celebration of the mining and refining of the first ounce.—Selected.

It is not death to fall asleep! A breath,
A silence! We who wait here may not know
To what fair land of joy, where sorrows cease
They go who find that heaven is life, not death.
His only Son God sent to earth to show
The Way, the Truth, the Life—eternal Peace.
—Alice Hirsch.

Pastorial Letter

Wm. H. Stauffer, Sugar Creek, Ohio

Greetings: We are already well along in the new year. How quickly the time passes! No doubt many of the resolutions that we have made have been forgotten. It is comparatively easy to arouse an enthusiasm at the beginning of a new year for most any task. But all too often the enthusiasm was nothing more than an emotional flare which dies as quickly as it arose. Are you one of those with merely "Good Intentions?"

Here are four standards by which any congregation can rightfully be evaluated. The first is church attendance. The Psalmist says, "Blessed are they that dwell in thy house; they shall be still praising thee." Outsiders and critics largely judge a church by the regularity of the attendance of its members. Hardly can we expect others to enter into the fellowship of our Lord if we ourselves are not there. For the sake of God and His church, and for your sakes, we urge that you attend our services regularly.

The second standard is that of Bible reading. How well acquainted are you with these Wonderful Words of Life? When life becomes almost too much for us, and we become weary and discouraged, what a message of inspiration, comfort and security lies hidden in the unchanging word of God. Truly it is the bread of life releasing the very heart and soul, raising us into the holy presence of God.

The third standard is giving. How much of ourselves, our minds and our substance do we share with God? Giving goes deeper than making a financial contribution, important as that is. The Word of God is very specific on the matter of bringing our tenth for God's work. But giving goes deeper than material contributions. If we neglect to promote the work of the church through our personal interest and assistance wherever possible, or wherever we are needed, we are robbing God of the rich resources He has placed into every human being. God needs and is calling you and me. And unless we respond we are robbing God.

The fourth standard is prayer. Did you think to pray for your church, for your home, for your missionaries, for the world this week? The disciples soon discovered that Jesus had something that they lacked. And they soon discovered that the secret of Jesus' great personality lay in His constant living in the presence of God. In prayer He tapped the great resources that God had placed into His soul. In prayer He raised His soul into the presence of God and there discovered and completely surrendered His will to the Will of God. Thus He was free — free to live a life to the full and overflowing. Those resources lie hidden in your life and mine, waiting for us to discover them. The same God is at hand ready to release us to that fuller life if we will but make the effort and rise and stand in His presence.

As the new year tends to become old and routine, we commend these four great standards for your refreshment. Thus let us live our common lives in an uncommon way. Let us do our ordinary tasks in an extraordinary way.

"The Mennonite Church Messenger," a beautiful illustrated, twelve-page monthly, edited and published by Rev. William H. Stauffer, pastor of the Mennonite Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio, is among our regular visitors. Other pastors are sending their Sunday service bulletins, all of which kindnesses we appreciate very much. The more the editor knows about the churches the better he can serve them.

— Rev. A. S. Bechtel, who has been for nine years pastor of the Mennonite Church at Deer Creek, Oklahoma, has recently accepted the pastorate of the Hanston, Kansas, Mennonite group. They moved to their new place of work last week.

— The Mennonite ministers of southeast South Dakota, about twenty in all, meet once a month for fellowship and prayer. They belong to five different shades of our church and are getting along nicely together. The March meeting was held in the home of Rev. Albert Claassen. Rev. D. P. Schultz gave an interesting talk upon the subject, "The Relationship of Preacher to Preacher," which was followed by a lively discussion. The meetings are seasoned with much prayer, where almost all present orally plead with the Lord for His blessing upon their work.

— A meeting of the officers of the C. E. Societies of the Western District Conference was held February 28 in the Bethel College Chapel. Rev. Walter Dyck, president, presided at the meeting. Miss Vivienne Musselman, peace secretary, and Ted Claassen, mission secretary, presented plans for the carrying out of the projects which were adopted at the last convention. Dr. E. L. Harshbarger, Rev. Wm. Unruh, and Rev. David C. Wedel, representing the interests of the Institute of International Relations, Missions, and the Young People's Retreat, gave short talks.

— The Goshen College Record reports, "With the advent of spring-weather, athletic activities turned to swimming due to the fact that the gymnasium was nearly turned into a swimming pool." In basketball they have inter-class and also inter-league contests. In the inter-league contests the men are divided into an

"A" league and a "B" league. They also have games between the Auroras and Adelphians, literary societies for men. They report good times in their games."

— Prof. Guy F. Hershberger of Goshen College is the author of a 48-page brochure entitled, "Non-Resistance and the State: The Pennsylvania Quaker Experiment in Politics, 1682-1756." The booklet is published by the Peace Committee of the Mennonite Church in 3000 copies for general distribution in the church.

— On Sunday evening, February 28, a "Contrast" program was given by the C. E. Society of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio. The program was in two parts. The first part was an example of a poorly-prepared C. E. meeting. The last part was in the form of a candle-light service. The object of the meeting was to show the difference between a poorly-prepared program and one well prepared.—Celia Barlett.

— The Junior C. E. Society of the Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania, rendered a special Easter program on Sunday afternoon, March 21. There are twenty active members in this organization. Friday evening, April 2, a set of slides will be shown by Charles Breed, Headmaster of Blair Academy, Blair, New Jersey, in the Hereford Church. These are color pictures of Norway and Sweden.—Mae Latshaw.

— Brother Ferdinand Voth of the First Church, Newton, Kansas, reports: A Young People's Bible Class, with Brother Ted Claassen as teacher, was recently organized. A large number of the young people have enrolled and take a lively interest in the work. After the Bible study class the Young People's Choir meets for rehearsals with Mrs. Ferd. Voth as organizer and directress. More recently she also organized a Junior Choir with Victor Klassen, Bethel College student, as director. Both of these choirs are working on a combined Easter program.

— Dean J. S. Schultz of Bluffton College has accepted a position on the staff of Juanita College, Huntington, Penn., for the summer term.

— Don Smucker, son of former Prof. B. Smucker, who graduated from Bluffton College last spring and is now attending Yale graduate school, recently won the first prize of sixty dollars in the annual Mersick public speaking contest. Thirteen different schools participated in the contest.

— The Registrar of Bethel College has just finished the scholarship index for the first semester. The results show that the women are quite superior scholastically to the men and that the scholarship in the upper classes is better than that in the lower classes.—The Student Christian Movement, which replaces the Y.W.C.A. and the Y.M.C.A., is doing commendable work. Their work is along the following lines: reinterpretation of religion, family and personal relations, creative leisure, race relations, world cooperation, etc.

— From the Alexanderwohl Church, Kansas, comes the report that Sister (Miss) Katharina Schmidt died the last day of February and was buried in the cemetery there. She had been ill for some time and died as a result of a stroke of paralysis. She had reached the age of 45 years.

Thanking you, Curt D. Boese, 1115 E. Orme Street, Wichita, Kansas.

— A Mennonite Peace Institute was held at the Eighth Street Mennonite Church, Goshen, Indiana, on Sunday, March 14. The theme of the Institute was "An Effective Peace Testimony." Several Mennonite groups participated in the meeting.

— A former Berne, Indiana, boy, Rev. Edison Habegger, and Mrs. Habegger, are still in England, busily engaged in evangelistic work. They have held series of meetings in Portsmouth, Southampton, Christ Church City; and by this time they are probably back in Scotland again. The report is that the Spirit is at work and souls are steadily being saved.

— What is Communism? In "Christian Education" we find this startling statement made by the secretary of the Communist Party in America, "What is Communism? The revolutionary tradition is the heart of Americanism. . . . We Communists claim the revolutionary traditions of Americanism. We are the only ones who consciously continue these traditions and apply them to the problems of the day. We are the Americans and Communism is the Americanism of the twentieth century."

— The Oratorio Society of this church numbering fifty voices is rendering Dubois' "The Seven Last Words of Christ" on Good Friday evening.

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

Many books have been written about the Bible—how we got it, who wrote it, when it was writen, what it means to us—books that attack the Bible, books that defend it, and books that explain it. And every year more and more books concerning the Bible pour from the presses of the world.

One is inclined to feel that everything that could be said about the Bible has already been said by somebody and that all books now written contain mere restatements of old truths. To a large extent this is true and it is therefore refreshing to find a new book that fills one of the few gaps that still exist. The book I'm referring to bears the title THE BIBLE IN AMERICA and is written by Dr. P. Marion Simms.

The value of Dr. Simms' new books does not lie in the fact that he deals with new material. Any thorough Bible scholar could with some effort find most of the facts presented by the author. But there has never before been a book that presented all the important facts and treated them in the almost unique way in which they are treated in THE BIBLE IN AMERICA. It is a practical book written in simple language and will be of inestimable value as a reference book in the libraries of churches, Sunday School teachers and ministers.

Dr. Simms spent ten years of his spare time collecting the material and writing the book. His work is scholarly and yet easy to read. It fascinated me as I read it.

In his opening chapters he relates the history of the Bibles of the first colonists, beginning with the Geneva Bible which the Pilgrims brought to New England, and ending with the first Bible published in America, the German translation printed at Germantown in 1743 by Christopher Sauer.

In later chapters Dr. Simms treats some of the first translations of the Bible in America including Eliot's Indian Bible; the strange history of the clandestine Bibles now greatly prized and vainly sought by collectors, and the first Bibles published openly in America.

In his closing chapters he deals with the varied and far-reaching work of the American Bible Society, with representative translations of the last hundred years, with modern speech translations and with translations of an unusual character.

The Mennonites are mentioned seven or eight times. The fascinating chapter on "the Bible for American Indians" devotes nearly a page to Dr. Rodolphe Petter's translation of the Cheyenne New Testament, a translation that represents forty years of painstaking research and is therefore one of the best translations into a language of the North American Indians.

The chapter on "The Influence of the Bible on National Life and Institutions" is very good. The attitude of the Quakers and Mennonites towards slavery is mentioned on page 322.

The author is not an extreme liberal and one feels that he tries to give a fair and unbiased account of such ticklish questions as the authenticity of the various versions and translations. But those who consider the King James Version or any other versions as infallible and verbally inspired will find little comfort in those portions of the book which deals with these subjects. Aside from these few passages there is little that would offend even the most conservative Christian. The sheer mass of facts makes this book so valuable that it would be folly to condemn the whole book for a few portions that do not exactly fit our particular views of the Bible. In my judgment the author has shown great tact in handling debatable questions and at the same time pointing out how the Bible has been misused by certain sects and individuals.

All in all, THE BIBLE IN AMERICA is a narrative of rich and unfailing human interest as well as a reference book of the first class—an indispensable tool for students.

The book is strongly bound in black art, gold stamped. It has twelve illustrations, an excellent bibliography, and a complete index. The bold type is easy to read. The size of the book is 9 by 6 inches. Over 400 pages. Price $3.75. Orders should be sent to the:

GIVES TITHE AND PROSPERS

Twenty-two years ago Albert A. Hyde, more recently the richest man in Wichita, Kansas, found himself without money and $50,000 in debt. But with high courage he again started business, and opening his Bible at the twenty-eighth chapter of Genesis, he made a ring around the twenty-second verse. A doctor who had known Mr. Hyde for some time gave him a recipe for an ointment he had used in his private practice, and suggested that he put it on the market as a commercial commodity. This ointment was the mentholatum sold everywhere in the United States at this time. Mr. Hyde has kept his promise and his giving is very much in excess of the tithe. It supports a mission school in India. It contributes largely to the Y.M.C.A. in Wichita. It maintains a missionary steamboat in Africa, supports in full three missionaries in China, one in Japan, one in India, and seven in the United States, besides numerous private philanthropies, which few besides Mr. Hyde himself know about.

Neither is there salvation in any other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved (except the Name Jesus Christ).

THE ROOT OF THE PEACE PROBLEM

What knowledge has Paul in mind as helping love?

1. The knowledge of Christ, as he had it, and could say that he considered all else as loss compared with the excellency of the knowledge of Christ.

2. A knowledge of Christ's teaching on war and peace. It is a hopeful sign that non-pacifist denominations study this teaching today more than ever before, and are looking to us for help, because we have studied this for 400 years. Not that we are through with it. No, even we Mennonites have a lesson or two to learn on peace. That this increased study is bearing fruit, is evident on every hand in the literature and conference actions of practically all denominations. More and more they confess the sin of participating in the last war, and resolve not to bless any war in the future. Praise the Lord for this fruit, but it is not yet as "abundant," as Paul prays for it in our text.

3. While the fact that Christ forgives us freely is and will always remain the main spring of our love, because Christ died for us when we were yet enemies, there are other considerations which help to make love easier, especially love of enemies:

a. A proverb says, that our enemies are our helpers, because they find our faults better than we, and so can assist our desire for sanctification. This should make it easier to love them.

b. Many enemies are such out of ignorance, and deserve pity rather than hate.

c. Every enemy is an opportunity to practice our love diligently, which is one condition of growth. "He who hath, to him shall be given." This refers to those servants who use what they have. Some Christians claim that the command to love our enemies is not given for our time, but for the millenium, because today it is too hard to do it. But as far as we know, there will then be little or no opportunity to learn to love enemies, because we will have none to disturb our peace. If ever we want to learn to love enemies, we will have to do it now.

d. Love of enemies demands self-denial, which is necessary to follow Christ and to become like him.

e. Enemies are potential friends, and can best be made so by our love. This also should help us to love.

f. Dr. White once said in an address, that he had had difficulty to love a certain man who had wronged him. Then it occurred to him that this enemy was also in God's school, and in the process of becoming what he should be, and some day he would be loveable. And he began to look at him not as he now was, but as he would be when God would be through with him. That helped him to love the man.

g. Christ promises great joy and reward in heaven for the willingness to suffer rather than to kill. This helps love.

h. "He who takes the sword shall perish by the sword," is an appeal to fear which we should not overlook altogether, even if it is not a direct motive for love.

i. "Perfect love casteth out fear." This also should help us, because he wills it and did it himself.

k. "Whatsoever a man soweth, he shall also reap," is also a strong inducement to scatter seeds of love and kindness.

All such knowledge makes love easier, and since an increase of love is the root of the peace problem, may we often pray with Paul for "love to abound in knowledge."

BELIEVE IN JESUS.—Think of what that means. Many time we say the words, but do we stop and think exactly what we mean? Do we mean enclosed with Jesus? We should.

Coleridge has written "I believe Plato and Socrates. I believe in Jesus." There is a great difference when we add the word "in." We can believe what numerous people say or write, we can accept their statements is correct and plausible. We can agree with their theories and conclusions. But we "Believe in Jesus." We enclose our lives in His Life, we accept His teachings completely and feel secure in the knowledge that He is ours and we are His.

As the little word "in" adds greatly to the meaning of the statement, so we should be careful of a lot of the little things we do. All our actions and thoughts, however small, should reveal to the world the fact that we believe in Jesus and His teachings, not that we merely accept them as fine theories. Nothing is too small or insignificant to merit our best effort.—Walter Temple.

Foreign Missions

January 14, 1937.

Dear Friends in the Homeland:

Greetings in the Name of Him who has redeemed us and called us into a holy calling. How He has showered us with "journeying mercies!" The Lord willing, our boat should reach Colombo, Ceylon by the 25th of January and Bombay by the 30th. We have not yet decided where we will land. By getting off at Colombo and traveling north we can save several days but by getting off at Bombay we will most likely be able to save several dollars. Perhaps there will be a letter from some of our missionaries waiting for us at Singapore and we may have the necessary help in making our decision.

We have had a very good journey so far and are happy that we all escaped sea-sickness. The first boat carried a full load of passengers, due to the strike conditions on the coast. There was much on that boat to make one's heart ache—drinking and carousing around by both men and women. But there were so many missionaries and Christians traveling as tourist passengers that we could have services on Sunday, daily devotional meetings and a real Christmas program on Christmas Eve. We had about 30 children and they were happy to work up a program. Then came the question of a room large enough to have the program. The big smoking room was suggested but it seemed such an unlikely place for a Christmas program. It began to look as though there would again be "no room in the inn". But we finally obtained permission to have it in the large first class dining room. The ship people had put up a huge tree and we used that as the front of the room. The orchestra played the old familiar Christmas carols and we joined in with singing. One thrilled to the dear, familiar story of God's love in sending His Son. As the boat rocked slowly to and fro with the waves, the branches of the Christmas tree rose and fell as though it too, were taking part. Familiar shores were far away and under us the water was very deep but we had Christmas joy.

At Kobe, Japan, we changed to the smaller boat, the Tago Maru, that was to take us the rest of the way. It was New Year season in Japan when everyone is celebrating. When the table boy asked us what we would like for breakfast on New Year's mornig he added, "Tonight New Year's night. Everyone celebrate. Cook maybe drink much sake." I took it the he was warning us that we might not get what we complain of. On New Year's evening a group of friends ordered the next morning. But we had nothing to from the Taiyo came over to have a vesper service in the lounge of our boat. There were so few on the ship so it was a quiet place.

On the 2nd of January, all Japan went to work again and our boat was able to sail at 10 o'clock, in the morning. Since the Taiyo Maru, our first boat, did not sail until noon some of the folks came to see us off. It made it very nice for us. Then we were left alone to take a more leisurely trip through the beautiful Inland Sea of Japan and on. We stopped at Moji, a great coaling port and then at a place called Sakito where our boat took on coal all day. At Moji, it being Sunday, we hunted up a church. We were directed to a little Baptist church where all the services were in Japanese. A young Japanese led and when it came to the Scripture lesson we were able to join in for someone had handed us New Testaments in English. Some of the songs had familiar melodies so we could sing. I thought our children would be bored by the meeting, since they could not understand, but they had enjoyed it. After all, a church is the place to go to on Sunday. This was our fourth Sunday on the trip.

In Shanghai we were able to look up missionaries whom we had learned to know in Glendale. We had the evening meal with them. Lois said, "I like it here. Let's stay." But of course, we had to go on. It was cold at Japan and also at Shanghai and even at Hongkong. But today it has been warm and sticky. This boat took on some deck passengers at Shanghai whose only protection from wind and weather is a canvass awning over them. They huddled together those cold days but since yesterday they are enjoying themselves. The rest of the lower deck space is loaded with huge baskets of cabbages and other vegetables. We have been wondering how edible some of those things will be when they get to Singapore.

It may interest someone to know that this boat was built in 1904 and is now on the 119th journey. There are only a few passengers in the first class, which is like tourist on the other boat, so we have plenty of deck space and since we are all of like tastes it makes the trip very pleasant. Three of the passengers are missionary ladies going to India. They and we work far apart and all use a different language. We have an interesting time making comparisons.

Although the trip is pleasant, yet we are eager to get to our destination. We hope to be able to send you word soon that we have arrived safely, have delivered the greetings to our fellow missionaries and are hard at work. We thank you for your interest in the work which we firmly believe is the Lord's work and we ask a further interest in your prayers.

A California gentleman once stated that the most benevolent man he had ever known was an aged Israelite of 'Frisco. This old man receives every poor man who comes to his door as if he were Jehovah in disguise; and if a day passes without bringing a case of need, he goes home sad and wondering of God is displeased with him that he should not have visited him that day. Dorcas had this same spirit of benevolence, and her work of charity was a "labor of love."—The Nashville Christian Advocate.

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

5. Recent gifts to church colleges.—Knox College, Galesburg, Illinois, has begun a campaign for one million dollars to be raised by December, 1937.

J. Howard Pew of Philadelphia recently made a gift of $40,000 to Grove City College, Grove City, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. W. H. T. Dau, of Berkeley, California, wife of the former president of Valparaiso University, in October presented $50,000 to the institution. The money will be used to erect a memorial library.

Tennessee Wesleyan College, at Athens, last spring was the recipient of a gift of $100,000, which is to be used for endowment.

Mount Holyoke College announces a gift of $250,000 for a new chapel with an additional $100,000 for endowment of the chapel.

During the past summer Colby College, Maine, spent more than $200,000 for landscape work on the new Mayflower Hill location, where the college, after completing its building program, is to be transferred.

Wagner College, Grymes Hill, Staten Island, in October opened their drive for a $1,100,000 fund.

MacMurray College for Women, at Jacksonville, will have a new dormitory for women shortly as a result of a gift of approximately $250,000 by James A. MacMurray of Pasadena, California.

The cornerstone of the Chapman Memorial Library of Milwaukee-Downer College, being built at a cost of $250,000, was laid November 9.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE

The Bluffton College Vesper Choir has planned one of its longest tours during the spring vacation season, March 26 - April 7. The tour this year includes appearances in the following states: Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, and Nebraska. The invitation to come to Kansas has been highly appreciated and the group has been happy to include this visit in its itinerary.

The choir is as usual under the direction of Professor Russel A. Lantz and will be accompanied by Mrs. Lantz. It is hoped that through this tour a message of inspiration will be given, and fellowship deepened between our colleges and our communities. The itinerary is as follows:

Already visited: Normal, Ill., Carlock, Ill., Meadows, Ill., Eureka, Ill., Washington, Ill., Fortuna, Mo., Pretty Prairie, Kan., Halstead, Kan., Hillsboro, Kan., Buhler, Kan.—Mar. 31, Moundridge, Kan.; April 1, Goessel, Kan.; April 2, Newton, Kan.; April 3, Beatrice, Neb.; April 4, Donnelson, Iowa; April 5, Wayland, Iowa; April 6, Goshen, Indiana, and April 7, Nappanee, Ind.

Ralph Y. Blosser, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christ Blosser of Goshen, Ind., has been appointed student solicitor of Bluffton College. He began his new duties on Monday, March 15. Mr. Blosser is an alumnus of the college and was very active in campus activities when in school. During the past three years he has been teaching in the Alvin Drew School, Pine Ridge, Kentucky. He is a member of the Eighth Street Mennonite Church, Goshen, Ind. Mrs. Blosser had also been teaching in the school and will join Mr. Blosser in Bluffton at the close of the school term in May.

The Vesper Service on Sunday afternoon, March 7, was addressed by the Rev. Arnold C. Schultz of Chicago. His very interesting address was on the subject of "Archeology and the Bible." Rev. Mr. Schultz is a candidate for the Ph. D. degree in the University of Chicago in the field of archeology and spent ten and one-half months in Palestine in this type of work. Mr. Schultz is a member of the Defenseless Conference.

A Mennonite Teachers' Meeting

For fifty-one years the General Conference and the Brethren Mennonites of Kansas have annually held teacher's meetings, and for nearly thirty years they have conducted teacher's institutes during the summer. More recently the Old Mennonites have also taken part in the meetings. This year the meeting was held in the spacious Alexanderwohl Church, near Goessel, Kansas, and the attendance, as usual, was good. There were afternoon and evening sessions. The general theme of the addresses was: "THE CHRISTIAN VIEW OF THE CHANGING EDUCATIONAL PRINCIPLES."

In the afternoon the opening devotions were conducted by Dr. H. W. Lohrenz of Tabor College. Reading the parable of the Kingdom of Heaven, he applied this to the teaching profession. Methods of teaching may change, but the spirit of the true teacher must always remain the same.

"Fundamental Viewpoint Underlying Current Educational Principles," was the theme of a splendid address by the chairman of the Association, Prof. Paul Erb of Hesston College. The speaker maintained that (1) education must be integrated to produce an integrated personality. Education is life. A vitalized curriculum emphasizing real living must give due attention to religious life. To know God through Christ is a proper objective in education. (2) A State-controlled education is the servant of the State. The schools are the first institutions to feel the absolutism of the State. The outlook for an unfettered education is not bright. The totalitarian State is on the way. (3) Educational philosophy has provided no substitute for the integrating power of the Christian faith. Our modern education does not seem to make people happy. It fails to produce moral stamina and character. Christianity is the one foundation for right conduct; and in Christ alone will the soul find rest. Teachers who live the Christian life and who are a living example of a true life are needed.

Also in the afternoon President E. G. Kaufman of Bethel College spoke convincingly on "Possible Christian Contributions to the New Curriculum." The manner in which education or the curriculum shall be conceived depends upon the end that is to be achieved. One objective of education is to obtain knowledge. The view in education has been that instruction is a means to an end; but a greater view is that Christian education is an intuition—it is creative and social experience. The end is to be a Christian personality. Each one must experience the Christian life in himself. Health, vocation, the family, civic, community experiences, and a wise use of leisure time are essential in the molding of character. By cooperation, much sane activity, and sharing, a Christ-centered education may be secured.

Music for the afternoon program was furnished by the choirs of the Halstead and West Zion churches.

In the evening the Tabor College a capella choir gave a fine half-hour musical program. After this followed a very helpful address by President D. M. Edwards of Friends University, Wichita, upon the subject, "Keeping Education Christian." Christianity presents a two-fold program: to make man fit to live, fit to die; and to make the world fit to live in. Religion's subjective point of departure reveals the great "I am," and our imperfection; its objective point of departure indicates that any social condition may be improved. In support of the first viewpoint Eph. 4:13, Rom. 8:19, and II Cor. 3:18 were read; in support of the second the following words were quoted: "The Kingdoms of the world shall become the Kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ"; and "The knowledge of the Lord shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea." In behalf of the individual, the program of Christianity reveals Christ as the champion of personality, going about training his disciples. In behalf of society, it is a social program as shown in Luke 4:16-19. Individual salvation and salvation of human society need to be emphasized.

Education without Christianity is dangerous. Religion without education loses its touch with life. The union of Christianity and education is to be accomplished by the cooperation of the home, church, and school. Christ is the answer to present-day problems —the problem of social security, the problem of economic justice, and the problem of world peace.

The meeting closed with prayer by Rev. Paul Erb. The officers of the association now are: President, E. L. Harshbarger, Bethel College; Vice-President, D. D. Driver, Hesston College; Minnie Schmidt, Bethel College.

WHY HE GAVE SO MUCH

"The people that sat in darkness saw a great light" (Matt. 4:16). An Indian chief who had been converted from heathenism was exceedingly fervent in his prayers and praise during worship, and extremely generous in his kindness and gifts to the missionary and his work. The missionary at length asked the Indian why he was so jubilant in his devotions, and so lavish in his gifts. The convert made this pathetic reply: "Ah! you have never been in the darkness."—The Sunday School Chronicle.

Note: Your Peace Committee, at the request of the executives of the Minister's Conference, is herewith submitting the above program for the second day. A noon meal will be provided on the second day only to ministers, deacons, and teachers of our church schools.

— From "The Worker's Exchange," Pacific District Monthly, we glean the following: A few years ago the brethren at Dallas, Oregon, were in dispair because they had no suitable meeting place, and the Conference was unable to extend financial aid. Today a new spirit has taken possession of the group there. Plans for a church have been drawn, and funds for its erection are coming in beyond expectation.

— The "Church Messenger," Schwenksville, contains this rather notable paragraph: "There is considerable discussion in ministerial circles concerning the relation between Morning Services and Sunday School. There is a feeling that some persons think that one can be substituted for the other. A moments' thought will change this conception. The purpose of worship is to place oneself in a reverential attitude toward God for praise and admonition. The Sunday School purpose is to be taught the things of God and the ways of God. They are two parts of a large while."

likeness by his sin. The likeness was perfectly realized in Christ, the perfect Man.

God gave to man a definite task and responsibility (v. 28). Man, God's crown of creation, is to have dominion over both the earth and living creatures. The earth is the Lord's but man is to properly occupy and use it. God also made provision for the physical and temporal needs of man and all animal creation (vs. 29, 30). The marvelous wisdom of God is revealed by our present-day knowledge of the many essential elements needed in a health diet.

God, the Creator, saw that all He had made was good. Man marred God's good work by his sin. Two great truths of our lesson stand out—(a) God, the Eternal, personal Creator of all things — (b) the dignity of man, created in God's likeness, given dominion over other forms of life.

Golden Text—"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth" Gen. 1:1.

Practical Truth—God is our Creator, we are responsible to Him and under obligation to obey Him.

Prayer—O, Eternal Father, Thou didst create us in Thy likness. Help us to live in accordance with Thy wishes for us. In Jesus name. Amen.

CORRESPONDENCE

Kai Chow, Hopei, January 1937

Dear Friends in America:

Although it has been some weeks since we left America we still often think of the farewells and partings there and of the many kindnesses extended to us by you. We had a delightful trip on the whole coming out here, but were surprised by the uncomfortably warm and sultry weather in Hawaii, where we are told they have the ideal year 'round climate. Nevertheless it was beautiful and we enjoyed the day spent there immensely, and we could easily persuade ourselves to return there to retire sometime in spite of the transient humidity.

We had just enough stormy, rough weather to add a little zest to our trip. The baby behaved perfectly throughout and the little girls enjoyed it after their initial attack of seasickness, the first afternoon out from San Francisco. We made two stops in modern, efficient Japan, enjoyed a drive through the country around Yokohama and Tokyo, marveled at the number of radio aerials, and continued to Shanghai with a days ride through the Inland Sea. This with its narrow channels, projecting tips of almost submerged mountains, fishing fleets and villages along the nearby shore made a never-to-be-forgotten picture.

Back in China again we feel quite at home. There are many improvements which show progress during the two years we were away. We were able to buy tickets and check baggage through from Shanghai to the railroad station thirty miles from Kai Chow, and in spite of changing trains three times made the trip to Kai Chow including thirty miles by auto in less than two days. We find some good auto roads being made throughout north China and some new equipment on some of the railroads that leaves nothing to be desired. We find air mail service available and air passenger service developing rapidly and radios becoming quite common. In fact, China is much different than it used to be. Our methods change but the message is the same and the results in changing people's lives are the same.

We enjoy meeting our friends again who heartily welcomed us back. Now we are getting to work trying to do the work God has for us out here. We want you all to remember us in your prayers for the work here. There is much to be done.—Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Pannabecker.

First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kan.

Several events of interest have taken place since my last report. The last of them fills our hearts with sorrow because a dear member, Mrs. D. H. Kasper, a young wife and mother, was called to the Great Beyond after a very short illness. One day she was a picture of health; the next, her lips were sealed forever. (See obituary). The large multitude that attended the funeral on March 17 and the many pretty floral offerings showed that she was widely-known and well-liked. Her pastor, Rev. Dirks, used the text, "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." Phil. 1:21. He showed that the traits of a Christian are friendliness, thoughtfulness, and serviceability. This was at the Hutchinson Church. At the Buhler Church, Rev. H. Wiebe of Lehigh based his words of comfort on Ps. 103:15-16: "As for man, his days are as grass; as a flower of the field so he flourishes," etc. He pointed out that Mrs. Kasper had been like a flower to all who knew her.

On January 7, we had communion services and installation of officers. On February 18, we had a farewell for Brother and Sister Arthur Plenert, for he was transferred to St. John, Pennsylvania, and they moved there. We miss these active and well-liked members.

Mrs. Herman Schmidt, who had been in the Halstead hospital since October, when she was seriously hurt and her husband killed in an auto accident, was able to return home March 7. With a leg broken in different places, she is not yet able to walk; but she is glad to be with her three boys.

Nearing the end of the quarter, we have had a chance to get acquainted with our own S. S. Quarterly. Some of us had very little confidence in our men, and we were afraid to try these quarterlies. But as loyal Mennonites we felt we ought to cooperate with our leaders in any project they might undertake, for we have very able men. And we have found that this new quarterly is not only worth trying, but we want to keep using it.

Easter is upon us to meditate on the sufferings of a dying Saviour and to rejoice in a risen Lord.—Mrs. J. M. Froese.

First Church, Halstead, Kansas.

On Tuesday, March 7, Miss Ruth Krehbiel, a member of our church, was laid to rest in the local cemetery. Though physically handicapped this dear sister with her sweet nature was able to cheer others. She loved flowers and for years helped to decorate the church for various occasions. She also loved little children, and they loved to come to her home to be entertained. She taught children's S. S. classes and

Sermon Sketch

Daniel J. Unruh

SHOWING THE LORD'S DEATH

(Communion Sermon)

"For as often as ye eat this bread and drink this cup ye do show the Lord's death till he come." I Cor. 11:26.

Introduction

Every communion service is a commemoration of the most important event in the ministry of the Lord Jesus Christ. Through it the believer confesses a relation to Christ. Therefore, it is well for us to consider the meaning of this service. What is meant when we say "this is my body" and "this is my blood"?

I. What Happens when the Bread is Consecrated?

No physical or spiritual miracle accompanies the Lord's Supper. The prayer sets it apart and sanctifies it for a sacred purpose, but does not change the substance thereof. The Lord Jesus Christ who bore our sins, rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and is coming again has consecrated the Lord's Supper far above our poor power to add or to detract.

Experience and Scripture teach us that it is "Not a real presence (transubstantiation), but a real absence of Christ as the Son of God made man—that is, a real absence of his body."—G. A. Jacob. Therefore, the Supper, reminding us of his body, is to be observed in the church "till he come."

II. What Happens to the One Who Partakes of the Lord's Supper?

Many partake of the Lord's Supper in the belief that it forgives sins. In other words, many who do not believe in a change in the substance believe that the Lord's Supper changes them.

Does it change the one who eats? Is the Lord's Supper a "means of grace" (German, "Gnadenmittel") "to help me on to God"? I am persuaded that it is not and that a person is not spiritually made better because he has taken the Lord's Supper. It serves as a testimonial and a memorial, not as a sacrament.

III. What is the Real Value and Purpose of the Lord's Supper?

Two things should be kept in mind—"this do in remembrance of me" and "as oft as ye do it ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."

The Lord's Supper is an ordinance and not a sacrament. Its sacredness is not in itself, but in the authority that ordained it. We observe it because the Lord so ordained. Its impressiveness depends upon the discernment of the participants—discerning the Lord's body, "this is my body broken for you," i. e., his vicarious atoning death; "the new testament in my blood," i. e., his propitiatory sacrifice. I Peter 2:24; Romans 3:25.

The Lord's Supper is a memorial, "in remembrance of me"; it is a testimonial, "ye do shew the Lord's death"; it is anticipatory, "till he come."

By Christ redeemed, in Christ restored,
We keep the memory adored,
And shew the death of our dear Lord
Until He come.—Mennonite Hymnal, No. 310

GOD, THE CREATOR

April 4, 1937

Genesis 1:1 to 2:31 Printed: Gen. 1:1-5, 26-31

Our lessons for this quarter will bring us messages from Genesis.

The Eternal God Created the Heavens and the Earth v. 1

The first verse of the Bible gives all the positive information we have about the original creation of the earth and the heavens. God was "in the beginning," before anything and anyone in the universe. He, the uncreated, the eternal One, created the universe. It did not come by chance. The Bible tells us that God alone is eternal and nothing could have produced Him. One eternal God is the great primary teaching of the Bible.

God created—not made—brought into existence the entire universe. He did not use materials at hand. The universe is not God, but His handiwork. He is in the universe, but separate from it, above it. Our personal God, by His free act created the universe and we can be assured that He controls it. All that exists was brought into being by Him and He can control it. We may and can trust Him implicitly.

Science recognizes the existence of the marvelous universe and can find but one explanation for its beginning, its existence—that answer is GOD. God in the beginning of the world's history, of all true science, of all right living and thinking, of every wise undertaking.

God Preparing the Earth for Man. vs. 2-25.

This earth was not, at once, habitable for man, the crown of creation. It was at first in a chaotic condition, "waste and void" (v. 2). No light, only gross darkness, was there. God showed the majesty of His word of power and said, "let there be light," and it was so. God created by His creative Word. Light must come before there can be life and growth to support that which is needful for man. All of creation before man was but preparatory to his creation.

God Creates Man vs. 26-31

Man was the last and highest of all created beings (vs. 26, 27). "God said, Let US make man." Here appears the plural of the Persons of the Godhead. The Eternal Son is one with the Eternal Father, God. Man was created after the likeness of the God head, an intellectual, moral, spiritual likeness — quailities possessed by God Himself. These separate man from all lower forms of life. The power to meditate, weigh motives and make definite choices is man's highest ability and because of this we are responsible for what we do. Man soon blurred, marred this pure, clean organized the first junior mission society forty-five years ago, and it was here where quite a number of the girls received their first incentive to work for missions. Since the time when her health failed, she has lived in the Home for the Aged at Newton. Let us follow her example of a cheerful, useful, God-fearing life which sustained her to the end.

Quite a coincidence occurred at our church March 7, when two missionary brothers, home on furlough, W. F. Unruh, India, and Rudolph Unruh, Africa, gave talks on their fields of labor. The former spoke at the morning service, the later at the C. E. hour. Both gave interesting accounts. W. F. Unruh told of the untouchable movement led by the great Ambedkar. The masses are ready to renounce Hinduism. Now the question is, Will they accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour? The harvest is ready, but few are the reapers. He made an urgent plea for young recruits to examine themselves to see if they might be called to take up the work. Let us all pray that the Lord of harvest may have the workers to save these millions.

Tabor Church, Goessel, Kansas.

We have had a wet year so far, and March seems to go the same way. So we have enough moisture that the wheat may show up, except where it might have been frozen. The winter barley seems to have been killed and the fields are being seeded with oats. The health conditions in this vicinity are good, except for cases of cold, mumps and the flu. We have been able to hold our church services every Sunday this year except two, when the roads were badly drifted. On the third Sunday in January the Inman Male Quartet gave us a very helpful program. Since the Unruh brothers, missionaries from our church, are home on furlough, they have served us with the Word and told us of their experiences; William F. on February 1 and Rudolf, missionary in Africa, previously. When they tell us of their work, we are greatly encouraged to put forth new effort. The field is ripe for harvest, but where are the workers? With greetings—P. A. Unruh.

Zion Mennonite Church, Soudertown, Penna.

On Thursday evening, March 11, the Young People's C. E. Society of our church joined with the Reformed and Lutheran Societies of the same town in sponsoring a presentation of the Passion Play in the High School auditorium in movie form. The program included devotionals and group singing. The affair was planned as a prelude to the activities of Holy Week. About six hundred people from Souderton and nearby towns attended the event.

Despite the March blizzard raging outdoors our church was filled to capacity on Sunday evening, March 14, with a group eager to hear Grace Livingston Hill, author of Matched Pearls, Beloved Stranger, Crimson Roses, Rainbow Cottage, and many other novels, speak. The story she told so dramatically was "Life Out of Death."

The address was augmented by two special musical selections—a violin solo by Maurice Faulke and a tenor solo by Carl Harr.

The Young People's C. E. Society planned and carried out the entire program which was the outstanding event in their winter activities.—Mary Hillegass, Corr.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Katharina Ruth Krehbiel, daughter of John and Katharina (nee Ruth) Krehbiel, was born at Summerfield, Illinois, on August 25, 1869, and died at the Bethel Home at Newton on March 5, 1937, aged 67 years, six months and 10 days.

When Ruth was two years old her father, making a land inspection trip through Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa, died of typhoid fever at Franklin Center, Iowa. A brother and a sister of Ruth died in infancy. As a child she had a bad fall and received a permanent spinal injury. With her mother and brother Adolph she came to Halstead, Kansas, in March, 1879. Here she attended school, and on April 3, 1887 was baptized and became a member of the Halstead Mennonite church where she retained her membership to her death. Her brother died in 1894; and her mother preceded her in 1923; so that Ruth was the last to remain of a family of many sorrows but of an abiding Christian faith.

In December, 1919, her health failed, and since August 10, 1929, she resided at the Bethel Home where the Sisters gave her the loving and understanding care that her delicate mind and body so much craved and required.

Recently it became evident that she was rapidly failing, and on Friday evening, March 5, at 8:20 o'clock she quietly breathed her last.

Love and thoughtful consideration of others—the outstanding characteristics of her unselfish life — were in evidence to the eve of her call to the eternal home.

Funeral services were held on March 9 at the Home for the Aged and at the Halstead Mennonite church, C. E. Krehbiel speaking, and burial took place in the Halstead cemetery, David Wedel officiating.

Menn. Church, Boyertown, Pa.

John Adams Nolf, born June 4, 1887, died December 27, 1936. In his youth, he was a faithful worker in the Sunday School of the Saucon Mennonite Church, near Coopersburg, Pennsylvania. Many of our older Mennonites will remember John's father, Thomas A. Nolf, Deacon for many years at Saucon, and his mother Catherine. He will be sadly missed by his sister, Laura Adams Nolf, member and faithful worker, at Saucon. His Son, George W. Nolf, also survives. John was an active Christian Endeavor expert, a C. E. worker in Pennsylvania, Washington D. C., and California.

Died in San Francisco, California; body shipped to Allentown, Pennsylvania, for burial. Laid to rest in Durham Cemetery, near Riegelsville, Penna., after an impressive funeral service in which the Rev. H. C. Rhoads, Pastor of the Lutheran Wing, and Paul and Andrew Shelly, participated.

Mrs. Amanda Gottschall, widow of the late Milton Gottschall, of Boyertown, Pennsylvania, went to be with the Lord, on February 10th. She was 69 years and 23 days old. Funeral services were held on February 13th, conducted by the Rev. W. S. Gottschal, Dr. E. E. S. Johnson, and the Rev. E. S. Shelly. Faithful member of the Menno Simons Mennonite Church, of Boyertown. Survivers: Two sons, one daughter, two sisters, one brother.—Sara Kait, Correspondent.

Miss Amanda Ruth—Born December 6th, 1875, at Summerfield, Illinois. Died Thursday morning, March 18th, 1937, in Winnipeg, Manitoba, at the age of 61 years, 3 months, 12 days.—Funeral Saturday afternoon, March 20th in Winnipeg. The dear deceased was a very kind, loving, faithful and helping soul. Formally her home was at Halstead, Kansas, but since the last 34 years it has been with her sister and brother-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. Benjamin Ewert, Winnipeg, Manitoba. She will be missed by all her relatives and many friends in the U. S. A. and in Canada; most of all though by the Ewert family.

Katherine M. Ediger Kasper, daughter of David J. and Annie Ediger, was born near Buhler, Kansas, on November 14, 1905, where most of her life was spent. At the age of sixteen she accepted Christ as her personal Saviour, was baptized, and joined the Bruderthal Church at Meade, Kansas. In the year 1936, she transferred her membership to the K. M. B. Church of Springfield, Lehigh, Kansas, and on January 4, 1931 to the First Mennonite Church of Hutchinson, Kansas, where she was a faithful and active member until her departure.

On September 19, 1926 she was united in marriage to David H. Kasper. This union was one blessed by our Heavenly Father and consequently resulted in a happy married life lasting 10 years, 5 months, and 25 days. A son, Arlo Dean, was born two years ago.

She enjoyed her Christian experience, as Christ had become the vital center and source of her life. She was never so satisfied as when she could be active in the carrying out of some Christian duty and privilege. She sought always to be considerate of others, was a very devoted wife, and took a great interest in the welfare of her only son for whom she would have sacrificed her all. Likewise, the welfare of her parents was also upon her heart, and she often felt that she could not do enough for them. Daily she prayed for her sister and her brothers, for she confidently believed in the power and influence of prayer.

She enjoyed good health until 1928, when she underwent a rib operation. In March, 1930, she underwent another very serious operation, including appendicitis and other organs. From this she recovered satisfactorily, after which she worked in the store and was able to endure hard work uncomplainingly and joyfully. But on Saturday evening, March 13, 1937, at 6:20 p. m., she was suddenly taken ill. At first this was not thought serious by the physician. However, at 11:30, she was rushed to the hospital for an operation from which she never regained consciousness. She passed to her eternal home at 10:50 a. m. on March 14, 1937, at the age of 31 years and 4 months.

She leaves to mourn her early departure, her husband and her only son, her parents, one sister, eight brothers, one grandmother, one step-grandmother, and a host of relatives and friends.

Services were conducted by Rev. C. H. Dirks, assisted by Rev. Henry Wiebe who spoke in the German language. Services were held at the First Mennonite Church of Hutchinson at 1:00 p. m. and also at the Buhler Mennonite Church at 2:30 p. m.

THREE KINDS OF GIVERS

Some witty person once said: "Three are three kinds of givers—the flint, the sponge, and the honeycomb."

To get anything out of a flint you must hammer it, and then you get only chips and sparks.

To get water out of a sponge you must squeeze it, and the more you squeeze, the more you will get.

But the honeycomb just overflows with its own sweetness.

Some people are stingy and hard; they give nothing away if they can help it.

Others are good-natured; they yield to pressure, and the more they are pressed, the more they will give.

A few delight in giving, without being asked at all; and of these the Bible says, "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver."—London Christian.

JUDGE NOT.—Have you ever felt the depressing effect upon your own soul when a fault-finder converses with you? Have you tried to estimate the damaging effects that such a spirit has upon the one who thus lives? This word judge means censoriousness, not the use of good sense.

I once heard a butcher who tried to purchase a good beef from a farmer who had a splendid herd, except one scrubby steer. For every word the farmer would say about his nice flock, the butcher would add, "Yes, but look at the scrubby steer!" Once the writer visited with a minister who at one time preached in the Church of the Brethren. The latter spent most of his time calling attention to the scrubby preachers in our church. I tried to show him the good ones. I said, "You will not find one of our preachers who smokes cigarettes." He admitted he knew none.

I hope he will find none, for he will surely be back again to tell me about it if he does. I gave him a long list of those who do wonderful work. I said that human nature abounds everywhere, that he should not take us for a group of wings. I assured him he would not find more devout men anywhere. But he kept on pelting me with, "Look at the scrubbs!" Brethren, we have a high calling. Our lives tell for Christ or send others downward by what we live, not by what we say. Let Christ rule in our lives, to his glory.—Ezra Flory, in Gospel Messenger.

A High School Teacher Enjoys A Book And Says So

The quest of the ages has ever been for victorious life. The people of Babylon feverishly erected a tower; the Samaritan woman questioned Jesus at the well; the dying thief plead for mercy on the cross. All were hoping for more abundant life.

And today the search has not yet ended. Divorce-crazed women restlessly trade old husbands for new models. Bismark and Mussolini madly pursue power. Social reformers zealously try to change humanity.

Youth must wander through this maze. How does he do it? Impetuously, he follows one alley after another. Disillusioned, he abandons each to see if perhaps the next one may be the right one to lead to satisfaction. First, he leaves the trivialities of endless rounds of social engagements. Then some man or woman accidentally touches his delicate spring of idealism and beckons Youth to follow. Radiantly, Youth dashes forward and one day finds a barrier in the road that seemed so spacious. His idol is after all only a human being, subject to mistakes.

But Youth is not long baffled. Soon he gives his all to some great social movement, thinking there to find that vital Something which makes life worth while. Gladly he fights for his cause because its aims are vast and good. But suddenly he finds that even here is corruption from within, that the purposes presented for the world to read are merely camouflaging the greedy, selfish nucleus of the whole foul business.

Again Youth cries, "How can I find eternal life?"

Many are offering to answer the question for Youth. To answer it well and wisely, a man must himself have tapped the source of eternal life and he must understand Youth's efforts to find it.

Few are better qualified to do this than E. Stanley Jones. He is familiar with the world's religions, acquainted with religious and secular leaders, knows the Orient with its fierce longings, and he feels the struggles of Youth. In his latest book, VICTORIOUS LIVING, he sincerely, simply offers a guide for daily meditations.

The dynamic sincerity surging through his volume gives the student a burning desire to probe deeper until he reaches the source of that man's strength. He is led to feel the calm power of the man to be deeply rooted in his experience of Christ.

Gently, firmly, E. Stanley Jones, leads Youth to listen to the voice of Jesus. From the woman at the well He turns to twentieth century Youth and gives the same answer, "Whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall become in him a well springing up unto eternal life." (John 4:13b-14)

THE GOOD CHURCH MEMBER IS WORLD-VISIONED

Young People's Topic, April 18

I John 3:17; 4:20

Meditation

M., April 12. Luke 4:16-19. "The Spirit . . . hath anonited me to preach the gospel to the poor; . . . to heal the brokenhearted . . . the captives . . . the blind . . . the bruised."

T., April 13. Acts 6:1-8. The early church especially selected men whose duty it would be to take care of those to whom life had dealt less generously.

W., April 14. I Thess. 1:1-10. The early church was not a self-satisfied church, but one whose enthusiasm spread far and wide.

T., April 15. 1 Cor. 1:23-31. Perhaps if we would look strictly to the Word of God, and through it learn to be led by the Spirit, we would find the solution to some of our social problems in simple, ordinary relations.

F., April 16. Eph. 5:1, 2. To "walk in love" is a mighty challenge to Christians in a loveless world.

S., April 17. Tit. 3:1-8. " . . . after that the kindness and love of God our Saviour . . . " appears in a man, government ceases to be repression of evil, and becomes expression of the good will towards the larger group (community) in which a man works and lives and enjoys.

Problems and projects

1. Have a committee appointed well ahead of time, list every institution in the community which deals with the public, and which, one way or another,

May my thoughts and actions be such as shall keep me friendly with myself molds the ideals of the community: the church, the school, the movie, the clubs, etc. Then, in your meeting, evaluate what influences go out from these "sharpers" of public thinking.

2. Indicate ways in your discussion in which individuals and groups can change these institutions for good. Get down to concrete things and plans; don't be "up in the clouds" with discussions which are never to end in action. Make plans, be they ever so simple, which you earnestly intend to carry out. Remember—Christianity was not brought about by fine speeches, but by a cross.

3. Mark the following questons true or false:

a. The best way to build a good community is for everyone to mind his own busines first of all.

b. The church and the school are the only institutions which definitely mold the thinking of a community.

c. The church is not interested in the recreation program in a community.

d. A community consisting of conflicting groups is not a community.

e. Politics is dirty business. A church had better stay out of it entirely.

f. "Boost for your home town," and the spirit mentioned in Luke 4:16-19 mean the same thing.

g. A business man who claims to be a good community booster has no business selling cheap magazines to young people.

h. If young folks really want good clean movies there is a way to get them.

i. One way to develop community consciousness is to promote projects in a community in which all Christ-minded church members can cooperate regardles of church membership (examples: hospitals, song festivals, special joint services, community chest drives, etc.)

FREEMAN College finds new leaders for the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. At recent elections, Evelyn Schultz was elected president; Adeline Berg, vice-pres.; Gladys Graber, secretary; Della Graber, treasurer, of the Y. W. C. A. New leaders for the coming year in the Y. M. C. A. are: Henry Becker, president; Reuben Goertz, vice president; Palmer Graber, secretary; Peter Graber, treasurer. Looks like the Grabers are in the majority for next year.

BLUFFTON students, in keeping with current fads, decided to change their Supreme Court. Has someone an axe to grind, that the old Student Senate and the Student Tribunal should be abolished? At any rate, the new Student Council, as elected by student vote, is: Ray Heiks, chairman; Hiram Hilty, Emma Detweiler, Christine Miller, James Miller, Harold Kaufman, Max Egeland, and Wilbur Lauer.

BETHEL students are learning speeches and whatnot over their Easter vacation, to be given here, there, everywhere in a spirited effort to secure funds for the new Semi-centennial Memorial Building.

And so, on a united, progressive front—Mennonite Education MOVES ON!

II. Announcements

(the president goes to the front of the room and takes charge

III. Quiet Worship

"More Love to Thee, O Christ" Stanza, 1 and 2.

Announce the topic. Speak of the loving kindness of God which is like that of Jesus, who was always ready to forgive. Explain the responsive reading that is to follow.

Responsive reading: Ps. 136:1-9; 23-26 (The leader reads the first part of the verse then pauses for the society to answer with, "For his mercy endureth forever)

Quartet: "In the Hour of Trial"

Scripture reading: Eph. 4:25-32; Matt. 6:12-15, by two Intermediates

Silent directed prayer, by the superintendent

b. How does Jesus illustrate it? Luke 15:11-24

c. What are the conditions for receiving such forgiveness?

    1. We must forgive to receive forgiveness. Matt. 18:23-35
    2. We must confess our sins. I John 1:9

d. Must everyone ask God for forgiveness? Rom. 3:23

e. Does God's willingness to forgive mean that we can go on sinning? John 5:14. How can we live victoriously? I Cor. 15:57

f. Questions

    1. Does forgiveness always mean escape from punishment for our sin?
    2. How can we prove that our repentance is genuine?
    3. Would most people want God to forgive as they forgive others? Why not?
    4. What wrongs do you find hardest to forgive? Why? Is there anything we should not be willing to forgive?

V. Closing Moments

The Superintendent's Five Minutes. Summing up.
Hymn: 'Whiter than Snow"
Unison: The Lord's Prayer. (Call attention to the phrase on forgiveness, before repeating it)
Benediction verse. Ps. 19:14

For the Blackboard

The F. and F. Club. Draw a heart on the blackboard and print an F in each of the lobes with a cross bearing the word "and" between them. "JESUS BIDS US SHINE WITH A CLEAR AND PURE LIGHT"

Junior Suggestions for April 11, 1937

Drawing Near

1. Prelude using "I Love to Steal Awhile Away"
2. The message of the prelude spoken by a junior
3. Is God Near? Answered by responsive reading: Psalm 139:1-12, 17, 18, 23, 24
4. Prayer. In unison sing verses 1 and 2 of "Nearer Still Nearer"
5. How Can My Walk Be Closer God with Thee? Answered by a junior with Psalm 24:3b and 4a.
6. O for a Closer Walk with God. Prayer spoken by a junior using the words of this song

Study Period. Aim: to show how sin spots our life and makes the light more dim

1. Introductory remarks as at topic—junior chairman
2. Sing in unison "Jesus Bids Us Shine"
3. "Ye Are the Light of the World." It was my privilege to listen to an object lesson on this truth presented by the superintendent of our post office, Mr. C. L. Merriam. Those of our endeavors in the vicinity of Newton would profit by a personal visit of Mr. Merriam to your group. He is willing to give this object lesson upon your asking. It is from him that I borrow the thought of this program. A picture lantern would work best for this object lesson. If you should have no access to one, then take a strong flashlight and fasten it securely into something that will keep it stationary with the light toward the group.

Lesson one: The unlighted lantern representing our life which fails in its purpose if it fails to admit light. Turn to the group with the question: "How shall we get light?" Give them the reference in John 8:12 and allow them to find the answer.

Lesson two: The lighted lantern can now serve its purpose. It had to open to admit light (here the flashlight would serve better). Turn to the group with the question: "Can Jesus Do that to Us?" Let them find the answer in reading John 1:4 and 9

Lesson three: What dims the light? It doesn't need to be anything very big. Drape pieces of dark pieces of dark sewing thread over the light until the light is quite dim. Remove them with the statement "it is much beter if these threads were not there." Turn to the group with the question "What dims our light?" Let them find the answer in Isa. 59:2(a); Isa. 30:1. Distribute among the group slips of paper each bearing a verse pertaining to a particular sin. From these slips let a piece of thread hang down. Let each one of these slips be read and allow each junior to drape his thread over the light. The following threads could be prepared:

1. Anger—Prov. 16:32
2. Disobedience to God—Deut. 28:15
3. Disobedience to parents—Col. 3:20
4. Lying—Ps. 63:11; Rev. 21:8
5. Pride—Psalm 101:5; James 4:6
6. Selfishness—Phil. 2:4; Prov. 28:27
7. Speaking evil—Psalm 34:13; James 4:11a
8. Jealousy—Songs of Solomon 8:6
9. Stealing—Ex. 20:15

Lesson four—Doing all of these sins once, will not darken the light much. Show what happens when we do these over again and again (put more and more threads on)

Lesson five—If you are using a projecting lantern then remove threads and, applying them one by one, show how the sins also affect those with whom we come in contact just as this screen is affected by the threads

Lesson six—Turn to the group with the question: "How can we get rid of these sins?" Give out these references one by one: I John 1:9; Isa. 1:18; Isa. 43:25; Isa. 38:17; John 1:29. At the close of this object lesson, leave the light on for closing meditation

4. Repeat in unison verse of the month
5. Sing in unison "Whiter than Snow"
6. Poem spoken by a junior

> Thy beauty steals into every heart,
> "Light of the world,
> And glorifies with duty
> Life's poorest, humblest part;
> Thou robest in Thy splendor
> The simple ways of men,
> And helpest them to render
> Light back to Thee again.
> Light of the world, illumine
> This darkened earth of Thine,
> Till everything that's human
> Be filled with what's divine;
> Till every tongue and nation,
> From sins dominion free,
> Rise in the new creation
> Which springs from love and Thee."

7. Special music (instrumental): "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning"
8. Sing in unison "The Light of the World." Verses 1 and 2
9. Closing prayer by leader

—Rev. J. C. Kaufman, Marion Junction, South Dakota, reports that they are moving to Kansas and that their address will be McPherson, Kansas, by April 1. He remarks that the work of sorting and packing is a new experience in their lives. They really never expected to leave good old South Dakota, even though the bread-basket has been hanging high the last few years. Rev. Kaufman has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Hoffnungsfeld Church.

—From Alsen, North Dakota, comes the report that Brother Gerhard Spenst, who had undergone a serious appendicitis operation in February, is now almost recovered. Sister David Bartel, however, had to be taken to the hospital at Grand Forks for a rather critical operation. It is hoped though that God will help through.

—Rev. E. S. Mullett of Nappanee, Indiana, has temporarily accepted the appointment of field secretary of Bluffton College. Mr. Mullet will begin his duties in connection with the college on Monday, March 29. He will carry on this work for the college until the Rev. Mr. Soldner is able to resume his active duties in this position.

—The "Weekly" of the First Church at Hutchinson, Kansas, Rev. C. H. Dirks pastor, reports that they have taken a collection for the Canadian book store, passes a compliment on THE MENNONITE, continuing as follows: "It should be in the home of everyone, for it will help you to become acquainted with the work of our Conference and will keep you in touch with the many activities of our work. Thus is will help you to pray for the work more intelligently. So while you are buying your new Easter outfit, why not include in it a subscription to The Mennonite?"

—From the Immanuel Church, Prattum, Oregon, comes this report: "Rev. David Toews has visited our church to present to us the need of our brethren in Canada. An offering to help establish a book depository in that needy field was taken. May God bless the brother as he continues in behalf of his great work. We have united with our neighboring Methodist church in pre-Easter services. May the Easter season find us with an enlarged vision and appreciation of Calvary and the resurrection of our Lord and Savior.—Mrs. Merryman.

—The March "Messenger" of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., brings, among other interesting things, worthwhile articles from two young ministers, one from its new pastor, Olin Krehbiel, entitled "The Voice of Spring," the other, entitled "Easter Thought," from Erland Waltner of Freeman, S. D., a student at the Hartford Theological Seminary. Wish we had space to publish these beautiful Easter sentiments! The Rev. Krehbiel family have now taken up their work at Landsdale.

—We seem to have somewhat overlooked the Church Bulletin from the Germantown, Pa., church, which shows that this church, though small in number, 31, has a definite program and a vision under the leadership of Rev. Howard Landes. For the new year he urges his flock to go on to more Christian knowledge, to richer Christian experiences, to higher attainments, and to larger usefulness.

—"News Letter," from the Salem Menn. Church, Freeman, S. D., says among other good things: Tomato plants are said to have attained a length of twenty-five feet, with fruit over the entire length. But still, the LIFE that is in these plants is an unexplained mystery, pointing to the power and wisdom of the Creator.—When we remember that all life is a deep mystery, we become more willing to trust the risen, victorious Christ.—As Creator He is the one source of earthly life. As Redeemer He is our only but all-sufficient soure of spiritual life.

—The Y. P. C. E. of the Los Angeles church recently gave a program at the Union Rescue Mission for Men. The building was packed with men and a number of them accepted Christ. After the service those 325 men were given a meal in the basement. "What a sight!" says the reporter. "To see so many hard faced men in one group, and then to hear the testimonies of some of them is a tonic every Christian should have occasionally."

—Rev. J. J. Plenert, First Church, Philadelphia, has the following interesting paragraph in one of his Sunday bulletins: This year (1937) will mark the 37th year of service for Rev. P. A. Penner in India. In the book, "Twenty-five Years with God in India," Brother Penner says, . . . "There was nothing here (then)—not a bungelow, not a village school, not a boarding school, not a Leper Home, not a Christian, nothing, and now? There are 1200 living baptized Christians, a Christian community of 2000, five stations, and the future looming large. Surely this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvelous in our eyes."

—Two brethren from Hutterite colonies in Manitoba, the Reverends Michael Waldner and David Hofer, have gone to Europe to see what can be done to transplant a colony of their brethren in Germany to England. These people are certainly to be commended for their effort to escape military service, in which attempt they are ready to sacrifice almost everything they have.

—The Mountain Lake (Minnesota) Community Chorus, largely made up of Mennonites, presents a sacred concert at the high school auditorium Easter Sunday evening,. The chorus numbers seventy voices.

—The senior class of Bethel College recently gave their annual play, "The Enemy" in the Newton City Auditorium before a large audience. The story of the play concerns the plight of an Austrian family group during and immediately following the World War. It is a story with a very wholesome lesson.

—Dr. E. Guy Cutshall, chancellor of Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln, Nebraska, will give the commencement address at the 44th annual commencement of Bethel College.

CALIFORNIA MENNONITE S. S. AND C. E. CONVENTION to be held in the Imman Church, Los Angeles, April 2-4, with David Schultz, President, in charge. Dr. J. H. Langenwalter and Rev. Lester Hostetler are among the speakers, while Dr. Howard Fagen of Los Angeles is to give the main addresses of the convention.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, APRIL 6, 1937 NO. 14

God and Country

In an article under this caption Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen of the Catholic University of America gives the following significant facts:

"The only schools that are building constructive Americanism are those that take a practical cognizance of the existence of God. It is the non-religious schools which are out of the tradition of Americanism; they are on the defensive. In the beginning of our national life practically all of our schools and colleges were religious schools. It was assumed by our Constitution and by its spirit that they would be religious. The reason was abvious. If human dignity and liberty come from God, then it follows that loss of faith in Him means loss of faith in those liberties which we derive from Him. If we wish to have the light we must keep the sun; if we wish to keep our perfumes we must keep our flowers; and if we wish to be more than slaves of a state, but free men with free rights, then we must keep God. It is just as vain to try and keep triangles without keeping three-sided figures, as to try and keep liberty without the spirit which makes man independent of matter and therefore free.

"We Catholics are taking religion so seriously in relation to our country that rather than see God perish out of our national life, we conduct 7,950 elementary schools and 2,175 public schools, employing 58,000 and 15,000 teachers respectively. These two schools represent an investment of $750,000,000 for elementary schools, and $575,000,000 for high schools. To keep the system going we spend $58,000,000 a year on elementary schools and $10,000,000 a year on high schools, and figuring on the basis of public school costs, we save the taxpayers of the country $139,600,000 a year. Every cent of this money comes out of the pockets of Catholics, and why? Because we believe that the 2,177,000 children in elementary schools and 285,000 in high schools have a right to know the truth which makes them free. In other words, we take very seriously the Declaration of Independence which derives the rights of man from God.—Christian Education.

He that studies only men will get the body of knowledge without the soul, and he that studies only books, the soul without the body.—Colton.

Christian Teachers for our Schools

While the Catholics, and to some extent also the Lutherans, are providing their own schools for their children at great financial sacrifices, we Mennonites are giving up our Bible academies, or Christian "Fortbildungsschulen" (continuation schools) in the middle west. Only a very few are left now. That is sad. But the explanation is that it can't be helped. The public high schools are simply crowding them out. But may not the time come when we, too, in order to give our children a really Christian foundation which will fortify them against the onslaught of the steadily increasing evil influences in the world, will have to ponder seriously the need of providing our own system of schooling somewhat similar to that of the Catholics. Some of our grade schools are far from being Christian, and many of our high schools are tending to become play houses, where sports and all sorts of extra-curricular activities are encroaching upon the real studies. Some one has jokingly marked the situation thus: Formerly the dog was wagging the tail, now the tail is wagging the dog. What used to be chapel exercises in high school, with at least a semblance of devotion, has come to be the so-called assembly period, where stunts and other light entertainments are favored. Large numbers of boys and girls do not attend high school from a desire for an education. They go or are sent there because it is good fashion. In order to draw children into high school, school men have lowered the bars to such an extent that almost anybody can get in, run the hurdles, and graduate with a minimum of effort.

Under such conditions the question naturally arises, what can we do to stem the tide? Perhaps not much at this time, except to do all in our power to induce our school boards and school administrators to place genuinely Christian teachers into our schools. Here in the middle west in a number of Mennonite and other strongly Christian communities this is being done. Not only that, but our week-day Bible schools, in connection with the grade schools, are increasing, and in a good many high schools Bible courses are given; and the States are gracious enough to give credit for such work. May our people everywhere do their utmost to make their influence in this direction felt!

The Hem of His Garment

By J. P. Suderman, Oraibi, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Seba James own one of the better of the Hopi homes in Oraibi. They are the parents of ten children, all of whom are living. The oldest daughter is married and has a baby about one and a half years old. Edith Helen, the youngest child of the family, is about one year and three months old. Mrs. James (Effie we call her) is a Christian but her husband is not. She had been a Christian before she was married, but became a backslider and lived apart from the Lord for nearly nineteen years. Three years ago she came back into fellowship and is quite faithful now.

Last year in spring, she was seriously ill with the flu. She was taken to the government hospital thirty miles from Oraibi. There they placed her in a large ward with a number of other sick Indian women. One day it was believed she was dying; so the nurses took the baby from her side. She was heard praying, "But Lord, I have so many children; but Lord, I have so many children."

Then she became unconscious. She kept on fingering the hem of the bedsheet and repeated over again and again, "And she only touched the hem of His garment; she only touched the hem of His garment. . . ."

When she revived, the other sick women told her what she had said, asking her what she had meant by it. She, of course, knew not that she had talked, but she then told the other women about Jesus and how He had healed that woman who touched the hem of His garment. Effie was now on the way to recovery, though slowly. Ever since then the song "The Hem of His Garment" has become very precious to some of the Hopi Christians.

Effie's home is one-half mile from the church but she comes Sunday morning and often in the evening, carrying the youngest child in her shawl on her back, and by her side are a little boy and three of her girls. One evening as I expresed to her my joy at seeing her do that, she remarked, "yes, I brought half of my family to church tonight."

Could the Lord give Effie any greater joy than that her husband might soon be saved and together with the boys join her and the daughters on the way to church? Pray the Lord to save the whole family.

Prayer Requests

1. That men and boys might come to hear God's Word.
2. That there might be manifested a spirit of repentance and a turning unto God in the hearts of unbelievers.
3. That the Hopi Christians may be more firmly established in the abiding life in Christ Jesus.
4. "That utterance may be given unto us to make known with boldness the mystery of the gospel."

WHO'S WHO AMONG THE MENNONITES

The "Who's Who Among the Mennonites"—first book of its type—is to be printed within the next few months. Part I will contain about 400 sketches of Mennonites in responsible positions.

Part II will contain a classified directory of all Mennonite establishments and organizations as far as we were able to get them: schools, hospitals, homes for the aged, orphanages, banks, publishing houses, periodicals, insurance companies, milling companies, factories, relief organizations, etc.

Since it is easy to overlook some valuable information in a list like this we would be very grateful to Managers and Superintendents of all Mennonite organizations and firms if they would send the exact name of their firms to the "Who's Who Among the Mennonites", A. Warkentin, Editor, P. O. Bethel College, near Newton, Kansas.

DR. H. H. KUNG AND HIS FAITH

The Release of Chiang Kai-shek

On the Christmas morning, Dr. Kung was saying his prayers as on any other day, says a writer in "The North-China Daily News." When he opened his Bible, a thick volume of almost 2,000 pages, he found chapter 16 of the Acts of the Apostles which tells of the release of St. Paul. The page which he opened at begins with verse 35 which reads: And when it was day, the magistrates sent the sergeants, saying, Let those men go.

Dr. Kung continued reading the verses which were as follows:

And the keeper of the prison told this saying to Paul, The magistrates have sent to let you go; now therefore depart, and go in peace.

But Paul said unto them, They have beaten us openly uncondemned, being Romans, and have cast us into prison; and now do they thrust us out privily? nay, verily; but let them come themselves and fetch us out.

And the sergeants told these words unto the magistrates and they feared, when they heard that they were Romans.

And they came and besought them, and brought them out, and desired them to depart out of the city.

And they went out of the prison, and entered into the house of Lydia; and when they had seen the brethren, they comforted them, and departed.

After reading the verses, Dr. Kung marvelled at their appropriateness and felt strangely comforted at their message. He then told his friends of his conviction that the Generalissimo would be released. The same afternoon, news of General Chiang's freedom reached the Finance Minister.

It is learned that General Chiang, a devoted Christian, asked for a Bible only, when he was approached by his captors regarding his requirements.

THE NEXT GREAT STEP---UNITE

by E. Stanley Jones

(This is the farewell message of the distinguished missionary and evangelist, at a meeting under the auspices of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America on March 9, prior to his sailing for India on midnight of the same day.)

The next great step within Christendom is for the Christians to unite. In view of the world demands and in view of conditions within the denominations themselves brought about by division, the churches must get together. "If they do not," said a very prominent churchman, "within ten years, there won't be any churches to unite." This is an overstatement, but it should shock us to action.

But one of the difficulties in getting together is the underlying feeling that our particular denomination has been raised up to preserve and propagate a special phase of truth in Christianity. We do not want to lose that truth. There is a fact underlying this feeling. It is true that almost every one of our separate denominations has come into being as a result of some special forgotten truth. How can we have unity with that background of an apparent God-inspired separativeness? We are asked to repent of sinful divisions and yet it is not easy to do so, because the divisions came not from sin but from a new vision. I cannot honestly feel sinful on account of the rise of Methodism. I rather glory in it and so does many another in regard to his own particular group.

And yet with all that loyalty to the past, we do feel that this is inadequate. Times have changed, new world demands are being laid upon us that cannot be met by us as separate denominations. We simply must get together. A divided Church has little moral authority in a divided world. But how can we get together? Here is where we throw up our hands. We have the feeling that if we wait till we can get together on some agreed church polity or government, then we will wait till doomsday. I don't believe it is possible to get an agreement in church government that will take the High Episcopalian on the one hand and the Quaker on the other—and I could not leave out either one. I don't believe that unity is possible along that line. It would end in so many compromises that the union would be grey and colorless and command no one's enthusiasm.

Some Great Underlying Facts

I think we must go at it from another angle. We must look at certain facts that underlie the situation. Three outstanding facts have arisen out of the situation as I have listened in to hundreds of round-table conferences across the years. One is that when the Christians drop down beneath the level of organization and church polity to the level of experience, there they are the most united body on earth. They are united in the deepest thing in life, namely, in life itself. They share a common life in Christ. The Christian Church is at once the most united and the most divided body on earth—united at the center and divided at the margin. But the central thing to hold in mind is the fact that we are one. We do not have to seek for unity—we have it, fundamentally and centrally.

The second thing we have discovered is that the saints are about equally distributed among all the denominations. If you were to ask me where I thought they were most thickly congregated, for the life of me I couldn't tell you. There is no denomination that has a corner on the saints. God works through the denominations, sometimes in spite of them but never exclusively or particularly in any one of them. If this hurts our denominational pride, it may help our Christian humility! The idea that any one denomination is the exclusive or particular channel of God's grace is as dead as Queen Anne. Only some people don't know it! The second thing we have as an underlying fact is equality.

The third fact that emerges is that there is a very great diversity in expressing this underlying unity, a diversity as widely expressed as the High Churchman on the one side and the Quaker on the other, with great diversity between.

Three facts, then, emerge—unity, equality, and diversity. Any approach to unity must take account of these underlying facts and build upon them. I would therefore suggest the following as an immediate practical plan upon which all the churches could come together.

Practical Plan for Coming Together

Since we are inwardly one, I would suggest that we outwardly express that fact. Since we are all belonging to Christ, I would suggest that we all belong to "The Church of Christ." But since we are in America, I would suggest as the name, "THE CHURCH OF CHRIST IN AMERICA." We would all drop our denominational names as separate churches and belong to the one church—"The Church of Christ in America." But under this central unity we would have branches—"The Baptist Branch of the Church of Christ in America", the "Epsicopalian Branch", "The Friends' Branch". In these branches we would have local self-government in much the same way that we give states' rights in the United States. If a branch has bishops they could keep them and look on them as they like, but they wouldn't force them on the rest as the price of unity. In the same way, if any branch held to adult baptism they could continue to do so, but they would not compel the rest to adhere to it. Each branch could make any conditions or no conditions for transfer into membership or ministry they may desire to make. Nine-tenths of the denominations would probably straight off make no conditions whatever either for transfer of ministry or membership. Moreover, nine-tenths of them would have intercommunion straight off. The other one-tenth would put themselves into a stream of influence that in the end would make for the dropping of all barriers. In the meantime we would be patient, leaving to time and the Spirit of God the righting of exclusiveness.

There were two ways these United States might have attempted unity—one was to wipe out all state lines and state names and rule everything from Washington. Had we tried this, we would have been waiting yet for unity. The other way was to allow local expression in the states and bind the whole into a central unity. We took that way and achieved unity. But in the beginning there was a very strong state consciousness and a very weak central unity. The first decision of the United States Supreme Court was flouted by the State of Georgia. In the original draft of the Constitution of the United States, the word "United" was in small letters, it was an adjective. But that word, "United" is now a proper name and getting more proper all the time! In the beginning our branch consciousness would be strong but the unity consciousness would grow and one day completely grip us. On our letterheads, we would have "The Church of Christ in America" in large letters overarching all and down the corner in small letters would be "Presbyterian Branch". The next time we printed them, the letters might be smaller! And some day they might fade out altogether—I don't know! We would leave that to time.

Over these branches, we would have the "General Assembly of the Church of Christ in America" made up of delegates on a pro-rata basis, with a minimum number guaranteeing representation of the smaller bodies. This body would have to do with the matters of general interest to the whole Church. District assemblies would deal with local matters such as overlapping and duplication.

We would no longer tolerate competition or duplication for we would then be on the cooperative basis instead of the competitive, as now. That would mean that the weakness of one would be the weakness of all, and the strength of one would be the strength of all. The essential thing would be that we would be on a new basis in reference to each other—the cooperative.

Each nation might have its own national expression of Christianity—"The Church of Christ in Great Britain", "The Church of Christ in India", etc. Out of these national expressions would be a "World Assembly of the Church of Christ" made up of delegates from the national churches. This World Assembly would speak in the name of a United Christendom. It could give guidance to a distracted and confused world. We would not want to dominate the world through priestcraft, but we would guide it by moral convictions that would be inescapable.

But What of the Doctrine

In regard to the doctrinal basis on which this unity would be founded, I would suggest that that basis be simple—as simple and yet as profound as Christ made it. He founded His Church on the confession that He was the Christ, the Son of the Living God. That is the Rock upon which it was founded. That is the Rock beneath us all. Any group that would confess that confession could be recognized as a branch. That is sufficiently definite to hold us to the essential, and sufficiently indefinite to give freedom for marginal differences.

But are the demoninations willing to look on themselves and others as branches? If not, then if any denomination wants unity with other denominations and yet is not willing to recognize itself as a branch and others as branches, then the matter is plain—it does not want unity; it wants absorption. And I'm not interested in absorption on the part of any group.

Nor, will it ever happen! Any group that hopes that it will happen in regard to their group is hoping for the moon. It would impoverish Christianity to jam it into one denominational mold.

Take Down the Wall that Bankrupts

This plan would not ask any denomination to give up any truth it may possess. It would not have to give it up—it would give it to the rest of us. And each needs the others' truth, for all of us are but partial expressions of the Truth. Out of these pooled emphases there would grow a fuller expression of Christianity, more nearly approximately the Kingdom of God. For none of us are the Kingdom—we are only approximations. We are all poorer for our divisions. A mission compound in India was above the average and I asked the missionary how they were able to get hold of such lovely property and the reply was, "The man who had the property built such huge walls around it that he went bankrupt building walls and was not able to complete the building, so he had to sell it". He went bankrupt building walls! The separate denominationalism has almost gone bankrupt building walls of separation between themselves and others and keeping them in repair. The time has now come for us to take down those walls, and use the material to build a mighty temple of God.

But we are not only bankrupting ourselves, we are bankrupting the world by our divisions. In South India, the Ezhayas, numbering 850,000, a very intelligent caste, decided after many years of debate to accept Christianity. After the momentous decision had been made, a lawyer arose in the caste conference and said, "Now that you have decided to adopt Christianity, may I ask you, 'Which Christianity?' If you live here, you will be 'Church of England'; if there, then 'Baptist'; if the other place, 'Salvation Army'. Now you are united as a caste; then you'll be divided as denominations." This held up the whole movement and still holds it up. Many a thing is held up by our divisions.

Under this plan, amalgamation of separate branches could go on, if desirable. It would simply mean that we would have that many fewer branches.

Many of our enterprises as the missionary enterprise, could be conducted as a unit throughout the world. And with what an impact it would come, presenting a united front to the world need.

But let it be noted that this plan is more than a federation. In a federation the constituent bodies are left intact. In this plan they are not intact. There are no more separate churches—there are branches of one Church. The churches have faded out, there is but one Church.

The figure that would perhaps express it would be a tree with its many differing branches, all of them different but forming a symmetrical whole by those very differences. Those branches adhere in the central trunk, "The Church of Christ in America" and that trunk in turn would adhere in the root—Christ, the root of us all—and the root would adhere in the sustaining soil—God, the sustenance of us all.

One Christian House—Many Rooms

Or, to change the figure again. In Calcutta, I stayed with the Metropolitan of India, at "The Bishop's House". In this house are many rooms named after different bishops. I stayed in the "Heber Room". When people asked me on the outside where I was staying, I told them I was staying at "The Bishop's House"; but when those on the inside asked me where I was staying, I would reply that I was staying in "The Heber Room". But, the point was that, even though there were different names over our doors, we were all under one roof, and belonged to one family. Now we are under separate roofs with dividing walls between us. Now and then we come together in some joint enterprise, but the central thing is not our togetherness. Then the central thing would be our unity and the marginal thing our separateness.

In the foothills of the Himalayas, the fire-flies are very numerous in the rainy season and become interesting points of light in the darkness. But one night I saw a fire-fly convention—there must have been tens of thousands of them in one great tree and there must have been a cheer-leader for they put their light on and off in unison. As they put them on together, they lighted up the whole countryside. Our separate denominations are interesting points of light as they shine in the darkness, but let them pool their lights and they will lighten the world.

One of the advantages of this plan is that it could be put into operation now, without years of backing and filling and compromising. And it would set our faces in the direction of complete unity at once.

Christians of America, unite! You have nothing to lose except your dividing walls!

:-:

Thou Shalt Not Covet

Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's house, thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor his manservant, nor his maidservant, nor his ox, nor his ass, nor anything that is thy neighbor's. Exodus 20:17.

To covet means to want something very much. When a person has such a strong and selfish desire for something, or for some person, that he does not care for the rights of God nor for the rights of his fellowmen, but thinks only of his own gratification then he is covetous. In other words, such a person thinks more of his desire than he does of God and His Word; that is why covetousness is called idolatry. Col. 3:5. Covetousness is at the bottom of idolatry, of adultery, of all uncleanness and just about every sin that can be mentioned. Covetousness or lust, as it is called sometimes, made Paul realize that he needed a Savior. For the law showed him that he was a sinner and so condemned him. He writes about this in Romans the seventh chapter and especially in the seventh verse.

There is nothing wrong in coveting or desiring to have something that is good which we try to obtain in a right way. Paul writes: "Covet earnestly the best gifts." 1 Cor. 12:31. And again: "Follow after charity and desire spiritual gifts." 1 Cor. 14:1.

Ordinarily we understand by covetousness that strong desire which thinks more of self than it does of God or fellowman and that is why it is called idolatry. Covetousnes or lust was at the bottom of the first sin in the Garden of Eden and in one way or another it is at the bottom of every sin. "Thou shalt not covet."—"Messenger", Clinton, Okla.

History tells us that Louis XI "executed a solemn deed of ownership," conveying to the Virgin Mary the whole country of Boulogne in France; but reserved for himself all the revenues thereof. How much like this "solemn deed" is our repentance! We may say we are sorry, but if we reserve for ourself the control of our actions, how deep is that sorrow? God measures our repentance not by our "exceeding" sorrow, but by the revenues of our lives that flow into his treasury.—Record of Christian Work.

THE SIN OF ADAM AND EVE

April 11, 1937

Genesis 3:1 to 4:26 Printed, 3:1-15

When God created man He provided abundantly for all his needs. He might eat freely of the fruit of all trees of the garden excepting one (Gen. 2:16, 17) which was forbidden. God's command was a test of their readiness to obey even though they did not see His reason.

The Temptation vs 1:1-5

Satan, the real tempter, appeared in the garden in the form of a serpent. He revealed a high form of intelligence. His conversation indicated that he was a fallen moral being.

Satan paved the way for disobedience by suggesting a doubt of God's love (v. 1) and of His truthfulness (v. 4). Criticism of God's word opens the door to disobedience to His will. Satan approached Eve when she was alone and probably weakest—a favorite way of his today. He secured her attention and aroused her curiosity by his question in v. 1. Eve starts to talk and he seizes the opportunity to lead her on. When we begin to parley with the tempter, we likely end by yielding to him.

Satan boldly told Eve a plain falsehood and persuaded her to believe it (v. 4). He further makes it appear that God wishes them to remain ignorant and not become like Himself v. 5). Eating the forbidden fruit, he declares, will give them wisdom and opened eyes.

The Fall vs. 6-15.

Eve listened to Satan's insinuations about God, then she looked at the forbidden tree and its fruit, she lusted for it, she took and ate and gave to her husband (v. 6). Sin loves company, desires to lead others into sin. The temptation appealed to her appetite as well as to her desire for knowledge. It appealed to three lusts—lust of the flesh ("good for food"), lust of the eyes ("pleasant to the eyes"), and the vainglory of life ("to be desired to make one wise"). Temptation came first through the eyes. Looking at sin opens many hearts to its entrance.

Bitter disappointment quickly followed (v. 7). Their eyes were opened but they were not "as gods." Instead of wisdom, there came the consciousness of their nakedness and guilt. Sin leads to shame and fear. They were afraid of God (v 10), they hid themselves when they heard God's voice (v. 8). The man conscious of his sins, hides from God. Adam and Eve could not hide from God, neither can the sinner do it now. Adam and Eve tried making excuses for their sin, but in vain. We are held responsible for our willful sinning. By eating the fruit of one forbidden tree, they lost the whole garden.

The first curse was pronounced upon the serpent (vs. 14, 15), but the others did not escape (vs 16-19). Man is a fallen being. Sin is a fact of universal experience.

Adam and Eve believed it better for them to disobey God and as the result all mankind is tainted with sin. Satan gets many people to believe this today. God is pushed into the background. Sin is an intruder but man invites it as his guest, he takes sin to his bosom because he loves it.

Adam and Eve's sin was a personal choice and intentional, with the knowledge of its consequences (2:17). Their punishment was brought on by themselves. Men damn themselves and with open eyes because love for sin lures them on.

Golden Text—"The soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18:4.

Prayer—Dear Father help us to be obedient to thy will and wishes that no sense of fear of Thee may possess our hearts. In Jesus name. Amen.

HERODS AND THE MASTER

Luke 23:11

Herod Antipas is one of the pathetic figures of the New Ttestament. Jesus, who knew men, once called him "The Fox," for he was cruel, cunning and crafty. He had some religious feelings; he called John to his court to hear him preach. But John was too out-spoken and rebuked Herod for his sins. Herod's wife raged and John was put in prison. But Herod feared him, kept him safe, and was much perplexed because of him. Then came the great feast, the foolish oath and the beheading of John. Later, Herod was disturbed by reports of the work of Jesus. He was haunted by the thought that John was risen to life. Still later Jesus is sent to him for trial. But it is Herod that is on trial rather than Jesus. There seems to be no conscience left in Herod. He is glad that he may be thrilled and amused by some miracle. He classes Jesus as just another court entertainer. Herod has become the typical worldling. But Jesus "answered him nothing."

The tragedy of a soul's decent

We may well note the downward steps of a soul. Herod hears gladly at first but does nothing about it. God's voice speaks plainly but is not obeyed. Next the Voice is put into the dungeon and sin allowed to go free. The next step is the killing of the Voices and giving sin right of way. Then follow feeble hauntings of a guilty conscience that is still alive, but no action taken. Finally there is no answer from Christ, the conscience is dead. It is a dark downward descent made step by step. The first step is disobedience to the clear conviction of duty and voice of God. From there on the step is rapid;—and deadly.

Mocking the Master

When Herod heard that Jesus was being brought to him, he was glad, for he thought, here was some new form of amusement, some new thrill to entertain. Would that he had been the last to so think of Jesus and His cause! But there are still people who use religion as just another means of being amused.

They enjoy having their emotions stirred because it gives them a pleasurable sensation. It is a terrible thing to come to church just to be amused and stirred with no thought of doing anything more about it! It is a terrible thing for a church to seek merely to amuse and gain favor with its people! To both such Jesus remains silent! Jesus might have saved himself before Herod but then He could not have saved others. The church may save itself embarrassment and hardship, but it does not thus save the world. The church must never forget that it is not just another entertaining club but a life-saving station.

Herod and his men of war further mocked Jesus by dressing Him up in something He was not. There is danger today of dressing Him up in something different than He really is and thereby mocking Him. Business dresses Him up as a shrewd business man to give the sanction of religion to their methods. Capitalists and labor leaders do the same for their cause. Even the tobacco and liquor interests try the same mockery. But perhaps always the worst offenders have been the "men of war." Constantine began it and it has continued down to this day. In the World War He was dresed in kakhi by the "men of war" and sent into the trenches. The Saviour of men to be a killer of men; the friend of all to be the enemy; the lover of mankind to become a hater; He who healed and soothed pain to run a bayonet into another; what terrible mockery!

But the Church has not been entirely guiltless. It, too, has soometimes dressed Jesus up into something different. Some scientists had said they could not hold to the supernatural, so some churches have been tempted to dress Him up to explain away the supernatural. But now scientists are beginning to believe in miracles. Some psychologists had their own explanations of religious experiences, so the church was tempted to dress Him to fit their ideas, now psychologists are speaking of the return to religion. May God forgive us for toning down and thinning out the life-giving truths of the Master by causing Him to appear different than He really is! It is to be noted that Jesus wore His own clothes when making His way to the cross. So always.

The Master's majestic silence

Why was Jesus silent? Surely not because of disgust and disdain of Herod. He who gave His life for all also loved Herod. He may have been silent because He knew they did not speak the same language; one spoke the language of intrigue and amusement and bloodshed,—the other the language of love and sacrifice and the cross. If the Master seems silent to us it may be because we are not attuned to His spirit Our dials may not be set to the proper wave-length.

Again Jesus may have been silent because His silence would probe the soul of Herod deeper than argument. Jesus won Peter back with a look and He may have wished to win Herod by silence. "Be still, and know that I am God." We may be sure that if we come before Him in the proper attitude, and are silent before Him, He will reveal unto us His wonderful words of Life.

PUBLICATION

The Book Depository for Canada

Bro. David Toews has now visited a good many of the churches of the Eastern, Middle, Western, and Pacific Districts in the interests of home missions and the book depository for Canada, which belongs in the category of home missions. If the readers will turn to the report of the treasurer of the Board of Publication, on page 13 of this paper, they will find that the total of the gifts for the depository received thus far is slowly approaching the sum needed, $1,500. If the churches who have promised to give their share, but have not yet done so, together with those of the Northern District which the Brother plans to visit shortly, will do what they can, the goal can easily be reached. Then the churches in Canada are to be solicited to add their quota. Thus another one of our united Conference projects will be taken care of.

Our Printing Plant

For over fifty years our Conference has acted the Boarder by hiring its printing done instead of establishing and using its own printing plant. That this has not always spelled economy, anyone who has some knowledge of the printing business can readily figure out. Since the Conference is now past three-quarters of a century old, it would seem as though we might all want to make some sacrifices to come in possession of our own printing plant or to acquire a controlling interest in one already established. To do this the Board of Publication needs $10,000. With the splendid example already set by Brother and Sister Ledig who recently donated $1000 to help build up a printing plant fund and with what the churches have already given for the purpose, only a little over $8,000 is yet needed to reach the required sum. Wouldn't it be wonderful if the churches could see their way clear to make up this budget by the time the next Conference meets? If each church member would give for this purpose thirteen cents this year and twelve cents next year, the sum could be realized.

If the churches would support the Board of Publication in this, we think we could work out and propose a plan to the Conference at its next meeting which would mean a decided forward step in our publication work and a new day for our churches and for our Conference activities.

We have a standing Conference resolution to the effect that churches take at least one collection a year for the work of publication, and the Board of Publication has voted that every penny so given is to go into the printing plant fund.

May we ask the pastors and church Boards to consider this matter prayerfully and to do what they can to induce churches to give liberally to this cause.

The Board of Publication heartily thanks all those who have remembered our work with their contributions. May God bless the givers and the gifts.

6. How the federal income tax law favors gifts to church colleges.—Friends of church colleges will do well to study the following table which shows how the federal income tax law favors gifts to church colleges to the effect of tax exemptions up to 15 per cent deduction of net income allowed in one year for gifts to such colleges. It applies either to outright gifts or to installment payments made during the year on larger total subscriptions extended over a period of more than one year. In computing these figures an exemption of $2,500 for a married man has been allowed, and it is presumed that up to the maximum of $14,000 allowed is earned income.

Memorials

"Now Absolom in his lifetime had taken and reared up for himself a pillar, . . . and he called the pillar after his own name." 2 Sam. 18:18. Absolom did not want to be forgotten by posterity. Nobody does. But we often sense an unpleasant taste in these self-erected memorials. Most memorials, although just as useless as Absolom's, are erected by friends in loving remembrance of dear ones. We desire to express our affection and we want others to know it.

Do you know something about the price of tombstones? Go to your cemetery and see how much money has been invested at the graveyard. What kind of returns does this investment bring? Would not a useful memorial oftentimes be more expressive of the spirit of the one we desire to honor?

I like to think of one of our India missionaries, Anna Funk, who lost her life on the ill-fated Titanic. Her many mission friends desired to erect a memorial in her honor, and they built a Girls' School in India. As long as that building will stand it will do justice and honor to the one thus remembered.

In schools and hospitals you will sometimes find plaques in memory of certain donors to that institution. They will always be remembered for the service they rendered. Such is no "Absolom's Pillar." In fact, these could sooner be compared to "Jacob's Well," to which people came 2000 years later to quench their thirst. Why not place neat though inexpensive markers on the graves of our loved ones and then erect, or help erect, a useful memorial in which their names can be commemorated.

A Memorial Hall is to be erected on the Bethel College Campus in memory of persons who have rendered worth-while service. Here opportunity will be given to donors or groups of donors, to have names of loved ones engraved on stones or tablets. A complete list of all contributors will be placed into the corner stone.

This Memorial Hall will be no "Absolom's Pillar"; no useless stone. It will be a "Jacob's Well," which we trust will help quench the thirst for knowledge and spiritual convictions of countless thousands of young men and young women. In the years to come larger numbers of people will have occasion to read the names of those memorialized, than would be the case in the average cemetary.

Why does not your family get together and decide to honor your father and mother in helping erect a much needed Memorial? And while you thus honor your loved ones, you will at the same time render a very distinct service to Bethel College, to the large number of future leaders, the Christian ministers, missionaries, teachers, doctors, nurses, business men, and home makers of tomorrow.

THE MAIL BAG

(Editor's Note: If it weren't for the correspondence with the readers, the joys of being an editor might be limited. But the daily mail—that makes up for it. Some of these letters are just too good to go into the files. Here's a chance to read someone else's mail.)

Cookies, please

Dear Mr. Bargen:

......But in regard to your gentle request of me to contribute to the columns of THE MENNONITE, I would like to quote your motto on your "Our Youth Says" page, in one of the January issues, namely: "Blessed are they that expect nothing, for they shall not be disappointed." I cannot say that I liked this one at first. It grated something inside of me, and I wished that I could "wash the head" of the inventor of it. (Thank goodness, it's not my head—Editor.) But considering where it came from, it made me read that paper and the succeeding ones with more attention.

As a rule I cherish those mottoes very much. They are the "cookie jar" of the page to me. So often I do not have the time to read the paper, when it first reaches my hands, and if I then can snatch a thought in a glimpse, and digest and enjoy it, or anticipate the rest of the page, while I continue my duties, I feel like a boy munching a cookie grabbed from his mother's pantry shelf......

Roommate for Sale, Almost

Dear Mr. Bargen:

......asking that I write to you for the C. E. Page of THE MENNONITE, telling why I think Christianity is a vital help today.

I have recently had a little experience in this connection which has helped me. Most of us at some time or another have met some person (or persons) who have just simply tried our patience to the breaking point. It seems that no matter how hard we try to overcome our dislike for them they just seem to "stroke us the wrong way." Such an experience has recently been mine.

When I thought of writing this letter to you, I immediately knew that I couldn't honestly write of a Christian experience while in such a state of mind. I began to feel "Oh, what's the use? Where's this experience of victory in Christ, of which we hear so much? This is all just a part of life, and I can't seem to take it. Why do I have to stand for this girl's unbearable silliness and everlasting hanging on to me?" Perhaps the reader can appreciate my state of mind.

I knew that I was being mean to the girls and sinning, but I couldn't seem to help myself, so I prayed God to help me overcome. Then this thought came to me: "Why, this is all a part of life—the Christian life. If I want to learn to be loving and patient, I just have to expect to meet people whom I just can't stand." God can't teach me patience without giving me something on which I may try myself out. This is all a part of His plan for life.

I remembered, too, an exposition of Romans 5:3—"tribulation worketh patience"—that I had heard once, and also a line of a poem by Annie Johnson Flint, I believe:

"In ways that I know and know not
I have the help of the Lord."

I believe that thinking along this line has put me into the right state of mind, and that God will use this to better help me meet my problem in the future.....

Getting Started

by John E. Fretz

"And Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?" Luke 17:17.

This little note is written for the most part to that far too large group of our Mennonite young folk, who having come forth to dedicate their lives and fortunes to the cause of our Lord Jesus Christ, are standing idly by, during these precious morning hours; asking, often most earnestly, "What is there for me to do? Where does my Sunday School, C. E. or the congregation itself, offer to me an opportunity to do something for Him?"

While such earnest questions demand the most prayerful attention of pastor and laymen as leaders,

The Cookie Jar

A ripple of laughter is worth a flood of tears.

we turn, rather, to the young people themselves.

First, last and always, is it not to the Master Himself that we should turn for direction as to What He would have us do? In doing this, please remember that we ourselves must be determined and willing, as well as fully yielded to do His bidding. The smallest and least thing must not be considered unimportant or beneath our dignity.

If we are not faithful in these little things, whatever they may be, how can He give us the more important work to do? David was an obscure but faithful shepherd lad, before he was called upon to become a mighty king. God is still looking for faithful hearts and willing hands, rather than great "ready-made" minds and magnificent ability. This is our own opportunity! Countless numbers of young Christians just like you and I, have turned back at this point, right on the threshold of a useful Christian life.

Rest assured that He who called you to do the task is well able, and also willing to help you to perform that work.

"Let none hear you idly saying,
There is nothing I can do,
While the souls of men are dying,
And the Master calls for you!"

By all means, pray! Ben Franklin made it his rule to seek God's guidance daily? Did Franklin lack opportunity to be useful? Was he not an example of one who made the most out of what he had in hand at the moment? Often we literally stumble over one opportunity after another, blindly, while racing madly for our selfish goals, whereas these opportunities are the very steps by which God seeks to prepare us to do that greater work.

Our missionaries, colleges, and Christian workers are asking us to intercede for them before the Throne of Grace. When have you last set aside a definite time for a period of prayer; for the pastor, or for a definite work of the church or the college or perhaps some fellow member in trouble? Even if one-tenth of us were to dare to be courageous enough to make use of what God is offering us in His promises through prayer, who would venture to predict the results in far-reaching influence in our congregations and the community? The active growing church is a praying church. Help make your's that very thing by purposeful prayer.

Among your privileges is that of regular attendance at worship services. You are important in that service, even though you are not an officer, don't forget that.

It is from the "mountain top" and "desert place" that we go forth into the world to serve. Neither is sufficient without the other, and never more so than with young ambitious blood.

Have you joined others in visiting those spiritually as well as physically sick? Would you assist in giving programs in hospitals, rescue missions or to the shut-in? How about visiting and encouraging that struggling group or that new work at some out-of-the-way place or byway? Simple duties, yes, but how sadly neglected! There is great joy in store for you when you participate in such activities. If you don't think so, try it?

You are reading our official publication now. Are you using it as you should? Is it helping you to live a constructive Christ-like life? Jot down or clip from these pages those items of interest, for future use. Some make scrap books of missionary news and needs, or the outlines for your C. E. program. Knowing and keeping these needs before us helps us do effective work quickly.

Beyond these few there is such a vast field of things waiting to be done that we dare not touch upon it now, nor does it matter; the point is this, are you ready to begin where you are?

Most of our congregations are blessed with good pastors and leaders sympathetic to our young people and their problems. Generally they are delighted and honored when you come and volunteer for work to be done. This is always encouraging. Take advantage of this opportunity and either alone or with a group, visit with them, bringing your problems with you. I know of one such small group who have done real constructive work in just this way. It's worth trying. Other opportunities will follow. It has been well said that "a small opening may lead to a large place".

Let each one of us consider these thoughts prayerfully with the hope that many may be provoked and stirred to conclude with the writer of the verse:

"Take the task He gives you gladly
Let His work your pleasure be,
Answer quickly when He calleth,
Here am I, send me, send me!"

Young People's Topic, April 25

Matt. 28:16-20; John 4:35

Meditation

M., Apr. 19. Acts 4:12. Make a brief list of some other names by which some people think they can be saved.

T., Apr. 20. John 10:16-18. In what sense do you and I also have the power to "take it up, or lay life down;" or did these words apply to Jesus only?

W., Apr. 21. Acts:13-15. Paul's enthusiasm swept away all boundaries, all class distinctions. True salvation makes man love inclusively

T., Apr. 22. John 4:19-26. Do my thoughts rise to heights of nobility, as Jesus' did, when next to me is one who lives constantly in the grossest sin?

F., Apr. 23. John 20:19-23. What does Jesus give you and me in place of the "fear of the Jews," mentioned in v. 19? (Don't forget it: every life, somewhere, either overcomes, or is overcome by a "fear of the Jews.")

S., Apr. 24. Phil. 2:5-11. A difficult passage, but one that holds a blessing for you, if you will work through it. It contains a secret of a happy life—can you find it?

Problems and projects

1. Was Jesus patriotic? Give scriptural evidence that Jesus loved his country. Rank the interests of Jesus in order of importance: The out-of-doors, a crowd, men, good times, church
2. Did Jesus deny nationalism or transcend it?
3. How many different nationalities of men can you find in the Bible who personally contacted Jesus?
4. More Bibles are sold in China than in America. This fact proves, 1. The Chinese are more religious than Americans; 2. China is waking up to spiritual things; 3. America needs missionaries more than China does; 4. Nothing
5. Do the roots of war lie in the attitudes of non-Christians, or in the interpretation of Christianity by professing Christians? Discuss
6. Would a "world-vision" change the way you treat the garbage man? the fruit vendor? the cobbler? the merchant?
7. Do you think that it is a part of the task of the church to interest young people in what is going on in Germany and Russia, to help them to work for permanent peace?
8. What is the function of the Institutes of International Relations, such as are sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee?
9. Have you ever personally invited someone of another race to accompany you to church? Why not?
10. Supposing after having read the books, and heard the radio addresses of a missionary whom you had learned to love and respect, you should suddenly discover that this missionary was a Negro. Would that make any particular difference in your thinking?

A RIDDLE FOR YOU

If reading one issue of the MENNONITE gives you one hour of inspiration, ten items of information, five bits of news, one moment of self-correction, how many hours of inspiration, how many items of information, how many bits of news, how many moments of self-correction will SOME YOUNG MENNONITE get who is not now reading it, if you would only TELL HIM ABOUT IT?

God's Kind of World

Intermediate C. E. Topic, April 18, 1937

For Your Quiet Hour

Apr. 12 The World to be. Isa. 11:1-10
Apr. 13 When Jesus reigns. Isa. 9:1-7
Apr. 14 Lighting the world. Matt. 5:14-16
Apr. 15 Transforming the minds of men. Rom. 12:1-2
Apr. 16 Men that made history. Acts 9:1-16
Apr. 17 The Bible in the new age. 2 Tim. 3:14-17
Apr. 18 The kind of world God would like this to be. Matt. 5:1-12

Setting

At this meeting the group should be made very conscious of the physical world in which we live. If it is impossible to hold the meeting in some imposing outdoor spot, do the next best thing—bring the world indoors. Set a globe in a prominent place in the front of the room. Hang pictures on the walls, showing a variety of beauty spote in the world. These may be cut from old calendars. A poster announcing the meeting and topic can be made showing a beautiful scene

A Suggested Plan

1. Pre-prayer Circle
   Think for a few moments about John 3:17 in connection with the topic before prayer. Direct the prayers especially towards those who do not know Christ
2. Memory Hymn Sing
   Use the first ten minutes to sing a number of songs and choruses that the group knows by memory. The leader and pianist should each have a list beforehand and lead off in the singing
3. Announcements. Making announcements of events that are to come and brief reports of things that have been done is one of the best ways to stimulate interest in the activities of the society
4. Quiet Worship
   1. Leader announces the topic of the meeting. Speak distinctly
   2. Piano, "Day is Dying"
   3. Leader, "In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. And God saw everything that he had made, and, behold, it was very good"
   4. Hymn: "For the Beauty of the Earth"
   5. Scripture reading: Matt. 5:1-12
   6. Special number: "More Holiness Give Me" Pause for sentence prayers after each stanza. Ask someone to be prepared to lead each time. Let the leader offer a closing prayer after the last stanza
   7. Offering
      "All good things come from Thee, O Lord,
      And of Thine own have we given to Thee."
5. The Topic Presented
   1. The leader's part. Why discuss this topic. We need to see the difference between the World as God would have it be and the World men have made it. This means the physical and the moral world. What can we do to make it more God-like?
   2. Topics and questions
   3. Report, "A Christian World in Miniature" Chr. Herald, Jan. 1937
6. Closing Moments

Hymn: "Christ for the World We Sing"
Benediction: Ps. 19:14

For Your Discussion

1. In Genesis we read that God's creation was very good. What are some of the wonders of creation in the physical world?
2. In what ways has man been guilty of marring the beauty of God's physical creation? Do you think billboards, bridges, telephone lines, fences, and dumping grounds detract from the landscape? Why?
3. In the Beatitudes Jesus gives us a picture of the social world as God would have it be. What difference would it make in the world today if people lived according to them. Use the discussion in the C. E. World Quarterly to bring out the meaning of each
4. What can we do to bring about the kind of world Jesus talks about in the Beatitudes?

A Christian World in Miniature

A most remarkable story is told about Kusaie, one of the South Sea Islands. Eighty-four years age the first missionaries went there. Today it is a model of what a Christian world might be. They are led in this Christian spirit by several gentle missionaries who live the Christ-like life among them. Everyone goes to church on Sunday. There is no drunkeness, no crime and no jail. Divorce is unknown and poverty is not allowed to exist. Love and service are the dominant notes in this Christian community. For the detailed account see Christian Herald, January, 1937

The Bearer of Much Light

Junior Topic for April 18, 1937

Walking with God when sorrow is rife
Calm and serene in the midst of earth's strife;
Walking with Him I am free from all dread,
Filled with His spirit, His light to spread.

Walking with God, O fellowship sweet!
Thus to know God, in Him be complete.
Walking with Him where the world cannot know
O it is sweet through life thus to go.

Walking with God: O may my life be Such that the Lord can walk always with me.
Walking with Him, I shall know day by day
He is my Father, and leads all the way.

Opening service

1. Song service using hymns with mission theme
2. Scripture: Gem verses from Paul's eqistles quoted by groups
3. Sing in unison "Great Is Thy Faithfulness'
4. Prayer spoken by a junior using the hymn "Spirit of God descend upon my heart"

Study period. Aim: to strengthen the child's desire to become a bearer of Christ's light through the study of the Apostle Paul, the chosen light bearer to the Gentile world

1. Introductory remarks by chairman
2. Sing in unison "Jesus Bids Us Shine"
3. Orders of Jesus to light bearers—by 3 juniors reading the given scripture and offering an explanation
   a. Matthew 5:14
   b. Matthew 5:15
   c. Matthew 5:16
4. One Who Obeyed These Orders—chairman introducing the study of Paul and then calls on those who are to retell these experiences of Paul
   a. Paul, the bearer of darkness. Acts 7:1; 8:1; 9:1; 22:4-5
   b. Paul changed to a bearer of light. Acts 9:1-22 Special music following talk: "Have Thine Own Way"
   c. Paul lets the light shine. An outline map could be prepared for this on which the stations used during these talks could be designated. Each junior, then, places a gold star at the place of "his station"
      1) The first tour. Let one junior briefly trace the first missionary journey telling events of importance. Acts 13 and 14
      2) Carrying light into prison. Acts 16:11-34
      3) Carrying light into a big city of idols. Acts 17:16-34
      4) Carrying light to a king and queen and other high officials. Acts 25:23; 26:1-31
      5) The light in the prison cell. Acts 28:16-31
      Special music following talk: "I Would Be True to Thee, Lord"
   d. God watches over His light bearer—a junior citing incidents of God's protection in the life of Paul
      1. God protects from enemies. Acts 23:10-24
      2. God protects in a storm. Acts 27
      3. God protects from a snake. Acts 28:1-6
      4. God provides needs and protects from want. Acts 28:7-10
5. Sing in unison one verse of "God Will Take Care of You"
6. Heart-talk: The Heart of the Light Bearer. In a three minute talk let the children see the joy and satisfaction that streams from the heart of Paul because he gave himself completely for a vessel of light
7. In unison quote verse of month. Psalm 27:1
8. Sing in unison "Trust and Obey"
9. Poem: "Walking with God"—by a junior
10. Closing prayer

It's what you learn after you know it all that counts.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota

Greetings from Freeman! So far we have been able to meet regularly this winter for our church services. Some country churches were not able to meet because of the high snow drifts. Some people are so used to regular attendance that they feel unhappy if they have to miss even once. I sometimes wonder if the benefits and blessings of a church service are after all not dependent largely on our personal attitude towards God instead of on what we hear and see and do in church. Some Sunday School lessons are not as interesting as others; some C. E. meetings are not especially educational; not all sermons are alike inspirational; some singing is unharmonious; some praying is unemotional; but a true Christian will be benefited by every attendance of church service in which Christ is honored. A few weeks ago one of our church members, a young woman eighteen years old who was a true picture of health and beauty, died after a short illness. What a sermon such a death preaches to our young people! What a warning to them to remember their Creator and Saviour while they are still young and tender-hearted! It is said that one-half of our human race dies before the adult age.

Our Women's Missionary Society has made about fifteen quilts during the long evening hours of the last few months. This is better than playing bridge for prizes.

Our pastor has resigned his work here and has accepted a call from the Eden Church at Moundridge, Kansas. This was Rev. Walter Gering's maiden pastorate. He served us faithfully and efficiently for five years. Although young in years, he was the Elder or, as we say in German, "Aeltester" (the Oldest). What a misnomer! Our Mennonite church should select a better and more truthful name for its preachers. Brother Gering was born and raised in the shadow of our church. Who says that a child of a church cannot become its leader? Surely Christ's words are often misinterpreted to convey this false idea. If a congregation is spiritual it is, for one out of its own midst, the best group of people to work with; but if the congregation is worldly-minded, it will seldom tolerate a faithful worker, arising out of its on midst—S. P. Preheim.

Richfield Mennonite Church, Richfield, Pa.

On Sunday evening, March 14, the young people of our church held a special missionary service. The congregation was honored by having Mr. Walter Temple of Wilkes-Barre as the guest speaker. A chorus and the Swanger children of near-by towns rendered special music during the evening. The local society gave a missionary play, several missionary readings, and also the devotions.

The outstanding thought brought out during the entire program was "What we can do as missionaries." Mr. Temple stressed the different missionary projects that the Eastern District Conference has planned for the year and the importance of each individual's help in reaching the goal.

The president of the society, Mr. Ernest Leitzel, presided during the meeting.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

Daniel E. Baer, son of Jacob and Anna Elizabeth Baer, was born in Madison County, Illinois, on September 29, 1863. On May 20, 1877, he was baptized by Rev. Christian Krehbiel and united with the First Mennonite Church of Summerfield of which he remained a faithful and active member until his death. For many years he served as teacher and Sunday School superintendent and was also instrumental in organizing the Christian Endeavor society in 1890. On November 4, 1894, he was united in marriage with Anna Dahlem. This union was blessed with a son and a daughter. They lived on the home place until 1925 when they moved to town where he has been living since.

He had been suffering from high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries for some time; but since January his health began to fail very noticeably, and he gradually became weaker until he was called home to be with his Lord on March 20, 1937, at the age of 73 years, 5 months, and 21 days.

He leaves to mourn his departure his beloved wife, one son, one daughter, one daughter-in-law, and two grandchildren. He is also survived by one sister, two brothers, many other relatives, and friends.

Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon from the Mennonite Church. The services were conducted by the pastor. He spoke upon "The Blessed Dead" from Rev. 14.13. Interment was made in the Summerfield cemetery.

Walace B. Grubb, son of Rev. N. B. Grubb, departed this life in his home in Brooklyn, New York, Sunday, March 14. He was 53 years of age, and is survived by his wife, Mary, his son, Dr. Thomas Grubb, his aged father, Rev. N. B. Grubb, and two brothers, Rev. S. M. and Rev. William H. Grubb. The latter resides at Dwight, Illinois. Services were held at his late residence. The burial took place at Niantic, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Helena Amstutz, daughter of Peter P. and Elizabeth (Lugibihl) Steiner, was born on a farm near Pandora, Ohio, and died at her late home in Pandora, Ohio, March 25, 1937, having attained the age of 68 years, 10 months, and 24 days. On October 15, 1891, she was united in holy matrimony with Peter D. Amstutz who preceded her in death eleven years ago. Three children were born to this union, all of whom survive. They are Richard M., Mrs. Elmer Burry, and Hilda Winifred. In early girlhood she was baptized on confession of faith by Rev. John Moser and united with the Swiss Mennonite Church near Pandora, Ohio. Later when the Grace Mennonite Church was organized, she transferred her membership to this church of which she was a faithful member to the time of her death. Funeral services were conducted at the Grace Church on March 27, 1937, by her pastor, Rev. Paul E. Whitmer, assisted by Rev. Walter Schutz, and Rev. D. J. Unruh.

WE REJOICE!

—The Boards of Education and Publication are happy to report that twelve thousand CHRISTIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL QUARTERLIES have been ordered by our Sunday Schools for the second quarter. We heartily thank the schools and churches for this splendid cooperation in the use of this new publication.

—In addition to the Vesper Choir on a tour of the mid-western States, another group is representing Bluffton College among its constituency during this vacation period. A men's gospel team, consisting of Albert Bohrer, Normal, Illinois; Donald Gundy, Meadows, Illinois; Harleigh Rosenberger, Souderton, Pennsylvania; Andrew Shelly, Pennsburg, Pennsylvania; and Stanley Fretz, Lansdale, Pennsylvania, is visiting a number of Pennsylvania communities.

—Harold Kaufman of Hudson, Illinois, and Emma Detwiler of Normal, Illinois, have been elected presidents respectively of the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. at Bluffton College for the coming year.

—Arnold C. Schultz of Chicago who has spent the past year studying in Jerusalem conducted meetings in Bethel Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, every night of the week following with Easter Sunday. He also spoke at the Sunrise Service Sunday morning and occupied the pulpit for the Easter morning service.—Mrs. E. H.

—Members of the General Conference who know Rev. J. E. Entz, beloved elder of the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, will be saddened to hear of the death of his sixteen year old daughter Ruth who suddenly passed away at the Montrose Girls' School, Montrose, Pa. Only three years ago Brother Entz lost his companion, and now with Ruth, their only and adopted child, also gone he is left alone in his rural home. May God be his strength and comforter! An obituary is soon to follow.

—F. J. Wiens, manager of our Book Concern, reports that the Senior Catechism, which has undergone a revision is now off the press and orders can be filled promptly. The old edition had been practically exhausted and, farther than that, contained a number of typographical and textual errors that needed correction, which the Board of Publication asked Dr. S. K. Mosiman, President Emeritus of Bluffton College, to make. The copy was then submitted to several other brethren for approval. The Board of Publication is very grateful to Brother Mosiman, in particular, and to these other brethren also for their work and the interest taken in the revision. May the book prove a help and a blessing to our children and young folks!

—Sunday, March 28, the Bluffton College Vesper Choir was the guest of the Bethel College Church during morning worship. It favored the audience with some well-rendered anthems. The group stayed on the campus the night previous and was served breakfast by the campus folks and dinner by the church, at the College dining hall.

—The Men's Chorus of Hesston College and Bible School under the able direction of the Dean, Rev. Paul Erb, is making a spring tour through the Central West.

—College Life. School life is a happy life because it is a busy one. Idleness brings despair and grief; busyness brings happiness and hope. Youth wants to be busy. His zeal and courage urge him on to do something....Students enjoy school because of the many activities: The Y.W.C.A., Y.M.C.A., Mission Band, and the College Choir. The hours spent together in Christian fellowship and service fill the student's heart with joy....College life is enjoyable because it is a period of growth. Man rejoices in victory. The added knowledge, faith, and courage that he gets create joy and hope in the heart of the zealous student....School life has a challenge for youth. The many duties, the activities, the new strength and victories, and the urge to make the most of oneself form the rainbow and the silver lining in student life.—Tabor College Bulletin.

—Ed. Liechty, our former student, now the efficient editor of the splendid "Berne Witness," believes in wholesome community mixers, as is shown by the following clipping, "Children of Berne and community Saturday enjoyed the annual Berne Witness egg hunt at Lehman Park despite the cold weather and snow-covered ground. About two hundred children braved the cold, many of them accompanied by their parents. The Berne high school band led the parade to the park. Thirty dozen gaily colored easter eggs were distributed throu the park by Witness carriers, who enjoyed a luncheon at the Swiss Cafe prior to the job of hiding the eggs."

—Rev. B. H. Janzen of Kingman, Kansas, has accepted a call to and is already serving the Mennonite Church at Lehigh, Kansas, as their pastor. But the family will not move there until after the close of school.

—Compulsory military training has been abolished in the state-supported educational institutions of North Dakota by a law enacted during the current session of the Legislature. This will mean that the R.O.T.C. units at the North Dakota Agricultural College and at the University of North Dakota will be put on a voluntary enrollment basis. Before signing the bill Governor William A. Langer, of North Dakota, made a radio speech in which he said that the "Agricultural College and the State University were not founded to train men to fight. They were chartered for specific purposes—among others, to provide an education . . . Certainly it should not be necessary to require that young men take military drill before they can receive an academic degree. In adhering to the business of education these schools serve the state best."

—The Ohio Pastors' Convention has adopted the following resolution on the situation of military training in Ohio: "We state our deep concern over conditions at Ohio State University. By repeatedly coercing Christian conscience and enforcing military training upon its students it violates the right of religious freedom. The administration and the Board of Truestees refuse to make military training optional or to allow students to take alternate courses. It, therefore, leaves us no alternative. We shall do all in our power, as religious leaders, to influence our young people to attend other educational institutions where freedom of conscience is allowed."

—Food and the Swedish Birth Rate. On account of the falling birth rate in Sweden the government last year appointed a committee to examine the cause and to suggest remedies. The committee, according to special correspondence of the New York Times, found that the birth rate is about 30 per cent below that needed to maintain a stationary population. About on-half of the total number of families have only one child or none. At the present rate of marriage this number should be reduced from one-half to one-third while the other two-thirds should have at least four children per family in order to keep the population stationary. The committee found that 40 per cent of the urban families have more than three children and over one-half of the working-class families having more than three children live in standardized tenements of one room and kitchen.

—To aid mothers in getting material for devotional reading in the home with children under twelve, Mrs. L. Hostetler, Upland, Calif., gives a list and a brief survey of books suitable for that purpose. They are: "THOUGHTS OF GOD FOR BOYS AND GIRLS," by Edna M. Baxter and Ruth I. Conant; "JUNIOR BIBLE," a collection of Bible stories for boys and girls, by Edgar J. Goodspeed; "THE BIBLE IN GRADED STORY," Bible stories for younger children in three volumes, by Edna Dean Baker and Clara Belle Baker. All of these books can be ordered through the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Ind.

Trees

I think that I shall never see
A poem lovely as a tree,
A tree whose hungry mouth is pressed
Against the earth's sweet-flowing breast;
A tree that looks at God all day
And lifts her leafy arm to pray;
A tree that may in summer wear
A nest of robins in her hair;
Upon whose bosom snow has lain
Who intimately lives with rain.
Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree.

FUN IN THE HOME

A fine old lady, gray-haired and with a sympathetic smile, tried to tell me that she never played. But I caught her quilting on one of the loveliest pieces of home handwork I have ever seen. In a few minutes she quietly confessed that she loved to quilt and did it to quiet her nerves. I left without telling her that she was playing, and entering into one of the finest recreations I know, for one who loves to quilt. Here is fun in the home, but it is personal fun.

Family fun is a little different. It not only takes in personal fun in the home, but includes the elements of play and fellowship together as a whole family and also as sections or smaller groups of the family, father and mother together, or perhaps the two younger boys are together. Anyway, family fun must somehow take in all and it is often wise for the entire family to play together as well as work together, and we suggest also to worship together.

There are some fundamental things we ought to understand about play.

1. Play is inevitable, everyone plays.
2. Play for the child is life itself, creation.
3. Play for the adult is the rebuilding of life, re-creation.
4. Play for youth is creation at one time and re-creation the next moment, and youth changing on this issue is hard to understand.
5. Playing together helps to build a unit. So does work and worship. Never neglect any of these.
6. Parents face the task of creating a happy home, so play can not be neglected.
7. Play activities and techniques can be acquired.
8. In worship and meditation character is formed. It is refined in play and tempered in work.—Robert W. Tully in "The Gospel Messenger"

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION VS. EVANGELISM

There are good, well-intentioned Christians that thoroughly believe in evangelism, but have very little, if any, use for Christian education. This may be due to a lack of understanding or ignorance of the real meaning and function of one or both terms. In their essence the two tend to strive toward the same goal, namely, to bring people to a knowledge of Jesus Christ and the acceptance of Him as their personal Saviour. But they differ considerably in method and modes of operation. Of course, it cannot be denied that there has been, and probably still is, a type of religious education based upon materialistic philosophy and behavioristic psychology. But that is not the religious nurture that the Mennonite Church has been advocating and practicing. In the type of religious education that we believe in and foster we want to kindle the mind and heart of the individual with a glowing desire to know the truth as it is revealed in God's word, so that he may learn to know the plan of salvation and his personal need of a Saviour and take Him into his life, and to train him for consecrated service in Christ's kingdom.

With us it has not really been evangelism vs. religious education, but evangelism through the process of religious education or, perhaps we had better say, Christian education; for the terms religious and religion have quite a varied meaning. Christian education, nurture, is a process which, normally pursued, extends through years. It has its beginning, its foundation in the home, in the cradle, on mother's knees, in Christian worship, is continued in Sunday school, the week-day or vacation Bible school, the church, the Bible school, and the Christian college. If properly featured, it is the best and most thorough way of bringing the soul into fellowship with Christ and into a new life with Him. Where this plan of bringing the individual into a vital relation with Christ has not been used or has not availed, direct evangelistic efforts are resorted to and the conversion is likely to be more difficult, is apt to involve greater struggles, and, not infrequently, involves deep perturbations of the soul.

Foreign Missions

P. H. Richert

Taming, Hoping Prov., N. China
February 25, 1937

It is interesting to recall the first impressions on entering a country, whether that be our own country or the country of our choice of labor.

At our annual church meeting here at Taming, I was surprised to find a lady presiding and the audience, men and women alike, giving her due respect in all deliberations. She did it very efficiently and didn't seem to feel out of place at all.

Then I discovered a busy missionary society meeting made up entirely of new personnel, as it were, for they were mostly young women with more or less education, second generation Christians some, some even with normal school training. And I realized that we had moved forward.

Furthermore, I discovered a mother's club intelligently discussing intellectual questions on the management of the home, the training of children, sanitation, hygiene, and the like, following the reading of a book. Here, too, I noticed a new set of women, a change of scene, if you please.

It was just a few days after I arrived here, while I was cleaning my home, that the lady principal of the Provincial Girls' Normal School called at my place, urgently inviting me to come to the Normal School for a Welcome Reception. A very up-to-date and first-class dinner was served with eight of the leading teachers present. Furthermore I received a hearty invitation to come and live and eat in the school until my quarters were put in order. I was given a standing invitation to come and stay at any time for recreation and week-end rests.

Just now China's New Year is upon us. It is the time of feasting, China's Sabbatical month, as I prefer to call it. Days before in happy anticipation and in reverence to their gods firecrackers were fired off. The night of the New Year large firecrackers were booming all night. Days before there is a bustling and hustling, new clothes, if at all possible, must be made, or the old ones cleaned up; the house must be cleaned, the various foods must be prepared to last at least a couple of weeks. New Year's inscriptions must be put on door lintels, gates and walls. Hundreds upon hundreds of gods are sold on the streets days before.

This is also the time when the daughter-in-law is supposed to receive due consideration. All through the year she is tied down to cooking, sewing, patching, washing and the like, and now for two weeks she can rest and play and be at liberty to a certain extent.

Then there is kite flying. Kites are in evidence everywhere, way up in the air until they appear like little specks, though they are really quite large. We see them in all forms. There is the "Ba Kua" (eight diagram), the dragon, the bat, figures of human beings, birds, butterflies, fishes, turtles, and ever the modern airplane is not missing. Swings are also set up over the streets, and children and grown-up men have a merry time swinging and jostling each other. Little tots get a great deal of pleasure carrying little decorated lanterns through the streets.

Gambling at this time is "all the go," as we would say. And even drunken cases are reported. A son, about forty-five years old, who had beaten his father and mother in a drunken state and had done so before, was brought before the magistrate, where he was given a good flogging, after which he was chained to a pillar in the public street.

This is also an opportune time for our Christian forces to make Christ known to these folks who are at leisure to listen. So special evangelistic campaigns are planned. The Taming Church went out in five bands with a total of seventy-two people, students and children also participating. In picture, songs, talks, pamphlets, tracts and through the sale of Scripture portions the message of the gospel was presented. Final reports show that 2558 people listened to the messengers, and 66 places were visited, 2209 tracts and Scripture portions were distributed or sold. And as a result twenty-one listed their names as inquirers after the truth. Also there have been several who have definitely expressed their desire to follow Christ.

Our earnest plea is, send us more workers. Return the old ones and send us new ones, and that soon. Just a few days ago I read in the church papers a request from the India field for more workers. If they, among a population of 500,000, with a staff of twenty-four foreign workers, feel so much the need of more help, how much more should we stress it, who in one county alone have 590,000 people and, including the other two counties in the northern half of our field, have only three foreign missionaries to work this vast area. And the demand so great!

Are you looking at the financial difficulties? Please read the article in the first number of the 1937 Mennonite, "Comparison" by Rev. J. J. Balzer, which is a great eye-opener, and thought-provoking as well.—Aganetha Fast.

INVITATION

The Hoffnungsau church hereby extends a hearty invitation to all ministers, deacons and church boards of the Western District for THE MINISTER'S CONFERENCE and PEACE CONFERENCE, which, God willing, will take place in their church, April 20 and 21, 1937.—C. J. Voth.

Readers will find the programs for the above named MINISTERS' CONFERENCE on Tuesday, April 20, and for the MINISTERS' PEACE CONFERENCE, April 21, in The Mennonite of March 30, on page 5.

. . . And they said, "Let us rise up and Build." So they strengthened their hands for the work.

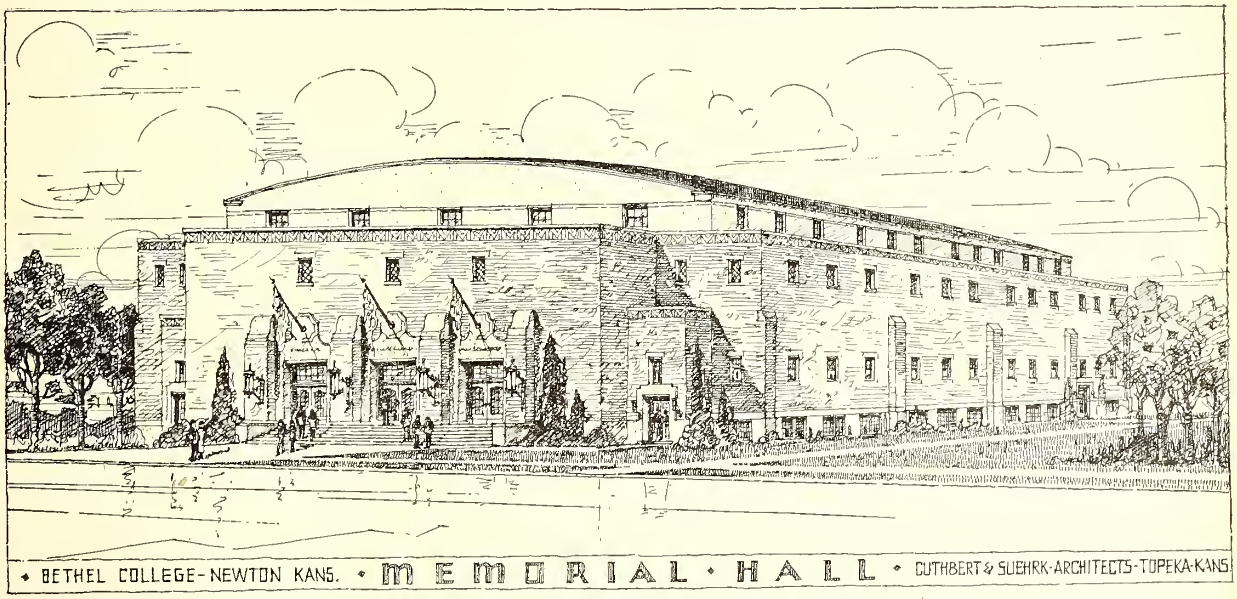
OUR TESTIMONY TO THE FAITH OF OUR FATHERS
OUR LEGACY FOR THE UPLIFT OF OUR POSTERITY



◆ BETHEL COLLEGE-NEWTON KANS. ◆ MEMORIAL ◆ HALL ◆ CUTHBERT & SUEHRK-ARCHITECTS-TOPEKA-KANS.

The Christian college was the pioneer in higher Education in America. Christian education is an essential to the Christian religion. It is the source of trained leadership. On these points authorities agree without exception.

In October, 1938, Bethel College of Newton will have completed fifty years of service. It is a monument to unselfish devotion, to education and enlightenment. Its history is one of struggle and occomplishment, and today it stands on the threshold of a greater future for good.

Bethel College admits selected students from foreign lands and from more than a dozen states with no discriminations because of race, creed, or station in life. All students are expected to recognize the purpose and spirit of the College as indicated in its history and its tradition.

There is a wide-spread desire to commemorate the fifty years of Bethel College history in October, 1938, and to combine with it a memorial to the earlier period of Kansas history which contains the story of the old Santa Fe Trail, the founding of Newton, the coming of the Santa Fe Railroad and the immigration of the Mennonite pioneers into Kansas just sixty-five years ago. It will also provide an unusually fine opportunity for friends near and far to memorialize loved ones in a way that will prove most useful to posterity.

This Memorial will take the form of a building designed to be a common meeting ground for faculty, alumni, former students, undergraduate students, and other friends of the school.

Among other features it will provide an auditorium with a seating capacity of approximately 3,000, large enough to take care of the annual commencement (now held off the campus because of lack of room), of all student functions, conventions of the churches, and reunions of supporters and friends of the College. It will also contain a dining hall for all students and facilities for physical education and development of social life of the students. There is no such building on the campus at present.

It is the policy of the Board of Directors of Bethel College not to incur a burdensome debt on this building. The building will cost approximately $100,000. The objective of the present campaign is $150,000, which when it is reached, will fully pay for the building and take care of current budgetary needs.

Provisions will be made for certain memorial tablets and plaques, and the names of all contributors to the Building Fund will be enrolled in a Book of Remembrance and placed within the Corner Stone. This building will be erected, furnished, and dedicated by October, 1938—

If we have the will as we have the power.

This will be the only building owned by Mennonites that can house the sessions of the General Conference.

Sermon Sketch

Phil A. Wedel

"Bring forth the best robe and put it on," Luke 15:22.

We find the words of our text in the story of the Prodigal Son. In the story the Father is the Lord God. And there is nothing too good for Him. Nothing but the best is good for God. When the prodigal son returned, the Father ordered that the "best robe be put on." Let us consider other robes in their relationship to this robe and see what our Lord has meant by this interesting statement.

1. The robe is best because it is free. The Father gave this robe freely. All other robes must be bought. Some robes are quite expensive. The robes that kings and queens wear are very costly. But the robe that the Lord gives is the robe of righteousness. It was given free to the prodigal son. He did not have to buy it. In fact no one can purchase this robe. It is a free gift of God. The righteousness of God cannot be purchased, it is free. Isaiah 61:10, "I will greatly rejoice in the Lord . . . my soul shall be joyful in my God for he hath clothed me with the garment of salvation . . . he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness."

2. It is the best robe because it can be worn beyond the grave. All other robes must be left behind. However, one robe accompanies our loved ones. All the others must be left behind. Friends or relatives may use them if they wish. But the best robe, the believer wears through life, through death, and through eternity. It is the right kind of a robe for the royal court of glory. In the parable of Jesus recorded in Matthew 22, only those who had the best robe on were permitted to sit at the banquet with the King. The robe of righteousness qualifies us to be in God's presence.

3. It is the best robe because it is always in style. People wear different kinds of clothing. The Oriental and the Caucasian peoples wear different styles of clothing. Missionaries have shown us how the people in India or China dress. To dress in such a manner in America would be unreasonable. There was a day when the hoop-skirts were worn by society women. But who wants a hoop-skirt now? Balloon skirts were once the height of fashion, but who would wear them now? Styles, fashions, change with generations, and forms of dress change in the various parts of the world, but the best robe never changes. It was worn in Paul's day, in the days of John, it was worn in the days of John Knox and Dwight L. Moody. And saved men and women of God are wearing this robe of salvation and righteousness today. It has not changed. It is always in style.

4. It is the best robe because it always fits. Other robes may be changed with the coming years. Baby dresses give way to larger ones as the child grows. Slender people need a different sort of a garment from those who are heavy-set. However, this lovely robe of righteousness needs no alterations. It may be worn in youth, and worn till the hairs are gray. The robe always fits, no matter what other changes take place.

5. It is the best robe because it never needs repairs. Most garments show the wear and tear of daily use. The collar becomes soiled, and worn, the buttonholes become ravelled. The garment wears through at the places where it is most used. The cloth becomes tender with age and hard service. It is not so with the best robe. It comes from Heaven and it is maintained by Heaven. Those wear it best who love it most. Much prayer, much Bible study, and Christian fellowship keep it bright and neat and fresh. It is the best robe.

6. It is the best robe because it is always suitable for the occasion. A divers suit would not be suitable for the race track. A bathing suit would be out of place in the pulpit. A wedding dress would hardly be in style for a funeral occasion. About 25 years ago in the State of Kansas there lived a girl who was about to be married. The date for her marriage was set and the wedding clothes were purchased. Suddenly she became ill before that time and died. And so she wore the wedding dress in her coffin. That was her shroud. However, ordinarily, it is out of place for living human beings to wear wedding garments at funerals. But the best robe can be worn at the beach, at the courts of law, on the farm, and in the business place. It should be worn every place and on every occasion.

7. It is the best robe because of its great cost. All robes of human manufacturers are produced at a great price. But this robe of righteousness is priceless. Most other robes are obtained without suffering. But the best robe has come from the terrible sufferings of Christ. It pleased the Lord to bruise Him. He bore your sins on his own body. It cost him the throne of glory. It could not be bought with silver or gold but by the blood of the Crucified One. And through His sacrifice we may obtain the best robe.

8. It is the best robe because no one can take it from you. Sisters borrow each others dresses. Brothers borrow each others suits. Just when you want your best garment for the party some member of the family has taken it for some other social function. But no one can take this robe from you. You can wear it day and night. It is your own to have and to hold forever. It is your sacred treasure.

9. It is the best robe because it is always becoming. Some folks cannot wear red, others cannot wear blue. Some prefer green. Whoever you are, whatever the color of your hair may be, or your eyes, this robe will beautify you. Your body may not be attractive, but it matters not. This robe of righteousness will be exactly the right robe for you. If you will wear that robe, you are a member of the Invisible Church of Jesus Christ. And when that Church shall be taken home you will be accepted. Rev. 19:8, "And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen clean and white for the fine linen is the righteousness of the Saints." The best robe will qualify us before God. The time will come when God shall review us all and they who will be attired with the best robe will be acceptable in His sight. The robe of good works, the robes of wisdom and knowledge, will not be sufficient. But the robe of righteousness will sustain you and me for eternity. Put on the best robe. The Father offers it to you free. Love and cherish it. Put on the best robe with this pledge upon your lips:

Lord I will work for thee
Lord I will love thee
Lord I will serve thee,
Till in the snowy dress
Of Thy redeemed I stand,
Faultless and stainless
Safe in that Happy Land.

A clergyman in West Africa asked his hearers to bring the next Sunday what they could give to send the good news to those places where God's love was yet unknown. Next Sunday saw a motley collection of things available for turning into money. At last a little black girl walked up and offered — herself. The missionary smiled. "Not yet, dear child," he said; "some day, I hope, but at present you are too young to teach." "But massa not understand," said she; "I have sold myself to missus. She will give you the money." Does not this true story put us lukewarm Christians to shame?—The Sunday School Times.

An Argument For Peace

J. J. Balzer

The so-called Kellogg-pact is known the world over, and all nations have signed it, thereby calling war a crime. Still those same nations are preparing for war as never before. There is surely urgent need to proclaim peace to the fearful saint as well as to God's enemies.

Our church papers had articles in every issue for the past year or so, and I often wondered whether much knowledge has been gathered from them. Let me give my viewpoint of it in a few brief notes.

We as Christians are ambassadors, ambassadors of Christ. This title alone gives a clue both to our message and to our behavior. It is the policy of ambassadors at all time to avoid giving offense. This is especially the case when relations are strained and the home government is for peace and conciliation. God, at this time, is for peace, and it behooves His servants to conduct themselves accordingly.

Elijah called down fire from heaven which consumed the captain and his fifty men who were sent against him. The disciples suggested a similar course in the case of the Samaritans who would not receive Elijah's Master simply because He wended His way towards Jerusalem. But He rebuked his disciples, saying, "Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of." They had an illustrious example and the Scriptures as a basis for their suggestion, but they failed to apprehend the spirit of the times. How little does the restless host of Christendom know the manner of spirit which it should show. Actual warfare with weapons of steel is its resort and all of Europe—calling themselves Christians—are just burning for the battlefield against a peaceful neighbor. What blasphemy on the name of Christ!

It is nothing to be at peace in the midst of friends and comforts and popularity. But in adversity and trials, in calamity and want, when all men and everything seems against us, by act as well as words, there is opportunity to express and work for conciliation.

An ambassador must be prepared for dishonor as well as recognition, for defamation as well as acclamation; and in any and every case he is acknowledged to be true, and he rejoices in all his sorrows, dispenses many a fortune, and knows that everything he does is to honor his government. How marvelous is such a ministry!

One more thought. The moment war is declared between two countries the ambassadors are withdrawn. Before God, who pleads for conciliation at this time, begins His strange work in the great day of His wrath He will take us—His ambassadors—out of this scene. Our presence here is and should always be a true token of peace, which must continue until we are called home. May God help us to be true ambassadors who have endurance to the end!

THE EFFECT OF ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES.

Topic: The Scientific Basis of Temperance

Many of the outward effects of alcoholic drinks have been apparent from ancient times. In recent years chemical and medical science have taught us to understand how these are produced. Ethyl alcohol, used in intoxicating beverages, has always been a great enemy of the human race. It is a poison and when absorbed into the blood, interferes with the proper operation of the bodily organs. Taken in sufficient quantities, it produces death.

Destruction, the Price of God's Broken Laws
Gen. 13:13, 19:23-25

One of history's most appalling records is the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah (vs 24,25). This was God's punishment, visited on these cities, because of their exceeding sinfulness. It is a frightful warning against unrestrained sin today. It presents very forcibly the fact that overwhelming judgment must overtake those who are deliberately wicked. It is a graphic picture of that which alcohol does to the body, mind and soul. The inevitable price of God's broken law—physical, moral and spiritual—is destruction and death.

Grapes of Gall—Poison of Asps Deut. 32:31-33

Nothing good can come from a people corrupt at heart. The fruit of such—here represented as a vine —is as bitter grapes producing poisonous wine. Alcoholic drinks are a poison to the body and the mental and spiritual nature of man. Alcohol, physicians and scientists tell us, is a narcotic poison pure and simple, containing no food nor medicinal value whatever. The poison of alcohol is as deadly as that of a venomous asp. It causes degeneracy in all living things. It destroys mind, body and soul. In the end its punishment is the same as that of the wicked.

The most marked effect of alcohol is upon the nerves, chiefly the brain. It numbs the brain, deadens the nerves, lessens the sense of responsibility, causes a loss of self-control.

Six Awful Evils, Results of Indulgence
Prov. 23:29-32

Solomon's vivid picture (v29) of the baneful results of alcoholic indulgence is alarmingly true today and increasingly so since the advent of the post-repeal saloon. "Woe", literally intense pain that leads to the cry "oh". "Sorrow", deep-seated grief; "contention", "babbling" or complaining; "wounds without cause", unnecessary, easily could be avoided; and "redness of the eyes", nature's signal light easily read by all. Nothing good can be said of alcoholic drink. Why should any Christian indulge in it? There can be but one reason, that he likes it.

Take the only wise attitude vs 31,32

Look not upon alcoholic drink—total abstinence. It may look inviting—it IS treacherous. Looking leads to desire to taste. Tasting easily leads to "tarrying long at the wine". All drinkers began that way. Eve looked at the forbidden fruit, then ate. Wisdom shuns the dangerous and deceiving.

Verse 32 pictures the bitter end. "At the last", three very significant words. The beginning of drinking may be pleasant, wine sparkling, going down smoothly, but the ending is biting, stinging-death to will-power, to the highest and best of Christian sensibilities.

Practical Truth

The evil effects of alcohol upon the body, mind and soul should cause every cautious and wise person to abstain entirely from its use.

Prayer

Oh God, guard the youth of our land against the sin of indulging in alcoholic drink. In Christ's name. Amen.

"KNEE-ACTION"

What a thrill came to the motor-going public when the latest development in the automobile came out, namely, that of "knee-action." Here was something that had long been looked forward to; for how needful it has been to have something that would take up the jars and jolts, and permit the occupants of the car to ride in comfort, regardless of bumps and ruts in the road. It is indeed a great addition.

In the Christian life, also, "knee-action" may be and should be applied to great advantage.

"Knee-action?" Yes, the Master often used it. Read through the Gospels and note the many times that Jesus went into a solitary place to bend the knee in prayer to the Heavenly Father. After a busy day when the masses had surged about Him for healing and for counsel, how often He retired to a solitary place for rest and communion. Again, when great issues were at stake, such as we read of in Matthew 26:36-44, He retired to the Garden in prayer; in fact, much of His time was spent on His knees.

We, also, in these days and times, need this "knee-action" to help us over the jolts of the depression, when men's hearts fail within them because of the uncertainty of things.

"To your knees," might well be a motto which Christians should ever keep.

In the early morning before the tasks of the day have begun, to gain strength to meet each problem; and at eventide when weariness presses the soul; and perhaps, most needful, at the noontime, when the press of duties makes the going hard, when unwarranted criticism is hurled, and trials beset on every hand; how needful indeed to slip to one's knees in prayer and then tell our Heavenly Father everything. —Sel.

POST-MILLENNIALISM

J. J. Friesen

Here are some thoughts that came from the pen of a converted Indian:

"Some of the Mennonites have gotten off the path of the truth, for there are many post-milliennialists. Nearly every one of the missionaries that came to us from the Mennonite Church was a post-milliennialist until he attended a Bible conference here. All of them are now strongly pre-millennial in their Bible teachings. And I can assure you that our people are happy when they are once converted to pre-millennialism. The church will undoubtedly have to face difficult problems before the coming of Christ will take place. The only safe solution of these difficult problems is the coming of our Lord and Saviour. So we must prepare to meet Him. This can only be done by being deeply grounded in the truths of God's word. I am quite sure that such a time will draw all Christians to the Lord."

Strange, is it not, that so many Mennonites are post-millennialists? The Bible plainly teaches that there will be a pre-millennial return of the Lord and in like manner as His disciples saw Him ascend. "The Lord shall descent with voice of archangel, the dead in Christ shall rise first and the living believers shall be caught up together in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." "Blessed is he that hath part in the first resurrection." The other dead do not rise until a thousand years later. Christ will reign; Satan will be bound. The beast and the false prophet will be cast into the lake of fire. The nations will be judged. Satan will be turned loose for a short time. The last battle will take place. Satan will be cast into the lake of fire and have company with the beast and the false prophet forever and ever. The second resurrection will take place. Then will be the judgment before the Great White Throne; and the dead, great and small, will stand before God. The books—also the Book of Life—will be opened. The dead will be judged by the things written in the books, according to their works. "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

These are some of the events that will take place at Christ's return, according to Scripture.

We have often wondered how the post-millennialist harmonizes these facts with his beliefs.

YOUNG HAMLIN'S SELF-DENIAL

When Cyrus Hamlin was ten years old, his mother gave him seven cents to celebrate a great holiday. The money was for gingerbread, buns, etc. "Perhaps, Cyrus," said she, "you will put a cent or two in the missionary box at Mrs. Farrar's." As he trudged along he began to ask: "Shall I put in one cent or two? I wish she had not said one or two." He decided on two. Then conscience said: "What, five cents for your stomach and two for the heathen! Five for gingerbread and two for souls!" So he said, four for gingerbread and three four souls. But presently he felt it must be three for gingerbread and four for the souls. When he came to the box he dumped in the whole seven to have no more bother about it. When he went home, hungry as a bear, he explained to his mother his unreasonable hunger. And, smiling through tears, she gave him an overflowing bowl of bread and milk. And he pathetically asks: "What was the meaning of mother's tears?"—The Epworth Herald.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

Marriage

Awkland-Dietz: On March 14 Miss Pearl Dietz, a very active worker in the East Swamp Church, became the bride of Mr. Horace Awkland, another active member and president of the Y.P.C.E. Ralph Dietz, brother of the bride, and Miss Esther Awkland, sister of the groom, accompanied the couple. The choir sang, "Living for Jesus," and Miss Lillian Landis sang a solo. The pastor, Rev. W. S. Gottshall, officiated.

Jones-Long: On March 20 Miss Mildred Jones and Mr. Charles Long, also of the East Swamp Church, were united in marriage by Rev. W. S. Gottshall at his home in Quakertown.

Deaths

Mervin Paul Shelly, a promising young man, member of the 1937 graduation class of the Quakertown High School, left our midst to return to his Maker. He attained the age of 18 years, 6 months, and 21 days. It was hard to see so young a member of our church depart so early in life, but the Lord had other plans for him. He was the first to be buried from the new part of the church. The pastor, Rev. Gottshall, was in charge of the service.—Correspondent.

Mrs. Clara Ruth (nee Eymann) died at her home at Reedley, California, on March 25, 1937, at the age of 89 years, 5 months, and 15 days. She was born at Ashland, Ohio. When she was 4 years old her parents moved to Lee County, Iowa. Here she was received into the Mennonite Church on her confession of faith by the rite of baptism. On November 20, 1870, she was united in marriage with John A. Ruth; and the Lord blessed their union with nine children, two of whom preceded her to eternity. Her husband preceded her in death on August 19, 1919. After their marriage, they moved to a farm near Summerfield, Illinois. In 1885 they moved to Halstead, Kansas, and in the spring of 1915 they moved to Reedley, California. The highest ambition of her life was to bring up her children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord that they might become useful Christian men and women, and her efforts in this direction were crowned with admirable results. She enjoyed good health almost to the end of her life, for which she was constantly thankful. On the morning of March 25 she had a stroke and passed away peacefully that evening.

Funeral services were held in the Reedley Mennonite Church on March 29. Rev. H. J. Krehbiel spoke words of comfort, basing his remarks on Job 5:26, and Rev. J. H. Langenwalter based his remarks on Psalm 92. She leaves to mourn her departure five sons, two daughters, eighteen grandchildren, fourteen great-grandchildren, and many friends; but we do not sorrow as such who have no hope.—Corr.

Mrs. Anna Buller Funk, 69 years old, Rogers County, Inola, Oklahoma, resident, died at her home, February 17 of a heart attack.

Mrs. Funk was born in Russia and came to the United States with her parents when she was six years of age. She was married in 1898 to Abraham Funk and moved to Inola, Oklahoma in 1914 from Canton, Kansas.

She is survived by her husband and seven children who are Mrs. Sara Janzen, of Medford, Okla., Mrs. Anna Schmidt, Mrs. Elizabeth Hiebert, Otto, John, Waldo and Arnold Funk all of Inola.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the Eden Mennonite Church. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. G. B. Regier and Rev. Sol. Mouttet.—Corr.

Ruth Elizabeth Entz, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Entz of Newton, Kansas, was born November 28, 1920, and died at Montrose, Pennsylvania, March 24, 1937, at the age of 16 years, 3 months, and 20 days. "When five years of age," her father writes, "we took her into our home and heart, adopting her as our child. From the first day on she brought much joy and sunshine into our life. She was of a cheerful, happy disposition and highly gifted. Although at the time she did not know one word of the German language, she learned to talk it fluently in eight months. After finishing the grades, she had the special opportunity of attending, for two years, the Hesston Academy and Bible School; and this year she had the unusual privilege of attending the Montrose School for Girls, a school located in beautiful north-eastern Pennsylvania, in the Blue Ridge of the Allegheny Mountains. The institution is a College Preparatory Boarding School with special emphasis on Bible teaching."

Three years ago Ruth had the misfortune to lose her mother which made her lot the more sad because, as the only child in the family, she was now left alone with her father. In May, 1936, she was baptized on confession of her faith in Jesus and was received into the First Mennonite Church. Among her many gifts she had a beautiful voice. She greatly enjoyed singing in church, at the Bethel Home for the Aged, and wherever occasion presented itself. She often sat at the piano singing for hours. At the school which she attended, Ruth definitely rededicated herself and her life to Jesus, as is evident from these words in a letter from the school's pastor: "These lines are written to assure you that we have concrete evidence that our dear Ruth has gone to be with the Lord, 'which is far better.' "

Her parting, though all too early and too sudden, was beautiful. On the night of March 23, at a largely-attended evangelistic meeting, conducted by the well-known radio preacher, Rev. Percy Crawford, Ruth was among those who publicly vowed to accept Christ and to serve Him. And on her way from the church, she uttered these words, which were the last she spoke, to a girl companion: "I did it tonight." On the following morning, she passed away as a result of heart failure.

As land is improved by sowing it with various seed, so is the mind by exercising it with different studies.—Melmoth.

A Young Mennonite Medic Looks At Missions

By Rudolf T. Unruh, M. D.

A challenge, if presented clearly, will be a challenge still to those who have a place in their hearts for their fellowmen. Youth is still interested in foreign missions. We have faith in the superiority of our western philosophy as interpreted in the Christ. His views of life are still our guide. Other people, especially the more primitive, have their own philosophy of how to meet life's situations; how to remain calm and unperturbed in the face of the realities of life. Many flounder about, tossed here and there by their own unsteady theories that have no firmness nor consolation.

In his student days it was "Rudy." Now it's Doctor Rudolph T. Unruh.

He went from his college days to medical school, and through the difficult years of study held high the ideal of Christian service through medicine. On to graduate work in London, and then for years into the fastnesses of Africa, as a medical missionary. Having lived, labored, and suffered among the natives, he speaks with experience.

"Rudy" is back in America now, carrying special studies in surgery in the Halstead Hospital (Kansas), under the famed Doctor Hertzler.

Some hope and console themselves in the prefection that supposedly comes through the transmigration of the soul; others have faith in their man-made images that shall pilot them safely over the rapids; still others hope that close adherence to old traditions of sun- and moon-worship shall help weather the typhoons and floods of life. They continue to trust and put out to sea when their theories and images have long proven unseaworthy. Their ignorance builds them until clear vision for them is impossible in the face of glaring evidence of the fallacy of their conclusions drawn from life's experiment.

Our present day youth demands proof for everything, and rightly so. They too have run the gauntlet of life's experiment and the results of this experiment are out and published, and there is but one right conclusion. Our youth has diagnosed it finally and correctly. Youth today believes in applying proven hypotheses. They have seen the Christ, they have themselves experienced Him, they know what it means and they would and will pass it on. Missions to them is a challenge, and the challenge will not go unheeded.

The law of supply and demand always tends to equalize itself in all phases of life. Just why this law is so slow in adjusting itself in the field of medical missions is a strange phenomenon. Perhaps the need or the demand is not clearly presented to the Christian youth today. Perhaps we are not striving with sufficient determination to inform ourselves about the condition of the world. No doubt, if the Christian youth of today knew the truth about the deplorable hygienic conditions and the superstitious fear under which primitive people are agonizing, to say nothing of the physical suffering, they would with even greater effort than heretofore come to the aid of ignorant humanity. We neglect our duty if we do not acquaint ourselves with her needs.

If we draw into our own shell and keep out the needs of those who know not how to help themselves, their ignorance and suffering becomes our condemning evidence before the Court of Humanization. The true pancosmic spirit of Christ reveals itself forging out and seeking the needy and not waiting for the needs to force themselves grotesquely upon us. In ignorance of the needs of the human race we live contentedly and happily by ourselves.

But the supply is not equal to the demand. In our own selfish shell we have one physician to every 500-1000 population, while among many primitive people 50,000-100,000 are thrust upon one qualified medical man. Not many can obtain aid under such conditions. Not only that, but these under-privileged specimens of humanity don't know that there is help at hand.

We must demonstrate and give them relief. The Christian youth of today certainly has faith in the civilized advancement of science to the extent that they would and will shoulder risks and deny themselves to bring comfort of body and soul to those to whom fate has been less favorable and kind, who have had fewer opportunties and potentialities, in order that their lives might be more abundant and more enjoyable here and in the life to come.

One thing remains, and I deem that youth realizes it. Christian youth should know the truth of the conditions of the primitive races of the world.

How I Propose To Make My Vocation Christian

Young People's Topic, May 2

Col. 3:17, 22-25; 1 Cor. 15:10

Meditation

M.. April 26. Rom. 12:1, 2. . . . By presenting myself a living sacrifice to the God-appointed task at hand.

T., April 27. Rom. 14:19-23. . . . By thinking and planning those things which will make peace, seeking constantly to enlarge the conscience of those about me, without "offending" them.

W., Apr. 28. Gen. 13:1-12. . . . By recognizing, when there is a disagreement with others about me, that God's mind is over us all, and in that spirit I may safely let the other take his choice.

T., April 29. 1 Cor. 13:1-7. . . . By watching carefully the motives from which I act, knowing that God measures values in terms of "units of love expended."

F., April 30. Rom. 12:11. . . . By being diligent, "not slothful," in business; by enthusiastically entering upon my tasks, as though God were my employer.

S., May 1. Eph. 4:25-32. . . .By recognizing that all men are fundamentally ONE; and that, therefore, to lie, to short-change, to steal, to speak evil, or to allow myself to become bitter, contentious, argumentative is merely, in the long run, to hinder my own spiritual progress.

Problems and projects

1. A young man, desirous of being an out-and-out Christian, and knowing his employer practised many shady methods, made it a special point to tell his boss he was a crook. Presently he found himself fired. Suggest methods by which a young man in such a position can correct conditions without necessarily incurring the wrath of his employer.

2. Why is it, that some men who are otherwise good, faithful church members, will immediately try to find a loophole in a new law by which they may circumvent the tax requirements or the penalty thereof? In connection, discuss the attitude of the modern lawyer whose guiding motto is: I must get all I can, under the law, for my client. Is it possible to be RIGHT at law, yet WRONG morally and spiritually. Prove your case.

3. Make a list of modern advertising slogans. Mimeograph these and place them in the hands of members as they come in. At the meeting discuss the outright or implied lies and misrepresentations in most of these slogans. On the same sheet, make a list of practices of modern business, often supported by law, which are designed to protect businessmen and consumers in the interest of Christian practice.

MENNONITE EDUCATION MARCHES ON!

FREEMAN! The College was host to the annual Preachers' Conference on March 29. The principal speakers were Rev. John C. Kaufman, and Rev. Walter Gering, who will leave Freeman this spring to take pastorates in Kansas.

BLUFFTON: While the Vesper Choir of fifty voices, under the direction of Professor Russel Lantz, tours Kansas, other students at home will have to be satisfied with having had a part in the music festival held at Ada, February 22. Representing Bluffton College in this annual, spring contest were: Helen Breese, Venedotia; Christine Miller, Bluffton; Gladys Conrad, Sterling, Illinois; Herbert Jones, Venedotia; Clark Eberle, Defiance; Harold Karuman, Normal, Illinois; John Maidlow, Ottowa; Gordon Hilty and Paul Geiser, Bluffton.

BETHEL: The East not only met the West this week; they fairly embraced! The much postponed clean-up day, when the oracles of the classroom become plain, overalled gardeners, and the students, hired-hands, came none too soon; for the Bluffton Choir was due the following day. What with short classes, over-time chapels, double concerts, teas, luncheons, introductions and speeches it was a treat such as this staid old mid-western Mennonitism will long remember.

Clean Speech

Intermediate C. E. Topic, April 25, 1937

For Your Quiet Hour

April 19. Taming the tongue. Jas. 3:1-10
April 20. The evil of cursing. 2 Sam. 16:5-14
April 21. Guarding the tongue. Eph. 4:29
April 22. Speech reveals the heart. Matt. 12:31-37
April 23. The foul heart. Rom. 3:9-18
April 24. "Speak not evil." Jas. 4:11
April 25. Clean speech. Matt. 5:21,22, 33-37

Pre-prayer Circle

Use Ps. 51:10 for a moment of meditation before prayer. Speak of the need for a clean heart if our speech is to be clean. Encourage each one to take part in prayer

A Clean Speech Month

As an outgrowth of this meeting the society might observe a "Clean Speech Month." Make a small offering box for each member. On the outside print Ps. 19:14. Ask them to put a penny into the box each time an unclean or unchristian word passes over their lips during the next month. Each one will act as his own judge and the benefit of this project to the members will depend on how conscientious they are. Have the boxes brought to the June consecration meeting. Devote the proceeds to beautifying your assembly room with a picture or motto that will remind them to watch their speech

A Suggested Plan

1. Praise in Song
   "I Would Be Like Jesus", "More like the Master"
2. Society Announcements
3. Quiet Worship
   1. Leader: "Follow the Christ, the King, live pure, speak true, right, wrong, follow the king, else, Wherefore born?"
   2. Hymn: "I Would Be True"
   3. Scripture: Matt. 5:21,22, 33-37
   4. Sentence prayers
   5. Special Music: "Just for Today"
   6. Offering: "We give thee but thine own,
      Whate'er the gift may be,
      All that we have is thine alone,
      A trust, O Lord, from thee"
4. Discussion Period
   1. Leader's introductory remarks. A Christian's speech should be different than that of the man of the world. The discussion should bring out what it is that distinguishes it; how we can become conscious of our sins in speech and overcome them
   2. Illustrations in C. E. World Quarterly
   3. Questions
5. Closing Moments
   Superintendent: Clean Speech Month
   Chorus: "Let the Beauty of Jesus"
   Benediction: Ps. 19:14

Questions for Discussion

1. How are bad habits of speech developed?
2. What are some forms of bad speech we as Christians should avoid?
3. How can we become conscious of our bad habits of speech and overcome them?
4. Is the speech always a true test of a person's character?

THE JUNIOR CORNER

Sometimes I wonder whether any of you juniors in the east or the west or the north or the south ever look into this page. Perhaps, if you come to this corner now and then, the editor will lease it to us. I want to tell you a story, a true story.

Once upon a time, several hundred years ago, there lived across the waters, in a country called "Wales," a junior, Mary Jones. Mary never dreamed that she was going to be used as a light bearer, bearing the light of Jesus to others. She was ten years old when it happened. The funny thing about it was that she did not even know that it happened.

There were many mountains where Mary lived and when she wanted to go to her aunt's home, Mary had to walk four miles up and down these mountains. It made her legs ache but Mary went often because at her aunt's house there was something she loved. This something was always on the table and in it were such wonderful stories. Have you guessed what it was? A Bible! Mary really loved it and each time she was through reading it, she put it back tenderly. She wanted one just like it for her very own. One day on the long, long walk home, Mary made a decision. "I will save my pennies," she thought. And Mary did. For six long years she saved them. She had enough money now but where, oh where should she find a Bible. You see, there were very, very few that one could buy then. One day she heard that twenty-five miles away lived a minister who sold Welsch Bibles. Twenty-five miles away! Even twenty-five miles up and down mountains did not seem too far to Mary for she wanted a Bible so very much. Holding the money tight in her hand, she started on the long, long walk. She was very tired when she reached the minister's house and how Mary cried when she was told that all the Bibles had been sold. The minister was very kind. What do you suppose he did? He gave Mary his own beautiful Bible. How happy she was.

Now you want to know how Mary became a light bearer? It was this way. Soon after Mary's visit, the kind minister went to London and told the people of the junior girl who wanted a Bible so much that she patiently saved her pennies for six years and that she didn't mind walking many, many miles in order to buy one. When the people heard this, they said, "There must be many, many, people all over the world that want a Bible just as Mary wanted one." Do you know what they did? The great British and Foreign Bible Society was founded which is still sending out many Bibles into all parts of the world. Later a Bible society was founded in America, then one in France and, still later, one in Germany. Mary never dreamed that because she loved the Bible so very much, many, many others would receive one also. So Jesus used her as a light bearer. Do you think that Jesus could make you and me a light bearer if we love the Bible very much? Let's try it!

Read the Bible often and you will love it much

GIVING AND RECEIVING

"Freely ye received, freely give (Matt. 10:8).

So long as we live we must give. And that is one of the joys of living. Perhaps some of us have wished that the time might come when we need not "give" any more. Then we need to read this true little message in verse:

"'For giving is living,' the angel said,
'Go feed to the hungry sweet charity's bread.'
'And must I keep giving again and again?'
My selfish and querulous answer ran.
'Oh, no!' said the angel, piercing me through,
'Just give 'till the Master stops giving to you.'"

—The Sunday School Times.

CORRESPONDENCE

First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska

As we look back to the first of the year, we have reasons to praise God for the manifold blessings that we have received. We have reorganized the Sunday School work, elected superintendent, leader, and teachers for another year. Rev. P. A. Wedel of Aberdeen, Idaho, was with us the latter part of January, conducting the Sunday School Teachers' Training Course for the third year, thus finishing the elementary course. Along with this course we had forenoon sessions where he discussed with us the Lord's Prayer as a foundation for his sermons in interpreting the prayer, through all of which we received many blessings.

In March we had the rare privilege to celebrate Henry J. and Mrs. Wiebe's fiftieth wedding anniversary. They started the celebration in the morning with the children and near relatives. Rev. Frank Albrecht gave a short talk and the men's chorus sang. The evening celebration was attended by a large circle of relatives and friends who had assembled to thank God for the grace and mercy that had guided the couple through the fifty years of their married life. The program consisted of a German message given by Rev. Cornelius Penner and one in English by Brother T. A. van der Smissen. These were interspersed with music by a men's chorus and a reading entitled "The Golden Wedding Day," in honor of the couple, by Mrs. Albert Blackley. Mr. and Mrs. Wiebe are living on the farm about ten miles west of Beatrice and are enjoying reasonably good health.

On Easter Sunday both of our church choirs rendered an Easter program. In the forenoon the Young Peaple's Choir gave several numbers in connection with the regular morning service. In the evening the Senior Choir sang the cantata "Our Living Lord" by Ira B. Wilson, under the direction of Rev. T. A. van der Smissen.

On April 3 the Bluffton College Vesper Choir favored us with a splendid song service.—W. R. Penner, Corr.

Quakertown, Pennsylvania

The Spirit is still on the up-grade at the East Swamp Mennonite Church, since the rededication last autumn. The first quarter of the year has ended with an average of 106 persons present every Sunday, where last year we averaged 91, which in a measure was due to severe snow storms. We were later told of a congregation in Quakertown which has a large membership and only fifteen present. We were indeed fortunate to have the services of Mr. Frank G. Shelly who opened the road for the people so they could come through the big snow drifts in the roads.

A number of the East Swamp folks attended the Good Friday service in the Reformed Church in Quakertown between the hours of 12:00 to 3:00 p.m., Rev. Gottshall having the last address of the service. In the evening preparatory services and reception of members was held in the church. The following were members of the class: Miss Ruth Krigor, Miss Eva Beidler, Mr. Ernest Boehr, Mr. Henry Beidler, Jr., Mr. Myron Reinhart, Jr., and Mr. Clarence Croman. These were received by letter or the right hand of fellowship: Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Schaffer, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Markley, Miss Dorothy Dietz, Miss Sadie Dietz, Mrs. Horace Awckland, and Mr. Allan Grant. Mr. William W. Cope and Mr. Lester Schaffer were received by letter at the communion service.

The yearly dawn service was held in the West Swamp Church under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. A goodly number from our church were present. Miss Lillian Landis, Miss Mildred Landis, and Miss Lucy Awckland sang a beautiful selection.—Wm. W. Cope, Corr.

Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

We are happy to report to the readers of THE MENNONITE that we have a group of young people who are active in Conference and Community work. One of our young men, Albert Stover, has recently been elected president of the Delaware Branch of the Philadelphia C. E. Organization. Others are active in the Brotherhood, the Retreat, and local Sunday School conventions.

Our church does not have a Mennonite background as is the case with other Mennonite churches. The membership is made up largely of people gathered out of the community. During the past year and a half we have been greatly concerned about our pastor's health. He has been seriously ill, but now is again able to fill the pulpit. The members of the church have loyally supported the work during all of this time and are happy to note his continued improvement.

An interesting visitor lately attending our service was Doctor Isaac of Manchuria. Readers of the church papers will recall that it was he who through his tireless efforts made it possible for the hundreds of Mennonites refugees from Russia to get in touch with Mennonite relief organizations in other countries and so to find their way to a haven, either in Brazil or in Paraguay, South America. Dr. Isaac is himself a refugee from the Mennonite colonies of Russia where his father was active in mission work and in the publication of Mennonite historical material. He has now returned to the large practice which he has established as an eye specialist among the thirty-five million Chinese occupying this territory recently seized by the Japanese. He says that, besides his own family, there now remain in that country only two Mennonite families.

The Ladies Aid Society, one of the strong and helpful organizations of the church, recently celebrated its 39th anniversary. It was organized when the church was a mission, meeting in a private house.

Our Easter services were the best in attendance and interest ever held in the church. All the space in the building was taken up by worshippers. At that time six young people received baptism and two others were received into church membership by the right hand of fellowship.—Corr.

Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman, S. D.

On April 5, 1937, the young people's society of our church sponsored a surprise birthday party for Rev. W. Gering who has accepted a position in the Eden Church of Moundridge, Kansas, for his future work. Rev. Gering has enjoyed working with the young people; consequently, he has organized this society and has served it very faithfully.

The group, consisting of nearly fifty members, met at the home of Dr. J. H. Wipf. Rev. Gering was asked to conduct the opening song service. As he was ready to announce the number of the song, the group burst out with cheers of "Happy birthday." Immediately following, a short musical program was presented by the members of the society. Then a number of recreational games were played. As the evening drew to a close the group was served a tasty lunch of ice cream and cake. Then a presentation speech was given, and Rev. Gering was presented with a leather-covered song book ("Gesangbuch mit Noten").

The group departed wishing Rev. Gering many more "happy birthdays."—Paul Kleinsasser, Corr.

« « JOTTINGS » »

Rev. W. S. Gottshall, pastor of the East Swamp and Saucon Churches, Pennsylvania is glad to introduce Wm. W. Cope, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, as correspondent to THE MENNONITE. Brother Cope had just been received into the church on Good Friday. We are sorry to learn that Sister Gottshall's health is still impaired and that the Brother is suffering from the flu. Let's remember them in prayer.

Our aged friend, Rev. Allen M. Fretz, pastor of the Deep Run, Perkasie, and Springfield Churches, Pennsylvania, in their Year Book has a splendid article encouraging the members of his charge to subscribe for and use the church papers and to support the work of publication generally as missionary work and as a means of developing cooperative action in conference activities and in building up the Kingdom.

It begins to look as though the relief work among Mennonites in Russia, South America, etc. is destined to fall largely upon the shoulders of the Mennonites in America, especially those in the United States, inasmuch as the brethren in Germany, who with the Mennonites in Holland have been doing much for this cause, are no longer permitted to send any money out of the country. The "Gemeindeblatt" expresses some fear as to how our Central Committee and Brother Toews in Canada are going to take care of the increased needs.

Information has now reached here that the Hutterian Brethren, who have gone to England to see what can be done to transfer their colony in Germany to England, are being convinced that the situation in Europe is such that it seems necessary to bring their brethren over to America.

The Mennonite Brethren who, with a membership not half as large as ours in the General Conference, have their own large printing plant at Hillsboro, Kansas, are starting the publication of an English paper which is to be known as "The Christian Leader." For the present it is a 32-page monthly devoted especially to the needs and interests of the young people.

Rev. P. P. Tschetter of Freeman, South Dakota, recently returned from Gretna, Manitoba, where he had served as instructor in a Bible school for six months.

Rev. P. R. Schroeder of Freeman, South Dakota, and Rev. J. W. Friesen of Henderson, Nebraska, recently met with a third member of their committee at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, to prepare a program for the coming session of the Northern District Conference. THE MENNONITE will be glad to publish this program.

The Bluffton College Vesper Choir gave splendid musical programs during their recent visit in Kansas. Their chorus singing was especially fine. They were a nice, well-behaved "bunch" of young people of whom and of whose work their Alma Mater and we General Conference folks may well feel proud. They enjoyed their visits among Mennonite kin, and we did, too.

Freeman College has proven itself so helpful and valuable to its territory that not long ago a number of its friends and supporters cancelled notes that they had against the College. Now merchants whom the school owed because of the recent strenuous times are also canceling their accounts against the institution, one store canceling a debt of $260.94.

It is reported that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., strongly favors E. Stanley Jones' "Church of Christ in America," and that he has given utterance to the following warning: "A Protestantism which still clings to its denominationalism is one in which a drifting, disillusioned, discouraged world sees confusion rather than hope.

BOOK CHATS

F. J. Wiens

Magazines and periodicals are crowding out good books in many homes. In a busy world we naturally seem to find less and less time to put into protracted reading. We have to read in snatches and books generally have long chapters, so we put them aside for the shorter, more easily digested fare served up to the American reading public by editors and publishers who think mostly in terms of circulation.

Yet there are a few new books published every year that we cannot afford to miss reading for they can teach us much that we will not find in periodicals. Among such books we must include the great historical romances which every thoughtful person should read for the information and understanding they give us of some other period of history than our own. THE SHEPHERD PRINCE should be included in any list of such literature. It is a romance of the times of the prophet Isaiah. It has just been reissued as a translation from the Hebrew masterpiece of Abraham Mapu. The translator, in this instance, is the devoted Christian scholar, Benjamin A. M. Schapiro, author of "Word Studies in the Old Testament."

In the closing paragraph of the Introduction to THE SHEPHERD PRINCE we find this remarkable tribute to the author and the book, written by the late Dr. Robert Dick Wilson:

> "Within the limits of a Foreward it is impossible to do justice to the scholarship and intrinsic worth of such a work as this; but without flattery, it can safely be asserted that Mr. Schapiro has presented in a singularly fascinating way in its English dress the greatest novel that has ever been produced in the Hebrew language. To say more would be like painting the lily or refining pure gold."

Other reviewers compare THE SHEPHERD PRINCE to "Quo Vadis," "Rienzi" and "Ben Hur." Bible lovers should by all means read this romance. It will make the reader, through its thrilling pages, live in the time and conditions that surround the Bible Stories. It is a story of remarkable power and charm. In the telling of his tale of love and hate, of intrigue and escape, the author rolls back the twenty-seven centuries that separate us from that bygone time and we find ourselves eye-witnesses of moving scenes and adventures, and share in a life that differs only in form from our own.

Some of us may not like the warfare, the bloodshed, the cruelties of life in ancient Israel, but it would be unfair to picture the story of those times without mentioning the strife and trouble which prevailed then. The book would lose some of its value if it glossed over all unpleasant realities.

This book has become a classic that holds its place in Hebrew reading circles where it is read and re-read by young and old. Some of its poetic pictures remain in the memory like those of masterpieces of art in an old gallery. So long as the heart thrills to the true and the good and rejoices in the triumph of right over wrong, so long will literature like Mapu's endure.

The short chapters, short paragraphs, large bold type and fine white paper make this book easy to read. There is not a dull passage in all the twenty-nine chapters and nearly 400 pages. THE SHEPHERD PRINCE is obtainable in two editions. The popular edition which sells at $2.75 is neatly bound in dark green cloth. The De Luxe edition which sells at $5.25 per copy is a work of art containing full-page picture drawings of the author and the translator and ten pen-and-ink illustrations. The book is published by the Brookside Publishing Company of New York City. All orders should be sent to the MENNONITE BOOK CONCERN, Berne, Indiana.

JOTTINGS (Continued)

Last week, April 6, it was twenty years since our country committed the unpardonable folly of joining in the World War to make the world safe democracy, to make war on German militarism, and to help end war through war. Today democracies are dwindling away, and one seriously wonders under what pretense the war lords are going to popularize the next war.

President Frank Phillips of Phillips Petroleum Corp., the richest man in Bartelsville, Oklahoma, and a Methodist, has paid off the debts of the town's principal churches, totaling $63,000. The churches were the Methodist, Baptist, United Brethren and Episcopalian, and Presbyterian churches.

The latest fad of popular foolishness is the sit-down strikes, which are bad enough. But who would have thought that these strikes would enter the realm of religion? It is reported that over in Egypt one-hundred monks are on a sit-down strike against their abbot and certain social restrictions placed upon them.

Dr. Louis S. Bauman, pastor of the First Brethren Church at Long Beach, California, and known as a forceful speaker, held a series of meetings in the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana. The following were the themes of some of his discourses: "The Befogged and Befuddled World," "The Seven Dispensations of Time," "The Sermon on the Mount: Is It Law or Gospel?", "The New Birth: What Is It?", "Our Recent Elections in the Light of Prophetic Scriptures," "Unmistakable Signs of the Sunset of the Gentiles."

In Ohio an organization of advocates of the repeal of prohibition recently listed the following charges against the sale of liquor: drunken driving, disregard of law by permit holders, sale of bootleg liquor, and lack of enforcement by state and local authorities in such proportions that dry leaders are openly stating that prohibition will soon come back of itself.

Pope Pius XI had so far, during his incumbancy of the Holy See, issued 28 encyclicals. Though a sick man, he recently issued the 29th one, a 13,000-word denunciation of communism. Three days later he dispatched a circular letter to the Catholic clergy of Germany, censuring the Nazi government for its unfriendly attitude toward the church of Christ, and the letter was read from all the pulpits in the Reich.

EDITORIALS

The End of Life

What is the end of life? Some think: To live to the glory of God. There can be no objection to that aim. Others would emphasize Service, a life in the service of God and humanity. That certainly is a worthy objective. Jesus illustrated that kind of life to perfection. Still others would stress the Winning of Souls. What could be better and more praiseworthy! But if we examine Christ's life and utterances very carefully, we will find that the trend of his earthly career was focussed principally on one thing: To do the will of God. "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to accomplish his work." John 4:34. And may we not state the core of the Lord's prayer thus: Thy kingdom come through doing God's will? When the Savior went through that awful struggle in Gethsemane and prayed that the cup might be taken from him, he still insisted that not his will but God's will be done. That aim of life includes all other worthy aims. Spurgeon once replied to a committee that invited him to preach to an immense audience, "I have no wish to preach to ten thousand people, but to do the will of God," and he turned down the invitation. This was also the driving motive of Paul's consecrated life, "to be obedient to the heavenly vision."

What would happen if all mankind or if only all so-called Christians would really do the will of God, as Jesus did. We would have the millenium. There would be no strife, no war, no injustice, no labor troubles, no sit-down strikes, no bad politics, no bank crashes, no need for "new deals." If a company of people should honestly try the experiment of doing the will of God in all things, they would all be equally great, or equally small. There would be no taking of advantage, no striving for mastery over others, no unholy ambition. All would love God above all things and their neighbors as themselves. Of course in a world such as ours, it is unthinkable that any company of people, not even the best Christians, could attain to such an ideal state of life. But we Christians can, under the guidance of the Spirit, strive to do the will of God. And to the extent that we do that our lives will be successful. If the will of God is done, the number of misfits in the different callings and occupations will be greatly dimished. Some young man who now harbors the notion that he is called to preach might discover that for him to do God's will is to farm, to plow corn. Another who now leans toward farming or manual labor may find that God wants him to go to the mission field. Still another now feeling the urge of being a politician might be turned into a powerful evangelist. Christ came to earth to do God's will. We, his followers, cannot afford to do less.

PRAYER IN APRIL

God grant that I may never be
A scoffer at Eternity—
As long as every April brings
The sweet rebirth of growing things;
As long as grass is green anew,
As long as April's skies are blue,
I shall believe that God looks down
Upon his wide earth, cold and brown,
To bless its unborn mystery
Of leaf, and bud, and flower to be;
To smile on it from tender skies—
How could I think it otherwise?
Had I been dust for many a year,
I still would know when Spring was near,
For the good earth that pillowed me
Would whisper immortality,
And I, in part, would rise and sing
Amid the grasses murmuring.
When looking on the mother sod,
Can I hold doubt that this be God?
Or when a primrose smiles at me,
Can I distrust Eternity?

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

JESUS AS TEACHER

7. His personal contacts.—After Jesus had the attention of His hearers, His sympathy drove Him on to make personal contacts with individuals in order to help them. In making contacts, He always came down to their interests to begin with. He was adaptable and tactful. The occasion of Jesus' winning Andrew, John, Peter, Philip, and Nathanael, all in succession, seemingly in one day, is the supreme example of how His sympathy led Him to make contacts. At other occasions, He started conversations, asked questions, invited companionship, called people by their personal names, gave them new names to characterize their better natures, ate with publicans and sinners, and performed various acts to make spiritual contacts with His pupils, such as riding on the donkey or washing His disciples' feet. The contacts He made were always motivated by His great sympathy for persons and His desire to help them meet their needs.

ROSTHERN GERMAN-ENGLISH ACADEMY

Rosthern, Saskatchewan

Another term in the Rosthern German-English Academy is drawing to a close. That it has been a successful one has been due to the interest of the students in their work and in fostering various means of enjoyment. The teachers, too, have taken a keen interest not only in the academic success of the students, but in the various forms of school activities that add flavor to the usual routine of study.

During the winter months several interclass debates and social gatherings relieved the monotony of hard school work. At Easter the Bible school students finished another year and went to their homes to radiate the light they have received. We cannot stress too strongly the importance of Bible study in the school, as it has no equal as a basis for moulding the character of our students. The Easter season was brought to a close with a very successful musical program given by the students under the able leadership of our director, Mr. Paetkau.

In a few weeks our yearly examinations will be over, and some of us will have left the school never to return; but the pleasant times we have had at the German-English Academy will linger long in our memory.—Richard Neufeld, Corr.

WRITING MENNONITE HISTORY

J. H. Janzen, Vancouver

Recently there appeared in the Rosthern "Bote" an invitation to prepare for our youngsters a popular history of the life of Menno Simons, like those narratives on Luther and other great reformers, written for the special purpose of interesting our growing generation in our cause and its history.

We need such a history, indeed. We must have it if our young people are not to remain ignorant of the richness of life and value in the history of our church. I believe God will call an expert in our history who at the same time will be well-acquainted with the psychology of our young people and thus be well-qualified to write that history. Anticipating this, I shall impart the following in good faith, hoping that it will offer some inducement to that future historian of ours.

I have tried to induce the girls that come to our home to read books on our history, and just recently I loaned one of my books to one of them. She took it with her, but returned it surprisingly soon. Silently she laid the volume on my desk and turned away to depart. I called her back and asked her how she had liked the book.

"I do not like it at all," she replied abruptly.

"Why?" I exclaimed, "This is the history of our church, and we ought to know what our forefathers lived by, what heritage they left us, and how we should appropriate that heritage to our own advantage and to the advantage of the coming generations."

For quite a while she stood silently beside my chair. "Would you not tell me what is the matter with the book?" I insisted.

Suddenly she cried out, tears practically bursting out of her eyes: "I am sick and tired of your butchered fanatics and their endless wrangling and bickering about how to baptize or to ban and avoid a person and such like things."

"Could you not put it a little more politely and call them 'Christian martyrs'?" I rebuked her.

"Yes," she said, "there may have been martyrs among them. But is not martyrdom the kind of suffering that one takes upon himself for the sake of something worthwhile? Jesus was a martyr. He came and showed us a life worthwhile to suffer and die for. What did our forefathers do? Did they just bicker and die? They surely were non-conformists, but that is about all there is to it. Did they know nothing of human life? Do we know nothing of their life? Do we just have to learn how they quarreled and died?"

"Well," I replied somewhat hesitatingly, "their martyrdom proves their sincerity and the correctness of their convictions."

"Then the Bolshevists too are perfectly right in their teachings which have proven impractical in human life. We have seen them die courageously for the sake of their convictions."

"No," I said, and then I did not know what else to say.

Tears again began to trickle down her cheeks. "Please, O please," she implored, "tell me what our people lived by and for. Did they live at all? Tell me about their lives, rich and worthwhile, for which they took upon themselves suffering and death. Then I promise you to listen as quietly as a lamb. But, please, do not suffocate me with your dogmas, infallible as they may be! And do not scare me with your tales of torture, horror, and death."

"Yes, my girl," I replied, "but we all will have to die one day."

"I know that, she said, "and when the Lord calls me I shall commit myself to him and go and die as courageously and beautifully as possible. But today I want to live. Do you know how stale life sometimes seems to be for a girl who does housework as a servant day-in and day-out without anything else in the offing? Do you understand how much we need to be shown a life for which it would be worthwhile to endure humiliation and even martyrdom, without despair?"

"Yes, I know," I said, "and I shall try hard to show you that life, in my writings, in my sermons, and in my own life."

Quietly she went out of the room to join the other girls and to spend her night off with them. I was alone.

In about thirty minutes I was to go downstairs and teach the girls their catechism lesson. Before my conversation with the girl I had thought I was well-prepared for the lesson, but now everything seemed to be upside down. I turned to my books and found "religious strife," "bickering," "torture," "death."

Then I went down on my knees and I found the abundance of life; and I believe that the Lord blessed us in a special way that night.

But I had much to ponder over after the girls had gone, and it was not before daybreak that my eyes closed for a short slumber. Was the criticism which that girl had offered justified? What do our historical writings look like? Have we not laid the Martyrs Mirror by T. v. Bracht at the very foundation of our historical research? Are we not trying to prove that our forefathers were right, because they took martyrdom upon themselves? Are we not trying to prove by the sufferings of our forefathers that even we are right in whatever we may teach? Have we really nothing to say of the abundant life that the "stille Taufgesinnte" lived?

How rich must have been the life of the "Taufgesinnte" when even their arch-enemies, the ultra-Catholic Polish Roman Catholics, saw that life and forgot their enmity, because of it, and shielded and sheltered the Mennonites so that they themselves might profit from the abundance of the life of our forefathers? Did William of Orange like them just for the sake of their beautiful eyes? Why did Bartholomew v. Ahlefeld call them to his estate? Was it just because of sentimentality? What was it that made them turn the "Wuestenfeld" into a garden of God? Is there no one to tell us of the life of our congregation?

I believe that when in the near future the God-sent historian comes to write our history for our young people he should not forget that death will only frighten, but that a strong life will convince. It is true that we have been overfed on the shady side of our life. We should at last be shown the sunny side of it also.

Let us try to see Mennonite life from the angle of its vitality and fruitfulness.

"READY TO SERVE"

Text, Acts 1:15-26

The events that followed imediately after the Resurrection and Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ could well secure our attention, and profitably so, during the weeks after our observation of the Easter season. There was, for instance, the filling of the vacancy causel by the betrayal and suicide of Judas. There were now only eleven, and Jesus meant there should be twelve or He would not have chosen that number. To the selection of some one to take the place of Judas, we notice that the group concerned itself. Verse fifteen informs us there the number of disciples now numbered one hundred and twenty.

Peter, who is the spokesman for the Apostolic group in the first chapters of Acts, reminds the company of believers that a vacancy exists and that another shall take his bishoprick, quoting from the Psalms. Peter therefore proposes that they proceed to select and ordain one "of these men which have companied with us all the time that the Lord Jesus went in and out among us, beginning from the baptism of John, unto that same day that he was taken up from us." The direct and definite reason that Peter gives why there should be another added to the eleven was that he should "be a witness with us of the resurrection.

The Selection of Matthias

Evidently not all of the one hundred and twenty would qualify, for they were not all with Jesus from the time of John the Baptist till he was taken up from them. However by some process of elimination, of the total number who did company with them, it was mutually agreed that two were ready and worthy to be numbered with the twelve, namely Joseph and Matthias. After a season of prayer the lot fell upon Matthias, and the original number was again restored. And here our direct information of Matthias ends. However, the fact that he met the conditions as set forth by Peter assures us that he was faithful and reliable. He did not follow Jesus for a while, because of the loaves and fishes as some did, but he followed all the time of Jesus' earthly ministry. He was no backslider. Also we can conclude that he was willing to accept the task. Matthias was no seeking candidate for the Apostleship, for he did not know there would be a vacancy, but by a devoted and faithful life he had kept himself ready for such a time as the Lord might have need of him. He must have been content to do humble service—service which may have seemed humble, but is never humble if done for the Lord.

The Humble Dandelion

Consider the humble and despised dandelion! After all it is not so humble. Dandelion is of high protein content, contains very little fibre and is rich in minerals such as calcium and phosphorus. In fact it contains more phosphorus than any other common leafy vegetable. Furthermore, its roots are of medicinal value. Here in Medina County, Ohio, the A. I. Root Co. propagates the dandelion for their bees to feed upon with the result that the people who buy Root Honey, and their business is nation-wide, do so from honey which is produced from Medina County dandelion.

We believe there is many a not-so-humble-Matthias in our churches who is ready to answer the call to some service in His kingdom.

ABUNDANCE

Not the things that man possessth,
Nor e'en the talents he hath been giv'n,
Are what the soul refresheth
Affording lasting joy therein.

If in the sphere the Master sendeth
We faithfully, humbly follow him,
Cheerfully giving back, whate'er he lendeth,
Then, there is heav'n within.

THE OBEDIENCE OF NOAH

Genesis 5:28 to 9:29 Printed: 8:20-22; 9:8-17

Introduction

Through the many centuries preceding our lesson, man's wickedness had become unbearable to God. He was deeply grieved and minded to destroy mankind (Gen. 6:5-9). One man, Noah, who was "righteous and perfect," who lived in communion with God, who was whole-hearted in his service, found grace in His eyes. His was a patient obedience. Trust in God is much more than pious sentiment. Noah believed God's word and obeyed it.

When God resolved to destroy humanity and make a new start with Noah and his family, He gave him full directions what to do (6:14-22). It was a large task to build the ark, assemble all that was to go into it, and make all preparations. Loyalty to God and our own safety demands obedience to God always. Noah obeyed God to the letter. He and his family were saved from the flood.

Noah's Thank-offering and Worship vs 20-22

Noah had much time, while in the ark, to reflect on God's goodness to him. The spirit of thanksgiving for deliverance welled up in his breast. "God remembered Noah" (8:1) at the flood's height, and now when stepping out upon dry land once again, Noah remembered God. First of all he built an altar and worshipped God with burnt offerings of gratitude and thanksgiving (v20). God was greatly pleased with Noah's spirit and acts. It expressed entire and obedient consecration. Each one should build an altar unto God—any place where we meet God. We need to show our gratitude for deliverance from spiritual, eternal death in and through Christ.

God determined that no such disaster should again visit the earth for man's sake and gave His pledge that the seasons shall regularly follow each other.

God's Covenant with Noah vs 9-17

A covenant is a solemn pledge. God is a covenant-keeping God. He is the author of the Covenant and one of the two parties to it. It is a covenant made with all flesh, for all time (vs. 9,10). It is God's immutable promise (v11) never again to destroy men and beasts with a great flood.

God set a memorial token of his covenant, the beautiful bow of promise (vs 12,13), in the heavens. The rainbow was made the sign of the covenant, an emblem of the better covenant given through Christ. When we see the rainbow, may it remind us of God's care for His own and His promise to Noah and all mankind. The rainbow stands as a sure sign that the cloud will pass. Our hope is in God's faithfulness to His word, His covenant (vs 15-17).

Practical Truths

True gratefulness to God expresses itself in worship; and worship prepares for larger usefulness. God could use Noah in a larger way.

Our safety in this world and the next lies in obedience to God. Noah's deliverance rested upon obedience to God.

Noah heeded the warning and obeyed the command of God. He believed God and "moved with godly fear," building the ark to save himself and his family. Today those who believe and obey God through Jesus Christ become the recipients of a blessed salvation. Obedience and blessing go together.

Prayer

Our God and Father, help us to be obedient in all things so that Thou canst have thine own way in us. In Christ's name. Amen.

Russian Brethren Still Persecuted

Extracts from a letter to Bro. H. M. Epp, Lena, Manitoba.

"And now something about the last sad event: The latter part of November, in the city of Pj., thirty-two of our brethren in the faith were tried and sentenced. They had been arrested at different places and at different times during the past year. The indictments with which they were charged were all based on lies and falsehoods, Is. 28:15: 'For we have made lies our refuge, and under falsehood have we hid ourselves.' Some false witnesses testified willingly while others had to be compelled to give false testimony. Now four of the thirty-two have been condemned to death and the rest to banishment from three to eight years. The trial lasted more than a week. One relative of each of the prisoners was permitted to attend the trial. The conduct of the judges, so eyewitnesses report, was exceedingly indecent. Those condemned to die are: Elder H. Janz, Landskrone; Rev. Is. Potker; Joh. Koop, Suworoskaja; and Nik. Reimer. The ministers are accused of having carried on agitations against the government, but there is absolutely no truth in this. Sad and grievous as their lot is, I rejoice that the condemned brethern have had the courage to give testimonies of their faith, to witness to the truth, to take their fate calmly, and to declare that the charges against them were untrue and unjust. Elder Janz, for instance, addressed the court several times and testified to those things that are holy and of eternal value, adding that despite suffering and persecution we would hold fast to our faith and our convictions, and were ready to sacrifice our all for them. May the Lord give strength and comfort to these witnesses."

Elder H. Janz, Landskrone

The letter states further that at the time of writing the brethren had not yet been executed, but they were lingering in the death cells and awaiting the end.

MONTHLY REPORT OF THE EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE WESTERN DISTRICT

For February and March

The Committee on schools and education has been working in two directions in these two months. First, building up the loan library of the conference. A number of individuals and churches have again contributed to this cause, and we hope to have enough German books in April to prepare a list for the churches. We are lacking, however, English books and we would therefore appreciate it very much if the donors would consider our younger people especially those living in the cities who can not read the German so fluently anymore.

Besides the work in the library, the committee collected information on our lower classes in the Sunday Schools from the seniors down. Many Sunday School Superintendents have given us valuable information, but some have not yet sent in their reports. We would appreciate their answer very much in the immediate future. As soon as the information is at hand, the committee will compile it.—A. Warkentin.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bergtal Mennonite Church, Pawnee Rock, Kansas

Dear Readers and Editor:

We are thankful to God for his manifold blessings in the natural way, such as moisture for our wheat fields, but most thankful for the spiritual blessings so bountifully received during the holidays.

On Good Friday we had morning services in our church with an impressive sermon about the crucifixion of Jesus, by our pastor, Rev. J. B. Schmidt. In the afternoon we had union services in the Christian Church of Pawnee Rock from 12:00 to 3:00. Here seven ministers spoke on the seven last words of Jesus on the cross, each minister taking one word for his text. The talks showed us Jesus' great suffering for humanity and his wonderful love to us.

Easter Sunday was a happy day for our congregation. At seven in the morning we gathered on the Hill of Pawnee Rock where a pageant "The Way of the Cross" was given, with music by the band and songs by a mixed choir from the local churches. It all reminded us of the event that took place centuries ago. Then at the usual time we had our regular services. After Sunday school eight persons united with our church—people who had been members elsewhere, but who had been coming to our church for some time. For this we are very thankful. Then Rev. W. F. Unruh brought us the Easter message in a very interesting way. Dinner was served at the church to a large crowd. In the afternon a Sunday school program of songs and poems telling the glad Easter tidings was given. After this Mrs. W. F. Unruh gave a very interesting talk about Easter and how they celebrate Easter in India.—A Member of the Bergtal Church.

Immanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon

The first quarter of the year has brought us many blessings and experiences which will remain as pleasant memories of God's love and mercy toward us.

At our annual meeting of the Sunday school officers and teachers, we voted for a quarterly teachers meeting. The first meeting was held late in January. Those present enjoyed it so much that they voted to have a monthly meeting instead. What a privilege we have to be co-workers together with Christ in his vineyard, and how it strengthens and encourages us to meet together for prayer and discussion.

Brother Franz reports that he is deriving much pleasure from teaching the Bible Training Class consisting of eighteen boys and girls, aged 12 to 14. They are making a comprehensive study of the Gospel of John. Each pupil has a notebook and Bible and is requested to make an outline of the chapter in consideration before coming to class. They are proving to be good students, and our prayer is that each one of them may grow up to be real followers of the Lord Jesus.

We have derived much blessing from a study of the letter to the Philippians which our pastor has been conducting. At present the book of Ephesians is the subject of our study during the evening hour. Quite a number of visitors are taking advantage of these studies.

The pre-Easter services were a source of inspiration to all who attended, and a fine spirit of cooperation was manifested by the two congregations. Easter was a day crowded full of good things. The pastor's message "What is Dependent upon the Resurrection?" was very timely and instructive. Eleven members were received into the fellowship of the church, six by confession of faith in their Saviour and five by letter. We were made especially glad to see some of our young people choose to take their stand on the Lord's side. The Lord's Supper was observed, and a greater number took part than at any previous time. The evening worship hour was given over to a song service by the choir assisted by a number of others. The pastor gave a short message from the Word of God. This service was well received by an appreciative audience which included many visitors.—Mrs. Jno. L. Merryman, Corr.

Henderson, Nebraska

Dear Editor and Readers:

Rev. J. H. Epp of Hillsboro, Kansas, was called for the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Henry Pankratz. She came from Russia in 1874 and was baptized on confession of faith by Elder Isaac Peters in the immigrant house in 1875. With her parents, who were not of the wealthy class, she shared the sufferings and hardships of real pioneer life. She had eye trouble throughout her life and finally became blind in her last years.

Rev. Epp, who was born and grew up to manhood in this community, not only served at the funeral, speaking words of comfort to the bereaved family, but remained here for a few days and delivered the true Gospel messages, according to God's plan of salvation and his own convictions and experiences. He stressed especially Christ, his death on the cross, his resurrection, and also his return, which is neglected by many who proclaim the Gospel to a lost world. In a fine and highly-veneered way the ideal Christ and a sort of social gospel is proclaimed which has no saving power. How thankful we should be for the men who preach God's plan of salvation as it is recorded in his holy Word.

Rev. J. B. Epp, Beatrice, has been holding meetings in the three churches here for about one week. He is another brother whose messages have a genuine Gospel ring and who stresses Bible study in a forceful and convincing manner. He also spoke on the conditions in Russia before a large audience, using pictures from actual life to illustrate the sad plight of the people of that country.

Our choirs rendered the real Easter message in song under the leadership of Brother Theo. Schmidt to a crowded church. These glorious Easter songs or hymns proclaim the true Gospel and convey it into the hearts of men in a manner not duplicated by any other medium of expression.

Christ's first coming is celebrated once a year by the Christian church. This is as it should be, but why do we not put a little more emphasis on his second coming from the pulpit and in our Conference programs and a little less emphasis on peace topics. Our peace advocates apparently place the cart before the horse. Can we expect to get very far in our peace doctrine without a changed heart?—J. J. Friesen, Corr.

Essex United Mennonite Church, Leamington, Ont.

Dear Editor and Readers:

Some time has elapsed since the last report from our church, and again many things have taken place for which we are thankful.

At the beginning of this year ministers from nearby churches gathered at our church for a Bible conference. Many listeners were there to partake in the discussions, and were more enlightened on certain passages in the Bible.

Our young people presented an interesting Easter program on the evening of Easter Sunday. The main feature of it was a short play by a number of boys which outlined quite clearly the resurrection of our Lord. The choir furnished special Easter songs. Early in March our male choir presented a program which was enjoyed to the utmost by everyone attending. Many favorite songs were sung by the whole choir. There were solos, duets, and piano selections. To add a bit of humor to the evening three readings taken from "Fritz Reuter" were presented.

Bible classes, taught by Mr. Henry Janzen, have been held three nights weekly this winter. Now that spring has set in, the classes are stopped and will be resumed again next winter. We now have a German library in the basement of our church, and many good books are available.

In this new year two young friends have been taken from our circle. First a young girl from Pelee Island was called home, and shortly after her death a little boy of five years of age was taken. They are both sadly missed by their parents and friends.

We hope that God will bless all our work, as well as that of all other churches.—Mary Janzen, Corr.

Butterfield, Minnesota

Dear Editor and Readers:

A report from our church is due. So far this year has brought about no outstanding changes in our church life. We started the year with the usual cold weather, snow, and a few Minnesota blizzards. At no time, however, did we have to give up Sunday school or church services in the daytime. During the Easter week we had our heaviest snowfall, for which we were truly grateful, as moisture in this state has been at a premium the past year.

The Presbyterian Church, First Mennonite Church, and our church have joined in conducting a teacher training class for the last five weeks. The classes are taught by Rev. L. H. Linscheid and Rev. Samuel Quiring. About thirty people who are desirous of becoming better workers for Christ have enrolled in these clases. We feel this undertaking has been very much worthwhile and helpful to the workers. Christ is given the preeminence.

Reverend Linscheid and family spent a very enjoyable week at Marion, South Dakota, with Mrs. Linscheid's folks. Rev. John Bartel of Mt. Lake filled our pulpit Easter Sunday and Mrs. H. M. Fast on Good Friday. Both had very inspiring messages for us.—Correspondent.

I AM A SENIOR

I am a college senior.

Forgive me, God, for the ecstacy I do not feel; I lost it years ago—that day in my own room, behind a closed door, you remember, God.

Forgive me, God, for the trampling on of other people's toes, for the corns I am leaving in other people's lives; my own corns have hardened me to the corns of others.

Forgive me, God, for the things I wanted most, but was afraid to take; I took what I most wanted once, only to find that I bitterly did not want it—you remember, God.

Forgive me, God, for so envying those who are clever and for neglecting my real own while striving to imitate that attention-bringing cleverness—I so want a place in the campus sun. . .

Forgive me, God, for so wanting back with this desolate emptiness, and so yearningly stretching my now empty hands after those friends and those things which have come, and gone, and will never come again; and for my twisty inside crying because of those who have wanted to be friends after my hope for their friendship was dead, my lack of appreciation for those who have come too late—I have had so few friends and so few things in my life, God, and now I have only Me—just Me.

Forgive, me, God, for not daring to live adventurously with both feet off the earth and my head on the other side of a cloud; I found I was too mercenary to be true to an inborn ideal.

I am a college senior. Forgive me, God, for the senior that I now am, and for the alumna that I will soon be; do not judge my school by the single specimen that is I, I beg of You. I was too old, God, even when I was born, too old and too alone; it is very painful to be born with both oldness and aloneness. I am so alone; at times I wonder, God, were You born with both oldness and aloneness? —Billie Campbell

What's New in Films?

A month spent in close observation of film activities at Hollywood has strengthened the writer's growing conviction that Americans have at the present time their greatest opportunity to exert their latent power to make the screen what they want it. Whether the 88,000,000 people who consitute the different motion picture publics grasp this chance remains to be seen.

Current releases disclose films of an exceptionally high calibre: THE GOOD EARTH, GREEN LIGHT, LOST HORIZON, which, in addition to their unique entertainment value and box-office appeal, possess a remarkable degree of social significance. These films are no mere accident of fate. They are the answer to the extensive educational campaign which has been carried on for several years by better film groups, women's clubs, parent-teacher associations, and hundreds of civic organizations in teaching people how to evaluate and select movies. Without this building of public sentiment and the developing of a keener appreciation of the importance of the screen, it is not likely that Hollywood would have ventured to risk the millions of dollars invested in these three features.

The recent depression and inevitable dropping of theatre attendance created an emergency which prompted the motion picture producer to lend an ear to the tinkle of potential cash in the pockets of people who were not already "fans." The producer began to realize that his conception of a movie-going public was all wrong; that there were several publics, and that more than a run-of-the-mill movie was required if the industry were to entice new customers to the till and revitalize the ailing box-office. Intelligent expressions of opinion from the outside world gradually gained a new respect within the Hollywood film factories; and whereas a few years ago a letter from a business man or a teacher might have been carelessly tossed into the nearest waste basket, today the producer is apt to give it serious thought as representing a trend of thought which has definite relation to box-office receipts.

What Makes Happiness in the Home?

Young People's Topic, May 9, 1937

Col. 3:12-21

Meditation

M., May 3. Luke 10:38-42. Where lies the balance between cares of the house and cares for the home?

T., May 4. Rom. 15:1-4. Maturity of spirit comes with realizing that home is for the building of character, not each for himself, but each for all.

W., May 5. Gal. 6:1-5. Happiness comes not so much with trying to make others happy, as in bearing one another's burdens.

T., May 6. Eph. 4:1-6. Happiness comes also by willing to put out (still better keep out) those things which break up the feeling of unity in the family.

F., May 7. Eph. 6:1-9. Happiness comes with the acceptance of certain restraints—restraints which fall alike upon the parents and the children.

S., May 8. I Pet. 3:8-12. Happiness comes when we recognize in love that those nearest to us in the home deserve the same courtesy, deference, and kindness which we feel so strongly compelled to show to others.

Problems and Projects

The topic suggested for this week is a wonderful topic for program themes. Let us see if we can suggest a few lines of attack which may be of assistance to our Program Committees everywhere:

1. Homes I have Known. This could be developed by someone who is known to have made a successful home of his own—whose home relations are known to be good.

2. Homes in Which Jesus Moved. How many there are? Martha and Mary, his own home, John, Peter, Zachaeus, etc.

3. The Modern Home. Outline the characteristics of typical homes today, and indicate some of the problems involved.

4. Methods of Eliminating Conflicting Interests in the Home. Here's a chance for the high school folks to make their case.

5. Does Happiness in the Home Depend on Money?

Choosing a Life-Work

Intermediate C. E. Topic, May 2, 1937

Daily Quiet Hour

Apr. 26 The field of commerce. Prov. 10:4
Apr. 27 The field of stock farming. Gen. 13:1-9
Apr. 28 The field of agriculture. Gen. 8:20-22
Apr. 29 The field of trades. Matt. 13:55
Apr. 30 The field of art. Ex. 35:30-35
May 1 The field of professions. Luke 10:25-28
May 2 What should I consider in choosing my life-work? Matt. 19:23-30

Purpose

This meeting should help the Intermediates to see the need of making a full surrender of their lives to the Lord Jesus Christ, if they would find that life-work in which they can be of greatest service to Him. This is an opportunity to present the Christian vocations covenant, at least for consideration, if not for signatures.

A Suggested Plan

1. Pre-prayer Circle

Prov. 3:5-6. Speak of the need of seeking God in prayer if we would have His guidance in the important decisions in life. Pray for the society, its officers and activities. Pray for the leader and each one who attends the meeting that they may understand more clearly the Christian attitude toward our life-work.

2. Praise Service.

"To the Work," "Here Am I Send Me"

3. Announcements

Report interesting past events. Announce future

4. Quiet Worship

Leader: Announce topic of the meeting
Instrumental prelude: "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah"
Leader: Read Prov. 3:5-6
Hymn: "He Leadeth Me"
Scripture lesson: Matt. 19:23-30
Hymn: "Give of Your Best"
Prayer by leader and the superintendent
Offering: Offer a consecration prayer at the close Consecration service

1. Read pledge in unison, calling attention to the things we promise to do
2. "Why I want Christ to guide me in the choice of a life-work." Ask several to be prepared to speak on this. Close by asking all those who have that desire in their hearts to express it while you bow in silent prayer

5. The Topic Presented

1. The leader should speak of the purpose of this meeting. Give illustrations from life of those who have drifted into their life-work and those who with God's help have chosen theirs
2. Vocations that existed in Bible times. Selected from the daily readings
3. Three short talks
   (1) How will prayer and meditation help me in the choice of my life work?

  - (2) How will investigation help me in the choice of my life-work?
  - (3) How will service help me in the choice of my life-work?
4. Questions and discussion. Illustrations from the C. E. Quarterly
5. Questionnaire on choosing a life-work

6. Closing moments
   1. Presentation of Christian vocations Life Purpose Covenant by pastor or superintendent
   2. "Where He Leads Me I Will Follow". Signing of pledge
   3. Benediction Ps. 19:14

To Help Us Think

Prepare a questionnaire somewhat as follows. Give each one present a copy and allow about 5 minutes during the meeting for them to be filled out

I. Interests. 1. What things do I like to do? 2. Where do I have my best results? 3. What would I choose for my life-work? 4. Why?

II. Natural abilities. 1. Do I have a natural talent for this work? 2. Do I have the necessary physical qualifications?

III. Preparation. 1. Can I get the necessary training for this work? 2. Are there financial or physical barriers?

IV. Service. 1. Does it offer opportunities for service to my fellow men? 2. Is the profession overcrowded?

V. God's plan. 1. Do I feel that my choice would be God's plan for my life? 2. Am I willing to seek His guidance in the choice of my life-work and follow His leading without reservation?

Life Purpose Covenant

I will be Christian in the choice of my vocation.

I will not drift into my life work, but I will do my utmost through prayer, meditation, investigation, and service, to discover that form of life work in which I may be of greatest service to my Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Signed. Date

Copies of this covenant can be secured from the Christian vocations department of your C. E. Union

WHAT ONE SOCIETY DID

The programs of the Intermediate society at Upland, California have recently included a series of talks by Christian professional people, telling of their work, their problems and opportunities for service. This is giving the Intermediates first hand information and personal contact with those actually engaged in the work. The last year Intermediates are each responsible for a program.

Rolling Drums

My dear Mr. Editor:

There must be many who take inspiration from the Youth Section of THE MENNONITE. They seem to me each time I read them, like a drum that will drum our youth together, if they hear it. This seems to me our first task....hitching our youth to one wagon which is packed full, laden, heavy with responsibility. Youth, grown older, will have to pull it. It is better they fall into the harness now. I feel we must, first of all, bring THE MENNONITE to youth's attention. It must become the link that links the chain....Youth must grow into the work of our conference that she might build on. And we must give them work to do, lest they go to sow and reap in other fields, and the fields allotted to us, suffer.... Now that the world lays her hands so boldly upon Youth, we, who are the Church must guide it safely unto Him who saves it for the Kingdom......

A Reader

The Junior Corner

Before me lies something very beautiful. I have looked at it so much since it came to me yesterday that even though I leave the desk, I can see it always before me. Shall I tell you about it?

Once upon a time, not so many years ago, a little girl, Eleanor, was born. When she grew to be your age, she learned to love Jesus. God had given Eleanor a gift. She could draw. He gave her also the longing to give the world some beautiful thing. As Eleanor grew, the longing in her heart grew also and she prayed that she might be allowed to draw something that would help others to love the Jesus whom she loved.

The years went by. Eleanor was married to Mr. Webley, a physician. The days became so crowded with home duties and nursing that there was little time left for the pictures her heart longed to paint.

In May, 1930, when Mrs. Webley was more than fifty years old, she wanted to buy a picture of Jesus but found that there was not one to buy. So she took a pencil and began to draw and as she drew her heart became so full of love that she could hardly bear it. When she looked to see what she had drawn, she found that they were the eyes of Jesus, so tender, so loving. "Oh, I have something!" cried Mrs. Webley. When she finished the drawing, she knew that now, at last, after fifty years, God had answered her prayer; now, at last, she had for the world the richest gift she could give—she had a picture of Jesus that said "Come unto Me, I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life."

Perhaps, someday, God will allow you to give to the world some beautiful thing, something that shall lead others to look into the tender, loving eyes of Jesus and shall lead them to come to Him, their Savior. But remember, you must begin to love Him now.

(A print of this free-hand drawing of Divine Love Incarnate can be ordered from Mrs. Eleanor Webley, 3869 Forty-second Street, San Diego, California, for any small sum you wish to give.)

What Shall The Harvest Be?

Junior Suggestions for May 2, 1937

It is garden-making time. We again leaf through catalogues checking the seeds and plants with the promising description "grow in warm, dry climate." Spring is indeed the messenger of hope. It isn't so long since the "hoppers" carried away our gardens and they who thought to put all in grass this spring, are again shaping garden beds. We are hoping for a harvest. There are enemies of harvest. Man, himself invites them as a just punishment of sin. Above all stands that eternal promise "there shall be seed time and harvest." What a wonderful time the seedtime is! The sower goes out to sow, scattering the seed in the strength of joy and hope, trusting for the harvest.

May this season inspire us anew to sow God's Word in the soil of young, tender hearts. The soil is there and the seed is there. What a privilege to be the sower.

Opening service

1. Song service using thought of sowing and reaping
2. Scripture using verses on pin-ons. These pin-ons could be made from flower catalogue cut-outs. Over this cut-out write a verse of praise, praising the works of God. Let these be read
3. Prayer of thanksgiving using the hymn "For the Beauty of the Earth"
4. Quiet prayer for the blessing and for open hearts to receive the message of the evening. Let a hymn be played softly during this prayer
5. Sing in unison "Break Thou the Bread of Life" verses 3 and 4

Study period. Aim. to teach our responsibility in the harvest our lives shall reap

1. Remarks on study "What Shall the Harvest Be" using Gal. 6:7, giving the working of this law in the physical world and closing with the statement that this law works also in our lives
2. What Shall the Harvest Be?—talks by juniors
   a. The harvest depends on the soil. Matt. 13:19-23. This could be illustrated by a chart, each scene within a heart
      1. The wayside soil
      2. The rocky soil
      3. The thorny soil
      4. The good soil
   b. The harvest depends on the quality of seed
      1. The bad seed which Satan is anxious to sow. Matt. 13:24-28a
      2. The good seed which God deals to the sower
         1) is the Word. Matt. 13:19-23
         2) are good works. II Cor. 9:1-5

      Special music: "Carry your Bible with you, let all its blessings flow." (Service Hymnal)
   c. The harvest depends on the quantity of seed. II Cor. 9:6-10
   d. The harvest depends on the sower. Let this junior stress the truth of each one being a sower, sowing either good or bad seed. Seeds multiply in harvest. What responsibility in the choice of seeds. Gal. 6:7
3. Heart-talks: "The Enemy." Matt. 13:25. Stress watching and abiding
4. Sing in unison "I Need Thee Every Hour." Verses 1, 2, 3
5. Closing prayer

RULES FOR LETTER WRITING

Have you any unkind thoughts?
Do not write them down.
Write no word that giveth pain;
Written words may long remain.
Have you heard some idle tale?
Do not write it down.
Gossips may repeat it o'er,
Adding to its bitter store.
Have you any careless jest?
Bury it and let it rest;
It may wound some loving breast.

But words of love and tenderness,
Words of truth and kindliness,
Words of comfort for the sad,
Words of gladness for the glad,
Words of counsel for the bad—
Wisely write THEM down.

For words, though small, are mighty things—
Pause before you write them.
Little words may grow and bloom
With bitter breath or sweet perfume—
PRAY before you write them! —An.

CORRESPONDENCE (Continued)

First Mennonite Church, Chicago, Illinois

Palm Sunday was a day of rejoicing in our church. Twenty-two new members were welcomed into the church fellowship. We are enjoying a steady spiritual revival and the Lord is adding new converts to THE CHURCH through the ministry of Rev. A. H. Lehman.

Easter Sunday morning we remembered the resurrection of our Lord by observing the ordinance of the Lord's Supper.

Mrs. A. H. Lehman, the pastor's wife, has recently undergone a serious operation in Passevant Hospital, Chicago. Her many friends are praying that the Lord will give her a speedy recovery.—Correspondent.

Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio

As is the custom each year, the annual business meeting of the church was held January 1. Splendid reports were given, new plans were made, and the church began its new year without a deficit.

Rev. P. E. Whitmer was the speaker for the annual Bible week at Bethel College, Kansas, from January 31 to February 5. In his absence Rev. Walter Schutz, returned missionary from Africa, filled the pulpit in the morning and gave an illustrated lecture of their work in Africa in the evening.

The women of the local churches joined in a World's Day of Prayer program at the Grace Church. A very inspiring program was rendered. Among the speakers were Mrs. Walter Schutz and Mrs. P. E.

The annual pre-Easter services were given by the Rev. E. W. Bloomquist, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Lima, Ohio, who used as his general theme "Who is Christ?" On Palm Sunday twelve new members were received into the church, eight by baptism and four by letter. This brings the membership to 385. Easter was celebrated by a sunrise Easter service at 6 o'clock. At the regular morning service, the communion service was observed. In the evening, the cantata "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by Dubois was rendered by the church chorus. Mrs. Florence Stuckey conducted the choir. She was assisted by Mrs. Stella Marshall at the piano and Miss Eulalia Steiner at the organ. Solists were Miss Edith Steiner, soprano; Mr. Roy Hilty, tenor; and Mr. Myron Gerber, baritone.

Three members of the church went to the eternal reward since the first of the year. They were Karl Badertscher, aged 83, February 6; Philip Sommer, aged 53, February 25; and Mrs. Helena Amstutz, aged 68, March 25.

On the evening of April 2 the Women's Missionary Society of the church entertained the women and girls of the church at a dinner. 114 women and girls were present and enjoyed the evening together. Miss Inda Sprunger, Berne, Indiana, Secretary of the Young People's work of the Middle District Conference, gave a very fine address in which she emphasized the qualities that are needed to make a Christian home.

Our pastor is conducting a leadership training class. Fourteen young people are taking the work.—Mrs. Sidney Steiner, Corr.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Rev. John J. Kliewer was born in southern Russia July 21, 1859. At fifteen years of age in 1874, he migrated with his parents to Buhler, Kansas, where they settled on a farm. One year after they arrived there he lost his father, and it became his duty to run the family farm and help support three younger sisters. At the age of eighteen he was baptized and joined the Mennonite Church. Through industrious struggle he managed to acquire a fair education and taught rural school for several years. In 1884 he entered the Mennonite missionary service among the Indians in Oklahoma. A year later he married Miss Helena Schmidt. After the United States government took over the education of the Indian children and the Mennonite mission school was discontinued, he devoted his life to the ministry in the various churches where he resided: Cantonment, Shelly, and Gotebo, Oklahoma; Carlsbad, New Mexico; Reedley, California; Burrton, Kansas; and Newport, Washington. He was keenly interested in schools and education and helped his children to obtain a college education. Four sons and his beloved wife preceded him in death. The latter part of February his eldest son brought him to the home of his daughter Esther on the Bethel College campus, a sick man. Later he was removed to the Bethel Hospital, at Newton, where he passed away on March 16, 1937, aged 77 years, 7 months, and 23 days. Funeral services were conducted at the Mennonite Church of Goessel, Kansas. Rev. P. P. Buller and Rev. J. M. Suderman officiated.

Rev. Kliewer is survived by two sons, Herman S. and Peter S.; three daughters, Mrs. Roy Paulson, Mrs. B. Bargen, and Mrs. Hugo Wall—all of whom were present at the funeral. He also leaves four grandchildren, one brother, and two sisters.

RELIGION IN THE HOME.—The home is still the greatest institution, more important than the school or even the church. Here we learn our first lesons in reverence toward God and duty toward our fellow-men. Here we develop habits in tender years, and we form attitudes toward life which will stay with us all the rest of our days. It is therefore important that the home has religious books, that the children are taught reverence for God and the Church and all things holy; that they are taught to appreciate the Bible, and to distinguish between right and wrong conduct. Religion is more easily "caught" than "taught," and so it is the solemn responsibility of the parents to so order their lives that they will not be stumbling-blocks to their little ones. Christianity began with the birth of a child into a humble home. Christ lived in that home thirty years and blessed it. When Christ abides in our home, there is nothing to fear.—L. Hostetler.

PRATUM, ORE.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roth, Sr., celebrated their golden wedding at the home of their son, John, near Pratum on Saturday evening, March 28. All of their children were present excepting one daughter, Alice Gower, who is a semi-invalid. One son-in-law and one grandson were not able to be present on account of illness. A program consisting of songs and short talks by our pastor, J. M. Franz, John Roth, Sr., a brother to Mr. Roth, and Homer Leisy, a son-in-law, were enjoyed. Seventy-eight guests attended.—Mrs. Jno. Merryman, Corr.

A special Missionary Service sponsored by the C. E. was held in the Richfield, Pa., Church recently. A filled church witnessed a Missionary pageant presented by six of the young people, and the program included special music by an orchestra of young people from a neighboring community that specialize in only religious music and appear regularly on a nearby radio station, also several numbers were sung by two children with exceptional ability. The address was given by Walter H. Temple, Field Secretary of the SSU of the EDC.

BLUFFTON COLLEGE—The Bluffton College Vesper Choir returned from their spring vacation tour on Thursday morning, April 8. Enthusiastic statements over the enjoyment of the trip, and the splendid reception accorded the choir are heard from all its members. One of the fine features of a project like this is its educational value. Numerous members of the choir, especially non-Mennonites, have expressed their high appreciation of the Mennonite people. The choir is grateful to all for the hospitality it has received in all communities.

The Men's Gospel Team Quartet, and Albert E. Bohrer, president, presented a part of the program on their eastern spring vacation tour in the College Chapel service on Friday, April 9. The quartet sang, and Andrew Shelly spoke on "The Challenge of Missions to College Students."

The next Vesper Sunday afternoon, May 2, will be addressed by Sylvester Jones, a representative of the American Friends Committee who spent some time in Spain investigating the need of feeding Spanish war orphans. Mr. Jones has reported a great need existing for this and is returning to Spain to take charge of this practical Christian enterprise.

We are in receipt of very pretty Easter service bulletins sent in by Bro. W. T. Stauffer, pastor of the First Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio, and Rev. W. S. Shelly, pastor of the First Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, who also included other interesting bulletins. Rev. J. N. Smucker, pastor of the Bethel College Church, also published a very neat Easter copy.

Rev. G. T. Soldner, pastor of the Eighth Street Church, Goshen, Indiana, has just joined the group of those pastors who are sharing their Sunday bulletins with the editor. These are uniquely clear and neat. He prints the front and back with the multigraph, in quantities for a month, including an illustration on the front page. Then he fills the inside weekly with the mimeograph. An important feature of these bulletins is the cheering, spiritually edifying poems that fill the last page.

From Rev. L. Hostetler, pastor of the First Church, Upland, Calif., we have Vol. I, No. I of a four-page bulletin in the form of a newspaper, entitled "The Herald." It is a neat piece of work and full of interesting information and challenges. Here are some of the topics: Editorials: Introduction, The Power of Resurrection, Religion in the Home (The Mennonite is using this is an editorial in this issue), Church Tramps. Our Church at Work: Field Secretary's Visit, A Worker's Conference, Bible Study, The Y. P. Society. News Notes: Thirteen items. The Pastor's Chat. Calendar.

From the above paper we copy the following: "Rev. and Mrs. Hostetler took two days, last Tuesday and Wednesday, to see a bit of old Russia in old Mexico. They visited the Holy Molakana Colony at Guadalupe, 22 miles from Ensenada, in Lower California. The colony consists of about 45 families. They have no automobiles, radios, or electricity, but continue the old ways and customs of their ancestral home in Russia. Access to the colony is over a rough road which can be negotiated at a speed of about 5 to 10 miles per hour. A team of horses helped us to ford the river at the outskirts of the village. We were received with the kindest hospitality, and had the privilege of attending a service of prayer for the dead for a lady who had just passed away."

We are informed that Rev. Alvin T. Van der Smissen who served the First Church of Beatrice, Nebraska, a year as teacher of their Bible School and English assistant pastor has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Hebron Mennonite Church, near Inman, Kansas, and that the family is planning to move to their new field of service about the first of June. Rev. J. M. Regier, field secretary for Bethel College, has filled the pulpit of this church for nearly a year.

Other members of the Bethel College teaching staff who serve near-by churches are: Rev. (Dr.) Abr. Warkentin, who is co-pastor of the First Church at Newton, Kansas; Rev. A. E. Kreider, who preaches at the Eden Church, near Moundridge, Kansas alternately with Rev. C. J. Goering; Rev. (Prof.) J. J. Voth who is now filling the pulpit of the Gnadenburg Church, near Whitewater, Kansas; and President E. G. Kaufman is called into service quite frequently.

Rev. P. P. Wedel, beloved pastor of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, has been conducting a Training School for Christian Workers in his church during the winter season. Thirty-three were enrolled for the course. The interest and the attendance were good, except when almost impassable roads interfered.

The General Conference Relief Board composed of John Lichti, Chr., J. C. Miller, Secr., P. H. Unruh, Treas., and Abr. Warkentin, Maxwell Kratz, and Jacob Gerbrandt, members, had an important session in Newton, Kansas, recently. As some of the other Conference boards, the members of this board are widely scattered. The Brethren Unruh and Warkentin are from Kansas, Brother Miller from South Dakota, Brother Lichti from Oklahoma, Brother Kratz from Philadelphia, and Brother Gerbrandt from Saskatchewan, Canada.—Our Relief Board also sat with the Central Relief Committee that had a meeting at about the same time.

To carry on the financial campaign for Bethel College the churches of Kansas have been grouped into districts, each district organized, mass meetings held, and the canvass is now in progress, as follows: 1. Western Kansas: Bergtal, Ransom, Hanston, April 12-13; 2. Hillsboro: First Church, Brudertal, Johannestal, Lehigh, April 19-31; 3. Whitewater: Elbing, Emmaus, Swiss, Gnadenberg; 4. Moundridge: Eden, Hoffnungsfeld, West Zion, Christian, Emmanuel, Garden; 5. Halstead and Burrton; 6. Pretty Prairie, Kingman, Hutchinson, Arlington; 7. Goessel, Alexanderwohl, Tabor; 8. Buhler, Inman, Hebron, Hoffnungsau.

The Bethel College Church is taking steps to build a parsonage. It is to be a residence that will be modern in every respect and will be erected on some of the choicest lots left on the college campus. The congregation realizes that in Rev. Smucker it has a minister who is second to none in the Conference. And it feels that it wants to do this as a token of appreciation of the fine service Rev. Smucker does, in providing a home that his family will enjoy.

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, APRIL 27, 1937 NO. 17

THE ART OF TEACHING

Teaching is an art, the highest and noblest of arts. Some few who enter upon the profession are born teachers. Jesus was the chief among these. If day-school teachers and, especially, Sunday school teachers would study the four gospels with the view of sitting at Jesus' feet in order to learn the magic of his art of teaching, their efficiency would be multiplied and their influence for good greatly increased. Socrates, Pestalozzi, Dwight L. Moody, and some others like them would also fall in the category of born teachers. But the great majority of those who enter the profession have to learn the art through experimentation, study, and experience and probably never get through learning it fully.

The factors involved in teaching are: The teacher, the pupil with all his potentialities, the subject-matter, and method. There is but one right way to align these factors so as to make success possible. Let's call it the true teaching situation. The core of it is: The teacher teaches the pupil (child, student). This is fundamental. It is Jesus' platform of the art. To enlighten the pupil is the teacher's objective. It is a significant fact that the verb to teach takes two direct objects. Thus in the statement, The teacher teaches John reading, the teacher teaches John (directly), and the teacher teaches reading (directly), but John comes first. That indicates that he is the important factor, more important than the reading. Again the important thing in John is his mind through which the teaching process is to take place. He must have intelligence to enable him to perceive, to reason, to imagine, to understand, to remember. So we have to modify our original statement thus: The teacher teaches John reading through the medium of his mind. And that mind must be so stimulated that it will give attention to the teacher's approach. As long as the teacher can stimulate the learner's mind to give attention and to grasp things, the teaching process is being accomplished. But where do subject-matter and method come in in our scheme of teaching? As far as the process of learning as such is concerned, these two factors are of secondary importance. We can best denote their place and function by this summary: The teacher teaches John through the medium of his mind by using subject matter adapted to the pupil and by using the most applicable method.

With this fundamental idea in mind, teaching can be efficiently carried on, provided the teacher proceeds on the basis of certain maxims so well illustrated in Jesus' teaching. As the first of these we mention: The teacher must be that which he would teach. It must be engrained into the very fibre of his being. To teach students a language, this language-matter must become a part and parcel of the teacher. To teach a Bible class in Sunday school, the truths taught in the Book must become a part of the instructor. It was this personal integrity that helped to make Jesus' teaching so effective.

A second maxim is: The teacher must know the pupil and understand the mystery of the capacities and powers hidden in him, so as to aid their development. He must be fully aware of the individual differences in the pupils. He must be living in and with them, as it were, as Jesus did with his disciples. Pestalozzi and Froebel followed the Master in this. It is the personal touch that made their teaching immortal.

A third fact or maxim is: Proceed from the known to the unknown. By starting with what people knew and understood, with what was close at hand, Jesus taught them the eternal truths of the Kingdom. His parables are marvels of this type. Illustrations, the use of similarities or contrasts, are all part and parcel of this phase of method.

A fourth and last maxim is: There is no impression without expression. This is Herbart's fifth step in the teaching process. He calls it application. It means that the learning process is not complete until the pupil has been given an opportunity to express what he has learned and what he knows.

"And they that are wise (the rabbis, the teachers) shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever." Dan. 12:3.

THE LIFTED SAVIOUR

P. R. Aeschliman

If I be lifted from the earth, I will draw all men unto me. John 12:32.

The Lord Jesus is the most attractive Being that ever lived in this world. He is unchangeable, from everlasting to everlasting. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever. His mission here on earth marked out His way. The conditions He met shaped His actions. Although His words and actions displeased the Jews and puzzled His disciples, the Lord Jesus did not change His plans and actions.

The Lord Jesus did not come into this world to please the Jews, but He came to do the will of God. The Bible says, "The will of God is our salvation." The Bible also says that God is not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to the knowledge of the truth and live eternally. His kind words and actions won the love and confidence of the poor lost sinners and opened the way to the greatest opportunities and possibilities.

The greatest, the grandest, and the most needed human act is to accept the Lord Jesus Christ into our hearts and homes. In John 17:7 the Lord Jesus speaks of His title and ownership, "Thine they are and Thou givest them to me." This records the greatest responsibility that ever took place in this world. In John 10:10 the Lord Jesus speaks of the great difference between the thief and the good shepherd. The thief comes to steal, to kill, and to destroy. Christ, the good Shepherd, came and still comes to give life and to give it abundantly. In John 10:12, we find the difference between the thief or hireling and the good Shepherd. The hireling will not expose himself to danger. His life and time is to him more important than the life and the welfare and happiness of his flock. Rom 12:1.

Learn to teach the children to look at this world as a beautiful symbol of Jesus; every thing, Jesus; Christ, all; Christ, in all. So shall you educate the imaginations of the children to receive, and their memories to retain and to use, that Christian truth; and you yourself shall be lifted up, as on angel's wings, to see with John things which are unspeakable, but which the sanctified imagination realizes.—Stephen H. Tyng, Jr.

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

By Ed. G. Kaufman

THE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

7. A prayer for colleges. — Father in heaven, we would lift up our voices this morning in unison with all Christians who pray for the colleges of our land. May Thy blessing rest on these institutions, and make them nurseries for Thy Kingdom.

Bless the young men and women who come to them, hungry to know and eager to fit themselves for useful service. May their minds be open to receive the truth, and their hearts brave to face the facts of life. Deliver them from the bondage of bigotry and send them forth in freedom to view the glories of Thy universe.

But when they seek after light, may they not close their eyes to Thee, Lord Christ, who art the Light of the world. When perplexity meets them at the crossroads, may they remember Thee who art the Way. When they hunger for knowledge, may they not forget Thee who art the Truth. When the heart yearns for satisfaction, may they draw near to Thee who art come that we might have life, and have it more abundantly.

These are days of solemn crises to our young friends. Childish opinions have served their purpose and are falling away like scales around an opening bud. The frost night of unbelief is upon the world, and the delicate faith-life is in danger of death. Enfold it, O Lord, with the warmth of Thy love and save it from all harm.

We pray Thee too for the men and women whom Thou hast appointed to teach the young. Help them to see the holiness of their calling, and the delicacy of the task set before them. May none of them come with rude hands or unhallowed hearts. Show them the folly of attempting to teach without first sitting at the feet of the supreme Teacher. Inspire them with an ever-deepening appreciation of the spiritual values of life, and give them grace to walk humbly in deepest soul communion with the Savior of men

Enlighten, guide, and uphold the presidents of our great institutions of learning. Vast responsibilities are laid upon them, and they need Thee every hour. Give them strength for every burden, patience for every vexation, wisdom for every crisis, and courage for every moral issue. In all their planning, may they and their helpers, from the highest to the humblest, ever remember that the furtherance of Thy Kingdom is the chief purpose of all true education. Amen.—C. A. Wendell.

Models for the Child Who Imitates

Viola E. Holley

Jerry was a little four-year-old boy who played frequently with a friend who had not formed the habit of saying "please." Consequently, Jerry soon began demanding, "Give me a drink," or "I want an apple." His mother was puzzled for a while as to what to do about it.

Parents are often confronted with such problems. A little child is very quick to imitate the ways of those around him. He is not very discriminating with regard to the kind of behavior he copies—at least from his mother's point of view—and often picks up undesirable habits as well as good ones.

It may be the behavior and speech of playmates that are objectionable. Frequently, individuals who come to the home to render services of one kind or another furnish the wrong example. Sometimes there are members of one's own family whose behavior one does not wish a child to imitate, yet there often seems to be no way to prevent him from being stimulated to do so. What can a mother do under such circumstances?

Jerry's mother tried several things. First, she explained to the child what she would like him to say and why. She insisted, in a quiet matter-of-fact way, that he ask correctly before she granted his request; but, although he seemed glad to respond when she reminded him, he forgot soon, and the habit persisted. Finally she tried telling him a story.

It was a true story that her husband had told her about a boy whom he had known in a large camp. This boy had the same bad habit that Jerry had of forgetting to say "please." He overcame it, though. The incidents that made up his experience, and his final success when he had no further trouble remembering, interested Jerry.

"I can remember, too," was his comment when his mother finished the story, and the difficulty was soon overcome.

A suitable picture can often answer much the same purpose as a story and frequently may be found right at hand in a magazine or newspaper. Such an illustration, showing a little boy hanging up his clothes, caused one child to remark, "I can hang mine up, too, just like the little boy in the picture."

These stories and pictures gain the child's attention and, because he wishes to imitate the boy or girl that is presented in this attractive light, he is led to practice the right way until a new habit is formed. Even though his day by day experience furnishes objectionable patterns of behavior, a mother can still balance things up for him by giving him interesting examples of the right way. This often helps more than reprovals, explanations, and reminders.

The child who imitates is sure to copy all kinds of behavior. It is important, then, to see that he has plenty of the right kind before him, if not in real life, at least in story or picture form and that these are interesting and attractive to him. All he may need, to perfect himself in the very thing his parents are striving to teach him, may be a different pattern to follow, a new model that appeals to him.

THINGS THAT HINDER

Perhaps the greatest hindrance and difficulty of our Christian work in our churches of today is our different standard of a Christian life. As a rule, there are two classes of people in each church. There is the one class which holds to a higher standard of faith and conduct, and there is the class which has a low standard or none at all; and this hampers the work to a great extent. This also holds true with the ministry and the congregation. A minister will be tolerated in a church if he does not raise the standard above that of his church; but should he emphasize the need of a sinless, holy, and sanctified life, there is apt to be trouble and opposition. And the cry and accusation is made that he does not fit into the situation; and it is true, he does not. Neither does Christ. We do not hear of any Pentecostal experiences in our churches these days. We are told that God has given up this kind of work, but I am inclined to believe that we have given up our ten-day-long prayer meeting. The ten-day prayer meeting has dwindled down to a ten-minute prayer meeting.—S. P. Preheim.

ABRAHAM A MAN OF FAITH

Genesis 11:27 to 20:18 Printed 12:1-9; 13:14-18

Introduction

The history of the Hebrews and of God's redemptive work begins with Abraham. God chose him, a man who would keep His testimony, to whom He could speak as a friend. Abraham, the father of the Hebrew nation, was reared amidst the heathen environment of the city of Ur in Chaldea. The world of his day had progressed far in civilization. He grew up amidst a quite advanced degree of culture. We know not how he learned to know the true God. Religiously, he lived a lonely life. He alone walked and talked with God. He is the most venerated man of all time. His father, left Ur with his family, migrated to Haran and died there (Gen. 11:31, 32). Here the call of our lesson came to Abraham.

God's Call and Promise to Abraham 12:1-3.

The call of Abraham marks the beginning of a new nation, God's chosen people, the first nation to worship the One True God, Jehovah. It was a call to separation from the idolatrous influence of Haran. He recognized God as calling him to leave home, kindred and country, and go to a new land. It demanded much faith. God gave the command and promise. That was enough for Abraham.

God asked much and promised much to him (vs. 2, 3). His promise always is greater than His demand from us. Wonderful and far-reaching are the promises made to Abraham. All generations to come were to be blessed in him. This was so marvelously fulfilled in Jesus, a lineal descendant of Abraham.

Abraham's Response vs. 4-6.

Abraham's faith answered God's call. He lived back in History's dawn when faith was new. God asked much of him, but "Abraham believed God" and obeyed. Faith in God, is the outstanding characteristic of Abraham. He here proved it. He took all of his with him (v5), no thought of going back. The separation was complete. There is a close connection between what we believe and what we do. God calls us to absolute separation from that which hinders our serving Him. A life of obedience is for us largely a venture of faith which is needed at every step of our christian journey.

Canaan Promised vs. 7-9

God tested Abraham, He also sustained him. When most needed, God appeared in intimate fellowship (v7) with a definite promise. Abraham expressed his gratitude in building an altar of worship wherever he pitched his tent, and in worshipping God. We need an altar in our home and a place of worship in our community.

Abraham's Reward 13:14-18

Abraham had very generously permitted Lot to choose the most fertile land for himself. God however rewarded him well. God chose for him (vs. 14-17). He gained much by his generosity and trust in God. A vast, sweeping promise was made to the yet childless Abraham, and he believed God. It was counted unto him for righteousness. The journey was a venture of faith. Abraham obeyed implicitly. He was richly rewarded. Obedience and worship made the "faithful Abraham."

Nuggets of Truth

Abraham's faith enabled him to rise above his environment and grasp God's promises for the future.

Abraham was separated unto God for a high and holy purpose—to be a blessing unto all people.

God called a great man to do a great work. Great faith requires a great heart of trust. We must trust in God in order to grow in grace.

Without faith it is impossible to please God.

HEROES OF FAITH

Text: Hebr: 11:39-40: "And these all, having obtained a good report through faith, received not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect."

A. A register of persons who were "Heroes of Faith" is found in Hebrews 11.

1. Definition of faith. There is no better definition of faith than Hebr. 11:1: "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

2. The hero in the public eye is a person who has done something unusual in the interest of a worthy cause, risking his life in the act. National heroes have rendered some daring service in the interests of their country.

3. There is another class of heroes, the "Heroes of Faith." To become a "Hero of Faith" requires more courage and persistence than to be a national hero. It means to be victorious over the invisible evil forces.

B. "Heroes of Faith" are referred to in our text with the words, "And these all." THESE ALL are men and women of great faith of the Old Testament dispensation.

1. Abel and his sacrifice is mentioned first. He presents a sacrifice in humiliation and faith, and in the offering admits that he is lost in death and that without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sin. (Hebr. 9:22).

2. Enoch is another man of faith. He lived in a time when conditions were getting more unbearable from day to day. He was true to God and his will; he walked with God and He took him away. He is the type of the saints who will be translated at His coming. (I Thess. 4:17).

3. Noah, the messenger of righteousnes to the unrighteous generation of his day, obeyed Jehovah, preached repentance and the coming judgment, and built the ark while doubters and scoffers looked on. As a reward he and his house were saved. (Genesis 7).

4. Abraham is another outstanding man of faith. He is the father of the faithful. (Genesis 15:1; 15:6; 17; 18:22; 25:8).

5. There are many more "Heroes of Faith" in the Old Testament dispensation. The ones mentioned here will help to introduce the subject for individual study.

C. Our text calls our attention to another group of "Heores of Faith" with the word US. These are the heroes of faith of the New Testament dispensation and are just as numerous as the Old Testament "Heroes of Faith." Many of their names are not known, and they are accounted for in Rev. 7:9-17.

1. Outstanding in this class is the Apostle Paul. Once he was an enemy of Christ, but in the regeneration he was changed to His most faithful servant. His race as the man of faith began when he made that great change recorded in Galatians 1:15-16. From that day he fought a hard battle, full of trouble and sacrifices. In faith he once more makes a survey of his life and triumphantly makes the marvelous statement of victory. (II Thess. 4:7-8)

2. And there is John. We have no record where he ever failed in faith. John, James, and Peter took charge of the church at Jerusalem. Jesus, our Lord, held John worthy to receive his revelation and write it as the last book of the Bible.

3. We must remember Peter who preached that fearless sermon on the birthday of the Church. Once he was quickly frightened, now he is a man of courage—"Hero of Faith."

4. There is the first martyr, Stephen. With the eye of memory we see him standing as a pillar of faith under the hail of stones released by the angry mob. (Acts 6 and 7). Standing on the right hand of God, the Son of Man received his faithful servant.

D. This army of "Heroes of Faith," both of Old and New Testament times, is called in Hebr. 12:1, "so great a cloud of witnesses." They challenge every believer to be counted worthy to receive the kingdom and the blessings of eternal life.

A PERSONAL SAVIOUR

The expression, "accepting Jesus," carries with it a vague and uncertain meaning to many, and it is better to use it only where it will be understood, or where you may explain its meaning.

We speak of accepting Him as our Savior, or our personal Savior; but what does such acceptance imply? Some answer, "Agreeing that He is your Savior." How? "Through what He has done." Yet such an agreement or acceptance may be of little value to the person.

The writer a short time ago met a young lady who said, "I believe all the Bible says. I believe that Jesus died for me, and expect soon to join the church." Yet only a few moments' conversation was needed to show that she did not think of Jesus as a friend and companion, or realize any real love going out from her heart toward Him or toward God. He, in whose hands her very breath was, whose loving care she was, was nothing to her consciously. Jesus cannot become one's personal Savior except as Jesus is saved to him. As one loses from his heart and life consciousness of what Jesus is to him, he loses him as a Savior. To the extent that one neglects or fails to see what Jesus is to him, he fails to have Him as his Savior in the Scriptural sense of the word.—Exchange.

A Mennonite Looks at Science

Ray E. Heiks

It seems to be tradition and custom that religious people are skeptical of science. It is taken for granted that science is opposed to religion and that most scientists are atheists and teach atheistic doctrines. This feeling is not as prevalent among most of the denominations today, as it was in the past. However among the Mennonites, especially among the conservative element, this feeling against science has a strong foothold.

In order to get a better understanding of how and why this feeling of opposition to science exists, it is necessary to look backwards and review a short history of scientific development.

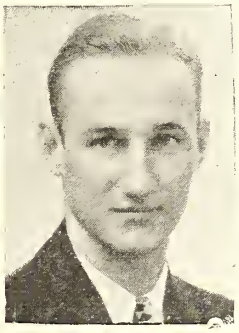
In the sixth century B.C., we find that science had developed quite remarkably. A few centuries later it reached its peak before its fall into apparent oblivion during the Dark Ages. But why did it decline instead of pursuing a continuous development?

The objective of science in the sixth century B. C. was not to obtain knowledge with which to control nature, but it was hoped that with increased knowledge of the world men might learn the purpose of life. This afforded a great stimulus to the observation of natural phenomena and the formulation of theories concerning this observed phenomena. Pythagoras, one of the early scientists, saw very clearly from his observations that the world in which we live is orderly and follows uniform laws. He argued that we should learn these laws and adjust our lives in accord with them. This would naturally involve a great deal of self-discipline and consequently made the doctrine a hard one to follow. This doctrine was not acceptable to the citizens of Crotona, and he and his followers were put to death by a mob.

Thus, the recognition that we live in a world of orderliness and law was passed down through the years and finally accepted by the Atomists who formulated the law, "Nothing happens without a cause but with a cause and by necessity." The Atomists went further and said that all matter is made up of atoms and void that follow natural laws. This reduced the whole world of plants, animals and people to a vast machine.

The philosophers, Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle could not accept such an explanation of the universe. If man's brain is made up of atoms and molecules that follow definite laws, then his thinking is mechanical and this leaves no room for freedom of thought which is the basis of morality. According to this view, the criminal should not be punished, because he is not responsible for what he does. Why should a man try to be good if after all, everything he does is determined by laws which he can't control? Such was the line of thought of these philosophers and because of this vigorous attack by them, science started its decline into oblivion.

MEET RAY HEIKS



We represent this week a young man from the East—a Bluffton College senior. You think he looks alert! You're right—and when you read his article herewith you'll know you were right.

Mr. Heiks is majoring in Chemistry, minoring in Physics, as one will guess from the article itself. But he is no narrow laboratory technician. He is interesting in all the activities of the college—president of the Student Senate, Lincoln Hall president, an athlete ever since he was a freshman, active in Y.M.C.A., and the editorial activities of the campus, and even takes part in the class plays.

And now Mr. Heiks looks forward to next year, when he will be attending Ohio State University under a scholarship which he has earned there. His home is at Smithville, Ohio.

Good luck to you, Ray.

When Christianity sprang into existence these schools of philosophy were prevalent throughout Europe and much of this philosophy was taken into the religious doctrine. Thus we find that from its very beginning Christianity was indoctrinated against science. With the establishment of the Roman Catholic Church as the supreme power on earth, it was recognized that the church was the authority and origin of all truth, and any truth revealed, except through the church, was not acceptable, but was heresy. A few men continued in the study of science, but as they were found, they were put to death by the church. Consequently, it was not long before science had died out entirely.

After the Reformation the various denominations that broke away from the Catholic Church carried with them this adverse attitude toward science. After the Renaissance the revival of learning in all fields developed. Science again started to develop and it seemed to be in harmony with the church until the Newtonian Epoch, when some writers and philosophers, mostly French, misinterpreted Newton's philosophy and formulated a universe without a God. Here religion and science made a very definite break that has continued down to the twentieth century.

The Mennonite faith was established during this conflict between science and religion, and naturally would not accept any sort of scientific attitude, regardless of the merits it might possess. Not all the scientists taught the atheistic doctrine during this period, but most of the religious people, generalized and thought that all scientists were atheists. The Mennonites accepted this view along with the other denominations—that science was a bad influence on religion and it undoubtedly had that effect during this period.

Home Problems

Intermediate C. E. Topic, May 9, 1937

For Quiet Hour Meditation

May 3. Favoritism wrecked a home. Gen. 27:41-46
May 4. Boasting in the home. Gen. 37:1-11
May 5. An ideal home. Luke 10:38-42
May 6. Duties to the home. 2 Tim. 5:1-8.
May 7. Paul's good advice. Tit. 2:1-8
May 8. Home, a training-ground. Prov. 22:6
May 9. In my home: my rights and the rights of others. Matt. 7:1-5, 12.

Honoring Mother

Invite the mothers to this meeting. Send a handmade invitation to each one. Prepare small corsage bouquets for each one. Have someone at the door to greet them and pin a corsage on them. Decorate the room with flowers and ferns. Reserve a special section for the mothers. Type or mimeograph attractive programs on colored paper. Include "Faith of our Mothers."

Pre-prayer Circle

Let a few of the officers and the leader of the meeting hold a short pre-prayer service in a side room 15 minutes before the time set for the meeting. Use Ex. 20:12 for your prayer thought.

A Suggested Plan

1. Instrumental Prelude

If you do not have an Intermediate orchestra, assemble any instruments among the members and let them prepare several hymns, including, "Home Sweet Home," to be played at the beginning.

2. Praise in Song.

The song leader and pianist take charge. (Make any necessary society announcements at the close of the first song. Face the group. Speak distinctly). 1. "Trust and Obey" 2. "What a Friend" 3. "I Need Thee Every Hour"

3. Quiet Worship

Leader: Deut. 6:6-9
Hymn: "Faith of Our Mothers"
Poem: Selected Mother's Day poem
Special Music: "O Happy Home" (Mennonite Hymnal)
Scripture Reading: Matt. 7:1-5, 12
Prayer. (Ask three members to lead before the meeting)
Offering: "Be not weary in well doing."

4. Participation Period

1. Honoring our mothers. The leader or the president should greet the mothers present. Speak of some of the reasons why we honor them. In 1908 Miss Anna Jarvis of Philadelphia was asked to arrange a memorial program, honoring her mother. This gave her the thought of the need for the general observance of such a day. Too many children neglect to show respect and love until it is too late. The second Sunday in May was set aside for the observance of Mother's Day. In 1914, President Wilson first proclaimed it as a national holiday. The white carnation was the floral emblem chosen to honor mother.
2. The Christian home in the Bible. Use some of the daily readings for topics.
3. What makes a happy home? Four two-minute talks by Intermediates.
   a. Family devotions
   b. Christ in the heart

c. Thoughtfulness of others
d. Co-operation
4. The Christian home
a. What parents can expect of Christian children. Eph. 6:1, 2, by an Intermediate
b. What children can expect of Christian parents. Eph. 6:4, by a mother
5. Closing Moments
Hymn: "When Love Shines In"
Reading: I Cor. 13:4-7 (Moffat translation)
Benediction: "Let the words of my mouth,
And the meditation of my heart,
Be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord,
My strength, and my redeemer"
For Jesus sake. Amen.

Safeguarding the Homes of Tomorrow

Young People's Topic, May 16

Josh. 24:15, 24; Prov. 22:6

Meditation

M., May 10. Safeguarding marriage. Matt. 19:1-12. What particular safeguards to marriage has the Mennonite Church evolved? Which have been neglected?

T., May 11. Safeguarding the child. Exod. 2:1-10. Safeguarding what: The physcial well-being? The mental well-being? The spiritual well-being?

W., May 12. The meaning of marriage. Eph. 5:28-33. Expressed in modern language, what is the purpose of marriage, as God conceives of it?

T., May 13. Blessing children. Mark 10:13-16. Do the terms "coddling" and "blessing" the children mean the same thing? What basic rights does a child have, as an individual?

F., May 14. Teaching children. Deut. 6:3-9. If being right spiritually is more important than to be well informed on other matters, what does that imply regarding the type of teaching which should exist in our Sunday Schools and in our homes?

S., May 15. Facing disintegrating forces. Ps. 140:1-13. Do the most powerful disintegrating forces exist outside or inside the individual? What is a reasonable way of meeting these forces?

Problems and Projects

1. Name (or count) mentally, every divorce you know of personally among Mennonites. Now name (count) mentally every divorce you know of among non-Mennonites. Compare. Do you think this difference is related to the teachings of the church in any way?

2. In what particular areas of do you think that we Mennonites have been particularly weak and ineffectual, when it comes to training for good, Christian home-membership?

3. Have your superintendent of schools present a talk on what schools have done to promote worthy home membership, asking him particularly to discuss special courses being offered in Home Making.

"WE GIVE THEE THANKS"

Junior Suggestions for May 9, 1937

Let this be Mother's-Night. Ask the juniors to make a date with their mothers. A receiving committee of juniors and leaders could welcome each mother escorted by her junior and pin on her a small corsage of spring flowers. Have a section of seats to which the mothers are lead. The decorations could consist of flowers and suitable pictures. (Should there be children who have lost their mother, ask these to bring a guest whom they love)

1. Prelude merging into song for procession
2. Processional of juniors led by leader using "Praise Him! Praise Him!" Remain standing in seat.
3. Words of praise by juniors. Distribute these among the group so that these praises come from here and there.
   a. "Praise ye Jehovah!"
   b. "Oh give thanks unto Jehovah for he is good!"
   c. Psalm 106:2
   d. Psalm 107:15
   e. Psalm 109:30
   f. Psalm 111:16
   g. Psalm 113:4
   g. Psalm 113:4
   i. Psalm 111;9a
   j. Psalm 113:2
   k. "Praise ye Jehovah!"
   l. "Thanks be unto Him" (Be seated)
4. Sing in unison "Now Thank We All Our God."
5. For our mothers we give thanks. Remarks of welcome by chairman
6. Special music with theme of "mother"
7. What God tells me to do in regard to my parents—a junior using the following scriptures which he asks others of the group to read: Ex: 20:12; Deut. 5:16; Prov. 1:8, and 9; Prov. 6:21-23; Prov. 23:22; Prov. 28:17; Eph. 6:1; Col. 3:20
8. For other mothers we give thanks—talks by juniors telling in their own words of the characteristics that make these mothers so beloved
   a. Mother of Moses. Ex. 21:1-9
   b. Mother of Samuel. I Sam. 1:1-2:11
   c. Mother of Jesus. Luke 1:26-38; 2:18, 19, 51; John 2:5
   d. Mother of Timothy. II Tim. 1:3-5

9. Poem with music:

"Like As a Mother Comforteth."
O words of gentle worth!
"So will I comfort you,"
Declares the Lord of all the earth.
He bends in faithful watchfulness,
He slumbers not nor sleeps;
Above His trusting child
The Lord a constant vigil keeps.
He patient is, as mothers are
Who love their children well;
Our faults and failings He forgives,
His mercies who can tell!

10. What makes a happy home? Let one of the mothers give this talk
11. Sing in unison "O happy home where Thou art loved the dearest"
12. Closing prayer by a junior and by a mother

THE JUNIOR CORNER

There is an old calendar in front of me. Its corners are all turned up and it has become yellow. It is an old calendar; the kind that has large figures and a lot of room back of them to write something in. Do you have one like that? Are there three or four pages left? But here is a little story first.

Max was playing hard. He was captain of the sixth grade baseball team. The fifth graders had won the last game. If he could help it, they would not win today, but they had a better team. "Watch the ball," shouted the crowd. Max was watching it. He saw that the ball could have been caught, but the pitcher missed it. Max "pitched" him a flow of angry words which bounced back at him and made his face blush with shame.

That night when Max was kneeling for evening prayer, he felt in his heart that, again, he had grieved Jesus. It was just the night before that he had resolved to do better. Now he had failed again! He loved Jesus. He didn't want to grieve Him. "O Jesus," he prayed, "forgive me."

Do you ever grieve Jesus? Have you longed not to? The greatest Savior from sin is Jesus, Himself, but an old calendar can help too. Try this:

1. Hang the calendar where you can see it
2. Write over top of first page "Disobedience"
3. Name page two "Anger"
4. Name page three "Bad Words"
5. Name page four "Lies"

Perhaps it is Tuesday, the first week of the month when you begin this check up. If you have been disobedient on that day, then find the day on the on the calendar sheet marked "disobedience" and blacken the empty space with a pencil. Should you have been angry, then blacken the space on that sheet, etc. At the end of the month the four sheets will give you a picture in black and white. Will there be much darkness or much light? Remember Jesus is the Savior from sin. Jesus is the Light.

FREEMAN COLLEGE STUDENT VIOLINIST HONORED

Violet Miller, a junior in the high school department of Freeman College, won the highest rating in the piano solo division of the district music contest held at Vermillion on April 1-2. Ranking highest among eighteen students entered in this division, Violet played her selection at the grand concert on the final evening—"Polonaise, Op. 46, No. 12," by MacDowell. This wins for her the much-coveted trip to Aberdeen to compete in the State-wide contest.

Thus the good work goes forward at Freeman College. Another item of more than passing interest to all lovers of good music is the announcement of extension programs being planned by Mrs. Grace Hermanson, Freeman College Choir Director, and President John D. Unruh. A varied program featuring numbers by the choir, trumpet solo by Howard Warne, cello solo by Mrs. Hermanson, numbers by the girls trio, and a talk by the president is being arranged for presentation in the churches of the college territory through the efforts of Rev. D. S. Wipf.

Mennonite education marches on!

LETTERS THAT THRILL

An Intermediate superintendent wrote recently, "Some of my Intermediates have been receiving letters and are greatly delighted. Another of our young people wishes to correspond. She is a sophomore in High School."

Do your Intermediates want the thrill of receiving letters from Mennonite young people in another state? If so, send their names, address, school classification and any other information you think of value to Emma M. Ruth, 1049 West Ave., Reedley, Calif. Names of correspondents will be sent you.

THE COOKIE JAR

I have a critic who is more exacting than you: it is my other self.

A REMODELED, REDECORATED CHURCH

During the year 1936, the Salem Mennonite Church of Dalton, Ohio, commemorated their Fiftieth Anniversary with appropriate services. Preparatory to this red letter occasion it was thought fitting to redecorate and improve the church building. One of the consecrated young people, a tither, gave momentum to the work with a $150 gift. The money was practically all in sight by the time of the dedicatory services. The improvements consisted of new oak pews with beautiful three ply ends, new pulpit furniture, varnished hard wood floors, an extended balcony and a modern air-conditioning heating and ventilating system.

Salem Church is eagerly striving to develop a deeper spiritual life among her members, and is also desirous of spreading the gospel of peace and brotherhood wherever opportunity is given to witness for the Master to bring about a more Christian order. This institution is recognized as an active young people's church. The present membership is 254. In recent years 65 of her young people have attended higher institutions of learning (the majority at Bluffton College). 36 of these have received their college degrees, and in turn 14 of these have been granted post graduate degrees. At the present time there are 16 teachers, 8 nurses, 4 doctors and dentists, 1 Ph. D., scientist, and a number of others who are outstanding leaders in various types of community work.

Salem Mennonite Church

There is great need "in such a time as this" that all Christians everywhere let their lights shine actively for the Master and be ever obedient to the guidance of the Holy Spirit.

CORRESPONDENCE

Wayland, Iowa, April 11, 1937

Dear readers of the Mennonite:

I have not written for a long time and if I would write everything that took place in the meantime it would take too much space.—Rev. Kenneth Neuenschwander who started his pastorate here last September, was ordained in the Ebenezer Church (his home church), Bluffton, Ohio, on November 6.

During the past year we had two of our minister brethren visit us, namely, Rev. P. H. Richert in the interest of missions and Rev. David Toews in the interest of the people who have come to Canada as refugees and do not have the literature they should have.—On Oct. 5, Rev. Elmer Basinger had been called here to conduct the funeral of Robery Shively who became a member of the church while Rev. Basinger was our pastor. Mrs. Basinger and two of the children were also with him.—On Easter Sunday evening our church choir under the direction of Rev. Neuenschwander, gave the cantata, "Easter Sunrise Song." The way they rendered it shows that our young people love music. We had a good attendance.—During the week following Easter Sunday, Rev. Neuenschwander spent with his parents near Columbus Grove, Ohio.

Monday, April 5, we had the opportunity to listen to a program given by the Bluffton College Vesper Choir at the High School. It was sponsored by both the Eicher Church, near Noble, and the Wayland church. It is a wonderful gift to be able to sing and much more wonderful to sing praises to God. Their program was a real inspiration to those of us who were present Had the weather been favorable we would have had many more present. Only those who know Iowa roads during a wet season know what this means.

On Sunday, March 14, Mr. Chris. Boshart passed away rather suddenly. Although he had been ill the past two years, he was up yet on Saturday morning. His funeral was held in the Mennonite church in charge of his pastor.

Once more this community is looking forward to a musical treat when the Goshen A Cappella Choir will sing at the high school building on Saturday April 17.

With best wishes to all readers,

Mrs. Selma C. Sommer

CORRESPONDENCE (Continued)

Pretty Prairie Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas

Rev. P. P. Tschetter of South Dakota has been conducting a series of evangelistic meetings at our church. On Sunday, April 11, Rev. S. M. Musselman was with the Mennonite Church in Wichita. Our Bible class of forty meets on Tuesday evenings, prayer meeting is held on Wednesday evenings, the church choir has its practice on Thursday evenings, and the Sunday school teachers' meeting is held on Saturday evenings. On Fridays we frequently have some special meeting With church services and C. E. meetings on Sunday evenings, there is something doing in our church almost every evening when weather permits.

Our C. E. has ninety members. In our Sunday school we have 26 classes, twenty of which are taught in German and six in English. Rev. Musselman is still serving our church.—J. A. Stucky.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

John W. Moser, son of Daniel and Elizabeth Moser, was born near Pandora, Ohio, on July 16, 1880, and passed away Feb. 9, 1937, aged 56 years, 6 months, and 24 days.

He was baptized on March 28, 1903, upon confession of faith, by the Rev J. B. Baer, and became a member of the St. John Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, and remained an active member and supporter of this church until the time of his death. On Dec. 24, 1903, he was joined in holy matrimony with Josephine Basinger. This union was blessed with nine children. The youngest of these, John Wesley, died in infancy. The wife and the following eight children survive to mourn the death of the husband and father. Mary (Mrs. Keith Frary) of Mansfield, O.; Glenn, of Bluffton, O.; Opal of Detroit, Mich.; Clyde of Findlay, O.; Raymond of Columbus Grove, O.; Esther of Lima, O.; Lawrence of Mansfield, O.; and Wanda (Mrs. Howard Welty) at home. Five grandchildren also survive to mourn the loss of an affectionate grandfather.

Mr. Moser was a grandson of the late Rev. John Moser who served the Swiss Mennonite Church for fifty years as minister of the Word of God. He was the second oldest of eleven children, five of which preceded him in death. Two brothers, Ira of Ada, Ohio, and Willard of Pandora, O., and three sisters, Lydia (Mrs. Edwin Moser) Cango Park, Calif., Hallie (Mrs. M. R. Bixel), Bluffton, O., and Barbara, Ashtabula, O., remain to mourn the early departure of their brother.

Funeral services were held at his late home and the St. John Mennonite Church and interment was made in the cemetery adjoining the church. The pastor, Rev. Daniel J. Unruh, spoke words of comfort on the basis of the 23rd Psalm, and Rev. A. S. Rosenberger, a former pastor, used II Tim. 1:12, as the text for the occasion. Rev. Walter Schutz, missionary on furlough, and a neighbor and friend of the family assisted in the services.

Adeline Hiebert, daughter of Henry J. Hiebert and Anna (Friesen) of Henderson, Nebr. was born Feb. 27, 1924. She attended the public school and was in the seventh grade. In school she had the misfortune of falling on the gravel, bruising her knee, which developed into a serious affliction. Acording to the doctors statement, scarlet fever also set in. All that seemed possible was done for her, but it pleased the good Lord to take her out of the midst of the family to be with Him whom she trusted and learned to love. Her earthly life ender March 31 at an age of 13 years, 1 month, 4 days. She leaves to mourn her early departure her parents, three brothers and three sisters, all younger than she.

Miss Verna Janzen, her teacher, with the school, sang two songs at the funeral, which was conducted at her farm home. A public funeral in church was prohibited by the Board of Health.

Soon for me the light of day
Shall forever pass away;
Then from sin and sorrow free,
Take me Lord to dwell with thee.

« « JOTTINGS » »

The Paso Robles Mennonite Church enjoyed an interesting meeting April 9, conducted by Rev. and Mrs. A. F. Kroeker, missionaries to the Belgian Congo, Africa. The church wishes the couple God's blessings in their great work.

A fine plan! Rev. D. D. Eitzen, pastor of the Immanuel Menonite Church, Los Angeles, California, writes that he is going to propose to their church council that they make use of the offer for new subcriptions to THE MENNONITE, at fifty cents for six months, to have it sent to families that are not getting it. What other churches will follow this good example?

The Bethel College a capella choir of fifty voices, accompanied by the College band, are now visiting the high schools within a radius of 50-75 miles from the College one day each week.

Rev. P. R. Schroeder, pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church near Freeman, South Dakota, has joined the group of ministers who favor us with copies of their Year Book. It shows that the membership has increased by thirteen and is now 465 and that the pastor has preached 51 sermons at home and 90 away from home. Of the sermons preached, 76 were given in German and 65 in English. Not included in the above were five wedding sermons and six funeral sermons. The grand total of sermons was 152.

The mission work at Altoona, Pennsylvania, which Brother L. H. Glass had faithfully carried on for a number of years, but had to give up because of impaired health, is being ably continued by Brother Grover Klink, we are informed.

Local Lutheran and Reformed Churches joined the West Swamp Mennonite C. E. Society, near Milford Square, Pennsylvania, in an Easter dawn service.

The First Mennonite Church of Berne, Indiana, recently buried its oldest citizen, Chris Gilliom, who had attained the unusual age of over ninety-two years, and whose life was rather remarkable in other ways. A number of years ago he became totally blind. But modern surgery and medical science succeeded in removing the cataracts from his eyes and his vision was restored, so that he could read and write fairly well. Brother Gilliom came to Indiana long before Berne The Sunday morning services will be arranged for and was founded. He was married twice, each time to the daughter of a Mennonite minister. Fourteen children were born to the two unions. Of these ten survive the father; also three brothers and two sisters, one stepson, one stepdaughter, 40 grandchildren, 36 great-grandchildren, six step-grandchildren, and one step-great-grandchild. Funeral services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Suckau.—Berne Witness.

On May 3, Mr. Albert Stover, past president of the Eastern District Y. P. Union and a member of the Second Mennonite Church in Philadelphia, will be installed as president of the Delaware Branch C. E. of Philadelphia. The sincere best wishes and prayers of the C. E.'s will follow him as he enters upon this new work.

An impressive candle-light service marked the installation of the newly elected officers of the First Church C. E. Society in Philadelphia on Sunday evening, March 28. Bud Kuhnle is the new president; Rev. J. J. Plenert, pastor.

Missionary August Ewert writes: "We are to sail from Shanghai, China, on the Empress of Japan, April 18th, and we are to land at Vancouver, Canada, May 4th, the Lord willing. We have had a most blessed term in China and the Lord has blessed His work richly. While we are glad to go on furlough, we are also sad to have to leave the work and separate from our many Chinese brothers and sisters in Christ."

In this number of THE MENNONITE we bring a short treatise on "THE LIFTED Savior," by Rev. P. R. Aeschliman, Colfax Wash., our friend and former schoolmate at the Halstead Seminary. He regrets the fact that he couldn't continue his education. But those of us who know of the good work that he has done in his own church at Colfax and the widely scattered churches of the Pacific Conference, feel that his native talent, coupled with the help that God gave him, through the Holy Sspirit, have made him a worker in the vineyard who fully deserves the, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant." Rev. Aeschliman began his work in the west forty-four years ago, amidst many difficulties, and today there is a live church there of some eighty members, now in charge of Rev. Harley King, who has come to relieve the old pastor.

Mrs. Selma C. Sommer of Wayland, Iowa, a former student of the editor, who has been teaching in the high school of that town for a good many years while she was bringing up and educating her three half-orphaned children, has accepted the position of matron or overseer of the dining hall and kitchen at Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio. Her daughter is a freshman at Bluffton, and her two sons are senior and sophomore, respectively, in the Wayland high school.

A young Mennonite student from Bethel College, Karl Baehr, the son of Rev. and Mrs. P. J. Baehr who with their family live on the College campus, won first place in the recent Kansas Peace Oratorical Contest. With his oration, "Mars Beats the Drums," young Baehr ranked first among the contestants from eleven colleges and received the prize-gift of fifty dollars.

The Hoffnungsfeld church near Moundridge, Kansas, gave a reception and program on Sunday, April 25, in honor of their new pastor, Rev. John C. Kaufman, and family. There were interesting meetings in the forenoon and evening.

An International Party was given the seniors of surrounding high school towns by the student body of Bethel College on Thursday evening, April 23. A program in the chapel consisted of greetings in foreign languages, music by representatives of different foreign countries, and a talk on famous foreign-born Americans. Then the large assembly was led to abodes and scenes representing six different countries: A beautiful Hawaiian garden, a coronation scene in England. an American Indian camp, a scene in India, three Chinese booths, and Alaska with its Eskimo huts, ice bears, etc.

Mountain Lake, Minnesota, a stronghold of Mennonitism, also distinguishes herself in other ways. On April 21 an elaborate spring concert was given by the public schools, in which 101 students participated. The program consisted of numbers by the high school band, chorus singing, glee clubs, sextets, octets, reed and brass chamber ensembles.

Another neat Sunday service bulletin has come to us from the Bethany Mennonite Church, Freeman, S. D., Rev. Walter Gering, pastor. It is a four-page folder, with a fine picture of the church building on the front page, and just beneath it this verse, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord," Ps. 122:1.

THE RUSSIAN CHURCH BEING PURIFIED—Prof. Serge Boulgakoff, of the Russian Orthodox Seminary in Paris, says: "Real religion in Russia is more vital today than most people realize. Innumerable priests and a few bishops remain in Russia and minister to the people. During the last three years they have been given more ministerial freedom." To this may be added the testimony of two Russian Christians attending the International Council of the Fellowship of Reconciliation at Paris. They felt that "The Revolution had been the Hand of God, reaching into Russia to purify a corrupt Church, a Church which, under the Czars since Peter the Great, had been merely an instrument for furthering the designs of the government."

God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant and the dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages.—Channing.

BOOK CHATS

F. J. Wiens

With the coming of spring God's great outdoor world beckons to us. As soon as it is warmer there will be a whole series of picnics and socials sponsored by schools, churches and other organizations. Many youngsters are already looking forward to them.

One of the big problems of the teacher or social committee in charge of such outdoor affairs is to plan a variety of wholesome games and activities that will appeal to everybody. Good, clean fun and games never hurt anybody. To fail to provide sensible recreation for growing children and young people often leads to silly forms of entertainment that do not contribute to social and spiritual welfare.

It is to provide teachers and other leaders with ideas for outdoor as well as indoor games and activities that may be indulged in at Christian socials, parties, picnics, etc., that we herewith list and briefly describe what in our estimation are the best books on various forms of recreation.

PLAY GAMES AND OTHER PLAY ACTIVITIES

An invaluable book for the constantly increasing group of men and women who direct play, stating in graphic form the principles essential to the success of recreational activities of many kinds.

THREE OUTSTANDING BOOKS

RECREATIONAL MATERIALS AND METHODS

A unique contribution to the field of recreational and social life source materials. In this book the author combines the principles of recreational leadership with actual program helps, suggestions, and materials covering an unusually wide range of leisure time activities and interests. It is more than a source book. It is more than a text book. The author has written out of an exceedingly wide background of experience, and has purposely avoided theorizing.

PHUNOLOGY

This book is a thorough, practical guide for game master and players for both indoor and outdoor use. In preparing the matter for these pages Mr. Harbin has met the need for many thousands of young people's organizations. He has not done this work from the standpoint of a theorist, but from that of a successful, practical worker who has specialized in his subject and knows exactly what is valuable and available for his purpose. It is a complete compendium of games for people of all ages. Complete with index.

Seventy-fifth thousand $1.50

PARODOLOGY—SONGS FOR FUN AND FELLOWSHIP

In this collection of songs, the author has rendered as helpful a service to community, camp, banquet and organization directors, and song leaders as in "Phunology," which is now in its seventy-fifth thousand. When Mother Prayed

"I think that I shall never see,"
This side of God's eternity,
A scene as lovely as the one
Which met my gaze when day was done,
In childhood years of long ago:
My mother sings, 'tis sweet and low,
Her face with love is all aglow,
She turns the pages of God's Word,
Her tender heart is deeply stirred.

She kneels, she prays, oh what a prayer!
I listen, lingering on the stair—
"God bless my boy"—I hear my name,
And there, within my heart, a flame
Begins to burn—'tis burning yet,
That hour I never shall forget!

Though Mother dear no longer kneels
And prays for me, this night there steals
A ray of warmth into my heart,
And now, like her, from cares apart,
I pray. Her prayers still follow me—
A torch, and by its gleam I see
My home across the crystal sea.

For Mother's Day

by Mrs. S. K. Mosiman

MOTHER

"The wistful stars that one by one
Jet Heaven's hills with light,
Are like the little lamps of love
That mothers set at night
In window sills—that those they love
May guide their steps aright."—Home Lights

The terrible catastrophy at New London, Texas, when a whole generation of children or young people was wiped out, was just fresh in my mind, when I was asked to be the speaker at a Mother-Daughter banquet. "It was a lovely affair. Fathers had cooked the meals; brothers served it. The address was good and all were happy." My thoughts traveled to those mothers who were hunting their children from under the debris or in the morgue. Such a love feast there—was unthinkable.

"So like the little lamps that shone
For me in days of yore,
So like a little lamp that shines
On earth for me no more."

Once, out in the interest of the College, I called on a Mennonite mother. I did not know her. When she opened the door for me, I involuntarily stepped back. The kind eyes looked at me from a face pitiably marred! What terrible accident had done such harm to her? At the evening service she pointed me to a group of lusty youngsters, "Do you see that boy? I carried him out of the fire!" What a price!! even for a mother. I have never forgotten her.

A mother and daughter living in Toledo.—One morning the daughter had disappeared. She was a bright girl and loved thrills! She had eloped with a Syrian fruit-merchant, it was rumored. Years passed —not a word from her; the mother was heart broken.

On our trip to the Holy Land and Egypt we came to Damascus, the oldest city in the world, and very, very beautiful. Entering our hotel we met an occasional travel-companion who was just checking out. He said to me, "Try to come a little closer to the hostess; she is from your neighborhood; her maiden name is. . . . I think you might help her." She was a young, pretty woman, but as the gentleman had felt, entirely out of place here. I told her how glad I was to meet a neighbor in a strange land and that, according to her name, she might even come from Pandora where the name was very frequent. She didn't care to enter into this part of the conversation. Before leaving, with some warm words of appreciation, I asked her whether she would not wish me to take a greeting or gift to her people, since I was to go up there soon. A short, "No" was the answer.

I was to be the speaker at the Mission Institute in Toledo in September. I related having met a young lady from Toledo in Damascus, mentioning her maiden name. I noticed a commotion in the rear of the large hall. A lady rose and spoke, "Mrs. Mosiman is bringing to a mother the answer to her prayer, which lately she has kept up unceasingly, that she might know where to find her daughter."

"And when at evenfall, the stars
Dark hills of Heaven jet,
They are not stars for me but lamps
That waiting mothers set
On window sills of Heaven
That we may not forget."

Mother's Day

The annual recurrence of Mother's Day should remind us of the things which are of supreme importance in the life of the home. There are certain old-fashioned things we greatly need to remember; and about the chiefest of these is that character is developed in young children largely by a process of imitation. It has been truly said that "the things which make a Christian home are not so much taught as caught." There is a certain infection about a lovely and unselfish life. When children see something like the goodness and love of Jesus reflected in the gentleness and kindness of mother, they catch it, they absorb it, they become religious without knowing it, so to speak.

One cannot too strongly emphasize the importance and value of the family aftar and some formal expression of religion or of worship in the home. But it must be frankly said that when these formal observances are in any sense forced upon the members of the family, or when they become a mere humdrum thing without life and interest, their value is reduced to the minimum. More important than these formal observances, always more important and far-reaching, is the way mothers and fathers live Jesus Christ in the presence of their children. It is the life that counts

It is reported that some one asked Whitefield, the great evangelist, whether or not a certain man was a Christian. He answered, "How should I know? I never lived with him." However careful we may be to observe the formal practices of religion, it is the way we live that really tells the story. If a mother has become a true Christian, her children will quickly discover it. They will be the first to discover it. And the inestimable service which American mothers have rendered, is in living Christ in the presence of the growing boys and girls. It is fitting that we should do honor to them for this work they have accomplished in laying the foundations of religious education.—The United Presbyterian.

Rejecting the miracles of Christ, we still have the miracle of Christ himself.—Bovee.

NEW MEANING IN MOTHER'S DAY

In cooperation with the Maternity Center Association of New York, the Federal Council's Committee on Marriage and the Home is appealing to ministers to make Mother's Day, May 9, an occasion for education on the problem of needless maternity deaths. A statement setting forth the facts concerning deaths connected with childbirth and outlining a program for improvong the situation is being widely distributed.

The statement, which suggests the possibility of making Mother's Day have more than sentimental value, says:

Mother's Day was first conceived and proclaimed as an occasion on which to honor mothers, living and dead. Isn't it strange, however, that the United States, which was the first country to observe Mother's Day as a special occasion, should have one of the highest death rates for mothers in childbirth of the civilized world? In our zeal to honor the mothers of the past, have we not forgotten the mothers of the future? In 1934 (latest available figures) 15,000 mothers died from childbirth causes in this land of ours. This is not a complete description, however, of the scope and size of the problem. In the same year over 30,000 babies died within twenty-four hours after they were born! 40,000 more before they were one month old. We in the United States are, therefore, paying for motherhood in the neighborhood of 85,000 lives of mothers and babies every year.

Undoubtedly many of these 85,000 deaths were unavoidable. But thousands upon thousands of babies and added thousands of mothers did not need to die. Two out of every three mothers who died in childbirth last year died needlessly. Medical knowledge knew how to cope with their problems. Hospitals were equipped to care for them. Nurses were available in many communities to aid them. But they died.... and many families were left desolate.

Why did they die? The Maternity Center Association of New York gives three important reasons—ignorance, negligence, and lack of facilities—and the greatest of these is ignorance.

Ruth Hogarth Burritt wrote a beautiful little poem, "A Mother's Prayer," which expresses a desire every mother should have fulfilled—and it usually can be granted if we and others in this community, state, and nation will strive to provide good care for every expectant mother.

Long days of waiting Nights filled with prayer
End of my vigil
Something so fair
I can bear suffering—

But, God, let me stay
That I may walk with him
Part of the way!

As citizens we should support all efforts to improve our local facilities for the provision of good medical care to every mother who needs it. There are six essential but simple elements of maternity care which every mother should have: (1) a complete medical examination early in pregnancy; (2) regular and frequent examination and supervision; (3) an aseptic delivery under the supervision of a competent doctor; (4) supervision, care, and instruction after the baby comes until the mother is able to resume her normal schedule of activities; (5) examination six weeks, three months, six months, and one year after the baby comes; (6) arrangements for the continuous medical supervision of the baby.

The full statement can be had upon request, accompanied by postage stamp, to the Maternity Center Association, 1 East 57th Street, New York, or the Federal Council's Committee on Marriage and the Home, 105 East 22nd Street, New York,—Federal Council Bulletin.

MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN

Ed. G. Kaufman

JESUS AS TEACHER

8. His personal associations.—Jesus was interested in getting the attention of people, not only to make personal contacts, but also to develop these contacts and establish permanent personal associations with these persons. It is an old saying that we teach more by what we are than by what we say. Persons learn by association with people. Religion is caught as well as taught. There is a mysterious way in which one person may influence another through prolonged association. Jesus picked a small group who were constantly with Him and with whom He associated more freely. This group was to be trained and firmly established by association with Him for service to others. Out of the impetuous and unstable Simon, He made a Peter the Rock. Out of the son of thunder and the fire eater, John, He made the Disciple of Love. And so with others He wrought marvelous changes of personality by His sympathetic association with them.

Christ came, not to talk about a beautiful light, but to be that light—not to speculate about virtue, but to be virtue.—H. G. Taylor

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. Richert

OUR FOREIGN MISSION TREASURY

With gratitude to God and the churches we are glad to report that for the first quarter of this year all payments could be made in time. For this second quarter we have not yet enough, but believe the Lord will provide. We still need about $7000.00 for this quarter.

Besides these regular payments, we will need considerable traveling money. Sister Elizabeth Goertz is to return to China next August, and with her will go a new worker, Sister Etta R. Davis from Lansdale, Pa. This is very gratifying in view of the scarcity of workers in China, especially since four of the China workers are coming home this year on furlough.

We have good prospects to be able to send two more new workers to China this year. So we will need considerable traveling money.

We hope that all churches will remember these needs during the coming Pentecost season in their prayers and their gifts.

The following literature has recently ben printed for distribution:

1. Brother and Sister R. Petter's Mission Memoirs in pamphlet form. They appeared in the church papers, and can now be had for 10 cents, without cover, in pamphlet form. (In English).

2. K. T. Johnson's conversion story, as told by himself, in both German and English for free distribution.

FORUM

We have an interesting letter from Prof. L. J. Horsch, Upland, California, in which he offers his compliments on the "new" MENNONITE which we appreciate. He also makes some valuable suggestions as to possible improvements which we cite briefly, hoping that by so doing we can induce others to suggest further improvements or possible comments on Brother Horsch's suggestions. He thinks: 1) The paper should bring in each issue an article relating to the Christian attitude toward modern social, economic, and political problems written by a competent, well-known individual; 2) correspondence should be given a less prominent place and should be set in smaller type; 3) conference programs are of interest principally to local sections, but hardly to the readers remote from that section.

What do others say to this or to other features? We solicit brief, pointed criticisms and suggestions.

If the life and death of Socrates were those of a sage, the life and death of Jesus were those of a God. —Rousseau.

Comforting Thoughts

Mrs. S. P. Preheim

When the shadows dark o'er your path are cast,
And the clouds have hidden the sky once blue,
A very strong light on the other side
Is causing the shadows which here abide;
Your faith can pierce the clouds, if held fast,
Your Lord is always with you.

When your faith grows week, so you scarce can stand,
Against the wiles, which the tempter threw;
Put on the whole armour so true and tried,
Be sure not one piece has been laid aside.
Through prayer grip faith, with a firmer hand;
Your friends are praying with you.

When burdens hard press, and cares distress,
And friends you've trusted have not been true;
There's a Friend you can trust, Who's said with right,
"My yoke is easy, and my burden is light."
"Be careful for nothing," the Bible says,
Because. "He careth for you."

When discouragements your spirit depress,
And souls you have won may seem only a few,
When once is opened the Book that is sealed,
A hidden harvest will be revealed.
Take courage, go forward, and do your best,
Your crown is waiting for you.

THE EDITOR SPEAKING

We deeply appreciate the faithful work of the correspondents. But may we suggest this: Make your contributions rather short, to the point, and report quite often. Avoid matter of mere local concern, but tell of things that will interest readers everywhere.

We get contributions from quite a number of persons who take pleasure in helping THE MENNONITE and its editor. Some articles lose their value if not published immediately, while others are not pressing and can be postponed to a later day. We hope this explains why not all articles appear as promptly as the writers may feel that they should.

WANTED

Information about the good influence of the Sunday newspaper. Moody, speaking about temptation in one of his sermons, related the findings of another man who had taken pains to look over seven of the New York Sunday papers some time before that. This is what they contained, with Moody's remarks:

"Murders and assaults, twelve columns

"Adulteries, seven columns (first-rate Sunday reading!)

"Thefts, etc., twenty-four columns

"Sporting news, eighty-one columns (splendid Sunday reading!)

"Theatrical notes, forty-four columns (must have that for Sunday reading, you know!)

"Gossip and fashion, seventy-seven columns (your soul would get fat on that, wouldn't it?)

"Sensational topics, forty-two columns (people don't like sensational preaching, but they like forty-two columns of sensationalism in Sunday papers.)

"Fiction, ninety-nine columns

"Unclean personals, eight columns (think of a Christian man putting that paper before his children!)

"Foreign news, forty-seven columns

"Political news, one hundred and thirteen columns

"Miscellaneous news, ninety-two columns

"Editorials, thirty-nine columns

"Specials, one hundred and ninety-nine columns

"Art and literature, twenty-four columns

"Religious, three and a quarter columns (splendid sermons in Sunday papers!)

"Nine hundred eleven and a quarter columns, and only three and a quarter columns of them were religious. That is Sunday reading! Gabriel himself couldn't hold an audience whose heads were full of such stuff as that."

Where may we find an advocate of the Sunday newspaper of 1937? After 40 years of supposed improvement, who will show us that our present-day paper is no longer stuffing the moral ears of the sleepy church attendant with moral ear wax?—Sent in by Rev. P. R. Schroeder.

No-Foreign-War Crusade

On April 6, the twentieth anniversary of America's entrance into "the war to end war," the Emergency Peace Campaign launched its great No-Foreign-War Crusade. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Admiral Richard Byrd, honorary chairman of the Crusade, and Dr. Harry Fosdick, active chairman, are participating; and by means of the radio and rallies held all over our land, the people are to be aroused to the great danger of being drawn into another foreign war. And Congress is to be made to feel that the American people are tired of raising their young men to be used as cannon fodder beyond the seas.

PLEASE READ THE FOLLOWING AND ACT

1. DEATH OVERSEAS

The group that favors our making money out of foreign wars has eliminated from the neutrality bills all restrictions that would prevent a war boom. Following close on this success—

It is proposed now to rush through the Senate and the House a bill to conscript four million young American men to fight a war on foreign soil.

Are we going to accept this plan and have our boys die overseas, gassed on strange plains, blown to bits in foreign lands, rotting in alien swamps?

Write both your Senators and your Congressman to oppose any conscription bill. The present proposal is called the Hill-Sheppard Bill, number S. 25 in the Senate, H. 1954 in the House.

This bill is not needed for the defense of the United States. When all men between 21 or 31 are drafted, it is for death and killing overseas. Labor is to be drafted, too.

Tell your Senators and Congressman what you think of votink such a fate for your boys!

A Vote for conscription is a vote for foreign war!

2. REFERENDUM ON LIFE

Right or wrong? Congressman Ludlow says: "The common people are tired of being eternally the buffer in the game of war, and since they have to do the suffering and dying, and to furnish war's cannon fodder, they are asking why they should not have something to say as to whether war shall be declared."

Why not? Should not the people of a democracy decide whether or not they want to take part in foreign wars? Originally suggested by Ambassador Houghton, the proposal to allow the people of the United States to vote in a referendum on war (except in the event of actual invasion of our country) was proposed by Congressman Ludlow. It is House Joint Resolution 199. Senate Joint Resolution 10.

If you favor having a say on the decision to enter war, ask your two Senators and ask your Congressman to support this referendum.

No more wars overseas! Munitions makers, industrial interests grow rich in war—but what about the people? Do they want to give up their lives for war-profits? Do they want to give up democratic government? A war under any slogan means dictatorship.

A vote for the referendum is a vote for peace!

3. DEFENSE OR ATTACK? INFLATION OR PEACE?

Is our Big Navy really only for defense? Does anybody believe that the United States requires a navy as big as that of the British Empire for defense of our soil from invasion?

Is the present "Prosperity" built on armaments orders from abroad? Is the high cost of living a forerunner of another war-boom? Another war?

The time has come for the American people to determine what they are willing to die for. Congress should adopt a national defense policy in line with the determination of the American people to keep out of foreign wars.

Ask your two Senators to vote for a Senatorial investigation of our war-boom and of our naval policy.

Do you know a boy who is worth 9 cents in postage? Write now! Tell your newspapers what is going on.

Two letters to your Senators, one to your Congressman. Write now! Ask your neighbor to write, too.

Peace emergency! Foreign war plans are up!

—Peace Action

HOW THEY DO IT IN ENGLAND.—A news item in a London newspaper is so different that it is worthy of special attention. Two young men were sentenced to six months' imprisonment for snatching the purse of a young woman. The prosecutor said that the men struck the young woman several blows before she was pulled to the ground and her purse taken.

In the light of this information concerning their roughness, the judge added to their sentence that they were each to be flogged with eighteen strokes. Passing sentence the judge said, "It was a dreadful, terrible crime. It would be good for everybody if you should both feel some of the pain which you inflicted upon this girl."

Perhaps this is one reason England does not have a "crime wave." In America there would be postponements and appeals and the young lady victim would die of old age before the criminals reached prison.—Moody Monthly.

ABRAHAM A MAN OF PRAYER

Genesis Chap. 18 Printed: Genesis 18:17-32

Topic: The Ministry of Intercession

Introduction

Among the great persons arising out of the dim past, none surpasses the patriarch Abraham. In today's lesson chapter we see his greatness in his oriental simplicity; in his generous hospitatily; in his intercessory prayer; in his trustfulness; in his great faith. As we follow the scripture record of Abraham, we see his true greatness increasingly revealed. He generously permitted Lot to choose the best land to preserve peace. Later he courageously rescued Lot from his captors. Our lesson reveals him interceding for the righteous in Sodom, praying for their preservation from physical death. There is need for intercession for others today concerning their physical and temporal welfare, but more for their spiritual well-being.

God Reveals His Purpose vs 17-21

Our lesson reveals a most remarkable conversation between Abraham and Jehovah who came to disclose His plans to him (v17). He makes known His plans today to His friends (John 15:15). Abraham was greatly concerned about Lot. His compassion and concern for others showed him to be worthy of God's confidence. God makes His will known to such. Abraham willingly attempted great things for God, and God honored him with great confidence (vs18,19). God had Abraham's posterity in mind, knowing he would instruct his children in loyalty and faithfulness. We are entrusted with the task of instructing our children in the way of the Lord.

Abraham's Intercession vs 22-32

"Abraham stood yet before the Lord" (v22). This vividly portrays his earnestness in intercession for Sodom. Christ stands before God as our intercessor. The Father honors Him. Abraham, in his intense yearning, had no fear in God's presence. His appeal is very direct to Jehovah who had assumed bodily form. He was specific. Prevailing, availing prayer is definite. Earnest prayer, led by the Holy Spirit, has a very definite object and purpose.

Abraham is concerned lest the righteous would perish with the wicked (v23). He prayed that the city be spared for the sake of the righteous found therein. He recognized Jehovah as God, as Judge of all the earth, to whom all are responsible (v25). God granted Abraham's plea (vs 26,28-32). The security of any city, state, nation is found in the righteous among the citizenship. Abraham became bolder to ask for more. It pleases God when our faith grows as He answers our petitions. Abraham prevailed with God. His requests were granted to the limit of his asking (v32). Sodom was destroyed, but the one righteous family was warned and led out by the angels.

Nuggets of Practical Truth

Abraham proved that man may have fellowship with God and enjoy His intimate friendship.

Abraham thought of God as just and equitable.

Abraham's prayer was answered, it was rooted in obedience to and faith in Jehovah.

The reason for failure and for success in prayer lies fundamentally in the person praying.

Definite, united prayer for individuals has usually proved to be the most effective kind of intercession.

Golden Text—James 5:16: "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

If we approach God in the attitude of faith, in the spirit of humility and sincerity, backed by a life pleasing to God, He alone can limit the blessings we shall receive from His hand.

PAYING OUR BILLS

Text: "And Esau lifted up his voice and wept" Gen. 27:38

There are two general kinds of bills: there is the bill which when presented for settlement can be deferred, disregarded or even avoided; then there is the bill which when presented for settlement must be faced. It can be avoided no more than the rising and the setting of the sun. When the appointed time comes, there is humanly nothing to be done to prevent it. In like manner the second class of bills, when presented, must be met.

We have in this man Esau an illustration of this type of bill. Esau made a debt on that particular day when he returned from the field. It may have been a very foolish act on his part but the fact remains that on that day Esau made a debt: he bought a meal from the hands of his brother in exchange for his birthright as the oldest son. Several years went by and the account remained unsettled, the bill was never presented. Then suddenly one day the bill for that mess of pottage eaten long ago was presented at the bedside of the dying father. There in the closing moments of his father's life Esau was forced to settle the account. He wept bitterly; he would have given anything to take back that one hour. But it was in vain. In spite of all his tears he had to settle the account and close the books.

Think of the thousands in every generation of whom Esau is but a type; men and women who have entered life with every opportunity. Yet they have deliberately, thoughtlessly, carelessly sold out everything that has been given them for the sake of a momentary hour of indulgence. When the hour of settlement comes bitter tears of remorse flow freely. Think of those who have started life with a body strong and healthy, yet who have ended as miserable physical wrecks. Think of those who have demonstrated in their early youth their mental abilities to be beyond the average only to finish their days in an asylum. Think of countless others who have had every opportunity as far as home training and spiritual environment are concerned, who have passed behind prison bars, disgraced and stained for life.

Why is it that man will do such things? Why will a student in school waste his time and do only enough to pass when there are others who would do anything if only able to attend school? Why will people neglect prayer, Bible study, church attendance, and individual fellowship with God, when others cry out and plead for such opportunities only to have them denied?

The answer may not always lie upon the surface; a few general suggestions may be offered. How aften it is that we like Esau do things which we regret later because we are so much a people of impulse. Often we act ignorantly. Thousands today are paying a tremendous price for their momentary impulses because they have been ignorant of the price at the time of their action. For such there is a remedy; an intimate relationship with the living Christ who seeks an opportunity to guide, warn and teach.

But there is another reason for the Esaus of today. This generation is selling its God-given birthrights because it hopes and believes that it will not be called upon to settle accounts. Few people deliberately defy consequences of an act, willing to pay the price when the time is due. The average murderer, knowing the tremendous price he may be called upon to pay for his act, commits murder with the hope, even confidence, that he will not be called upon to pay that price. Our scientific age has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt that strong drink is a poison to the body. Yet those who indulge in it refuse to admit even to themselves that they must pay the price. In like manner every one who indulges in the momentary impulses of life, knowing that it may involve costs which he may not be willing to pay, hopes and believes that he shall not be called upon to make the payment. It is like the man who buys on credit with no expectation of ever paying his obligation.

Yet, if Esau would teach anything, it is that there are accounts which must be settled. We may think impure thoughts if we choose to do so, but eventually we pay the price. We may be indifferent to God's Word, to the assembly of His people, to the privilege of prayer, but with the indifference we bring loss upon ourselves. We may waste our God-given opportunities and abilities, but we invite inevitable condemnation upon ourselves when we do so. The time for settlement may not always be the same; some accounts are cash accounts, others are credit, payable later. Some accounts will not be settled until this life has been brought to its close. But the fact remains: we pay our bills.

From India's Coral Strand

"Hold on," some one may say, "that isn't the way our old familiar mission hymn goes." No, it isn't. But that is the way the Rev. P. J. Wiens family went on March 12th, when they left their mission home in India.

On Saturday, April 24th, a number of Mennonite friends from the Los Angeles district made their annual journey to Los Angeles harbor, to meet and welcome returning missionaries. For just a year ago to the day another group of missionaries from India arrived at the same harbor and dock, on the same Japanese steamer, and at the same hour of the day!

Shortly after docking the pasengers of the "Chichibu Maru" were permited to go ashore, and among the first few coming down was Rev. Wiens. There was a slight look of concern on his face. He was soon joined by Mrs. Wiens and their daughters, Martha and Frieda. Perhaps the eagerness of the friends gathering around added to Brother Wiens' concern,—here were about fifteen of them wanting to talk to him, while from the ship was coming a steady stream of packing cases, trunks and bags which were to be inspected, repacked, some shipped to Kansas, and some retained for the rest of the journey. But Customs officials are well trained and patiently they worked their way through the maze of passengers, friends and baggage, opening cases, asking questions, making notes, always smiling, never excited. A railway agent was on hand to direct the shipping. By noon all was in order, and then another Mennonite migration took place, led by Rev. D. D. Eitzen in the direction of the Immanuel Mennonite Church. At the parsonage, Mrs. Eitzen awaited the travellers with a good dinner, and then the Wiens family were free to regain their long unused landlegs. Thus ended the long voyage to the homeland for these veterans of our field in India.

Sunday, April 25th, was again to be "Mission Sunday" at Immanuel Church, and this time the Mission cause was presented with quadruple force: Mr. and Mrs. Wiens spoke in the Married People's S. S. Class, Misses Frieda and Martha addreseed the Sunday School during the closing period, and Mr. Wiens brought the message in the morning service. At noon a pot-luck lunch was served in the basement, when opportunity was given for a social hour with these dear friends. In the evening each of the four had some part in one or other of the Christian Endeavor Societies and Mr. Wiens again occupied the pulpit. So their first day in America was a busy one for them, but the large number of friends who had gathered to hear the messages, fresh from the field, gave added assurance that the mission interest is still very much alive.

As a basis for their message to the churches in America, the Wienses used the following text: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." Their stay with us is all too brief, but we are happy to have the privilege granted but few of our churches,—that of meeting returning missionaries at a homeland port.—Correspondent, Los Angeles, Calif.

CORRESPONDENCE

Mennonite Church, Richfield, Pennsylvania.

We have just closed a series of meetings in charge of Brother Yoder of Roaring Springs, Pennsylvania. The attendance and the interest were very good. Four boys were added to the church in baptism. May the Lord bless them and keep them under the shadow of His mighty wings. The Christians were all edified and sinners warned to flee from the wrath to come. Brother Yoder took us through different parts of Revelations, which had seemed rather deep for us. Yet though he took us through deep waters, he made things plain. May the Lord bless him and keep him in good health for many years to come. The meetings were held from April 10 to April 18 inclusive.

On April 18 we partook of the Lord's Supper and observed the ordinance of feetwashing. About two hundred partook of the Lord's Supper.

Let us not forget that we are all one in Christ if we believe his word. We need each other's prayers.

Blest be the tie that binds

We reenew our pledge with our God and Master with the words of the psalmist: "My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him."

The church activities for the new year have been resumed with reorganization of church, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor. The week of prayer was observed in connection with other churches from Dalton, one of their pastors and our pastor assisting with services at their churches and ours.

Rev. Wilmer S. Shelly of Wadsworth brought us a message during Lenton services. On Good Friday morning four young people were added to the church through the rites of baptism. On Easter Sunday morning Communion was observed with a large attendance. In the evening the Community Chorus, directed by Brother Victor Gerber, rendered the beautiful cantata, "The Holy City."

The Gospel Team group of Bluffton College favored us with an inspiring program on Sunday morning, April 4.—Mrs. L. E. Amstutz, Correspondent.

A Mennonite Youth Looks At Science

Ray E. Heiks

(Concluded)

During the twentieth century such rapid advances were made in science that finally the key to the solution was found and science could be united with religion in harmony. Dean Inge has remarked, "Far from being in conflict, science has become an ally of religion." Through Heisenberg's Principle of Uncertainty and other recent discoveries it is now possible to accept all the scientific theories and still have freedom of thought and a God behind the universe as its ruler and creator. Compton, one of the world's leading scientist of the present day, says, "The scientist feels that God is in nature, that the orderly ways in which nature works are themselves the manifestations of God's will and purpose. Its laws are His orderly way of working. It is now possible to be a scientist and a Christian without having conflicting ideas to hurdle. A scientist can believe in God as well as a minister in any church. We find that most of the present-day scientists do believe in God, and are Christian individuals.

Most of the denominations have accepted this later view of science and religion, but a few of the conservative Mennonites still cling to the medieval idea that all scientists are atheists and teach atheistic principles. They are under this impression because they refuse to read the latest books in science. The ironic thing about it is that this group of people reject the scientists, while they gladly accept the results of his researches, such as the electric lights, radio, automobile, and the latest medical discoveries.

Science has done more to alleviate human suffering than any other factor in the world. According to the teachings of Jesus Christ, men were to help and comfort their suffering neighbor as was brought out in the parable of the Good Samaritan, and through scientific research man has been able to carry out this principle of Christ more than with any other device known. Think of the progress in the medical field and comforts brought to the home through science, all helping in the alleviation of human suffering.

Living in a scientific age as we do and accepting the devices of scientific research as we do, it is necessary, in all fairness, to eliminate this undue prejudice against the scientist from our thinking. The least any one of us can do is to be broadminded enough to listen to the scientist view in our modern age and then determine for himself if it is not possible to unify science and religion in harmony. Of course, there are some scientists who teach the atheistic doctrine as well as there are people who teach this doctrine who are not scientists, but as a whole science has rejected atheism and has accepted a God as creator and ruler of the universe. Is it logical, in order to carry out Christ's teaching to relieve human suffering, to reject the class of people who can do more to help us in this program than any other class known?

WHY?

Why do men declare they love the Lord
And live as if they never knew Him?
Why do men make vows to mend their ways
And live as if they never made them?
Why do men subscribe to faiths and creeds
And live as if they ne'er believe them?
Why do men seek blessings from the Lord
And live as if they ne'er received them?
Why do men have Bibles on the shelf
And day by day neglect to read them?
Why do men who know the laws of God
From day to day refuse to heed them?

A PROGRESSIVE MENNONITE CHURCH SPOT-MAPS ITS FIELD

We were looking over the Sunday morning church bulletin of one of our Mennonite churches in one of America's largest cities. Headed up by a dynamic Mennonite youth, this church has set out to study its field of responsibility and opportunity. We'll just quote from the bulletin itself:

THE FIELD OF RESPONSIBILITY OF A MENNONITE CHURCH IN LOS ANGELES! We have recently completed a spot map of our mission field. This map is in the rear of the church auditorium so that members and friends of the church may familiarize themselves with our God-entrusted task. The field has been divided into 11 districts. The blue tacks represent addresses of members of this church and the red tacks represent addresses of non-members who are cooperating with this church. There are 244 addresses represented by these tacks and these represent 485 names on the pastor's responsibility list. Besides this number of constituents, there are 204 names connected with some department of this church with whom the pastor has not had a personal contact and who are therefore not represented on this map. There are 268 names of non-members on the pastor's spiritual responsibility list. Of these, 162 are persons with a Mennonite background. This constituency is scattered over a large area. 52 per cent of the church members live within 4 miles of the church, 21 percent of the members live between 4 and 12 miles from the church. 13 per cent live between 12 and 25 miles from the church, and 14 per cent of our members live beyond 25 miles from the church.

That's visual education for the layman, sir!

T., May 20. Luke 9:51-56. To what extent does my life measure up to the spirit here shown?

F., May 21. Luke 4:28-30. Is the power which protected Jesus from the wrath of his enemies, also available to you and me today?

S., May 22. Matt. 5:43-48. The way to become perfect!

Problems and Projects

1. By all means have someone review at this meeting Lloyd Douglas' book, WHITE BANIERS—not so much the plot, or story, as the philosophy of non-resistance which runs through it.

2. A splendid way of bringing this across would be to have two persons present: 1. The traditional Mennonite view of non-resistance (See next week's issue of THE MENNONITE, in this connection); and, 2. Douglas' view of non-resistance, in WHITE BANNERS.

3. Was the Mennonite attitude of non-resistance during the World War mostly a means of overcoming evil with good; or mostly a self-defense mechanism, giving us a convenient excuse for not having to fight; or mostly just sticking up for a point?

4. How can our doctrine of non-resistance show itself as positive good will to overcome current evils of modern life?

   Sentence prayers. Write out brief prayers and give them to several of the more timid members. Ask them to use them if they wish or make their own. Close with the chorus, "Let the Beauty of Jesus"
   Offering. Offer a short prayer before it is received
4. The Topic Presented
   "Resolved that the development of good will in the hearts of men can do more toward the promotion of World Peace than legislation." This puts the topic in the form of a question for debate and may help to bring out the points. Have three or four prepare on each side. Be sure the topics are assigned far enough in advance so that the public school instructors can be consulted. Quotations on the subject can be interspersed. If possible, have those on each side meet at the close of the meeting the Sunday previous to plan their talks.

The society should determine on at least one specific task that it can undertake in the interests of peace. A splendid list of suggestions is given in the C.E. World Quarterly

As the Hart Panteth after the Water Brooks

Junior Suggestions for May 16, 1937

He that believeth on me shall never thirst.—Jesus

This quotation could be the key verse of the evening appearing on the pin-ons and on the poster. For the pin-ons a white piece of paper could be used half covered with a piece of blue, indicating water. In the space of white over the blue print the above verse. For the poster you could cut a picture of a brook from some magazine, pasting it on light background. Over the top could be the verse, Psalm 42:1, and at the bottom of the poster John 6:35b, leaving the invitation to the meeting for the center. This should be in small lettering, the verses in large lettering.

It would be ideal to have a beautiful sanctuary into which we could lead our juniors; one with subdued light through art glass windows, with walls and seats and altar in heavy carved oak, with carpets so soft that no sound could disturb, with a cross, always illumined, set in the window behind the altar, waiting for the worshipper. This would be ideal. Though we have this not, could we make it nevertheless a place that shall lead to worship, that shall allow the soul to thirst for its God? Assemble the juniors outside of your "sanctuary" until soft music from within calls to worship.

Call to Worship by music of "Tread Softly, Tread Softly"

Let your junior quartet be the last ones to enter. Upon entering let them sing the words of this hymn while all remain standing

Period of Worship

1. Speak in unison "The Lord is in His hold temple, etc." Be seated
2. Chairman speaks Psalm 42:1 and 2. This could be put on blackboard in some beautiful setting
3. Sing in unison "O Seek That Beautiful Stream"
4. Read responsively selection 10 Mennonite Hymnal
5. Sing in unison "Lord, I Hear of Showers of Blessing"
6. Prayer by leader

Study Period. Aim: to show how the thirst of the soul is satisfied when it comes to the Fountain of Life

1. "My soul is athirst for God"—three-minute heart-talk by leader picturing the thirst of each human soul for God. Psalm 63:1; 143:6
2. God's Promise to the Thirsty. In charge of a junior who calls on those to whom the following passages have been dealt which are now read: Isa. 49:10; Matt. 5:6; John 4:14; John 7:37; Isa. 44:3a. Following these let this junior ask the group to read the verse on the pin-ons in unison (John 6:35)
3. Special music: "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" Verses 1 and 2
4. How God Kept His Promise—talks by juniors
    a. To the thirsty heart of the Samaritan woman. John 4
    b. To the thirsty heart of Zacchaeus. Luke 19:1-10
    c. To the thirsty heart of Bartimaeus. Mark 10:46-52
    d. To the thirsty heart of two disciples. Luke 24:13-32
    e. To the thirsty heart of the Ethiopian. Acts 8:26-39
5. Sing in unison "Standing on the Promises"
6. What the Thirsty Must Do—object lesson by leader or guest. Use a dying plant and a healthy plant. Let these be young potted plants representing two juniors in the stage of preparing for later fruit-bringing. Both had the opportunity of food which they needed (the junior has the home, the Sunday School, the Endeavor, the ministers, good books, the Bible). The one plant took food while the other one did not (the food is there in abundance but this one junior did not know that he must do the drinking himself). Results. Use John 6:35 as the basis of this lesson
7. Sing in unison "Just As I Am"
8. Closing prayer

THE JUNIOR CORNER

"Young lives, young lives are needed
To serve the King above;
Young hearts to bound with gladness,
Responsive to His love:
Young eyes to catch the vision
Of Bethlehem's rising Star;
Young lips to tell the story
To all the world afar.

Young hands, to help the burdened,
The sorrowful and lost;
Young arms to save the shipwrecked
Upon the breakers tossed;
Young faces full of sunshine,
To bear the light of day
To those who in the darkness
Are stumbling in the way.

Young feet to follow daily
The youthful Nazarene;
What blessings came from heaven
Whenever He was seen!
So may His youthful followers
Bear o'er land and sea,
A brightness that's unfading,
A joyance, fresh and free!

Young lives! the Master needs them;
Young lives! the world cries out,
"Give us your faith and courage
To chase our fear and doubt!"
You on whose brow is shining
The priceless gem of youth
Come, bring it to your Savior,
And serve the Lord in truth."

PETER JANSEN

The name of Peter Jansen, was honored this year at the annual meeting of the Nebraska Hall of Agricultural Achievement, in Lincoln, Nebr. This organization gives special recognition to one outstanding individual every year and on this occasion Peter Janzen, a Mennonite, was eulogized as a leader, philantropist and man, by his son in law, C. J. Claassen of Omaho.

The following is of interest to our denomination: Peter Janzen's parents joined the group of Mennonites that went to South Russia toward the end of the 18th century, at the invitation of Catherine the Great who promised them exemption from military service. In 1870 the Russian Government broke this covenant and the elder Jansen advised his friends to sell their lands and seek a new home in America. For this advise he brought down the wrath of the Russian officials and was ordered to leave the country.

The Jansens arrived in America in 1873 and, establishing communications with their Russian friends, were commissioned to visit the West and look for good land to be had at a low price. Because of his knowledge of English as well as of the lands which he and his father had inspected, Peter was later on appointed to lead a delegation to the West where Jefferson County, Nebraska, was decided on as the choice of location.

Sometime in 1876 Peter Janzen went again to New York to meet and bring west some of their friends from Prussia who settled in Gage county, Nebraska. In his memoris, written nearly 40 years later, Mr. Jansen writes: "They have kept up their characteristics to a large degree to the present day, and probably stand unique with their moral and business standards. There has not been a criminal case among them during all these years and probably not over a dozen civil law suits. They have become useful, law abiding American citizens, and are respected throughout the community and state."

In the countries of the old world the Mennonite church has never permitted its members to take an active part in politics, but Peter Jansen reasoned that in the U. S., a country which gave every indication of furnishing them permanent freedom, conditions were entirely different, and soon he formed the conclusion that the man who failed to do his part in maintaining good Government was not a useful citizen. He, therefore, took an active interest in politics, and threw the weight of his influence and organizing ability behind every movement which he considered to be for the betterment of his adopted country. His religious conviction prevented his acceptance of the nomination for governor of Nebraska because he feared he might be required to enforce the death penalty. He served in the Nebraska legislature and after his retirement as an active farmer and ranchman lived for years in Beatrice. He was prominent in promoting the establishment of the Mennonite hospital and Deaconess Home there, and a substantial contributer to the institution.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

MARRIAGES

Bloser—Tschantz. On December 26, 1936, by Rev. A. R Keiser, Harry Blosser and Miss Marie Tschantz, both of Dalton, Ohio.

DEATHS

Mrs. Clara Stauffer (nee Herman) died at her home, 536 Willow Street, Pottstown, Pennsylvania, on Friday, April 16, aged 84 years, 6 months, 3 days. She will be sadly missed by her two sons, on daughter, six grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. Her husband and one daughter preceded her in death.

Mrs. Stauffer was a faithful member of the Menno Simons Mennonite Church, Boyertown, for many years. Funeral services were conducted at her home on Tuesday, April 20, by her pastor, the Rev. E. S. Shelly, who used Phil. 1:21 as his text. Interment was made in the Eden Mennonite Church Cemetery, Schwenksville.

Mrs. Martha Bechtel, 54 years old, wife of Harvey S. Bechtel, deacon of the Mennon Simons Mennonite Church, Boyertown, died at her home near Gabelsville, Pennsylvania, on Friday, April 16, after a long illness. She is survived by her husband, one daughter, one son, four sisters, on brother, and two grandchildren. She was a faithful member of the Good Shepherd Reformed Church, Boyertown. Funeral servies were conducted at the Fairview Chapel, Boyertown, on Wednesday, April 21, by the Revs. G. G. Greenwald and E. S. Shelly. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery.

At the funeral of John Adams Nolf, held in the Rabenold Funeral Home at Allentown, Pennsylvania, on January 3, the Rev. E. S. Shelly preached the funeral sermon, using the text Eccl. 9:12, which was selected by the bereaved sister, Laura A. Noff. —Correspondent, Menno Simmons Church, Boyertown.

Studer. Mrs. Lea Studer, daughter of Jacob and Catherin Steiner Amstutz, passed away suddenly at her home west of Kidron, April 14. When her daughter entered her bedroom in the morning after having found her resting normally during the night, she found her undisturbed, still peacefully asleep, but her spirit had fled. The departed had first been ailing with a bronchial cold from which developed complications of a heart ailment to which she succumbed.

Mrs. Studer was born on June 1, 1870, and reached the age of 66 years, 10 months, and 13 days. On April 10, 1890, she was baptized and received into the Salem Church, at Dalton, Ohio, by Rev. A. A. Sommer, where she continued to be actively interested throughout her life. On December 15, 1897, she was united in marriage with Rudolph Studer, and through this marriage a home was founded that continued to be a post of peace and contentment. Since the homegoing of the husband and father in 1928, the mother and daughter continued to make their home there. The departed sister had many abilities, but chose to live a quiet, unassuming life, spreading cheer and kindness without desire of reward. The departed is survived by her daughter Mabel, high school instructor, three sons, Clare of North Canton, head chemist of the Hoover Sweeper Company at that place, Dr. Walter Studer of Crestline, and Irvin Studer, manager of the Chevrolet Company at Montgomery, West Virginia. There remain also four grandchildren and two sisters, Mrs. Andrew Welty of Apple Creek and Mrs. Lydia Moser of Onville.

Funeral services were held on Saturday afternoon, April 17. conducted by Rev. A. R. Keiser, and were attended by a host of relatives and friends from far and near.

Willard E. Graber, son of John P. Graber and Anna Goering Graber, was born near Pretty Prairia, Kansas, on January 7, 1914. In August of 1922, the family moved into the vicinity of Moundridge, Kansas, where he had his home with his parents since that time.

On June 2, 1929, he recived the holy rite of baptism and united with The First Mennonite Church of Christian, in Moundridge, Kansas, where he held his membership till the time of his death.

For a little over a year he had been working in the oil fields. On April 19, of this year he was transferred into the vicinity of Blackwell, Oklahoma. On Saturday morning, April 24, 1937, while working on an oil derrick eighty feet from the ground, in some way, he fell and was instantly killed. His age was 23 years, 3 months and 17 days. He leaves to mourn his sudden death, his parents, two brothers, four sisters, one grandfather and many other relatives and friends. One sister preceded him in death.

Funeral services were conducted in the afternoon of April 26 from the First Mennonite Church of Christian. The elder of the Church, P. P. Wedel, spoke words of comfort from Isaiah 40:6-8.

Mary Wieler, nee Dyck, was born December 21, 1899, near Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Canada, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Dyck, who had immigrated there from Russia. Both parents passed into eternity when she was a young girl. In her younger days she was instructed in the Christian faith, and she confesed her faith in her Saviour in the holy rite of baptism.

In 1825 she was married to John Wieler in San Francisco, California. In 1929 they moved to Minnesota, and in May of 1936 they came to Beatrice and made their home here.

A few week ago her health failed, and it was necessary to take her to the hospital. Early in the morning of April 19, she was called to the homeland, at the age of 37 years, 3 months, and 58 days.

She leaves to mourn her early departure her husband, three sons—Benno, Herbert, and Gordie—six brothers, and a number of other relatives and friends. A brother, and a sister passed away last summer.

Funeral services were held in the Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, Thursday, April 22. Words of comfort were spoken by Rev. M. Horsch; German text, Hebrews 4:9; English text, I Corinthians 13:13. Interment was made in the Mennonite cemetery.

CORRESPONDENCE

Northern Bible Society,
715 W. Superior Street, Duluth, Minn.

Dear Editor: I am enclosing a brief story to emphasize the need for Bible distribution throughout our northern states. This is the area we call our homefield, though many scriptures have been sent to other sections, to the needy districts in many different states, including Kansas. During the past year, for instance, our Society has provided the MBUM tribe in the Caroon section of the French Congo in Africa with the Gospel of St. Luke.

THIRTY-SEVEN MILES

If you look at the latest atlasses you will discover that two-thirds of the western part of the Dakotas and Nebraska is sparingly settled or is missionary territory. This is also true of Montana and Wyoming. Scattered over these sections are hundreds of little settlements in which the people live without any religious opportunities. Young people grow to manhood and womanhood who have never known that there is such a Book as the Bible until they receive one from our Society. What a wonderful Book the Bible proves to be then, and how gratefully they read and treasure God's Word.

One day, in a small settlement located in the "dry" zone where the people have had no harvest for seven years, the people began to talk among themselves about a Bible Study Club. These poverty-stricken people knew little about club organizations; but they felt that if, somehow, they could organize a Bible Study Club, they would receive a blessing and new courage to go on. Many of these poor people had never seen a Bible or had ever been in any religious service; but in their hearts was an overwhelming desire to read and study God's Word. They began to lay plans for the Bible Study Club, and first they must have at least one Bible before they could begin their study. They searched the village, but not one copy of the Sacred Scriptures could be found—not a family in the entire settlement nor even in the surrounding community possessed even one Bible. They began to make inquiries, and finally information reached them that a family living thirty-seven miles away had a Bible.

One of the men eagerly offered to make the trip to see if the fortunate possessors of the Word of God would loan it for a while so that they might organize their Bible Study Club. The owners of the Book loaned it gladly for a short while; but they could not be long without the comfort of God's Word, so the problem must again be faced—where could they get a Bible? Fortunately information came to their settlement that the Northern Bible Society of Duluth, Minnesota, would aid them and would gladly give them Bibles free; every family in their settlement who wanted a Bible and could not pay for one would receive one as a gift. Great was the rejoicing among the people. What a glorious offer—what a wonderful Society—such were their thoughts.

We must have the Bible, it is a necessity and not a luxury—it speaks to every class and to every nationality—it fills every human need. If the American youth is to grow up with a true knowledge of right and wrong they must know the Law of God; if they are to find the Highway that leads to Life Everlasting they can only do so through the teachings of the Word of God.

Jesus said, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life."

— The Annual Junior C. E. Rally of the Perkiomen Valley Branch was held at the Eden Mennonite Church, Schwenksville, Pennsylvania, on Sunday, April 18. The program consisted of song service, devotional service by Palm Society, also prayer, and guitar selections by the Bally Society. Schwenksville society had marimba selections, a vocal solo, and also had charge of the offering service. "Uncle Bill" Hutchinson gave greetings. Paul Shelly gave an interesting object talk to the Juniors. Rev. F. H. Swartz also gave a short talk to the Juniors. The awarding of the banner went to the Palm Society for having the largest percentage present.—L. R.

— The thirty-third annual meeting of the Bethel Deaconess and Hospital Association of Kansas will be held in the First Mennonite Church at Newton, Kansas, on May 11, beginning at 10:00 a. m. Rev. J. N. Smucker of the Bethel College Church will give the opening address, which will be followed by the usual reports. In the afternoon the assemblage will consider the feasibility of the founding of a Sanatorium for persons who suffer from nervous afflictions or mental disorder. In addition, plans for a closer cooperation between Bethel Hospital and Bethel College will be discussed, with Rev. A. J. Dyck and President E. G. Kaufman as sponsors.

— Bluffton College has inaugurated a plan of ministerial visitations by which the ministers of the churches that make up the larger part of the constituency of the College are to visit the school a few days, make addresses in chapel, visit clases, and interview students. Rev. E. Troyer of Carlock, Illinois, inaugurated the program, making his visits in March.

WORLD-WIDE DAY OF PRAYER, for ministers and missionaries on Pentecost Sunday, May 16. "The Field is the World." "O Lord, Revive Thy Work." Heb. 2:2. This movement is sponsored by the "Great Commission Prayer League."

— The Gospel Team of Bluffton College conducted a Temperance Meeting at the Mennonite Church in Berne, Indiana, on May 2. Talks were given by members on "Temperance" and "Christianity and Vocations." The program was interspersed with fine music by the Team and members of the group making the visit, which numbered about thirty-five.

— Freeman College, too, has a chorus which occasionally visits the churches of its constituency and other places. The College invited members of the Board and Faculty, ministers of the churches, church workers, and any one interested in the work of the school to a general discussion meeting held in the College Gym on Sunday, April 25. The following is the substance of the questions that were discussed: 1. What changes or improvements could be made to make the school serve the community and the Kingdom of God better? 2. Are there some things in the school which cause parents, students, and constituents to be satisfied? 3. How can we bring about a closer relationship between the school and the churches?

— The active campaign for a total of $150,000 in gifts for a Memorial Hall and other needs at Bethel College starts on April 30 and will end with the annual booster banquet on May 11, which has been a regular feature for the past few years. The campaign is directed by Wm. Gillanders of Oakland, Calif.

— Rev. Henry Harder sends us a copy of the "Enid Mennonite Mission Bulletin." The Bulletin carries a pen-sketch of the Mission church there, an interesting article on "Easter Thoughts," and others on the First Annual Report of the Mission Society, Summer Vacation Bible School, News Items, and Announcements. Under the active, consecrated leadership of Rev. and Mrs. Harder this mission enterprise is making good progress. The Lord is blessing their efforts.

— The recent lynchings in the country have again stirred Congress to action. Although some anti-lynching measure has been introduced into every session of Congress since the Civil War, so strong has been the opposition from the South that no bill ever passed. The House passed an anti-lynching bill sponsored by J. A. Cavagon of New York, 277 for, 119 against. It is feared that the Senate vote will go against it.

— It seems as though President Roosevelt is losing his grip on Congress, which has been in the habit of putting its stamp of approval on almost everything the chief executive asked for during his first term of office. This change of attitude appears to be mainly due to two causes: The first is that a great many honest citizens of both parties are strongly opposed to Mr. Roosevelt's attempt to pack the Supreme Court with more judges; the second is the resentment of many members of Congress at the President's too ready attitude of listening to his theoristic advisors, who do not always counsel him right, as was the case in the passing of the undistributed tax law, which is causing a huge shortage in the nation's income.

HOW COME?

Now and then we hear or read of congregations in our General Conference that are enlarging, rebuilding or remodeling their houses of worship. Within a radius of forty miles of Newton, Kansas, seven congregations had to build new and larger churches during the last ten or twelve years and three others remodeled or added onto theirs. And activities similar to these would probably be found to pertain in other sections of our conference territory. On the other hand one hears and knows of half-filled or even abandoned churches both urban and rural, belonging to some of the other religious bodies. How does it come that our congregations, at least a good many of them, show vigor and life, and grow and expand, while among others we hear of a lack of life and interest, of shrinkage and decay, in some of their churches. An explanation for this condition we believe can be found in the fact that, generally speaking, our people hold on to the true Gospel. They expect their ministers to preach the plain Bible truths and the plan of salvation provided through Jesus Christ rather than through some newfangled social theory. And they expect their ministers, as true shepherds, to give them what their hearts yearn for. God's Word preached in its purity, in its unadulterated form, is bound to do the work it is intended for. We have God's promise for that.

But there is another reason, just as potent. Back of our churches there are the homes which, generally speaking, are still old-fashioned enough to maintain the family altar and to make real efforts to bring up the children in "the fear of the Lord." That is what counts! that keeps the fire of the true inner life glowing in the hearts of the young as well as of the old. Take our young ministers! we are getting to have a good many of them. And it warms one's heart to observe the splendid account that they give of themselves, as a result of the Christian training they have received in their homes, in our schools, and our colleges. Here is a glimpse of an interesting experience with two of our men: Some years ago we were tutoring these men in a course upon the History of Education. When we reached Luther who had such a struggle in acquiring the faith that later carried him through all adversity, it appeared opportune that these students make an expression of their faith. Taking the Apostle's creed as a basis, they showed positively that they believed it all, without reservation. They were perfectly willing to subscribe to all the "believes." Examples like these could be given in goodly numbers by those who are dealing with the products of our homes, our Sunday Schools and churches, and our colleges. One of the young men referred to is now a prominent attorney, a Christian attorney; the other is a successful physician and surgeon, and a real Christian one, too. May God grant that the homes and churches of our conference may never lose their hold on the true religion in Jesus Christ!

FELLOWSHIP

There is no surer source of happiness in this world than that which can be found in Christian fellowship. Wealth, position, fame, the acclaim of the populace are mere dross as compared to that genuine inner feeling of peace and security that comes from Christian fellowship. We can fellowship with our heavenly Father in prayer and in meditation upon his Word anywhere. We can meditate upon his power, his wisdom, his greatness and, above all, upon his unsurpassing love. How our hearts well up in the thought that he is OUR heavenly Father and that we are his children, and as such heirs and partakers of all that He is and has. We can fellowship with Him who gave up throne, power and glory to become the humblest of men, that he might save us from eternal death. We can fellowship with our brothers and sisters in Christ in worship, in song, in the study and discussion of the Holy Word, and in our daily intercourse. We can have our share in that great task of bringing the bread of life to those that have not yet seen the light of day. O how unspeakably rich the Christian is! All the resources of heaven and earth are his, if he can only persuade himself, through the help of the Spirit, to make use of them.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. Richert

Birra, via Baraduar, C. P., India
March 18, 1937

Dear Friends:

Just a word of greeting from us in our new home. We begin to feel quite settled and are slowly finding our place in the work.

It has been interesting to come here as "new" missionaries and to watch the "old" missionaries leaving. We spent several weeks with Rev. and Mrs. Wiens and the girls, Frieda and Martha. We were glad for the intimate glimpses we had of what had gone into the making of this home. There is more to such a place than brick, mortar and cement. We stood with them under the trees where they had first pitched their tent when coming to see this place as a possible mission station. We walked among the fruit trees that had been planted so long ago and tried to remember which ones bore the sweetest fruit. It was interesting to see how quickly our children took possession of the walled garden in front of the bungalow. And no wonder—fruit trees, flowers and a wonderful place like those told about in story books where trees and vines have made a beautiful room. The space underneath the tree is large enough for a whole sewing society to meet in. Here, one afternoon, Mrs. Wiens had all the Christian women in for a farewell tea and I had a chance to become better acquainted with them. The next afternoon Mr. Wiens, not to be outdone, had all the men in and Mr. Duerksen shared the privilege of being with them.

We could only dimly appreciate what these last meetings and walks meant to Rev. and Mrs. Wiens. As we walked along with them we heard here an interesting story about an individual, there a comment and now an explanation.

On the last Friday the church was crowded for the farewell. The Christians were there and also many non-Christians who in days past had been employed in the building work, had heard the Gospel often but who had not taken that most important step. After the church service was over the non-Christians gathered under the trees for a last talk with the "old" sahib and Memsahiba. They gathered under the trees where the first Sunday school had been held. Some of them had once faithfully attended Sunday School. I did not count how many were gathered here but looking into their faces as Rev. Wiens spoke to them and hearing them sing from memory songs they had learned, I could in a measure realize the heartache felt by the "old" missionaries that these who knew the Name that is above all names had yet not owned Him as Lord and Saviour.

Saturday morning (Mar. 6) the last bags and parcels were gathered up, the Christians came for last farewells, and as we stood near the car the Christian women sang "God Be With You Till we Meet Again." A prayer followed and then a final wave of the hand and they were off. Our eyes were dim with tears. Were theirs? On the following Tuesday early in the morning they left Champa for Bombay. Just a few hours before sailing time Mrs. Wiens wrote to us. The Lord had already granted "journeying mercies" for the beginning of the trip.

Will Rev. and Mrs. Wiens come back again? Who can say! Life is so uncertain but God has His own ways of working. We can safely leave the future in His hands.

Rev. and Mrs. Thiessen and we are now close neighbors here at Birra. Rev. Thiessen has his school work and also the Christian church. Mr. Duerksen's work is out in the district with the evangelists and Bible women. In the cooler weather I will be out with him much of the time but just now my work is to fit in wherever needed.

Joseph John, our nine year old, has gone up to the school with the other missionary children. Christine Marie who was to have gone up at the same time was sick so will have to wait until someone else goes up with whom she can travel. We are glad to be back in India and we trust that He who sent us out will also see fit to use us in the work.

Yours in His Service,
Christena H. Duerksen

JESUS AS TEACHER

9. His attitude toward the young.—The sympathy of Jesus went out toward all classes, but more especially toward those in need and the young. He took the children in His arms and blessed them. When the thousands were fed, children were not overlooked. He healed the daughter of Jarius and the son of the centurion He observed and refers to the manner of children's play: "We whistled, and you refused to dance." He was not pleased that the disciples tried to keep children away from Him. He called children by their pet names: "Talitha cumi" ("Lambkin, arise"). The angels of children, He says, always behold the face of the heavenly Father; that is, to God nobody is more important than they. Jesus loved and pitied children: "Weep for yourselves and your children." If anyone offends a little one, "it were better for him to be drowned with a millstone around his neck where the sea is the deepest." To Him the children are representatives of the members of the Kingdom. "He who receives a child receives Me." "It is not the will of my Father that one little one should perish." Children readily came to Him, were happy in His presence, and sang His praises.

A NEW SONGBOOK

FOR THE HOME, SCHOOL AND CHURCHES

A few years ago the Western District Conference gave its Education Committee instructions to prepare a song book for use in the work with children, young people somewhat on the plan of "Der Kleine Liederschatz," a collection of songs compiled by that well known friend of children and young folks, Rev. David Goerz; only it was to be larger and more extensive. The committee at once contacted with the Mennonite Book Concern, to ascertain if the General Conference Board of Publication might be willing to undertake the publication of the book. But limited in its finances as that Board has always been, it felt unable to shoulder the task.

Meanwhile the Committee, with the aid of the musical faculty of Bethel College and others interested in the cause, set to work to compile a book with songs fit for worship with children and young people, in the home, the day school, the Sunday school, young people's meetings, and even in the church, where so desired. As the book took on form, the Herald Publishing Company of Newton, Kansas, offered to take over its publication and sale, if the committee would furnish the manuscript free. This was agreed to. The committee annually reported to the Conference the plans and progress in the making of the book, and finally submitted to it a mimeographed list of the selections, and the Conference approved it as it did the committee's previous actions.

After considerable delay, due to the depression and other unavoidable causes, which, however, enabled the committee to add to and further enrich the collection of songs, the manuscript was turned over to the Herald Publishers, and the book is now on sale.

The book "Treasure Songs for Schools and Churches," contains songs for all phases of worship and Christian group singing. It is not intended to replace our Mennonite Hymn Book, but to supplement it. It is unique in that it contains about twenty-five German songs in original translations, songs which have long been favorites with our ancestors; also about forty songs for smaller children, a much needed contribution to primary work in our Sunday schools.

A World-Wide Day of Prayer

FOR MINISTERS AND MISSIONARIES

Sunday, May 16, 1937 (Pentecost)

"THE FIELD IS THE WORLD."

"Look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest" (John 4:35).

"O LORD, REVIVE THY WORK"—Hab. 2:2

The need for a world-wide revival is supreme. Ministers and Missionaries recognize this fact more keenly than do others; they are on the world's spiritual battle fronts. The strengthening of their arms, and the quickening of their souls will mean world-wide blessing to the Church of God, and the salvation of many. If they were to articulate their deepest desire, would they not say, "BRETHREN, PRAY FOR US"?

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfil the law of Christ"—Galatians 6:2.

DELIVERANCE FROM A CUT-THROAT

In the spring of the year 1916, when we were living at Beemer, Nebr., I decided to visit my folks who, since they came to America, had always lived near Freeman, S. Dak.

I took my son James who was then about three years old along, to visit his grandmother, and we had an enjoyable time visiting with the folks. However, on our way back home, via Running Water and Niagara, when we reachel the second or third railroad station in Nebraska, I had an experience which I will never forget.

A young girl, about 15 or 16 years of age, came into our car and sat down right opposite my seat. I noticed that she was very lightly and foolishly dressed. Her whole arms were bare, and her dress was very short at both ends. As many a young woman makes herself conspicuous and is guilty of attracting unduly the attention of sensually minded young men, so this girl was offending the rules of modest attire.

Soon after she had sat down, a woman came and seated herself beside her. Had I anticipated what was going to happen, I would have paid more attention to the conversation of the two. After traveling a little distance, this woman left and two stalwart young men, whom she must have informed, came in and took their seats beside the girl. Both of these men were taller and heavier than myself and appeared to be between 20-30 years of age. I overheard of how they introduced themselves to the girl and asked her, who she was, and where she was going? I do not remember every thing that was said, but I know the girl told the men that she was on her way to California. They asked her, if she had ever gone through the city of Omaha and if she would not now permit them to show her the city. Besides that, they soon commenced to molest the girl with caresses and improper behavior.

As I watched them, I felt all the time that this girl was in danger of becoming a victim of white slavery, and that it was my duty to warn her of such danger. So I stepped over to the other side of the aisle and said, "Young lady, have you ever met these gentlemen before?" She answered in a serious tone, "No, they are entire strangers to me." I said, "Then be on your guard." It cannot be denied, that I had somewhat reflected on the character of these men, yet I could not very well do my duty without referring to them in some way.

I had scarcely sat down, when one of these men pulled a razor out of his front trouser pocket, and after whetting it for an instant on his finger nails, he jumped upon his feet and turned toward me. I knew what was confronting me, and that I had to act quickly. I silently cried and prayed, something like this, "Now, Lord help me!" I, too, instantly sprang to my feet, stood upright, and looked directly into his eyes. He was standing only a foot away in front of me. I had my left arm raised only few inches from my face in order to protect my throat, in case he should draw the knife. The other hand I had put behind me, close to my hip-pocket. I had nothing there execpt a handkerchief, yet this movement may have helped to scare this cut-throat out of his mischief. The question is sometimes raised, "Is it ever morally right to deceive and outwit someone?" I think in this case I was justified in protecting myself and in confounding this would-be murderer.

He stood before me a few minutes, as stiff as a cane, his razor close to my arm and throat, yet he could move nothing, but his stammering tongue. "I am going to cut off your head," he finally said. I answered just as cool and as stern as I could be. "I believe you would, if you could, but you can't." Then he said, "You must think, that we are either robbers or white slavers, and we are neither, we are gentlemen." I said, "This is what I called you. If you are a gentleman, go to your seat and behave like one."

He spoke up again, and said, "I would cut off your head, if I did not pity that little boy, sitting at your side." I told him again very emphatically, that I believed he would, if he could, but he couldn't. He then slowly retreated, went and sat down and their fun was over, at least as long as I remained on the train. Shortly afterwards the newsboy came along and they spoke with finger signs to each other. Then the brakeman came along and he used this secret language. And finally the conductor came in and looked me all over. So I concluded, that the whole bunch of them were belonging to the same clique trying to ensnare and ruin young girls. I stepped off at Beemer, and they went on towards Omaha. If that young innocent soul really escaped these sharks and preyers for victims of the underworld, I may have been instrumental in spoiling their plans that time.

Psalm 35:1-4. "Plead my cause, O Lord, with them that strive with me: fight against them that fight against me.

Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help....Let them be confounded and put to shame that seek after my soul...."

THE SAMENESS OF THE TRUE GOSPEL

Col. 1:6-7

Wherever the Gospel comes it carries with it the impression of its Divine origin and the universal adaptability to human conditions. Many of its truths are self-evident, and need no proof. It is true that truth may be universally the same, but not universally adopted. Men may hear the Gospel and reject it. This brings condemnation, for light rejected brings condemnation. You will note that the false teachers in Colosse were trying to bring in a mixture of Jewish and Gentile teachings.

This Gospel of Jesus Christ is the same in its adaptation and work. "It is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." God sends upon us the choicest blessings.

There is not a human being the Gospel cannot benefit; it is adaptable to the needs of all. This Gospel started from Judea with but a small following, but it traveled on and on, until it spread throughout Europe, Asia, Africa and the Americas. Note how rapidly it spread. The victories of the Gospel were won by moral weapons.

The Gospel is the same in results. "It bringeth forth fruit." Fruitbearing denotes its inward influence on the soul and life; and the increase refers to its outward progress. The Gospel is a plant whose seed is in itself, and its outer growth keeps pace with its inner energy. It is very practical, and aims at results, that correspond with its nature, purpose, and power."

The method of propaganda is the same. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God. The mode of receiving the Gospel is the same to all. It is not enough to hear it, and it will not accomplish its end or purpose unless it be embraced by the heart and conscience as the whole truth. It is only by believing the Gospel that we can "know the grace of God in truth."

This Gospel must be propagated through preaching. "As ye were instructed." Preaching is the divinely instituted means of spreading the Gospel, and no other agency can supersede it.

This Gospel is propagated by those whom God has called and fitted for this work. The preacher is a laborer for Christ, not a servant of the church; but a servant for the church. All service must be rendered as unto the Lord.

God enjoins upon every minister faithfulness. It is a great thing to be a co-laborer with men of God; but greater still to be a servant of the Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, the Head of the Church, the highest among men and angels.

How much it means to be true to the Church, the Body of the Lord.

THE FORBEARANCE OF ISAAC

Gen. 21:1 to 25:18, 26:1-33 Printed Gen. 26:12-25

Isaac a Promoter of Peace

Introduction

Isaac lacked many of his father Abraham's qualities of leadership. He lacked energy in disposition, was a man of peace, a preserver rather than a pioneer. Meekness was a characteristic of his youth and prominent in later life. The 180 years of his life were spent chiefly in the neighborhood of Beer-Sheba, in a quiet manner.

Isaac Among the Philistines vs 12-22

Temporarily Isaac was dwelling in the Philistine country in the neighborhood of Gerar, because of famine (26:1,6). It was a rather dangerous step he had taken. In this very fertile part of Palestine he began a more settled life in cultivating the ground, sowing and reaping (v12). He was industrious and God honored and prospered his efforts (vs 13,14). Some in our day expect to receive bread with little of effort on their part.

Isaac's prosperity aroused the envy of the Philistines. He was accumulating what they wanted, without putting forth the effort he did. Envy is a deadly sin, the cause of most of the strifes and wars in the world, both political and religious.

In blind envy and hatred the Philistines had stopped the wells (v15), a most unfriendly act, and finally their king requested Isaac to leave (v16). They feared the might of his army of servants and he was mightier than they in nobility of soul.

Isaac, rather than have continual strife, moved into the valley southeast of the city of Gerar (v17). Jehovah had promised this land to him (v3). Even here the Philistines continued to molest him. When his servants digged and found good wells of abundant flow of water, the herdsmen of Gerar strove for them (vs 19-21). Isaac's good fortune increased their envy and strife. Isaac moved on to another location (v. 22). He let others do the quarreling while he and his servants did the digging. He recognized Jehovah's leading in all this. He gave up his rights rather than have trouble. This was the price he was willing to pay for peace.

Isaac in Beer-Sheba vs 23-25

His troubles in Gerar led him to complete separation from his enemies. God appeared to him at once to encourage him and renewed His promises to Abraham (v24). God said, "I am with thee." In separation from the world we can enjoy God's fellowship fully.

Here Isaac built an altar, worshipped, pitched his tent for permanent stay (v25). Isaac, a real example of non-resistance, not merely desired peace, but used every means possible to live peaceably with his neighbors. He made sacrifices for peace. We can have peace if willing to pay the price.

Isaac revealed the power of gentleness. He was imposed upon, yet his quiet long-suffering gave him most probably a beneficent influence over the Philistines, his enemies. Men do feel greater respect for the meek and gentle than for the haughty and arrogant. This holds true of nations as well as of individuals.

Nuggets of Truth

The way to peace is by means of peace.

Peace can not be established by quarreling nor by being prepared to resist and fight.

Sacrifices need to be made at times in order to live peaceably.

Out of Isaac's quietness came his mission; in it lay his power.

Isaac showed wonderful forbearance under aggravating provocation.

Just what would you and I do under similar circumstances? What are we doing?

"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city". Prov. 16:32.

If we would preach and teach peace, we need first to LIVE peace.

THE WEAKNESS OF ESAU

Genesis 25:19-34; 26:34,35; 27:1-46
Printed Gen. 25:27-34; 27:41-45

Contrasting Dispositions vs 27,28

One of the most startling mysteries of life is the decided contrast often seen between children of the same parents. Jacob and Esau, the twin brothers, were very unlike in bodily appearance and disposition. They were the gift of God in answer to Isaac's definite prayer (v21). Esau, the hunter, loved the life of the care-free rover, while Jacob preferred staying close at home (v27). Esau was light-hearted, impulsive, thinking only of the moment. He reveals no spiritual aspirations, no sense of personal unworthiness. He seems careless of spiritual blessing and insensible to high ideals. Impulse, not principle, dominates his conduct.

Jacob looked more to the future and was of a scheming disposition. He was Rebekah's favorite while Isaac preferred Esau (v28). Both parents were seriously at fault in their partiality to their sons. Isaac, a good man in many respects, allowed himself to be swayed by his appetite—he liked the venison Esau brought him. Esau inherited his slavery to his appetite and Jacob inherited his deceitfulness from his mother.

Esau Sells his Birthright vs 29-34

One feels that, for a full-grown man, Esau acted childishly foolish. Jacob had prepared a tempting evening meal. Esau came home tired out and hungry (v29), smelled the fragrant odor and saw his favorite dish. He saw nothing, felt nothing, thought of nothing but his appetite (v30). Jacob was willing to give him all he wished for a price (v31). Quite likely Jacob had been considering some plan for securing his brother's birthright. It belonged to Esau, Jacob coveted it for himself. He knew its value, the headship in the family and a double portion of the inheritance. He knew his brother's impulsive weakness and craftily took advantage of his folly.

Esau had no appreciation of his birthright and of that involved in it. He was ready to sacrifice anything for immediate satisfaction of his appetite. Jacob showed his cunning in v33. Esau's weakness was no excuse for Jacob's craftiness. Esau acted in shallow impulsiveness. He lived in the present, failed to plan for the future, allowed his appetite to control him. Many today sacrifice all worthwhile to satisfy a depraved appetite.

The Aftermath vs 41-45

Jacob carried his craftiness further. With the efficient help of his mother he deceived his father, lied to him and cheated Esau out of his blessing (chap. 27:1-32).

Esau repented of his folly, tried to get his birthright back (27:32-37), but his tearful pleas were of no avail.

Jacob's conduct naturally aroused Esau's hatred (v41), however it was not justifiable. His own lack of self-control lost it for him. His mother helped Jacob into his trouble and now she finds a way out of it for him (42,45). She well knew the unstable nature of Esau who was unfit to become the head of a covenant people.

Nuggets of Truth

A divided home is unhappy and troubled.

The follies and sins of parents reappear in their children.

God can not do much for or with a man who despises his birthright.

The birthright of every person is eternal life in Christ Jesus; the great majority are Esaus and despise the blood-bought gift and sell it for a mess of pottage.

To the question of whether outstanding personalities are produced by great crises or whether they themselves create and dominate such situations and their outcome The British Weekly gives this answer:

"The fact is, the great personalities appear because they need to appear. There is something in the human situation in their day which, unless they were to appear, would mean that God had forsaken us all. When they appear, things in their view have arrived at such a pitch of peril that everything must go in order that something precious may survive."

"When religion withers, the state wanes. When faith begins to perish, all things else begin to die, as if the dew of the heaven had been denied, or the former and the latter rain had been withheld. A great revival of religion throughout the nation would bring us a new supply of great men. . . . who would fill the highest offices with the greatest ability.—Bishop Warren A. Chandler.

CORRESPONDENCE

Reedley, Calif., April 27, 1937

Since the Mennonite is not overburdened with reports from the churches, as sometimes is our German Church Paper, I have determined to send in at least four reports this year. As some things have happened since I last wrote that might be of interest to others, I submit the second installment. David Doerksen, who spent eight years as missionary in the Belgian Congo, gave us an interesting talk on his work and told us how he was miraculausly saved from death, when a leopard had jumped upon him, by one of his African boys making a noise to attract the beast.—The following Sunday a German school-teacher, Greta Sumpf, who was visiting her brother in this vicinity, gave us a talk on the present condition in Germany.

On March 4, our Ladies' Mission Society celebrated their annual birthday party. They came to the church in the morning, arranged and decorated tables, one for each month of the year. At dinner the ladies sat at the table for the month in which they were born. Each lady is to bring a contribution, at least one cent for each year of her age. She may give more, and that many do was evident, for there were several five dollar bills in the collection. The total amount was $104.32. After the meal, each table furnished one item for the program. This is an event which is enjoyed by all the ladies of our congregation, as is also the union meeting of all the mission societies of our town, which was held in our church April 8, with a good program.

On Sunday March 14 Rev. David Toews visited us and spoke three times. At 9 o'clock he spoke in German on the immigration situation in Canada; at 11 o'clock, on Home Missions, and Publication; and in the evening, on the Mennonite World Conference in Holland last year. The collection for the Book Depository for Canada which he stressed, amounted to $82.50. I think Brother Toews is correct when he says that we overemphasize foreign missions to the detriment of home missions which seems evident when one remembers that we have 61 persons in the foreign mission work, and only 11 doing home mission work. And I suppose our contributions are about in the same proportion.

On Good Friday we had our usual mission meeting of two hours in the Methodist Church. The business houses were closed during this period, and the attendance was very gratifying. That evening a chorus of sixty voices sang the cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ" in our church, and the auditorium was not large enough to accommodate the throng of people who attended. Palm Sunday ten young people were baptized upon their confession of faith and received into our church. On Easter Sunday morning we celebrated the Lord's Supper and again many of the Sunday School chairs had to be brought into the auditorium to accommodate the large attendance.—April 12-26 Dr. Krahn was here and spoke in the 4 Mennonite churches in this community.—This afternoon missionary P. J. Wiens and family from India will arrive here, and Saturday this week we expect our Field Secretary, Dr. H. A. Fast, who is to be with us several days and hold meetings.

June 17-20 we will entertain the Pacific District Conference (see program) at which we expect a large number of visitors from the Pacific Coast and elsewhere.

As a result of the visit by Dr. E. G. Kaufman, a year ago, a Bethel College Fellowship was organized in our church. That this new organization is functioning properly, is evidenced by the fact that in last Sunday's Church Bulletin the treasurer, Brother J. H. Entz, reports that during the past year he sent $1,059.50 to Bethel College. Considering the financial condition of our church members, I think this is a very liberal contribution.

We have had an unusual amount of rain this past winter and much snow is stored in the mountains; so with an abundance of irrigation water we are hoping for a good harvest this year.

Bethany Church, Quakertown, Pa.

The Bethany Church at Quakertown, Pa., was reopened on Sunday, May 2, and will be rededicated on Sunday, May 16.

This church is familiarly known as "the little white church on Juniper Street." The congregation was organized in 1899 with Elder A. B. Shelly as its pastor and with a membership of 30. Early in 1900 the present building was acquired; and, after receiving extensive alterations, it was dedicated in September, 1900. The congregation has enjoyed steady growth, until today its membership is 140.

Under the able leadership of the late W. S. Stauffer a Sunday school was organized and carried on vigorously even before the congregation was organized. This was soon followed by the organization of a young people's C. E. and a Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid.

Last summer it became necessary to cover the building with a new slate roof. This was paid in so short a time and with such whole-heartedness that the congregation felt encouraged to improve the appearance of the building and the plot generally. The Women's Missionary Society undertook the financing of the redecoration of the interior; the old, shabby-looking pews were replaced with new ones. Then it was discovered that the wood-work did not harmonize, so workmen got busy and scrapped the old and finished it to harmonize with the pews. This was followed by the installation of a new lighting system. Next the True Bible Sunday school class accepted the project of landscaping the lawn behind the church. The lawn is to be filled up and planted with shrubbery that will bloom at different seasons. This unsightly spot is to be made one of beauty.

On Sunday, May 16, the renovated church is to be rededicated with a home-coming service to which the pastor, A. J. Neuenschwander, and the church invite all that may be interested. Thursday, May 20, in the evening will be the final special service. On this "Community Night" all neighboring churches are invited to participate and to rejoice with the Bethany Church in her renovated house of worship.

What Do You Mean?---Non-Resistance

Eldon W. Graber

The doctrine of non-resistance has been associated with the Mennonites for some time and has carried with it the implication that that is their contribution to the vast panorama of peace-bearing ideas flourishing in the minds of the people. While non-resistance is not synonymous with the term Mennonitism, this attitude has continued to dominate the philosophy of its adherents nearly four hundred years. However long this idea has grown, it has come to be misunderstood by many—even by some of the Mennonites themselves.

But it is in the connotation of the word "non-resistance" that this misconception arises. Too many times this has been translated into a passive doctrine in which principles may be completely ignored or trodden underfoot in the quiet hush of submission. It is this that has caused the public generally to stamp the wrong imprint on Mennonite traditional policy.

MEET ELDON GRABER

Eldon Graber, the writer of this article is a junior at Bethel College. Working in the library as he does, from day to day, he must have developed a certain sense of discrimination not common to all students. On the other hand, it may have been his experience as a member of the debating teams, that he should be able to distinguish, as he does, the deeper implications of this matter of non-resistance in our religious and social living.

Eldon comes from Pretty Prairie, Kansas. He has taken active part in the direction of student life at Bethel through various posts which he has held from time to time in campus organizations. He is first of all a clear thinker, a fine speaker, a broad reader, and, with it all, a thoroughly democratic sort of a chap, loved and respected by the entire school.

You'll like Eldon!

To delve into the soundness of such a policy of non-violence, one needs only to point to its scriptural basis. "He who lives by the sword shall die by the sword." Realizing this our forefathers took cognizance of the fact that world harmony and brotherhood could not be achieved by methods using physical force or physical intimidation. Our Lord and Master taught the value of returning good for evil; of presenting to the attacker not the mailed fist, but the unprotected cheek.

Illogical as this may seem, modern psychologists recognize the value of such conduct, and they realize that this method of individual, as well as group control, must be reckoned with. The meek may not yet have inherited the earth, but it has been definitely proven that he who takes it by force, retains it only for a very short time.

Already the question is arising, "Why, if this is such a sound doctrine, has it not succeeded?" The answer is imposing! Even a great light may be hid under a bushel, and so it has been with the idea of non-resistance. So well has it been hid, that Mennonites themselves are unaware of its implications. The excuse for such conduct has been that theology and the affairs of the state do not mix. Whatever the result of such teaching, one cannot escape the fact that social relationships and theology are, nevertheless, closely related, regardless of whether one considers the personal or the social gospel of our Lord and Master.

The time will come and perhaps is here already, when this vital, living ideal will not be hid under a bushel. If we have a superior method of doing anything, we cannot improve our status by refusing to extend it to our neighbors with whom we are in daily contact. No one will hope or even dream of converting everyone to the Mennonite faith, but it is this valuable attitude which we must share if we are to make our contribution to the establishment of peace. Only as the minds and hearts of the people become peace-conscious can harmony be developed

Certainly "we have a story to tell to the nations." If we do not succeed in letting our light shine before men, it will suffer an ignoble extinction, brought on by those who insist that it must be guarded and hid under a bushel.

Mennonites of America, the fate of that great light rests in your hands!

Problems and Projects

1. What was the historical picture which Jesus here drew of "going the second mile"?

2. A missionary just returned from China, deliberately swallowed some germs of a plague, raging in China at the time. Then he went to a noted hospital, in order that the doctors could study the disease, and if possible find the cure for it. Was the missionary under contract to do THAT? If not, why did he do it? In what sense did he "go the second mile"?

3. Name common, ordinary incidents in the average home where we generally fail to go the second mile.

4. Billy, aged 10, flies into a rage every time his mother asks him to sweep the floor after he has "already done the dishes after supper," saying the other boys are waiting outside for him, to play. How can we, as adults, give him a good understanding of "going the second mile," in the home.

5. "There's only one thing I have against my secretary," said an employer. "She always quits exactly at four o'clock. She knows nothing of working overtime." No "second mile."

6. What does Eldon Graber, in his article on page 9 mean, when he says that going the second mile is more than mere passivity?

7. In the story of the Prodigal Son, which character could we describe as the "second miler"?

The Mission of the Quiet Hour

(A Quiet Hour Presentation. Scene: Interior of room)

JEAN: (Wearing a Kimono, seated in large arm chair, reading a book. Closes book with a sigh.) "Oh, dear! Nothing has gone right today. I made such a wretched start by losing my temper this morning. Then nothing was right at school, my committee meeting this evening was a failure, the entire day has been so disheartening. I wonder why things go that way when I really want to be different." (Drops head on hands.) (Jean's elder sister enters.)

SISTER: "What, dreamland so soon? Why the grand rush, Jean, tired?"

JEAN: "No, not especially, but it is the only way to forget my troubles."

THE COOKIE JAR

I would rather wear out and be darned, than put on the shelf and looked at.

SISTER: "Troubles! What do you mean? Flunk something today?" (Sister sits on arm of chair. Jean raises her head.)

JEAN: "No, Sis, worse than that, I'm a failure. I can't understand why it is; but since I decided to be a Christian, things have seemed worse than ever. I still lose my temper, my studies drag, nothing has gone right. I still want to be true to my decision but I seem to lack the power somehow. What can be wrong? I'm unhappy most of the time and I thought I'd be happier after I became a Christian. Other people are. Why is it?" (Looks up at sister)

SISTER: (Placing hand upon head for a moment) "Poor little Jean! No wonder you looked blue, but I am sure I can suggest a cure. Are you a Quiet Hour Comrade?"

JEAN: "No...Let's see...I've heard of that but I'm not sure I know just what it means."

SISTER: "Well, this is the pledge. 'Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I will make it the rule of my life to set apart at least fifteen minutes every day, if possible in the early morning, for quiet meditation and direct communion with God.' "

JEAN: "But would that help?"

SISTER: "Yes, Jean, I know it would. He longs to give you the power to overcome these trying things. He wants to go with you every step of the way, to be your constant companion, but how can He if you do not give Him a chance? How much would you get out of Helen's friendship when she is across the continent if you did not correspond with her? She would soon cease to mean anything to you. It is just the same with the Lord Jesus. How long will your friendship with Him mean anything if you never read His Word or never talk with Him? Wouldn't things be different if every morning you read part of His message to you and talked over with Him the problems of the day ahead?"

JEAN: "Why that would be wonderful, but is it really true? Is that what the Quiet Hour means?"

SISTER: "Yes, that is what it should mean to every one of us. But some forget, leave it until they are too tired to think or rush through it as a duty that must be performed when it should be the happiest part of the day, the meeting first thing in the morning with the Friend who is to accompany us all through the day, giving joy, peace, power and victory. Isn't it wonderful? Why don't you try it Jean?"

JEAN: "Oh, I want to, that is just what I need, I know, but suppose I should forget after I have promised? Then I would be breaking a pledge made to Him!"

SISTER: "But you won't forget many times after you've started. You miss it so and if you should for some reason, some good reason, He will understand and forgive. I'd sign up for it, if I were you. If you'll make connections with the source of power He will see that you are supplied."

JEAN: "I'll do it! I can see that I haven't given Him a chance to help me. I didn't know the Quiet Hour could mean so much, but I'm going to try it!" (Both girls start to leave the room).

SISTER: "Good! I know you will always be glad you became a Quiet Hour Comrade. 'Abide in me and I in you, as a branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me.' " (Girls leave the room)

As A Tree Planted By The Waters

Junior Suggestions for May 23, 1937

"O Jehovah my God, thou art very great;
Bless Jehovah, O my soul." Ps. 104:1.

We who are so prone to neglect the "second mile," marvel at the love of God poured out upon us so lavishly. Sometimes I wonder why God did not make us to want only one kind of food morning, noon and night; or why He did not give us just one variety of fruit, one of vegetables, one of meat; or why, when the flowers sprang forth, there was not one kind and one color. And then the birds, why not one bird with one beautiful song. And the trees! Why not just the cedar of Lebanon? I find the answer in His love, full and supreme. God walks not on the "second mile" but on the mile where finite minds can never follow Him. But we can praise and love Him in return. Can you lead the Junior heart to do this? And you who are planning a closing meeting of the Endeavor term, can you plant in the young hearts the desire to be "like a tree planted by the waters, that spreadeth out its roots by the river, and shall not fear when heat cometh, but its leaf shall be green; and shall not be careful in the year of drought, neither shall cease from yielding fruit." (Jeremiah 17:8). 'Only God can make a tree." What a priviledge it is to bring hearts to Him! What a joy to see them taking root in God!

Program Suggestions

Call to service by prelude

Opening service in song, scripture and prayer. Let the group select favorite hymns, quote favorite scripture verses and lead in sentence prayers. You could call this a "prayer service," having three brief periods of prayer using the hymns to lead from one prayer thought to the other. These hymns should be carefully selected that they lead to prayer. We need to learn to pray, how much more the children. The first period of prayer could be thanksgiving, the second prayer for a definite need which the group decides upon, the third a prayer for blessing for the evening, and special blessing upon those who are to serve Study period. Aim: to instill the desire to be "like a tree planted by the waters" and to lead to the One who alone can make a "tree"

1. Read responsively Psalm 1
2. Discussion of the psalm by three juniors
   a) Who is blessed? Verses 1-3. Also Jer. 17:7
   b) He shall be like a tree. Verses 3 and 6a
   c) The wicked are not so. Verses 4, 5, 6b
3. Special music: "Take Time to Be Holy"
4. Heart talk by the leader or guest. Let this take the form of an object lesson using a drawing of a tree showing also its roots. Use Jeremiah 17:8 as basis for heart lessons. Show the various dangers to which the tree is exposed; how little insects can do much harm. Compare this to the various sins to which our life is exposed; to the little sins that can cause death. Now and again the tree has to be cleaned of dead limbs and of insects. Compare this to the need of the cleansing of our heart. Stress especially the blessings derived from a healthy tree. Compare this with the blessing that our life can be when it becomes "like a tree planted by the waters." Close with the thought that we, like the tree, need light and food and water. All this we find in Jesus and in the Word of God
5. Sing in unison the prayer "Jesus I Come"
6. Closing prayer

The Junior Corner

The sound of heavy blows awakened me one morning. Looking out I saw two negroes felling trees! It seemed so wrong to me. These trees were some of the oldest in our neighborhood and I had enjoyed them so often because they were larger and more beautiful than the others. I remembered, last summer their foliage had been sparse and that their owner watered them more than she used to. Now they are gone. The place is empty where once they spread out far to shelter the home. What was the matter? They had looked perfectly well to me. Of course, spring was only on the way; they were still bare and so I could not see that they were dead. But the owner knew. Now I believe it too. The one was even hollow. The heart of the tree had rotted away. The other two had had insufficient water which finally caused their death. As I looked at the three, lying there, I saw the wind stirring the boughs. They seemed like many hands and feet struggling to rise again. I thought to myself "are people like these trees too?" It is beautiful to think of people being like a tree by the water's edge, but can they be like these? My heart said "yes" and I looked again at the trees. These two withered because of lack of water. Jesus offers us living water in abundance; it shall never lack. Are we drinking that we might live? And here is the hollow tree. though its bark showed no sign of it. Can we become like that? Sin can do it. It eats the good life out of our hearts, causing death. Others may not notice this dying right away but God knows it and tries to save us before it is too late. Would it pay to stay always near the Living Water and the Savior from sin? Jesus says "Abide in Me. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch and is withered."

WANTED: NEW RECRUITS

"Our Youth Says"—our foreign missionary work must not fail. But where are those who will pray, give or go? A clarion call comes to every one. Will we heed the call?

Just this morning in a letter from India, Brother P. A. Penner, who has spent 36 years of untiring missionary service in that field, writes, in closing: "Continue to remember us before the Throne of Grace, especially now that we are getting older." Who will hear the call for intercession? Who will hold up their hands, as Aaron and Hur did for Moses, that the work of the Lord need not fail?

Brother Penner further cites "two urgent needs." "We need urgently:

1. New recruits for India. I fear that if these are not sent soon many valuable opportunities will be lost. Furthermore, it must not be forgotten that missionaries arriving now can begin work only after two years of intensive language study. So do pray for new recruits.

2. We need a consecrated nurse for the Leper Home. She ought to have a good education, be well-trained, willing to sacrifice, and be absolutely fearless. Pray also for a nurse."

Mennonite youth—do you see the words, "urgently," "opportunities will be lost," "consecrated," "sacrifice," and "absolutely fearless"?

The Western District C. E. Convention has undertaken this year to supply the money needed to send out one "recruit." Will we heed this "urgent" call? Remember, we can meet a very definite need if all will do our part. Western District Societies are urged to contribute liberally toward this project.

DEATHS

Leonard Paul Suderman, son of Jacob and Anna Suderman, was born Oct. 8, 1907, and departed this life April 3, 1937, at the age of 29 years, 5 months and 26 days.

At the age of 11 months, his father, Jacob Suderman, passed away and in the year 1924 Paul's oldest brother Jacob, whom he dearly loved, departed. Paul grew up in his parental home, attending district school and later Newton High School, graduating with the Class of 1926. At the age of 17 he was baptized and received into The First Mennonite Church of Newton, of which he remained a faithful member to his death.

On Aug. 8, 1934, he was united in marriage to Martha Harder. Their married life, though brief, was a very happy one. He was a devoted husband and a loving father. It was a special joy to him when four weeks before his death his infant son was born.

On March 10 he complained of headache, and as his condition gradually grew worse, he entered Bethel Hospital March 22, for an examination and remained there until he was called to his heavenly home in the morning of April 3. Neither the doctors' efforts nor the sisters' care could prolong his days. His Lord called him to a higher service. As much as the bereaved family feel need of him here, they find comfort in the words, "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord, For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts."

He leaves to mourn his early departure his wife, one daughter, one son, his mother, four sisters and two brothers many relatives and friends.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home,
That never can be filled.
God in His wisdom hath recalled
The one His love hath given.
And though his body slumbers here,
His soul is safe in Heaven.

CORRESPONDENCE

Lorraine Ave. Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kans.

Sunday, March 14, 1937, Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel gave his farewell sermon and on Monday they left for the Grace church at Lansdale, Pennsylvania, whose call he had accepted. Since that time we have had the following ministers serve us: Rev. C. E. Krehbiel, Missionary W. F. Unruh, Rev. H. J. Dyck, Rev. S. M. Musselman, and Rev. D. W. Ewert.

The Sunday School has an enrollment of 74 with an average so far this year of 56. The average attendance a year ago for the first quarter was 35. Four classes meet in the basement and four on the main floor. The Christian Endeavor has a membership of 40. They give a program the second Sunday evening of each month. The C. E. is also in charge of the special music for the church service. On Easter Sunday evening the choir gave a cantata "Life Eternal". On April 11th we enjoyed a program given by the Garden Township Church and on May 2 another one by the Men's Chorus from the First Mennonite Church. Hillsboro.

The Ladies Friendship Circle meets every second Thursday of the month at the various homes. They have been studying the American Indians. The book, "Something Happened", will be placed in the church library. This book is in memory of Mrs. Christina Langenwalter who was a faithful member of our church while she lived in Wichita, until she passed away last winter at the Home for the Aged, Newton, Kansas. A set of 16 Cradle Roll pictures have been purchased to be presented to the Children's Sunday School department in memory of little Richard Dale Unrau who passed away at the age of 7 months.

« « JOTTINGS » »

— Rev. P. R. Schroeder, Freeman, South Dakota, sent us some interesting material for THE MENNONITE for which he has our hearty thanks. He writes, "We had a terrific snow storm Saturday (April 24). No meetings were held. It wasn't cold—temperature about 32 degrees F. above—but the wind was choking. I have heard of at least six farmers nearby who lost cattle in this end-of-April blizzard. We have a fine crop outlook. Next Sunday to Tuesday I am to speak at three Sunday school conventions in Minnesota."

— Commencement Speaker at Bluffton College. The commencement address this year, Wednesday, June 9, will be given by Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the Council of Church Boards of Education and the National Committee of Church Related Colleges. Dr. Wickey is active in promoting Christian education. He is editor of the valuable magazine CHRISTIAN EDUCATION and furnishes colleges with vital and up-to-date items in this field.

— Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Large crowds, largely Mennonites, heard Dr. Henry Ostrom, D. D., of Chicago, in a series of meetings observing the D. L. Moody Centenary. The following were subjects of his discourses: "The Sure Word of God," "Atheism," "Are We in the Last Days," "The Life and Labors of D. L. Moody." The mass singing by a large chorus of all the ladies' and men's church choirs of that place under the direction of I. D. Bargen added much to the success of the meetings.—Mt. Lake Observer.

— For the last few years Bethel College has given its senior classes so-called comprehensive examinations, and Bluffton College reports doing the same thing now. These examinations reveal the student's grasp of his major and minor studies as well as his general knowledge and his power to cope with practical problems. They also help to discover how well or how poorly the student has succeeded in systematizing and relating his knowledge. In addition, they reveal, at least in a measure, the student's ability and fitness to do graduate work.

— On May 4 the students and faculties of three Christian colleges—Sterling College (United Presbyterian), Friends University, and Bethel College—joined in a day of programs and simple games for the purpose of getting acquainted and having a few hours of good fellowship. The confab was held at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas. The Bethelites made the trip in a specially chartered train. Everybody reports having had a pleasant and profitable time.

— Bethel College has made some decided changes in its plan for student selection. Twelve rather outstanding students who appreciate what Bethel has meant to them have been chosen for the purpose of visiting high school seniors at their homes, of acquainting them with the aims and advantages of the College, and of ascertaining the newcomer's fitness for college work and for life in a Christian college.

— Nuggets Concerning Ascension, from the "Bethany Messenger," Freeman, South Dakota: "How few of us think of Christ as glorified man in heaven. Somehow he has lost his humanity for us. How much we deny ourselves of comfort and joy by this mistake. It is one reason why men often spiritualize His second coming.

"Our redemption, based upon His death is past; our resurrection and glorification at His coming is future; but our establishment in the faith, our growth in grace, our equipment for service are present and are the result of the Lord's intercession for us at the right hand of God."

— The International C. E. Convention is to be held at Grand Rapids, Michigan, July 8 to 13. "Christ for the Crisis" is the general theme of the meeting. It is to be applied (1) to the individual in personal living, (2) to the church and its program, (3) to the nation and its problems, and (4) to the world and its challenges.

— World W.C.T.U. Convention. The triennial convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union is to be held at Washington, D. C., June 2 to 8 next. The advance registration points to an unusually large attendance. Every continent and an increasing number of individual countries are already represented. Women leaders from England, France, China, Palestine, Brazil, Australia, Canada, India, etc., will soon be wending their way to our capitol city to discuss ways and means of furthering the cause of temperance and sobriety.

— The Church Federation of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, at its recent annual meeting, which was celebrated with a dinner at the Strawbridge & Clothier Store, had as its very special guests all those ministers who had served in the same pulpit for more than twenty-five years. Among these was the former editor of THE MENNONITE, Rev. S. M. Grubb of the Second Church, Philadelphia. In his Bulletin Dr. Grubb very loyally urges the members of his flock to buy their books and church supplies from the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana. Would that many other ministers might do that, too!

— The University of Minnesota inaugurated a Mother's Day at the school on May 8. With their sons and daughters the mothers visited the classrooms and laboratories and saw the University in operation. There were also Mother's Day exercises on the campus.

"Be not wise in thine own eyes.
Fear the Lord, and depart from evil."

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

During the month of August, 1927, a large group of students from Bethel College attended the joint Y.M. and Y.W.C.A. conference at Estes Park, Colorado. One evening the group invited Mr. A. A. Hyde, wealthy manufacturer of Wichita, Kansas, to lead them in their regular evening devotions. It is refreshing to recall the aged Mr. Hyde's earnest Christian faith. During his lifetime he gave the world an outstanding lesson in Christian Stewardship. It is therefore with pleasure that we devote this week's Book Chat to Dr. Langenwalter's review of a recent biography of Mr. Hyde. The reviewer knew Mr. Hyde during the closing years of his life and is well qualified to comment on Mr. Irving's book.

MASTER OF MONEY

A. A. Hyde of Wichita

by George Irving

(Published by Fleming H. Renell Co., Price $1.50, postpaid.)

This book is an interesting and a valuable reflection of the character of Mr. Hyde. No attempt to write the story of his life could hope to be more than that. The reason for writing the book, the methods employed in getting the material and the fine reserve with which the veil is lifted upon a great life, are all in keeping with the character of Mr. Hyde. The author calls the undertaking a "labor of love". That is the way uncounted hosts of men all over the world feel about anything they might be able to do in honor of Mr. Hyde, whether it be the writing of a book or the living of a life. "God loveth a cheerful giver" was lived rather than quoted by Mr. Hyde. His own working definition of giving was: "It is the individual, happy, sympathetic, sacrificial giving only which has the God-like quality". He never thought of this as an easy or a light thing. This book, in a very real sense, is the spiritual biography of Mr. Hyde as he developed the idea which lies behind his words. He faced real difficulties and had to meet the temptations of a man who knows how to accumulate money. He also learned to appreciate the almost overwhelming difficulties of the man who desires sincerely to be a steward of what has come into his possession. This fact became very evident in an incident which transpired a few years ago when Mr. Spender, a prominent British writer, said to Mr. Hyde, on the occasion of their first meeting: "Well, Mr. Hyde, it is a wonderful thing to be a great philanthropist, but I suppose that is easier said than done, isn't it?" The reply of Mr. Hyde showed more feeling than can ever be expressed on paper, or in the words of any other person, when he answered very promptly and with more than usual animation: "You bet your life it is."

The author of this book does not attempt to recite many incidents. He is portraying the motives and the objectives of a great personality, who lived above mere incidents, and yet knew how to deal with them wisely.

Whether the reader ever had the privilege of meeting Mr. Hyde or not, the chapter on BEGINNINGS will make him appreciative of the forces which played upon his young life and how he learned to deal with them. The same is true of the difficulties which confronted early Kansas pioneers as depicted in the chapter on GRASSHOPPER YEARS. The chapter called LIFE MOTIVES is brief, but very thought-provoking, because of the light which it throws on a life well lived. In a chapter entitled MASTER GIVER the author makes an excellent and challenging contribution to practical and enjoyable Christian stewardship. In chapter under the caption of WORLD-WIDE AND LOCAL VISION one is led to see how a man can be truly great both at home and throughout the whole wide world. Only those who knew Mr. Hyde will fully appreciate how much is back of the eleven pages of this chapter. Those who never met him will catch a new inspiration of true greatness. Every person has certain characteristics. An understanding of these is very important. The chapter called CHARACTERISTICS is a most helpful portrayal of the man whose life this book has set out to reveal. USING VOICE AND PEN reveals a side of Mr. Hyde's busy life which has been a surprise to many, even of his friends. The chapter on INNER LIFE, as the title suggests, deals with the working philosophy of life which made him a philanthropist in areas far beyond the realm of money alone. A short chapter, entitled STUMBLING-BLOCKS FOR STEPPING-STONES offers a most helpful suggestion to anyone who has not learned how to meet suffering. THE BIBLE AND THE LORD'S DAY is a most challenging chapter for church people of today, or any day. In the chapter on SOCIAL VISION one gets a practical interpretation of what Jesus meant by "and thy brother as thyself." The final chapter, entitled THE MACHINE WEARS OUT, is a beautiful revelation of the simple and inspiring way in which a truly noble soul fares forth upon the great adventure into the larger life beyond this realm. —J. VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, MAY 18, 1937 NO. 20

WORK, OUR NOBLEST BIRTHRIGHT

Work is the birthright of the human race. This world was born in six days of mighty work. Of all the beings in heaven or on earth, God is the busiest. What a stupendous task it is, for instance, to handle nearly two billion of us earthly pilgrims, with all of our problems, day in and day out! Yet, that is only an infinitisimal part of His work. He has myriads of other worlds to look after and is probably creating still more of them. And Adam was told "to dress and keep" the garden and "in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread." These are God's irrevocable messages to man, and they apply to us today. Thus work has been bred into our very being, into the very root of our existence. And by practice it becomes "second nature," with its life-giving, life-prolonging qualities.

To Adam who, after the loss of Paradise, was destined to battle with nature and her elements, work at first may have seemed to be a curse, but it must later have become a benediction, for it helped him forget his erring past. Through slavery, which was a curse and a crime, work received a mark of degradation, whereas it should and does bear its God-given insignia of royalty. "My (royal) father," said Christ, "worketh hitherto and I work too," and all the universe bears witness to the fact. Intense, ceaseless activity is the law of life throughout all its physical and moral realms. There can be no growth nor development, of body or of mind, without it. Idleness breeds stagnation, with corruption, decay and death in its wake.

"All the world's a stage," says Shakespeare. It is just as true to say, "All worlds are workshops." Ours is no exception. The inhabitants of the temperate zones, with their changing seasons that bring continual work, have been the bearers and promoters of civilization and have made the world's history. All truly great men, those who by their deeds and lives have made the world better, nobler, richer, were hard-working men. Of such it is written, "They shall bring the glory and honor of the nations into it (heaven)," if in addition to their noble work they have also allied themselves with the greatest among men and the hardest worker, our Saviour Jesus Christ.

But isn't it strange that so many people shun work and shirk their duties when work is involved? Are they right who constantly cry, yes fight, for shorter hours and more pay? And how about the sit-down strikers? Do they uphold our noblest, God-given birthright? Doesn't one feel constrained to admonish them in the words of Mrs. E. B. Browning, "Get to work! Be sure it is better than what you work to get."

One of the most interesting lives among those who worked hard to prove that work was their birthright is David Livingstone. The son of poor parents, he was put to work in a cotton factory as a "piecer" at the age of ten, in order to eke out the family living. But, hungry for knowledge, he went, with part of his first week's wages to buy him a Latin grammar; and began to rise. Working in the factory from six in the morning until eight at night, with but brief interludes for breakfast and dinner, he would hurry at the close of his long workday to an evening school, and then home to pore over his dictionary until midnight or later.

Of these efforts to get an education he writes, "I never received a farthing of aid from anyone. My reading while at work was carried on by placing the book on a portion of the spinning jenny, so that I could catch sentence after sentence as I passed at my work. I thus kept a pretty constant study, undisturbed by the roar of the machinery." For a dozen years he carried on like this, reading, he says, "everything I could lay my hands on, except novels."

He became proficient in the classics and devoured all the books on science and travel he could get. Becoming a Christian, he then resolved on being a missionary. When nineteen years of age he was promoted to "cotton spring" work that "was excessively severe on a slim, loose-jointed lad; but it was well paid for, and it enabled me to support myself while attending medical and language classes, and divinity lectures at Glasgow."

Once in Africa, what a blessed work he was privileged to do, opening up the continent to civilization and, what is still better, being the instrument in God's hands of winning hundreds of souls for Christ and His kingdom.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. Richert

Ch'ang Yuean, Hopei, China
March 23, 1937

Dear Friends:

Shortly after the Chinese New Year season, instruction classes were held in five different Ch'ang Yuean outstations, which usually are held for two weeks. The most promising of these places is Fan Hsiang, six miles northwest of Ch'ang Yuean. This place is just outside of the area that was flooded for three consecutive years and so the people are not so desparately poor. Being busy in the home, I had never taken the opportunity to visit these places, but since we were hoping to go on furlough and this was the first time a baptism service was to be held there, I decided to go. At this place eleven people, seven men and four women, were accepted. One thing impressed me very much, that was the respectful attitude the people were in. None except the workers had witnessed such a service and still everyone taking part was orderly and in earnest. Those who were watching the service with great interest were fairly quiet, too, although someone did say, "Wasn't it possible for a young girl to wash her head at home that she had to go to the Mission and have a man wash it for her?" Such things may seem foolish to many, but to some it is a wonderful experience. I watched one young man as he sang the song, "O Happy Day." He seemed oblivious of those around him and sang as if it were a "Happy Day."

The following Sunday, six people at Chiu Chi, six miles to the east, were to be baptized. The services at this place were good, but the buildings are too small to accommodate the people and workers and because the people as a whole are very poor, the work does not seem so promising. After the service we had dinner with the workers, but I'll have to admit it was the grittiest meal I ever ate. The Bible woman jokingly said that she can get along with less food at this place, because she eats so much sand and dirt. The wind blows hard most of the time in the spring, and when houses don't have proper windows and doors it's almost as bad as being outside. At this place a woman of seventy years was baptized. Her home was three miles from the Mission place. During the instruction classes she went back and forth on foot, and on that Sunday it was against such a strong wind that most of us would have stayed at home and tried to keep our feet warm.

The third Sunday, the baptism service was held at Yang Chuar, six miles west. This was the second time such a service was held there, but the orderliness of the people did not compare well with the other places. Reasons for this are, lack of workers and appropriate buildings. No permanent woman worker is there and that is something that is badly needed. Those being baptized were orderly and respectful. The watchers wanted to be sure and see everything, so they stood up instead of sitting down. They lacked understanding, too. During the Communion service which followed the baptism, someone thought that the red grape juice in the tiny cups was blood. They heard Mr. Ewert say that the Cup typefied Christ's blood which was shed for us. A person feels that so much more could be done, if only there was more time and money to spare.

Three weeks ago we began instruction classes here in the city with an enrollment of two hundred ninety-seven. Many dropped out and still the number was too great to take care of them adequately. The Church holds a little over two hundred. It's discouraging to workers and inquirers as well, when classrooms are overcrowded. Of those examined, forty-two were accepted and on Palm Sunday baptism services were held here. It makes one rejoice to see the greater number to be young folks. Most of those on the men's side were students of the school here.

Pray for those who were baptized that they may go on in their Christian life, that their interest may not be put on just for ulterior purposes, but that they may be an example of Christian living, so that others may see the difference.

Yours in His Service,

Martha and August Ewert

THE POWER AND COMFORT OF GOD. In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. Gen. 1:1.

When Mr. Simeon, of Cambridge, was on his dying bed, his biographer relates that, "after a short pause, he looked round with one of his bright smiles, and asked, 'What do you think especially gives me comfort at this time? The creation! Did Jehovah create the world or did I? I think He did; now if He made the world, He can sufficiently take care of me.'"

JESUS AS TEACHER

10. The crowd.—The sympathy of Jesus toward individuals is evidenced by the great number who followed Him. Besides the three apostles of the innermost circle, there were the twelve, the seventy, the ministering women, the hostile critics, and the multitudes who followed and heard Him gladly. They felt that He understood them and sympathized with them. They would have made Him king, had He allowed it. True, His adversaries succeeded in influencing the multitudes against Him for a time; yet through the ages they have come back to Him in ever greater numbers. Counting only church members in our time, He has more adherents than any other religion. In many lands, there are multitudes who have not joined the church yet love Christ. The unsurpassed sympathy and love of Jesus toward those whom He was trying to teach and help has broken down the walls of creed, race, social standing, and every other barrier in an unprecedented way.

WOULD YOU HAVE WAITED?

For long, long weeks no rain had fallen, and there was little to eat, for the grain would not grow. The people on the little island had picked all of the coconuts and all of the fruit from the trees around the village, and still the ship which was to bring them food did not come.

Some of the boys in the mission school would climb into the top of the tallest tree every morning, and look far out over the ocean to see whether there was not a sail somewhere, but there was nothing upon the water that broke the line where the sea seemed to touch the sky.

At last they had to pick leaves from the fig trees for food. Even for this, these black-faced people always said, "Thank you" to the heavenly Father. They had never forgotten to say "Thank you" since they had learned about the loving heavenly Father who was the Giver of all of their good gifts, and since they had made a bonfire of the idols to which they used to pray.

Just at dawn one morning, the boys in the tops of the trees shouted, "The ship! The ship! It is coming! Hurrah!" Every one in the mission house sprang out of bed, and dressed as quickly as possible. Then down to the shore they all ran, for they were, oh, so hungry!

The ship anchored away from the rocks, and immediately little boats put out from shore to bring the food that had come at last. A huge box was lowered into one of the boats, and when it was tumbled out on the shore, the children said, "Oh, Missi, it rattles like crackers. May we take it to the mission house?" Then there was pushing, and pulling, and puffing until the box bumped against the door of the missionary's home.

"Oh, Missi, please open the box quickly!" the children said. "We are so hungry." It did not take the misionary long to find a hammer and pull out the nails, and soon every boy and every girl held a precious cracker, but no one ate.

"You are starving! Why don't you eat?" the missionary said, though he knew why they were waiting.

"Oh, Missi, we can't eat until we thank God for sending the food," they said, and then those hungry little black children waited until the missionary had said, "We thank Thee, our heavenly Father, for this food."

Would you have waited?—Selected.

THE BUILDER

Nothing is worth the making, if
We are all blind until we see
That in the human plan,
Nothing is worth the making, if
It doesn't make the making, if
It doesn't make the man.
Why build those cities glorious
If man unbuilded goes?
In vain we build the work, unless
The builder also grows.

Has Christianity No Responsibility?

Recently the Bethel College Fellowship of a Mennonite church located in an ordinary American community, in planning for its annual meeting, secured an able, interesting and enthusiastic educator, the president of a small denominational college, as the principal speaker. He chose as the subject of his address, "Christian Education in Times like These." In view of the significance of the subject the Fellowship invited the entire congregation to share the inspiration of the lecture; even more, the invitation was extended to the entire community through church announcements and the local press. Results? Thirty people were in attendance, thirty people, and this in a reputedly Christian community (there are more than six churches), thirty people including the speaker and his wife.

Has the Christian religion nothing to offer in times like these? Is its appeal so impotent, its educational program and service so futile? Has Christianity no obligation to the world today? In times like these when at any moment the world may again be plunged into the catastrophic horror which is war—war with its hate, its intolerance, its cruelty, its murder, its suffering, wreaking its vengeance upon helpless women and innocent childhood, war with its havoc and ruin, its extirpation of the choicest manhood, war which buys mules and conscripts men. Has Christianity nothing to offer?—Christianity whose Saviour is the Prince of Peace and whose God is Love. "We may venture to predict that future history will show that either the Christian religion or the war system will have disappeared from the earth. If the church is to fulfil its mission of saving the souls of individuals and make it possible for them to live like children of God, it must abolish war." (1)

And what of unemployment in times like these—unemployment with its bread lines, its hunger, its mental terror, its spiritual famine, its moral dissolution. No one who has not walked the streets day after day vainly seeking an opportunity of selling his service that he and his wife and children may barely satisfy the most elemental of human needs only to be turned away; only he who has experienced the agony and fear of the jobless can appreciate all that the term unemployment implies. Has Christianity nothing to offer an economic order which produces and tolerates such a shocking situation? Millions are today without the means of earning a livelihood. Will Christianity which prays, "Thy kingdom come" merely "pass by on the other side?" Are the following expressions, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these my brethren, even these least, ye did it unto me;" "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" and the Golden Rule, are these merely noble sentiments?

And the possibility of autocracy in times like these, the autocracy of organized capital, or the autocracy of organized labor, or the autocracy of communism or of fascism—has Christianity nothing to contribute to the moral conscience of the world that this may not come to pass? Or are Jesus' words, "For whosoever would save his life shall lose it; and whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's shall save it. For what doth it profit a man to gain the whole world, and forfeit his life?" are these words merely a beautiful golden text?

"Christian Education in Times like These," only thirty people attend, that in a time when the world seems about to be overwhelmed by war, when inequitable economic maladjustments can no longer be ignored and autocracy seems imminent. Is Christianity the victim of spiritual atrophy or merely of spiritual lethargy? "The present crisis in the Christian religion is not that men deny it, but that they ignore it." (2) And the author of this paper believes that the crisis in the Christian religion is largely responsible; in other words, Christianity cannot be held blameless for the deplorable conditions briefly reviewed above. (3) Christianity and therefore Christians must recognize their responsibility not the least for which is a vital program of Christian education for dynamic Christian living in times like these. A bewildered world looks to the religion of Jesus to save it from chaos.

CHECK YOUR POSITION

There are about nine ways that men respond to responsibility and here they are:

I WON'T is a tramp.
I CAN'T is a quitter.
I DON'T KNOW is too lazy.
I WISH I COULD is a wisher.
I MIGHT is waking up.
I WILL TRY is on his feet.
I CAN is on his way.
I WILL is at work.
I DID is now the "boss."

By checking your answer to the call of duty, you can, by this convenient table, tell exactly where you stand on the ladder of success.—The Silent Partner.

(2) Rev. J. R. Countiss, Presiding Elder, N. Mississippi M. E. Conference.

(3) Perhaps the truth of the matter is that the actual practice of Christianity is not yet commensurate with the ideals of its founder, not even after nineteen hundred years.

RELIEF

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS: The Relief Board of our Conference is being overwhelmed with petitions for help from individuals, families, and larger groups. Our Board is always heartily grateful for the gifts that flow into the General Relief Treasury and that will continue to come in, for there always arise emergencies where help must be quickly rendered. Therefore we plead: Please continue to give richly for this treasury.

BUT THIS TIME WE COME TO YOU PRAYING FOR SPECIAL GIFTS FOR THE FOLLOWING NEEDS:

1. The Mennonite Central Committee needs for its work a certain sum and expects us to contribute proportionately. A Berg family in Mexico and a Wiebe family in Persia must be transferred from these countries to Paraguay in order to save them from moral ruin. There is also a brother in Shanghai, China, who must be moved to South America if he is not to succumb to his distress. To move these Mennonite families and this brother several hundred dollars are needed.

2. In a section of our mission field in China a serious famine is raging. Our Board has advanced to the treasurer of our mission workers in China several hundred dollars for this purpose. We would like to replace this money through further gifts from you.

3. The Mennonite Central Committee recently received an urgent request from the settlement in Fernheim, Paraguay, to supply them with a doctor. With the understanding that we, too, furnish our share to make this petition come true, the request has already been granted by the M.C.C.

4. Brother David Toews, in a letter to our Board, calls attention to the fact that they have, in Canada, a debt of thousands of dollars which is hopeless because death has entered some families, or sickness or other physical or even spiritual ailments have rendered them or individuals, impotent to meet their obligations. Our Board is anxious to receive contributions for this cause.

Emergency Relief is worthwhile work in the Kingdom of God. PLEASE SEND YOUR GIFTS to P. H. UNRUH, GOESSEL, KANSAS, and God will reward your generosity. May He return to you a thousandfold what you do to help those who are in need and distress.

Your co-worker for the Lord,

The Relief Board, J. C. Miller, Secr.

MY TASK

My task here on earth I must fulfill,
Whether it be great or small;
For I was giv'n it by the Creator
Whom I must serve most of all.

No matter what the task may be
I must serve Him, He's all in all,
Did not the disciples of old
Heed their task by obeying His call?

If I fulfill the task He's giv'n
By list'ning to His call,
And leave all worldly things pass by,
Will not I be repaid best of all?

In the following years to come
My task I'll try to do,
Till my Saviour bids me Home,
Where I'll start my task anew.

An Invalid Excuse

Solicitors for funds with which to serve the cause of Christ, such as the work of missions, colleges, hospitals, charities of different kinds, Y.M. and Y.W.C.A., and many others are hearing continually from prospective contributors, "The Government is taking all of our money in taxes. We cannot contribute."

The Golden Rule Foundation publishes the following:

1936 INCOME IN THE UNITED STATES 51% MORE THAN IN 1932

WHERE DID THE MONEY GO?

ANSWER:	Beer	317%	increase
	Radios	302%	increase
	Whisky	220%	increase
	Automobiles	203%	increase
	Cigarettes	48%	increase
	Theatres	41%	increase
	Army and Navy	30%	increase
	Jewelry	25%	increase
	Colleges	18%	decrease
	Com. Chest	24%	decrease
	Benevolences	29%	decrease
	Churches	30%	decrease

THE GOVERNMENT encourages the giving of 15% of one's income.

THE BIBLE urges the giving of 10%.

THE PEOPLE OF THE UNITED STATES in 1935 gave but 2 1-3%.

Until there is marked improvement in the percentages indicated above, none of us need be diffident about asking for money for any enterprise intended to build up the kingdom of God on earth.—Sent in by J. H. Langenwalter.

THE REMAKING OF JACOB

Genesis 28:1 to 33:20 Printed 28:16-22; 32:24-30

Topic—Face to Face with God

God Reveals Himself to Jacob vs 12-17

In our lesson we study two crises in Jacob's life, when in an unusual manner he meets with God.

Jacob, forced to flee from his home in Beer-sheba, to escape the anger of Esau is now on the long and lonely journey to Haran. At the end of the first day he lies down to sleep under the open sky (v11) and there God appears to him in a wonderfully encouraging and comforting dream (vs 12-15). His sin had placed a barrier between him and God in heaven. Now he sees a ladder—stairway—linking earth and heaven. He sees angels moving back and forth and "the Lord stood above it," and repeated to him the promises given to Abraham.

Jacob awoke realizing that in this lonely place God was with him (v13). The stairway of his dream formed a link between him and heaven. At eventime Jacob felt very lonely, now he was assured that God would be with him in all places and keep him safely on his journey into a strange land. To him the hillside was now sacred for he had met God there. We may meet God anywhere.

Jacob's Grateful Response vs 18-22

Jacob felt that he must mark the place of this sacred experience of God's presence, so he sets up the stony pillow as a memorial (v18) and pours oil of consecration on it. Do we have a place made sacred by some experience we had there? He gave it a name meaning "the house of God" (18), where heaven and earth meet.

Jacob gave himself to God in a solemn vow (vs 20-22). This vow was not a bargain with God—the "if" in v20, may suggest that. The vow was made as a grateful response to God's promises in v15. It was a sacred resolve expressing loyalty to God, a real promise to serve God. Jacob here took a long step in his remaking, in committing himself to God. His vow opened his purse, a pledge to give to God (v22). Jacob made a covenant promise to God.

A Spiritual Struggle and Victory vs 24-30

After a twenty years' stay in Haran, Jacob is returning to his Canaan home. He has grown rich materially, but it seems his moral development has not kept pace with his material gain. Fear seizes him, when he learns that Esau is coming to meet him with four hundred men. He turns to God in prayer (32:9-12). At the ford of Jabbok he sent all of his across by night while he remained alone (24a). He faced here the greatest crisis of his life. His entire remaking hung in the balance. God himself came in human form and wrestled with him through the night (v24b). Jacob was not easily overcome. There was too much of self in him. This had to be broken down, his self-confidence shattered. Then when utterly helpless, God could bless him. He had to learn that he could enter Canaan only in God's strength. God touched Jacob's thigh (v25) revealing to him his own helplessness. He realized then who was wrestling with him and prayed prevailingly for His blessing.

A new name was given to him (v28), a name that meant a change in character and heart. He is now to Israel, he who prevails with God. Jacob had prevailed; he won his victory through the defeat of his own will. The essential element in remaking him was the gaining of a new nature. Jacob in being remade, met God face to face. Such is always the result of a real experience with God.

Nuggets of Truth

The power of God can remake a person.

If we were fully awake, we would say with Jacob, "The Lord is in this place."

Many a person fights his hardest battles in solitude.

It would be well for all of us to note the places where we see God.

Doctrinal --- Devotional

SALVATION BY LOVE

J. B. Epp

Abraham loved God, and this was counted unto him for righteousness. Again and again we hear sermons and teachings on the subject of love, that by love is the "way of salvation." Texts are chosen that do not speak of salvation at all; for instance, I Cor. 13:13, "But now remaineth faith, hope, love; but love is the greatest of these." If the preachers of the "old school" taught that salvation is of faith, many of the younger preachers have found the "greater" thing—love!—as the way of salvation. Yes, but this upsets not only the entire epistle to the Romans, but all the teachings of the Apostle Paul, in fact, the teaching of the entire Bible on the subject of salvation.

I Cor. 12 speaks of the gifts of the Spirit to those already saved, "for the upbuilding of the body of Christ," which body consists of believers, already saved; and chapter 13 continues the subject, and therefore does not speak of salvation at all. In fulfilling the law, there love is the "greatest"; in fact, "Love is the fulfillment of the law." If salvation were of the law, then it could be of love. "He that keepeth the law is wise" (Prov.)—that is as far as the law can bring us. But the question, "What must I do to be saved?" is answered in the Bible thus, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Salvation by love is therefore merely one of the dangerous inventions of the human mind—yea, a most mischievous perversion of the true Gospel! And it is so utterly misleading.

But, does not the Apostle James teach "salvation by works," and thus does he not disagree with, yea, flatly contradict Paul? And both are speaking "by the same Spirit." And does not the Master himself say, "Do that, and thou shalt live"?

To get out of this great dilemma, some preachers of the "new school" teach that the Bible is full of contradictions; since it is not all inspired, as they say, but largely the work of man, it is bound to be full of contradictions. And—they are glad that it is so, for this gives them a chance to choose that which suits them best. Then they also allow everyone else to choose what he wants. Their motto is, "Let us not quarrel, but get along with everybody in love."

Some prefer the teaching of Jesus, "Do that, and thou shalt live." They also teach plainly that there are at least two ways of salvation—one by faith in the blood, the other by works. And since Jesus says, "Do," of course, this is the better way. They let us have the "old blood-religion," if we prefer this. Their way, by doing, they claim, is the more easily understood and more pleasant to speak about. And since it does not make any difference, why not take this way? They say that it does not make any difference what we believe, just so we are sincere.

But there is only one way of salvation; namely, that "by the way of the Cross." And the entire Bible is the inspired Word of God. There is not one contradiction. Paul and James agree perfectly. Just read all of James. Neither does Jesus contradict the teaching of the entire Bible on this subject of "salvation by faith."

These "blind leaders of the blind" are increasing alarmingly in number. Most preachers and many Bible teachers today have studied very little Bible, but have studied philosophy, literature, public speaking, argumentation, mass-psychology, etc., using the Bible as a reference book. They, therefore, know how to set forth their subjects very acceptably. Most of the people to whom they minister are still less versed in the Book of books; but they are trained in high schools and colleges, and therefore are just ready for such philosophical teachings, the Bible being referred to somewhat. Therefore, it is extremely easy to lead a congregation or a group of hearers away into any man-made doctrine.

We are "saved by grace, through faith"—faith in the blood of Christ which was shed on Calvary for the sins of man. And whoever believes this with his whole heart, trusting in Christ as Saviour, will be saved! This is in a few words the "way of salvation by faith." Then "the love of God will be shed abroad in our hearts." Then we are able to live the life of faith in love. True faith must and will "work by love." But it is faith that saves!

Where this fundamental truth which is the foundation of salvation, is not understood, there all teaching must necessarily be wrong. It is just heart-breaking to listen to these "love-preachers." And it is pitiful to see the poor ignorant sheep being led astray—and that in our own churches! We Mennonites may fancy that we are immune to such teachings. We thank God for many preachers and Bible teachers who are yet true to the Word! But we are extremely sorry for the false teachers and preachers that are "creeping in unawares." And we are sorry for the great lack of discernment on the part of many preachers to let such false teachings get into their churches and schools. Many kind-hearted brethren want to "keep peace," and they let things go their way. Oh, what a judgment they bring upon themselves! We are also very sorry for the still greater lack of discernment among the church members. They are far too easily satisfied if only "something new" is presented and if the speaker is "interesting." If he quotes a few Scripture passages, promiscuously, has a few exhortations, and speaks nicely of "love," then all is well.

Many church members are not really converted and saved in the Scriptural way, and therefore they do not feel the need of the true Gospel. And very likely some preachers are not saved, or else they would not preach such false Gospels. May God open our eyes!

TO MY FRIEND

Wish that I could let you know
All the joy your friendship brings—
Find it mighty hard to tell,
Words are such imperfect things
But within my heart I keep Thoughts that I cannot express.
Only this—your friendship fills
All my life with happiness!

Success

Rosemarie Unruh

702 East Seventh Ave., Hutchinson, Kansas

Success is usually thought of as being money. If one has made a fortune or a great deal of money, he is thought of as being successful. Success does not necessarily mean having money. I think that it means having a worthwhile goal, which we have set for ourselves. There are different kinds of successful people. For example, one may be a success as a doctor, lawyer, or minister. If he has done well and accomplished much in his line or vocation, not only for the benefit of himself but also for the benefit of others, I think that he is successful.

There are several things which are very essential if one wants to be successful. The first one is opportunity. Many young people say that there are no longer any good chances for them, but as Daniel Webster once said, "There is always room at the top."

Many of us, who think we are poor, are rich in opportunities if we could only see them. We are always inclined to think that we will find a fortune in some other place; and in this way we let our opportunity, which is near at hand, slip by.

Hundreds of years ago there lived near the shore of the river Indus a Persian by the name of Ali Hafed. He with his family lived on a large farm which covered many acres and on which were beautiful orchards, fields, and forests. He was very rich and had everything that he wanted, but one day a priest came to his home and told him about finding diamonds in a distant land. Ali Hafed, after listening to this story, grew discontented; and after selling his farm and leaving his family with a neighbor, he set out in search of the diamonds. After searching for many years he finally became discouraged of ever finding any diamonds and one day drowned himself in a river. The man who had bought his farm discovered diamonds on it and here later developed the Golcondo Diamond Mines.

There are opportunities around us everywhere. It is said that America is another name for opportunity. The way to be successful by using your opportunities is to first find the need of the world and then supply that need.

Another very important element for success is good appearance. Many people have had to forfeit their job because they had failed to keep up their personal appearance, while many others have been given jobs because of their good appearance instead of through merit or ability.

Personality is also an important element in search of success. A personality can either bring success or drive it away. Many people have personalities that are so cheerful that when we come near them our troubles just seem to fade away, while others have personalities which seem to make us shrivel up the moment they come near us. Certain personalities are greater than mere physical beauty and more powerful than learning. Charm of personality is a divine gift which sways the strongest of characters, and sometimes even controls the destinies of nations.

In the Black Hills of South Dakota there lived a humble, ignorant, old miner who won the love and good will of everyone. Though he knew nothing of the usages of public society nor even knew how to spell his own name, he was elected mayor of his town and later sent to the legislature. All of this was because he had a winning personality and a heart in him that understood everyone.

Good manners are said to be three-fourths of life. No one can fully estimate how great a factor in life is the possession of good manners or timely thoughtfulness with human sympathy behind it. They are the kindly fruit of a refined nature. Manners can affects us in many ways. They are what soothes, exalts, or refines us by their steady, constant, and uniform operation.

The politest people in the world, it is said, are the Jews. In all the ages they have been mistreated, reviled, and despoiled of their civil privileges and social rights. Yet, through it all they are always polite. They indulge in few or no recriminations, are faithful to old associations, more considerate of the prejudices of others than others are of theirs, are not more worldly-minded or money-loving than people generally are. All things considered, they surpass all nations in courtesy and forbearance.

Life's highway is strewn with failures just as the sea is strewn with wrecks. A large percentage of those who embark in commercial undertakings fail according to the records of commercial agencies. Why do men fail? Some failures are relative, not absolute, but a large percent are absolute. A partial success is obtained, a success that goes limping along through life but the goal of ambition is unreached and the heart's desire is unattained. There are several things which enter in to make men failures. Personal qualities, defects, and deficiencies, such as appearance, manners, and personality, are several reasons of failure.

Herbert H. Vreeland, president of the Metropolitan Street Railways Company of New York once gave the following items as five conditions of failure:

Laziness, particularly mental laziness.

Lack of faith in the efficiency of work.

Reliance on the saving grace of luck.

Lack of courage, initiative and persistence.

The belief that the young man's job affects his standing instead of the young man's affecting the standing of his job.

Edison began his experiments in a baggage car on the Grand Trunk Railroad when a newsboy and later rose to one of the world's most leading scientists. This proves the last condition of failure. Instead of letting his job affect his standing he tried to affect the standing of his job.

Where men have built an abiding success, industry and perseverance have proven to be the foundation stones of their great achievements. By the exercise of these great qualities we may rise, as others have done, to success if we

"Labor and endure and wait
And what we cannot find create."

All these things I have mentioned are things which go to make one successful in the sense of material things. But this is not the only kind of success one should achieve. The other kind of success is one in which a person has created and developed a finer sense or being within himself or has created a liking for high ideals of living. The supreme object of life should be to raise personal value. A broad mental outlook, a love of the beautiful, an appreciation of the finer things of life, these are of much greater importance than mere piling up of dollars and luxuries that simply deaden or cover up our spiritual nature. The most valuable human food is not purchasable. It is beyond the reach of man-made money, and yet it is within the reach of every soul that aspires or chooses to live in that world where the finer senses are legal tender for the finest good of life.

We all know of men who are pointed out as successful millionaires who started out as poor boys and have made vast fortunes. But they have failed in the chief business of life, the developing of the finest qualities of human nature, the qualities that make man a masterpiece of God. Surely the coming man will not let the attention of his God-like mind be completely turned aside from the finer senses of life but devote his supreme attention to the cultivation of his higher qualities, his spiritual nature.

JUST A MINUTE

I have only just a minute,
Only sixty seconds in it,
Forced upon me, can't refuse it,
Didn't seek it, didn't choose it,
But it's up to me to use it,
I must suffer if I lose it,
Give account if I abuse it,
Just a tiny little minute—
But eternity is in it.

AN APOLOGY

Copy for the Young People's pages was misplaced in the printshop; wandered into the wastepaper basket and was burned up by the janitor before discovery was made. We are very sorry to disappoint our C. E. workers, and promise that a thing like this shall not happen again. — The Bethel College Printshop.

WHAT MUST AMERICA DO TO BE SAVED?

Metta E. Gorden, Woodville, Ohio

The serious days through which America is now passing call for introspection and prospection. Occasionally we need to look backward to the rock from which we were hewn and to the fathers that bore us. We need also to look forward to the course we are taking, and endeavor to chart the destiny of this nation in the paths of righteousness.

Whether we see ourselves or not, the eyes of the world are on us, America. Our institutions, our culture, our educational processes, our industrial order, our social and pleasure life, our religious convictions and statutes, our national ideals, and our national standards are all under the scrutinizing eye of the distressed world. Can we emerge from our present chaos and give to the world, a nation wherein righteousness is exalted, social justice is enjoyed, and the kingdom of God is established? Surely this behooves us to study the condition of our nation today.

No honest person can deny the fact that there is a decline of idealism among the American people. Plain life and high thinking have given place to high living and little thinking. The decline of seriousness and the increase of frivolity is enough to alarm us. Our Sabbath Day witnesses the increase of the multitudes that prefer the husks rather than that which gives inward life and joy. Many of our people are sacrificing the finer things of the Spirit for the glittering gold and pleasure of the passing day.

The decadence of the home is another peril in America. Gone is that great institution glorified by Payne's immortal lines of "Home Sweet Home." Our mind goes back to the time our fathers read the sacred page and kneeling down to our Heavenly Father offered prayer. In former times the home was the seat of affection and the center of the universe for happy families. Let us look at the situation today: We get our pleasure at the picture show, our music on the radio, for fellowship we go to the club, for dinner we go to the restaurant, our daily bread comes from the bakery, children are born in a hospital and nurtured in a hired nursery, and in all we live in a mad rush and die in a sanitarium with no place in all this regime for attention to the soul. Over the graves of many might be inscribed, "Here lies the body of one that lived and died without a home."

All of these problems present a real challenge to the church of America. The solution of these problems, we are convinced, rests in some of these suggestions. The revitalization of the church life of America is our hope. It has been said, "Too many of the membership are church-born, instead of spirit-born. Many are lifeless, spiritless, and passionless." We are reminded again and again of the need in this nation of a mighty revival of religion.

The ministry for the organized missionary work of the church, standing, as it does, for the vital things of the spiritual life, is in a position to render our beloved church a most effective and helpful service, in enlisting and transforming the lives of those they meet.

The essential truth of Christianity is that man is more than a body. He is more than a mind. He is a spirit. He lives in a moral universe in which God is gracious and offers pardon and strength for all who will repent and follow Christ. This is the foundation Paul built. Build America on this foundation and men will be brothers. Christian principles are fundamental, not only in the teaching of Christianity but also in the building of a nation. Upon what other foundation, than this, can we build America? This is America's challenge to the church. It should come home to the heart of all of us who are Christians and Americans.

AFTER SEVENTY

Lest it be too easily asserted that a man's accomplishments and abilities are of declining value as he accumulates years or that his abilities necessarily become debilitated, it should be recorded that:

Between the ages of 70 and 83 Commodore Vanderbilt added about 100 millions to his fortune.

Kant at 74 wrote his Anthropology, Metaphysics of Ethics and Strife of the Faculties.

Tintoretto at 74 painted the vast Paradise, a canvas 74 feet by 30.

Verdi at 74 produced his masterpiece Othello; at 80, Falstaff and at 85 the famous Ave Marie, Stabat Mater and Te Deum.

Lamarck at 78 completed his great zoological work, The Natural History of the Invertebrates.

Oliver Wendell Holmes at 78 wrote Over the Teacups.

Cato at 80 began the study of Greek.

Goethe at 80 completed Faust.

Tennyson at 83 wrote Crossing the Bar.

Titian at 98 painted his historic picture of the Battle of Lepanto.

HOW OLD OUGHT I TO BE?

"Dear Mother," said a little maid,
"Please whisper it to me:
Before I am a Christian,
How old ought I to be?"

"How old ought you to be, dear child,
Before you can love me?"
"I always loved you, Mummie mine,
Since I was tiny wee.

"I love you now and always will,"
The little daughter said,
And on her mother's shoulder hid
Her golden curly head.

"How old, my girlie, must you be Before you trust my care?"
"Oh, Mother, dear, I do, I do—
I trust you everywhere."

"How old ought you to be, my child,
To do the things I say?"
The little girl looked up and said,
"I can do that today."

"Then you can be a Christian, too;
Don't wait till you are grown;
Tell Jesus now you come to Him
To be His very own."

And so the little maid knelt down,
And said, "Lord, if I may,
I'd like to be a Christian now."
He answered, "Yes, today."

CORRESPONDENCE

Greetings from the Grace Mennonite Church of Dallas, Oregon.

We are having an unusual spring this year. The farmers are looking for nice weather so that they can get their spring farming done.

We have had a few very interesting missionaries in our church the last year. The Monday before Christmas Miss Doering of Africa was here and showed some pictures on the life and ways of the people over there which was very interesting. We enjoy these meetings very much and always have a full house.

Now we are looking forward to the coming convention which will be held in Dallas this year. There are five churches cooperating for this event.

Our church is growing all the time. Four little ones have come to stay with us, and they are all boys, which is something very unusual.

We are planning to build a church this summer so that we will have more room to accommodate the friends who come to visit us.

Our pastor and his family had a very thrilling adventure a few weeks ago. They went to visit Mrs. Widmer's parents, and while they were there it rained quite hard. On their way home they drove through water which came up to the running board of the car. We are thankful that the Lord brought them safely home again.—Mrs. Leonard Schmidt, Corr.

Zion Menn. Church, Donnellson, Iowa.

The Peace Institute of the four Mennonite Churches of Iowa was held at the Zion Church at Donnellson, with Rev. Earl Landis in charge. Meetings were held both afternoon and evenings and proved both interesting and beneficial. — On Easter Sunday night the Zion choir gave a concert consisting of musical numbers appropriate to the occasion. — The Vesper Choir of Bluffton College was with us April 4. In spite of bad weather the concert was well attended and greatly appreciated by all who heard it.

First Mennonite Church, Allentown, Pa.

The executive committee at a recent business meeting decided that one offering a month instead of one a quarter should be turned over to missions. — The Brotherhood enjoyed a very pleasant evening visiting the Souderton Brotherhood on Wednesday evening, April 21. — The Sunday school offering of April 25 was given to the Mennonite Home for the Aged. $54.00 was contributed to this worthy cause. — The Mothers' Class presented a very interesting program on Wednesday evening, May 5. — Corr.

Menn. Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kan.

The new set of pulpit chairs which were given to the church as a gift by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Goering and family were dedicated to the Lord's service on Sunday, April fourth. — It was thirty-three years on April 4th that our pastor Rev. P. P. Wedel preached his first sermon. Rev. John C. Goering was in charge of a simple celebration of this event. — C. H. Voth of Inman filled the pulpit here on April 18th due to Rev. Wedel's absence. — Our pastor took part in the reception service for Rev. John Kaufman at the Hoffnungsfeld church on April 25th. Rev. Gerhard Friesen of Lehigh delivered the message here.

The men's chorus of the Bethel Church of Inman rendered an inspiring program which was enjoyed by all on Sunday May 2nd. Preceding this program the Junior Christian Endeavor gave a Mother's Day program.—Wilma Wedel, reporter.

Bally, Pennsylvania, April 30, 1937

Greetings from the Hereford Mennonite Church:

We started the year with our annual New Year's Service of Praise consisting of local talent among our members. Then on January 10th, we had our fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Senior C. E. Society by Rev. C. H. A. van der Smissen. Despite the very disagreeable weather we had a full house and inspiring messages.

February 7th being the birthday date of Dwight L. Moody, our pastor, Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, preached a most interesting sermon on his life and experiences. —Dr. Charles Henry Breed, headmaster of Blair Academy, Blairstown, N. J. showed a series of interesting and instructive slides on Norway and Sweden. The offering was used towards the payment of the new bus which was purchased by our church council.

Our Junior Christian Endeavorers gave a splendid Easter program for their parents on Sunday afternoon, March 21st. They are a very active group of youngsters. On Easter we had our annual Easter Dawn Services and during the morning worship services the Primary Department rendered a few songs. Other talent of the Primary Department participated in the services.

We have had a lot of sickness among our members and a number of hospital cases. Our oldest church member was buried together with two other faithful members. We can pray for a speedy recovery for the sick and suffering and thank God for the influence of the lives of those who have been borne to their last resting places. Thus, trusting God, we labor and strive for greater things as we travel on life's road.—Mae Latshaw, Corr.

UNDONE. And He said, What hast thou done? Gen. 4:10.

The Rev. Rowland Hill preaching on one occasion from this text, at Cowes, began his sermon as follows, "On my way to your island, I visited the county jail at Winchester, and there I saw many who were accused of heavy crimes, but who seemed careless and indifferent, and to have but little sense of their awful situation. But one young man attracted my attention. He kept separate from the rest, and seemed very much troubled. I went up to him and said, 'And what have you done, young man?' 'Sir', said he, deeply affected, 'I have done that which I cannot undo, and which has undone me.' This, my dear friends, said the minister, is the situation of every one of you. You have each of you done that which has undone you, and which you cannot undo."

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Eric Claassen, son of Henry A. and Marie Claassen (nee Hamm), was born west of Paso Robles, California, on November 16, 1909. He grew up with his sisters and brother in the home of his parents, being a faithful helper on his father's farm.

On May 23, 1926, he was baptized upon confession of his faith and became a member of the San Marcos Mennonite Church near Paso Robles. He was active in the choir and especially in the Christian Endeavor Society which he served as president for two years.

About four and one-half years ago he began to work for himself on a rented farm. Here he dwelled alone until he was married on March 20, 1935, with Sister Ina Beth Smiley. They lived together only a short but happy and blessed time.

On the morning of April 18, 1937, he became sick and was rushed to a hospital. Upon examination the doctor found ulcers in the stomach and performed an operation. The patient was very sick until the Lord called him on April 29. He lived in fellowship with his Saviour and kept his faith to the end. He leaves to mourn his departure his dear wife, his and her parents. brothers and sisters, and many other relatives and friends who hope to see him again in Glory. He attained the age of 27 years, 5 months, 13 days.

Funeral services were held on May 1 at the home of his parents and at the San Marcos Mennonite Church. The pastor, Rev. F. F. Jantzen, spoke words of comfort based on Isa. 28:29 in the German, and Rev. C. Hege, the neighboring pastor, spoke in English using I Peter 1:3 and Col. 3:1, 2 as his text.

Peter Goertz was born March 27, 1865, in Crimea, Russia, the son of Franz and Maria, nee Schroeder. In 1877 the family with their five children came to the United States, making their home near Hillsboro, Kansas At sixteen years of age he was baptized on the confession of his faith by Elder John Schroeder and received into the Johannestal Mennonite Church which connection he never severed. On December 5, 1891, he was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Nickel with whom he was privileged to live forty-five years and some months. The Lord blessed their union with six children, two sons and four daughters. One son passed away in infancy. On April 24, 1937, at the age of 72 years and 28 days, he passed away. He leaves to bless his memory, his faithful companion, five children, his mother, five brothers and four sisters, and many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted at the Johannestal church, Rev. Valentine Nickel and Rev. J. H. Epp officiating.

Mrs. Helen Funk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Unruh, was born at Mountain Lake, Minnesota, July 20, 1896. In 1913, at Aberdeen, Idaho, she was united in marriage with Jacob Funk. To this union their only son Herbert was born. In 1933 they moved to a home on the Albany-Cornvallis highway, Oregon. There on the morning of April 27 death came to her peacefully and she went home to be with the Lord whom she dearly loved. Mrs. Funk reached the age of 40 years, 9 months and 7 days. She leaves to mourn her departure, her devoted husband and her loving son, her parents, three brothers and their wives, three sisters and their husbands, and other relatives and a host of friends. Mrs. Funk was a member of the Grace Mennonite Church of Albany, Oregon, and her funeral was conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. A. Augsburger.

FAITH IN GOD NECESSARY FOR GOOD CITIZENSHIP

If you don't believe in God, if you don't believe that man has a duty to worship him, you can't make a case for the inalienableness of man's rights. When the founders of this country declared that all men were created equal, they were not thinking ridiculously of equality with respect to health, intelligence, or wealth. They were referring to the equality of men with respect to rights, not at all dependent upon health, intelligence or wealth. They were saying that men are equal to each other, and equal as individuals to the aggregate of individuals known as society. They were convinced that man derives his rights from his Creator, not from Society, and that what God has given, only God can take away. It is not hard to see why, then, it is necessary for religion to be allowed all the room it needs in this country. Without it, and without the beliefs which it teaches concerning the relations of the Creator to the men and women He created, our entire American system of government would be without foundation. Remember that, whenever the extremely-emancipated "liberals" who work under cover for the totalitarian system try to tell you that religion is not essential to America.

HOW THEY DO IT IN RUSSIA.—That increasing company in our own land who believe in allowing children to go uncontrolled, should be interested in the following news item from Russia via the Daily Mail, London.

"Moscow. Elia Ageenko, top class pupil of the village school at Zavidovo, Central Russia, failed to pass an examination he had entered. He took an old rifle, loaded it, and shot and killed his teacher."

There is self-expression in bloom! Let the high brows with low standards take warning. You say you do not wish to influence the actions and decisions of your children. You want them to grow in natural manner. The gardener who does not "influence" his soil will have a crop of weeds. The choice is not between flowers and nothing, but flowers and weeds. So it is with life and character. If you do not plant the Word of God and righteousness, the world will plant unrighteousness and sin.

The history of the Christian Church has been marked by periodic slumps into coldness and indifference, followed by sudden revivals. In nearly every case the revival has centered around some God-chosen and God-inspired Christian. The names of such men as Moody, Finney, Wesley, Whitefield, and others, bring a warm glow to the heart of the evangelical and gospel-loving Christian. From century to century these great personalities have assumed leadership in bringing the Gospel to the multitudes.

We are thrilled and inspired by reading the lives and accomplishments of these men. All of them were earnest Christians, men whose great mission in life was the winning of souls through the preaching of the Gospel. In a day when Christians everywhere are hungering for another widespread revival this book will find ready acceptance.

The Mennonite

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, MAY 25, 1937 NO. 21

The Worth of Modesty

"A just and reasonable modesty does not only recommend eloquence, but sets off every great talent which a man can be possessed of. It heightens all the virtues which it accompanies. Like the shades in paintings, it raises and rounds every figure and makes the colors more beautiful, though not so glaring as they would be without."—Addison.

Nothing is so becoming as modesty. It was one of the outstanding traits of Jesus' character, and we do well to emulate him in not thinking "more highly of ourselves than we ought to." There is hardly a thing more worthy of cultivation in personality than simple, unpretending manners. It is the one trait that somehow makes a person attractive even though his outward appearance may be unattractive. That is especially so with woman as someone has said, "Modesty in woman has two special advantages—it enhances beauty and veils uncomeliness."

Modesty is not a weakness; on the contrary, it is perfectly compatable with strength, and, as a matter of fact, it is generally found among men of uncommon ability and force.

The Latin word from which the word modesty is derived is modus, which signifies a standard of measurement. Thus, modesty is not self-depreciation; it doesn't mean underestimating, but properly evaluating one's self according to an accepted standard. Real modesty positively shuns deception. It heartily subscribes to the truth uttered by the Apostle Paul when he says, "If a man think himself to be something when he is nothing, he deceiveth himself."

The modest man is neither ignorant nor distrustful of his powers, but he does not vaunt himself because of them and is not puffed up. Sir Isaac Newton who did such valuable service for the world that he had a right to expect the homage of the populace, remained modest and likened himself to a boy who had picked up a few pebbles on the beach while the great ocean of truth lay undiscovered before him.

Here we have it. Genuine merit is always modest. The really great man is ever the most humble. He is aware of the fact that for everything that he knows or can do there a hundred things that he does not know or cannot do. The great charm of all knowledge and of all power is modesty. The pomposity of a good many people is an attempt to impose upon the world by passing for more than they are worth, by attracting more attention than their scanty merits deserve.

Modesty shows itself in different ways. It reveals itself throughout the personality of the individual. It shows itself in action. The modest man makes no noise or predictions or rash promises about what he is going to do. He minds his business and quietly, and usually efficiently, does his work.—Modesty shows itself in the manner of walking. In those parts of Europe that are frequented by American tourists, some of whom are by no means models of modesty, the natives there say that they can recognize us, especially young Americans, by the force with which we bring down our feet and by the clatter of our heels.—Modesty shows itself in speech and conversation. A modest person speaks in a pleasing tone, doesn't shout nor giggle with every utterance made, nor otherwise behave unduly demonstratively in his conversation. It seems as though we American people are losing the art of modesyt in social intercourse by giggling at everything that is being said.—Modesty shows itself in dress. A modest individual, a lady especially, will not overdress nor underdress, will not make herself conspicuous by dressing outlandishly lavishly, or in a manner that is way out of fashion or that distorts the form and poise of the body. In the manner of headgear one wonders if women especially are not going beyond the bounds of modesty.

Every Christian who is striving to exercise the virtue of modesty does well to heed the admonitions of Paul when he says, "Finally, brethren, whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report; if it be a virtue or praiseworthy, think on these things."

There is a Bible in the library of the University of Goettingen written on 2470 palm leaves.

PASTOR TING LI MEI

P. H. Richert

Pastor Ting Li Mei has gone Home. When this news first travelled about, even those of us who never had met him personally felt saddened by the loss China and the world had sustained. Probably no other Chinese Christian has had such a tremendous influence on the student life of China. But his influence reached farther than China, for many in other lands have been helped by his prayer ministry. Already in my student days upon reading of Pastor Ting as a man who prayed for over five hundred persons every day, I was lead to start a prayer list of my own which intermittently has proven to be of tremendous spiritual value.

This prayer warrior, born in 1871, was brought up in a Christian home, nurtured as Timothy was. Even from childhood his was not an ordinary life. "For God gave him not a spirit of fearfulness, but of power and love and discipline." II Tim. 1:7. He was sent away to school while still quite young. He was so spiritual and witnessed so much for the Lord that he was known to all the students as the "Little Pastor."

After graduating from college he spent several years in teaching and then was called to a pastorate. This occurred just at the time of the Boxer uprising. He was arrested and cast into prison for forty days. He kept his Testament with him continually even at the expense of more severe punishment. Three times he was called before the judges and examined. Once he received 200 stripes (some reports give 500) laid on with a rod. He was threatened with death and was offered his freedom if he would speak one word against the Christian doctrine. He was determined, however, to remain true to His Lord, which he did. Truly he could have said as Paul did, "I bear branded on my body the marks of the Lord Jesus." Gal. 6:17.

From being a faithful witness Ting Li Mei became a bleeding herald of the Cross. Now he could look up into the face of his Lord and say, "This is my body that was broken for Thee." His spirit had taken fire. He became burdened over the fact that so many young men of his country were preparing for a business or political career while so few seemed willing to consecrate their lives to the gospel ministry. This was the beginning of his many years of service among students as the Travelling Secretary of the Chinese Student Volunteer Movement for the Christian Ministry.

Dr. John R. Mott says of Pastor Ting, "In recent years he has influenced the largest number of students to devote their lives to the Christian ministry ever secured by one man during the history of the Church in Asia."

As an evangelist, Pastor Ting has been used by the Holy Spirit to influence thousands of non-Christians of all classes to an earnest and prayerful study of the teachings of Jesus Christ. He would urge them to promise that if they find these teachings good and true, they would apply them to their own lives. In one city at the end of eight days over twelve hundred people signed declarations to this intent.

But probably his greatest ministry was his prayerful ministry. For scores of years he prayed daily for hundreds of individuals from every walk of life. Some of the names on his list were world-famed Christian leaders; others, humble folk unknown outside their own communities. At the time of his death his prayer list included about 2,500 names. How did he find time for so much prayer? By improving the moments which most of us waste. While riding on rickshas, traveling on the river boats or railway trains or waiting in the station; sometimes while walking on the street or sitting on the platform during a service, he used the unoccupied moments to intercede for his friends. Every day hours were spent pouring out his soul to God in their behalf.

Pastor Ting Li Mei has been called by some the St. John of China. What was the secret of his great life? Nothing but what we may all have if we are willing to pay the price.—Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker.

PEACE HEROES WILL BE MEMORIALIZED

The Peace Heroes Memorial Society, with headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio, has since 1923 sponsored the holding of Memorial Day exercises in commemoration of the heroes of peace and social construction, upon whose risks and sufferings normal life depends—doctors, policemen, firemen, mothers, etc. The promoters of the Society, while differing widely in their views towards war, are united in their conviction that peace is the foundation of an enduring social order and that those who make it noble are real patriots. In their exercises, held for workers who have lost their lives at their employment and women who have died in childbirth, the fact that heroic service knows no limitations of sex, race, or creed is emphasized by having as participants Catholics, Jews, and Protestants and, on the program, at least one woman and one negro.

Persons or groups wishing to obtain descriptions of the services planned for Memorial Day, 1937, may secure them free of charge by addressing Peace Heroes Memorial Society, 842 Lexington Avenue, Cincinnati. —The American Friend.

HOME MISSIONS

W. S. Gottshall, Sec.

Brother J. H. Janzen writes from Vancouver, B. C.

—The work in the past winter was unusually difficult; the long winter and the snowbound roads and sickness have interferred, and the C. P. R. has not granted a clergy permit, so much work remains undone. In several places persons have expressed a desire to be baptized, and we had the joy that three of the girls in the Home have found the Lord and want to be identified with the Church of Christ. This is a real encouragement to us, for it is quite a task to win the young people away from that to which they have been drawn, so that it can only be accomplished through God's grace and power. We give Him our heart and hand, but only He gives the success to the effort.

We are here to conduct the Girls' Home and to help the different groups in their organization, but there is much more dependent on the work that needs to be done. I have secured for Brother B. B. Friesen a pass on the streetcars, and he has sought whoever could be found, and the Lord has honored his work, and since then several young people have attended our services. Sunday and Thursday afternoons the girls gather in our house. They divide their joys and sorrows with the mother of the family. From 7:30 to 8:30 we have either Bible Study or Catechetical Class. By request of the girls I have started to make them somewhat acquainted with Mennonite history.

In the congregational groups we have taken the first step to establish the organization, the first meeting of the Conference was held and "The Conference of the United Mennonites in British Columbia" is a reality. We are glad to report that here in Vancouver we have such that can work with us and have a heart for the word of the Lord, and we hope in time that the Conference will have prosperous congregations here in British Columbia.

The need for meeting houses is becoming more urgent. Abbottsford has secured the lot for the building and will no doubt soon begin the erection of a house of worship; Coughlan waits for Bro. Toews to come and dedicate their little church; Black Creek is building, and Pitt Meadows we hope, will soon also begin. The S. S. Union of the Eastern Conference has already made a contribution. But now something must be done in Vancouver, and this will cost more than in the country. The faithful have already given $135, but with this we will not be able to do much. Would the brethren be able to assist us? We would be very grateful and the contributing congregations would receive the blessing from the Lord.

J. J. Thiessen, Saskatoon, Sask.

The first quarter of 1937 was the coldest; the thermometer went down to 50 and 60 below zero, and the wood and coal bill rose to over one hundred dollars. Many people were sick, hardly any one escaped the flu. In some instances complications set in and the patient died. The hospitals were full of sick people and were a rich field of activity for me. The sick and dying and convalescent are grateful for our visits. I took part in four funerals.

The cold winter affected the Sunday School and Church attendance. I myself could not go out one Sunday because of the flu. The enrollment in the Sunday School, not including the adults, has risen to 75. We have a corps of good teachers who help to raise the standard of the work. (A recent donation of $1,000 toward their new church nearly wiped out their debt, Sec.) Our services, as a rule, are well attended, especially the night of the Young People's meeting. These are a good training for the deepening of the spiritual life. Thank God we have a number of believing young people who are ready to take part and who endeavor to keep themselves unspotted from the world.

There are eleven persons in the catechetical class. Some have had little religious training and the instructions are hard to grasp. The answers are all committed to memory. During the month of March we had blessed Bible and music presentations that were very suitable for the Suffering and Death and Resurrection of our Savior.

The work in the Girls' Home is progressing as reported previously. About 25 girls went to Vancouver because of higher wages there. We have at present about 80 girls that are regular patrons of the Home.

Johann P. Bueckert, Gretna, Man.

He writes: "During the winter I was twice hindered from my activities by sickness. As usual, so also this winter, we had a Bible discussion in Reinland. We had three services during the day, in the evening we had preaching. It has become characteristic of the time that the people want to know more of the things of the future and the second coming of Christ. For our study, I Thess. 4 to II Thess. 2 inclusive was selected. The Lord was near and many spoke of the blessing of God which they had received.

During the first half of January I endeavored to lead the prayer services in our villages. For this purpose we divided the workers in our congregation into three groups. The middle of February, I left home to visit other groups and to minister to them, and to attend a ministerial meeting in Gnadenthal. At Domain I worked in Bible instructions for three days together with two ministers of the "Bruedergemeinde." About half of the people belong to that Conference and together they and our people use our meeting house. At other places I administered the Lord's Supper and visited the sick and comforted the disconsolate, of which there were many this winter. We made a successful beginning with a Bible School this year. There were many hindrances, but we had five-weeks of school with nineteen pupils at Blumenort, Gnadenthal and Schoenwiese. The third day of Easter, the pupils gave a program in the church at Rosenort which made a very favorable impression.

RELIEF

Compiled by O. O. Miller and A. Warkentin

Friends of our colonist brethren in Paraguay and supporters of the Mennonite Central Committee's efforts to aid in that colonization will be interested to know that the committee was first approached by the Estate of the principal owner. Our Secretary's January visit to Paraguay was mainly in the interests of this matter. The procedure in handling the negotiations —all details of the purchase plan, the purchase itself, the plan for financing the purchase, and the initial plans for holding the property and for resale of the occupied part to the colonists—has all been approved by the six Relief organizations that cooperate through the Central Committee.

A number of brethren throughout the various supporting groups are sharing in a special Loan to the Committee to cover the purchase. The colonists have agreed to a 15-year payment plan which is to liquidate the loan. Anyone interested in a reasonably safe 5% investment, and in having his investment serve a most worthy cause at the same time, can get fuller details as to security, plan for repayment, etc., from the Treasurer, Orlo O. Miller, Akron, Penna.

The Committee recognized God's definite leading in the manner in which this service to our Immigrant brethren has seemed to work out.

Bro. P. C. Hiebert, Chairman of the M. C. C., has booked passage on S. S. Pan America, sailing from New York, June 5, for a three month's visit to both Brazil and Paraguay Colonies. Bro. Hiebert's visit has mainly to do with the spiritual interests and organizations of our brethren there, and he goes as the representative of the Mennonite Brethren Church of North America. However, as Chairman of the M. C. C., his visit this summer will prove most valuable in looking after Committee interests. He plans to be with the Chaco, Paraguay, brethren during August.

24 bales of clothing and 2 bags of shoes—weight 2336 lbs.—conservatively valued at $1500.00, left Lancaster, Pa., on April 21 on the long journey to Paraguay. The Sisters Sewing Circles of the Eastern Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities contributed most of this and besides donated more than enough cash to cover transportation costs to Asuncion. Much of the clothing was new and the rest in good condition. We believe many hearts at the other end will be cheered by this help.

Word from Paraguay as of about March 1, indicated prospects for a better than average harvest. The cotton that had been saved from the grasshoppers was about ready for picking. The replanted areas also looked promising. This season's total planting is something over 3,000 acres. The Colony Cooperative was also in process of delivering 125 tons of beans which had been sold to the Army. This sale brings the season's first cash into the Colony—the equivalent of over $4,000 U. S.

The group, which in January organized to leave the present Chaco location, had sent a Committee to East Paraguay to study settlement possiblities there, but beyond this has apparently worked out no further leaving plans.

PUBLICATION

It will be of interest to the readers of THE MENNONITE to hear that our CHRISTIAN SUNDAY SCHOOL QUARTERLY IS GOING OVER BIG. Orders for nearly 12,000 copies were placed for the second quarter of this year, which is far beyond the fondest expectations of those who are directly responsible for this publication. It is ever true: With God all things are possible. This quarterly came into being with considerable fear as to the outcome, largely for this reason: Since our Sunday Schools had been using the quarterlies of seventeen different publishers, most of them very good, some of the promoters of our own enterprise had their doubts as to whether it would measure up with the best of those in use and whether it could wean our schools over to its use. But with a consecrated Board of Editors, and their work supported by the prayers of many brethren and sisters who felt that we should at last have our own English quarterly, our kind heavenly Father has seen fit to bless the undertaking. And we hear from different places that the more the adult Sunday School workers become familiar with the book, the better they like it. The editors and the two boards sponsoring the work deeply appreciate the splendid reception and the loyal support that the churches are giving this publication. Now, if these same churches will remember the Board of Publication during this year and next, with good collections, so that it may be in a position to get our own printing plant or join one already established, we would then also be able to put out quarterlies needed by other Sunday school units. May God richly bless our Christian Sunday School Quarterly in its use all over the land!

THE KINDERBOTE - JUNIOR MESSENGER, too, is making pretty good headway. And a good many churches or Sunday Schools who could use this publication stand in their own light by not adopting it and ordering it in lots for the schools. It is a worthy publication and because of its being printed in German and English, so that it can be used in the States and across the boundry in Canada, it furnishes a splendid bond of connection between the two large bodies of Mennonites on this continent. The editors of the paper are doing splendidly and orders are coming in from both Canada and the States, so that the mailing list now calls for nearly 2,500 copies, which is quite an increase.

THE MENNONITE also has had some increase but not as much as it deserves, if what the readers say of it is actually true. Its circulation is now 1975 copies.—T.

Schools and Education

The short articles on MAKE EDUCATION CHRISTIAN, furnished so far this year by President E. G. Kaufman of Bethel College, chairman of the Board of Education, are now concluded. In their place President A. S. Rosenberger of Bluffton College, secretary of the same Board, will furnish a series of short articles on our Mennonite colleges and other matter pertaining thereto. We hope to be able to bring the first of his articles in the next issue or very soon after that.

WHY IS KAGAWA SO POPULAR?

We are now far enough away from his recent visit to America to look deliberately at Kagawa and try to see why he was so popular. Like it or not, agree with him or not, the fact remains that he simply won his hearers. He may be right, he may be wrong in many of his theories and teachings, but all the same he filled the largest halls to overflowing.

Why is this?

Is it his theology? Some agree with him; others differ. Even you and I can find flaws in his theology. And yet they do not draw the crowds he drew.

Is it his knowledge of the Bible and his interpretations of Bible teachings? But thousands know the entire content of the Bible better than he does, and even his best friends will not accept all of his interpretations of Bible teachings.

Is it his oratory? None who heard him would set him up as an orator. Thousands are more eloquent in speech and more logical in presentation. And yet they speak to empty seats. Many who came to hear him either did not hear or could not understand.

Is it his theory of co-operatives? Others are advocating co-operatives fully as much as he does. Besides, perhaps as many disagree with his theory of co-operatives as agree with him. No other advocate of co-operatives gets the hearing that Kagawa has been accorded.

Is it because he has won the ears of the world? But what is there in the man or his message that the world runs after him? What does he have that others do not have? In what respects does he differ? Why will folks run after him? Why will they read his books? And all this when they do not live what he teaches?

May the following suggest a partial answer?

1. Perhaps somewhere in Japan he met the same Christ that Paul met on the Damascus road.

2. Perhaps like Paul he accepted that Christ and like Paul learned to say, "Christ liveth in me."

3. Perhaps folks see in him one who is trying to live the Christian life.

4. And all of this may be summed up in these few words: His words, his looks, his personality impress his hearers that they see before them a man who is simply, honestly, really trying to the best of his understanding to live the Christ-life toward God and man. —The Gospel Mesenger.

JOSEPH'S READINESS FOR SERVICE

Genesis chapters 37, 39-41 Printed 41:33-44

Introduction

We first see Joseph in our lesson narrative (37:2) when as a lad of 17 years, he brought an evil report of four of his brothers to his father. His brothers disliked him and the father's unfortunate partiality to Joseph fanned this into hatred. Joseph was a dreamer of dreams in which he saw a vision of a great future for himself. His unaffected, simple telling of these to his brothers further aroused their ill-will and hatred. They sold him into slavery and thought this would forever prevent their fulfillment. In reality they but started him on the road to high honors.

He became one of the slaves in Potiphar's house in Egypt. Because of unusual faithfulness, he was made overseer of his house (39:2-6). He was trusted because he was trustworthy. Character counts. Because of the false charges of Potiphar's wife, whose temptations he resisted (39:7-20), he was put into the king's prison. Here "God was with him," and soon he was put in charge of affairs of the prison (39:2--23).

Joseph a Wise Advisor to Pharaoh vs. 33-37

God had been training him step by step, preparing him for this hour of great opportunity and responsibility. He was a born ruler. His years of service in Potiphar's household (39:1-6) and in prison (39:20-25) had matured his administrative ability, developed his foresight, established his character in integrity and self-control.

Pharaoh had two strange dreams (41:1-8). His wise men could not interpret them. Joseph was called from the prison. He took no honor to himself in interpreting the king's dreams. God sent them and made known the meaning (vs. 16, 25, 28, 32).

Joseph believed the dreams were sent for a definite purpose and some practical action was needed. He made a definite proposal (vs. 34-36) to lay up a reserve store of grains during the seven years of plenty to be used when the famine came. This advice was highly pleasing to Pharaoh. Leaders, "wise and discreet," are needed in church, school and public life today. Joseph had not lost any of his faith in God during his days, years of trials. He confessed God before Pharaoh. Happy, the nation that has dependable advisers.

Joseph, Prime Minister—A Godly Ruler vs. 38-44

Pharaoh, worshipper of false gods, desired a man "in whom the spirit of God is," for the responsible office (v. 38). He recognized Joseph as the highest qualification needed for the rulership to which Joseph was promoted (vs. 39-41). True godliness is too little considered today in political circles. He was given full authority throughout all Egypt and given the royal seal and vesture. The dream of his youth is now fulfilled. His many trials were a part of his preparation. God was the real cause of his promotion, and continued as the central fact in his life. High honors did not turn his head. High office, to him, meant greater opportunity for service to the country and people. He served well in the great opportunity given him (41:46-49).

Nuggets of Truth

Joseph did the best possible in every situation. He never compromised with his ideals, but maintained his integrity of character.

Today men are needed who revere public service as a dignity and not merely as a personal benefit.

Youth is dreaming time. Youth without dreams means a purposeless maturity.

Joseph went to Egypt with a religion and character, adamant and beautiful.

Greatness of soul may be despised by lesser souls, but it cannot be conquered by meanness.

God protects his children and overrules seeming ill for good.

RELIGION IN THE HOME

As the home, so is the Church and the nation. The home is still the greatest institution, more important than the school or even the Church. Here we learn our first lessons in reverence towards God and duty toward our fellow-men. Here we develop habits in tender years, and we form attitudes toward life which stay with us all the rest of our days. It is therefore important that the home has religious books, that the children are taught reverence for God and the Church and all things Holy; that they are taught to appreciate the Bible, and to distinguish between right and wrong conduct. Religion, of course, is more easily "caught" than "taught," and so it is the solemn responsibility of the parents to so order their lives that they will not be stumbling blocks to their little ones. Christianity began with the birth of a child into a humble home. Christ lived in that home thirty years and blessed it. When Christ abides in our home there is nothing to fear.—Rev. Hostetler.

THE MANY-SIDED CHRIST

To the Architect He is the chief Cornerstone.
To the Baker He is the Living Bread
To the Banker He is the Hidden Treasure
To the Doctor He is the Great Physician
To the Carpenter He is the Door
To the Educator He is the Great Teacher
To the Farmer He is the Sower, Lord of Harvest
To the Jeweler He is the Pearl of Great Price
To the Lawyer He is the Lawgiver
To the Student He is the Incarnate Truth
To the Toiler He is the Giver of Rest
To the Sinner He is the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world
To the Christian He is the Son of the Living God, the Redeemer and Lord.—Bethany Messenger.

Prayers are heard in heaven very much in proportion to our faith. Little faith will get very great mercies, but great faith still greater.—Spurgeon.

KEEPING SPIRITUALLY FIT

Luke 6:12-19

This brief story presents to us a day out of the life of Jesus. Jesus finds himself in the midst of a busy season. He was extremely popular, many people came to him from everywhere to hear him and to be healed by him. The situation was such that one marvels at the spiritual strength and the physical stamina of Jesus which made it possible for him to stand up under it all. To meet and fulfill the demands made on him and to do so wisely was no small thing for him. But under it all Jesus lived a noble personal life and a religiously upright life.

How did he do it? Jesus lived in three spheres of activity: 1. The sphere of his relationship to God; 2. the sphere of his relationship to his co-workers; 3. the sphere of his relationship to the multitudes who followed him. We cannot well picture Jesus other than having lived in these three relationships. Neither can we well think of Jesus as having lived other than spiritually correct; and for him this required these three relationships. It is in this setting that we find the answer to the question: How did he do it?

I.

He maintained an inspiring contact with God. We are told—"he went out into a mountain to pray and he continued all night in prayer to God." We know that Jesus did this frequently. When the labors of the day were ended he went into a quiet place to pray. Often he took his disciples with him at least part of the way; then in the quietness and calm of the night he prayed to God. He must have felt a great need for this contact with his Father. The frequency of his prayers and the length of his prayers are evidence of this need. Why?

Did Jesus, being human, perhaps experience what other human beings experience—that when they are crowded and driven by the sheer force of the demands upon their energy—their vision becomes clouded and their spirit begins to lag? Perhaps Jesus too found himself in danger of losing his perspective in life. Perhaps at times the pressure of his labors was so great that out of sheer weariness he wasn't absolutely sure what really was the "acceptable way of life." Perhaps even his inspiration began to fade. The disappointments which he experienced, the slow progress with which he could achieve his purposes must at times have drained heavily upon his enthusiasm and put his inspiration at low ebb.

It was at times like these that Jesus withdrew into the solitude of the mountain to talk with his Father in heaven. He knew that this would clarify his vision, correct his perspective and revive the inspiration for his work.

II.

He sought an understanding companionship. Jesus had chosen the twelve disciples for a definite purpose. Commonly we think only of the advantages which came to the twelve from the constant contact with Jesus. We know they were chosen that he might train them to do his work and to teach them to understand the purpose and the program of the Kingdom of God. But Mark tells us that they were chosen that "they might be with him." Jesus valued the companionship of these disciples. He was never long away from them. In spite of their weaknesses, their jealousies and their denials, these twelve understood him better than anyone else.

Christians have ever recognized the need for an understanding companionship. The first churches were founded for the purpose of this companionship. The Apostle Paul went through the cities of Asia and Europe to found churches in order that the believers might be mutually helpful to each other. The most enduring, the most enjoyable and helpful social life is found among those who are spiritually sympathetic.

There have been times in the history of the Christian church when this phase of religious living has been neglected. The hermits of old furnish us with an example. We know today that that period was a dark period in the history of the church. Men have ever found it impossible to live spiritually well without the companionship and fellowship of like-minded folks.

III.

He exercised himself in worthwhile service. The last scene of this brief story presents Jesus with his disciples standing upon the plain. Immediately there crowded around him the many needy who desired his help. And we are told "he healed them all." To this end the other two spheres were the means. Having had contact with God and enjoying the fellowship of his disciples he was ready with power to serve effectively.

There were those who were troubled with evil spirits. There were those who were bowed down with great distress, mental agonies, despondency and despair. Sickness and disease was rampant but "he healed them all."

There were those who were conscious of their spiritual inability, whose spiritual hands and flesh had withered away because they had ceased to exercise their powers in some good cause. No one could restore these but he who had lived with God and who drew power from him. "There went power out from him and he healed them all."

It seems to have been impossible for Jesus as it is impossible for others to live well among men and serve well without having first lived well with God and men.

There is opportunity for understanding companionship among us if we would but cultivate it. There is opportunity to exercise ourselves in worthwhile service in our immediate environment. And there still is open to us the opportunity for inspiring contact with God. May we learn from Jesus how to keep spiritually fit.

How happy is it to believe, with a steadfast assuranc,e that our petitions are heard even while we are making them; and how delightful to meet with a proof of it in the effectual and actual grant of them.
—Cowper.

THANK GOD FOR HOME

I cannot thank Thee, God, enough
For this small plot of ground, this roof,
These lifted walls that close me in
And hold me tenderly; this proof
Of Thy kind care for my great need
Of shelter and of daily bread;
But Oh, there are no written words,
There are no words that have been said
That could express my gratitude
For the companionship of Love
That shares my simple fare—dear God,
A gift I would be worthy of!
And I would thank Thee for the tasks;
A fire to tend, a loaf to bake,
A floor to sweep, a seam to sew,
A clean, white-sheeted bed to make,
A lamp to light at evening time—
I thank Thee, God for all of these:
For home, my home—for every home—
I thank Thee, God, upon my knees.

FORUM

I read with much interest the editorial "How Come?" in the last issue of the Mennonite. Speaking of the growth in congregations requiring expansion in the Church house—enlarging or building new and larger houses—raised a question in my mind. The growth in congregations, is it from within only or mostly, or is it mostly from without the congregational families? Is our growth mostly, perhaps almost entirely from the natural increase of family membership, children coming and growing up or is it from gathering in those who, to a large extent, are not in any church at all?

My observation of Mennonite churches over a considerable territory tells me that our churches have grown almost entirely from within the families of the Church. There are a few exceptions that I have noted in our city churches and some, perhaps most of the Eastern Conference churches. Now why should this have been so, and still more why should it continue to remain so? Is our Mennonite Church, the individual congregations, doing home mission work in reaching the unchurched to any noticeable degree and extent? I fear not. If not, why not? Perhaps some are in solid Mennonite communities and have no opportunity to reach any unchurched. But do ALL Mennonites everywhere attend church?

I think the reference to the home influence in bringing up children "in the fear of the Lord", being a potent reason in keeping our churches well-filled is very fine indeed. Our people still TAKE their children to the house of the Lord.—A. S. Bechtel.

History of Bus Service at Bally, Pa.

Prior to 1922 the Hereford Mennonite Church, through members of Sunday school classes, conveyed children and adults from Boyertown along the way to Bally, to the Sunday morning services and back again on a covered auto-motor truck, owned by the late Harvey H. Latshaw, the classes defraying the expenses.

In 1922, however, the congregation purchased two busses, one to operate from Boyertown, bringing in the folks who wanted to attend Sunday school and church at Bally from there, and also from Bechtelsville, Eshbach and Barto; the other bus to set out from Pennsburg, East Greenville, and along the way to Bally. From the first both busses came loaded with people. A little later the service had to be extended, the first bus returning to Barto to bring in a second load of worshippers, coming in by way of Schultzville. These busses as well as the running expenses were paid for by the congregation.

After a number of years the Pennsburg-East Greenville folks provided their private means of conveyance, while the growing Boyertown-Bally contingent had to be serviced with a new and larger bus which carried from fifty to ninety children and adults to Bally every Sunday morning and back again after the service.

During the past year further increase in members made necessary, either to repair the old bus at considerable expense or to buy a new larger and better equipped one. The congregation authorized the trustees to do the latter, and they secured a new dual wheel up-to-date Chevrolet bus, equipped with every comfort to meet one's needs. It went into service the first week in April. This meant an outlay of $1948 including some allowance on the old bus. The trustees had to borrow $850. Pledges already secured reduce this to $700. This will be gradually paid off.

In this way we made it possible for one hundred children and adults to be in Sunday school and church, who otherwise would have little opportunity to attend. Before the days of the automobile the people walked in from Eshbach, Barto, Dale and Schultzville, but it is now inadvisable for people to walk on roads that are used as thoroughfares of auto travel. So we are convinced that ours is a service that we may render the community. For it should be borne in mind that most of the children that we have carried from this area the past fifteen years have united with the church of their own families: Boyertown, Hill Church, Niantic and Huffs. That is all right. We have at least rendered what service we could in helping shape their early Christian life. And the Religion of Jesus Christ is inclusive in a general sense. The Boyertown-Bally bus service during the last fifteen years owes much to Mr. Frank Snyder, who has been the trusted driver all that time, and that without pay. He feels that there is a service he can and ought to do for Christ and the Church, and he has been rewarded with the blessings that come to one who serves his fellowmen for the love of mankind and a great cause.

Thoughts on Examinations

Swiftly another school year is drawing to its close! Throughout the land boys and girls, young men and women—yea, adults, too—are facing examinations, some one way, some another.

Examinations, from time immemorial, we suppose, have been accompanied with certain palpitations of the heart, and yet it should not be so. Examination time is vacation time for those who meet them rightly. Examination time is that time when the student, having labored honestly through the year, finds an extra hour or two to relax, to read an article he has not found time for before, to browse through a book which too long has been pushed aside; and to just sit in the library and meditate. Nothing to fear! The experiments were all written up in good time. The notebook is finished; the books all reviewed. Like our Lord when he had finished all creation, the faithful, conscientious student looks over his work for the year that is closing, and says, "Lo, it is good."

Examinations come to all of us, and they don't all come in May. They come when a certain cycle of life-experience has been our portion, and when those above us have reason to believe that we should, by now, be ready for larger tasks—for a demonstration of our ability to deal with life. Examination time is the time of fruits, when the teacher having sown in love, patience, and hope, looks now expectantly into the lives of his pupils, hoping to reap the fruits of another year of growth, and to find joy in a certain fellowship which he may now have with his students which he could not have had in September.

And if our human teachers so long for that fellowship with their pupils, how much more do our spiritual teachers. Our Master teacher looks for fellowship with His pupils! He too looks for a demonstration—the ability to deal deftly with life's problems, with principles we have learned from Him.

Quit looking upon examinations as something to be feared. Rest in faith upon your labors. Go to your examination before human teachers, or the examintion which Life brings to you from day to day, and say to yourself that this examination, however challenging it may be, your Teacher is looking for fellowship with you, his pupil. It will call forth all the goodness there is in you!

Out of the Ashes

After the little accident with the waste basket last week, we are with you again. We take ourselves so seriously at times, don't we? Now we just bet some of you did not even miss the Youth Section last week--honest, did you?

But there were some good things in it. We cannot recall them all, of course. But there was a splendid write-up of the convention of the California Sunday School and Christian Endeavor Association, telling of the wonderfully fine fellowship they had had. There was a nice little article by a young lady from Halstead, "Jesus, in the Home."

And, aside from the Christian Endeavor helps, there were some very interesting announcements of the Eastern District Conference Young People's Retreat, to be held at Green Lake, Pennsylvania, June 18-20. Once more the Eastern District Conference swings into a fine program for its young people. The program this year offers two courses. The first course, Course A, in the Bible Study, by Rev. Howard G. Nyce, is "The Christian Walk With God." Course B, dealing with practical living, by Rev. John Nussbaum, is "The Social Phase of the Believer's Walk."

Special features include music by Adam Lutzweiler, with his Marimba-Xylophone, and vocal music by the Bluffton College Quartet; and special talks by Miss Elizabeth Goertz, missionary on furlough from China, and recreational diversion, under the direction of Walter H. and Eleanor Temple.

And finally, what to many is the most important part of any retreat, the group discussions, led by John E. Fretz, Albert Stover, Ernest Leitzel, and Edith Ross.

Do you feel the urge toward finer living? The retreat is for you. Do you feel the need of fellowship with others, also bearing burdens like yourself? The fellowship of the retreat is for you. Do you lack the decision and firmness of attractive Christian personality? The retreat is for YOU. Do you need a refilling of the Holy Spirit, a renewal of your contract with God? This retreat is for YOU.

In next week's issue we are going to tell you how you can attend these retreats. No one need stay away.

This is where the Eastern District retreat will be held —Boys' University Camp, Green Lane, Pa. Mark the dates: June 18-20.

BLUFFTON: A diversified program of activities has been planned for the climaxing week of college affairs starting Saturday evening, June 5, and concluding the following Wednesday. Musical events, athletic contests, Bluffton Day, and varied other alumni and senior exercises will make up the crowded final days of the school year.

BETHEL: Faces a three-way program as the year closes, of interest to differing groups. First the regular commencement activities of the closing week; second, the Mennonite Song Festival, May 30; and third, somewhat later, to be sure, the Kansas Institute of International Relations.

Acts 8:26-35

For Reading and Meditation

M., June 7. Love's young dream. Song of Sol., 1:1-7
T., June 8. Temptation and victory. Gen. 39:1-9
W., June 9. Ruth finds a home. Ruth 1:1-18

Program hints, problems, and projects

"For the high adventure of reading you must develop not only sight, but insight. . . . and that sometimes comes slowly, partly by growth, partly by cultivation, and partly by the grace of God."

1. Some people read nothing older than six months —it must be "new." Others read nothing until it is ten years old—by then it has "proved itself." Evaluate the two attitudes.

2. Write down the numbers from 1 to 20. Let these represent the centuries. Opposite each century, place the name of some writer with whom you are familiar, and following his name the contribution he has made to your life outlook.

3. We can't pick the environment in which we were born, but we can pick the environment in which we shall live, through the books which we select. Discuss.

4. "Prick it anywhere and it will bleed." This was said of the Bible, thinking of the real men and women that walk through its pages, living, loving, achieving like ourselves, but also making the same kind of mistakes that we make. Discuss some of these flesh and blood characters of the Bible.

5. Good topics for brief talks are: The Bible as Romance and Adventure, Poetry—an Adventure, Short-story Models from the Bible, Literary Workmanship of Random Scripture Selections, The Bible as History (or Science, or Fiction, or Biography, to suit the needs of the group.)

Book Review Meeting

If your society members have not read a book on the life of Betty and John Stamm, a very profitable hour could be spent in having someone give a book review of the story, "The Triumph of John and Betty Stamm," by Mrs. Howard Taylor. Reading parts of "Quo Vadis" would also give a touch of realism to this topic to make it more personal.

Worship Service

Use the material suggested in the C. E. Quarterly, the Scripture lesson, and appropriate songs to build your worship program. Appropriate songs: "True-hearted, Whole-hearted," "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go," "Faith is the Victory."

Bible Light on the Topic

1. What did Jesus warn his disciples to expect? Matt. 10:16-25
   Does it hold true for his disciples today? Give your reasons
2. What characteristics did Stephen have, which gave him courage to face death for Christ's sake? Study Acts 6 and 7
3. What was Paul's attitude? Acts 21:10-14
4. How does the Christian's hope give him courage to face death? Rev. 7:9-17

Questions To Help Us Think

1. For what are men willing to give up their lives? Name as many different things as you can.
2. What gives people courage to face death?
3. Why should anyone be willing to give up his life to witness for Christ?
9. How does Jesus banish fear of death? Matt. 28:19,20

For The Leader

Someone has said, "There are things that are worse than death." That is especially true for the Christian. Paul said, "To me to live is Christ, to die is gain." Peter and John were indifferent to the threats of those who had put them in prison and said, "We cannot but speak of the things that we have seen and heard." Whether they lost their lives or not was incidental, but witness for Christ they must.

Jesus set his face "steadfastly" toward Jerusalem, even though he knew his going there meant death. His followers throughout the centuries have shown this same courage in facing death for Christ's sake. When he said, "Lo, I am with you always," it was a promise to fill his disciples with the same spirit.

Closing Moments

A MISSIONARY UNAFRAID

Afraid? Of what?
To feel the spirit's glad release?
To pass from pain to perfect peace,
The strife and strain of life to cease?
Afraid—of that?

Afraid? Of what?
Afraid to see the Saviour's face,
To hear His welcome, and to trace
The glory gleam from wounds of grace?
Afraid—of that?

Afraid? Of what?
A flash—a crash—a pierced heart;
Darkness—light—O heaven's art!
A wound of His a counterpart!
Afraid—of that?

Afraid? Of what?
To enter into heaven's rest,
And yet to serve the Master blest,
From service good to service best?
Afraid—of that?

Afraid? Of what?
To do by death what life could not—
Baptize with death a stony plot,
Till souls shall blossom from that spot?
Afraid—of that?

—E. H. Hamilton

(This poem was inspired by John W. Vinson, a missionary who was captured by bandits in China not long ago and finally shot to death, when physically unable to accompany them further. A Chinese girl told of the bandits threatening him. "No," he answered, "I'm not afraid. If you shoot me I will go straight to Heaven. My loving Lord Jesus is waiting for me there." This was a favorite poem of the Stamms, who were murdered in China in 1934.) This information should be given before the poem is read.

Hymn: "Faith of Our Fathers"
Benediction

The Night Cometh

A year has passed since the suggestion was offered to allow three minutes of each meeting for missions. These three minutes are to keep our juniors in touch with our conference endeavors—with the needs, the work, and the fruitage; with the laborers on the field. Have we done this? So often we hear the phrase: "How quickly they grow up." It is not long until juniors become young people and young people, adults; adults that must "put their hand to the plow." Are we doing what we can in preparing future workers for the vineyard? Are your juniors experiencing missions? Missions, though so objective, is still subjective. In the very act of giving and praying and telling a subjective experience is involved which builds the "tissues" of the heart. The juniors need this. Standing before eyes that could not see, our Lord spoke the words: "We must work the works of Him that sent me while it is day, the night cometh." It is day for us. So many eyes are waiting to be released from darkness. So many eyes of youth are turned to us ready to believe anything we say, ready to do anything we ask. They want the DAWN! Can we lead them into it? When DAY comes for them, can they go forth to work in the strength of the conquering "Son" who is the Light of the world? We need to teach them missions through the missions that we have, lest, when our night come, we have failed to prepare new recruits for the day.

Missions is such an interesting subject. Juniors will always enjoy it. Appoint a reporter from meeting to meeting. His responsibility would be to bring news from the mission fields, gathered from our publications. (Indirectly, this would also insure future readers for our papers). These three minutes could be varied. Now and again you might ask the group to be ready to report on items of interest, or, each one be ready to name one missionary and his field of labor. It would be of interest to supply your juniors with names of juniors on mission fields with whom they could correspond. Any letters received could be read before the group.

Our Missions in America

Let the verse for the evening be John 9:4 which could appear on poster and pin-ons and blackboard.

1, Song service using mission hymns
2. Scripture: John 4:31-36; Matt. 9:37,38
3. Prayer for blessing upon this study of missions; for open eyes that we might see the needs, for hearts willing to learn and love and do
4. Our American Fields. In charge of leader showing the location of the stations on large outline map and reviewing the missionaries in each station. When you feel the children know these, then supply the group with slips bearing the names of these missionaries. Divide group into even sides. Let these step to the map alternately and pin the name to the station where it belongs. Let each one pinning a name, tear a stub from the slip if he has placed it correctly. Should he have made a mistake, he forfeits his stub and his slip is given to the next person who, thus, has two to place. The side having the most stubs is the winner
5. What Has Happened? Reports from the stations as found in our papers. Let one junior represent only one station, finding his own material
6. Special music
7. What Are the Needs? In charge of leader. See Mission News and Notes under "Projects". Also The Mennonite, May 11 issue under "Wanted: New Recruits"
8. Prayer period. Lead the juniors to pray for these various needs. Choose a missionary whom you wish to remember in prayer throughout the week
9. Closing song: "What Shall the Harvest Be?"
10. Benediction

Junior Corner

"The heathen has a hundred thousand gods
Of brass and stone and clay,
But unto none can he address the words
"Our Father" when he kneels to pray.
I look on them. And then I look to Him
Who died on Calvary;
And when I come to make my choice, O Christ,
How can I choose but Thee?

I know that in myself no power lies
To break the chains of sin;
I know that in my helplessness
I am as other men.
Since I must choose between myself and Him
Who died on Calvary,
Since I must choose between the two, O Christ,
How can I choose but Thee."

LIVING EPISTLES

"Do you do any literary work?" asked a neighbor of a mother.

"Yes," she replied, "I am writing two books."

"What are their titles?"

" 'John' and 'Mary,' " she answered. "My business is to write upon the minds and hearts of my children the lessons that they shall never forget."—C. C. D.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bethesda Church, Henderson, Nebraska

The catechetical class which have received instruction in God's plan of salvation for the past three months were baptized on confession of their faith in Christ as their Savior on Pentecost Sunday. And on Monday the Lord's supper was celebrated in remembrance of His death. A large number partook of this emblem.

On May 3 the congregation empowered our ministers to select delegates to the Northern District Conference, to be held at Bloomfield, Mont., June 5 to 7, and the Sunday school superintendent was authorized to do the same for representation at the S. S. Convention to be held at the same place.

On Ascension Day our Mission societies gave a program and had a sale of the articles they had made. It netted $120.00, half of which is to be used for mission work.—The deacons of our church with those of the other two local churches have again arranged for a two-weeks' Vacation Bible School.

Our Sunday school has an enrollment of 820. The attendance last Sunday was 793, in all probability a record number.—More than seventy voices of the four respective church choirs practice once a week under separate leadership, and serve alternately each Sunday morning in our worship service.—Eldon A. W. Friesen will leave this week for an evangelistic tour in the Northern district and to attend the District Conference at Bloomfield.

Second Menn. Church, Beatrice, Nebr.

Returned from the Sunland, my wife and myself feel that the brethren and sisters want to know something about California. We thank God that he was so gracious to us for protection and also for so many friends that we met there. It was a great pleasure to us to see so many new things in this great wonderland.

First of all there is God's great out-of-doors which astonishes anybody, even the Californians, when one looks at the great mountains, Mt. Wilson, Mt. Low, and last but not least, Old Baldy, covered with snow pretty nearly all the year. You can look at them every day and will always admire them. Flowers of all kinds beautify the land and the gardens, and on Sunday morning there is the wonderful display of the prettiest flowers in the churches. We had the privilege to see the Riverside Mission and the San Gabriel Mission built over 100 years ago. We saw the Morris Dam, 350 feet deep and two miles long, from which Pasadena gets its water supply, and they are now building Dam No. 1 which is still bigger. We went through many orchards. Orange and lemon trees are partly damaged by frost.

East Los Angeles has over 200 factories, built up in the last ten years, which employ many thousands of men. These factories came there on account of the reasonable cost of power. The Edison Electric Company supplies them with it. Another thing that causes astonishment is the many oil wells that are in the Pacific Ocean near the coast. No wonder people call California the Land of Wonders.

MONTHLY REPORT

Report of the Committee on Schools and Education of the Western District Conference

The committee can now report that until May 1, 1937, 615 books have been received and listed for the Western District Loan Library. These books will be grouped and catalogued during May, and we hope that more English books will be contributed to this collection.

The historical collection also has increased. All historical material is placed into the All Mennonite Historical Library. It will interest our churches that Mr. P. S. Goertz has consented to catalogue this Historical Library and is working very carefully and intelligently. Until now this is the first Mennonite Historical Library which is being catalogued after a modern cataloguing system.

Again some churches have sent in examination questions for their Teachers' Training graduates. As far as the Committee can observe the teachers and students have done very good work, and the Committee would like to encourage all churches very much to organize such training courses for their Sunday School workers. One Minister writes, "There were fifteen regular students and a number of visitors (in our class). We have had a most enjoyable and blessed time in this study of God's word."

For the Sunday School Convention which is to convene on Sunday, June 6, at Bethel College, the Committee is preparing an exhibition of helps for Sunday School teachers and also a display of all Mennonite periodicals including Sunday School Quarterlies.

The Committee,
A. Warkentin, Sec.

EXPLANATION

Complaints have come in that THE MENNONITE is too slow reaching points on the Pacific coast, Canada, and Pennsylvania, in spite of the fact that it goes in the mail on Monday of each week, a day before the publication date. So the trouble had to be charged to faulty transit in the mail service. The Postoffice Department was appealed to, officials have called and assured us of immediate improvement. Will readers who have complained kindly report the effect of the change?

"Prayer," says St. Jerome, "is a groam." Ah! our groans are prayers as well. The very cry of distress is an involuntary appeal to that invisible Power whose aid the soul invokes.—Mme. Swetchine.

We had several small showers here lately. The wheat and the oats are looking good. We hope that the grasshoppers will not damage crops as they did last year. Our pastor, Rev. M. Horsch, has been with us ten years on May 15, and we are grateful to God that he and Mrs. Horsch have been in our midst to bless us. We hope that it may be God's will that they can serve us another ten years.

Prayer is so mighty an instrument that no one ever thoroughly mastered all its keys. They sweep along the infinte keys of man's wants and God's goodness. Hugh Miller.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Rev. S. M. Musselman, for a number of years pastor of the Mennonite Church at Pretty Prairie, Kansas, has accepted the pastorate of the Lorraine Ave. Mennonite Church at Wichita, Kansas, and moved his family there May 18. The Pretty Prairie folks gave the departing minister's family a farewell reception, with an appropriate program on the evening of May 17. Rev. Olin Krehbiel was in charge of the Wichita church before they moved East to serve the Grace Mennonite Church at Lansdale, Pa. There is a promising field for a growing Mennonite Church in the rapidly developing city of Wichita, with a population of over 100,000. With intercessory prayer by many for the work of the new pastor much good can come from his work there.

—Rev. P. P. Tschetter of Freeman, S. D., who recently conducted evangelistic meetings in the Pretty Prairie Church, has accepted a call to serve the church as its minister, and the family expects to move there about June 20. Rev. Tschetter has been serving a church near Freeman, S. D., but has taken the time to hold evangelistic meetings here and there. The Pretty Prairie Church is a congregation of about 560 members, with a large number of children and young people and a number of live organizations which claim the pastor's attention, besides the church. Hence the new minister like the outgoing one will find plenty of work.

—ACTION.—Christians are not inferior people. According to Scripture they are the salt of the earth. It is not supposed that believers will sit supinely and allow forces of evil to triumph, without a protest. Words will no longer suffice. Action, on the part of God's people, is needed if a major catastrophe is to be averted. Scriptural weapons are more powerful than physical weapons. If Christians will unite their efforts toward one great objective, the kindling of revival fires throughout the Nation, America can be kept a safe place in which to live for several years to come."—Exchange.

—Rev. D. D. Eitzen, Los Angeles, California, whose resignation from the pastorate of the Mennonite Church there we reported last week, has made a valuable contribution to the work of the General Conference as chairman of the Young People's Committee. Under his leadership it has strengthened its recognition as a body of workers; they have their share in the work of the Field Secretary and are doing constructive work. It is to be hoped that Rev. Eitzen will be able to continue in office, even though he enters a new sphere of activity.

—Northern District Conference.—The Bethlehem Mennonite Church at Bloomfield, Mont., through its pastor J. F. Sawatzky, is cordially inviting the churches of that district to the Conference and S. S. Convention to be held there June 5 to 8 next. Since Bloomfield has no railroad service, guests coming in by rail via Glendive or Richey should notify Rev. Sawatzky in time, so that transportation may be provided. Those coming by auto should stop at the church to get their assignments.

—The Pacific District Conference convenes at the first Mennonite Church at Reedley, Calif., June 17-20. The secretary, Rev. M. J. Galle, calls attention to the Minister's meeting on June 17 preceding the conference; all pastors should be present morning and afternoon. Conference proper begins in the evening of that day. A revised constitution in English will be presented, copies of it having been sent to each church. A rich program is in store and a large attendance is anticipated. Earnest prayer for the success of the meeting is urged.

—Rev. H. P. Krehbiel who has just now handed to the printers his manuscript of a valuable piece of work entitled WAR, PEACE AND AMITY is being requisitioned to give talks on this subject. Recently he addressed a large Sunday school class of young people in the Methodist Church at Newton, Kansas, at the invitation of its leader, Dr. Ralph Hertzler. The conviction of the need of non-resistance as taught in the Bible is slowly working its way into the hearts and minds of the Christians in other denominations.

—The Mennonite hospitals have again had their annual meetings. This year they coincided with "Hospital Day," May 4. The meetings held at the Bethel Hospital and Home for the Aged at Newton, and at the Bethesda Hospital and Old People's Home at Goessel, Kansas, were well attended and the reports on the work and the financial conditions were gratifying.

—At the commencement exercises of Freeman Junior College, Freeman, South Dakota, Friday, June 27, Dr. J. R. Thierstein of Bethel College who served that school, which was then called South Dakota Mennonite College, as its first principal, from 1904 to 1908, will give the address. He will also speak at the Alumni Meeting there on the following day.

—A large song festival was held at Saskatoon, Sask., May 6. Mixed choirs from Waldheim, Tiefengrund, Rosthern, and Saskatoon, male choirs from Hague, Rosthern, and solists participated in the program.

—Premier Stanley Baldwin of Great Britain, in what he said was the last speech he would make as prime minister, stamped the League of Nations as an organization of doubtful value, and added that The League and the Treaty of Versailles have belied the hopes of mankind, and they have given way to disillusion.

—Those of us who have followed the rather spectacular life of Edward, the erstwhile Prince of Wales, then King Edward, and now Duke of Windsor, and more recently took note of the manner in which King George VI has been taking hold of things, including his simple coronation address which seemed from a sincere heart and a dutiful mind, are inclined to congratulate the English people upon the turn that things have taken, feeling that the change is apt to result to their good.

—Missionary H. J. Brown and family, who are coming home from China for a much deserved furlough, write that they sail on the Empress of Japan and hope to reach Vancouver, B. C., June 29. Mail will reach them there in care of Rev. J. H. Jantzen, 2880 W. 42nd Ave., Vancouver, B. C.

—Rev. Edison Habegger and his quintet who have been doing evangelistic work in Scotland and England for some months, are planning to return to the United States in a few weeks.

—Prominent national and international economists are predicting that the unhealthy boom now on as the result of the unprecendented expenditures on armaments and military preparations is going to end in another period of depression, due to arrive some time in 1938.

—Rev. Olin Krehbiel of Lansdale, Pa., has joined the group of ministers that are sending in their bulletins. His is called, "The Grace Mennonite Church Messenger." It is a splendid little sheet.

—Twenty-five churches with a membership of 3500 were represented at the recent session of the Eastern District Conference. Rev. Olin Krehbiel gave the principal address at the Sunday afternoon S. S. and Y. P. session, on the subject, Is the Young Man Safe? Rev. Freeman Swartz was reelected president for his second term.—Grace Menn. Ch. Messenger.

—The Tabor Mennonite Church Building Fund Sale will take place Thursday, May 27 at 10 A.M. at the Sand Creek School, Dist. 33.—J. A. Peters.

—The President's Best Friend. The best friend President Roosevelt ever had is the Supreme Court, if he only knew it. The N.R.A., for one thing, proved, after a trial, unworkable; then the Supreme Court declared it unconstitutional, killing it before it could do more damage.—Exchange.

—The Atheistic Society of Siberia, in its plans for the celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the bolshevistic revolution, has decided upon the construction of a train which is to bear the name "The Flying Atheist" (godless). The train is to be made up of several cars and is to be equipped with a printing press, a radio station, several loud speakers, a "movie," and an exhibit of church outrages, all for the purpose of making effective atheistic propaganda.—Rundschau

THE CONFUSION OF TONGUES. Therefore is the name of it called Babel, because the Lord did there confound the language of the earth. Gen. 9:9.

The late Bishop Selwyn devoted a great part of his time to visiting the Melanesian Isles, and he thus writes home about the difficulty of languages, "Nothing but a special interposition of the Divine Power could have produced such a confusion of tongues as we find here. In islands not larger than the Isle of Wight, we find dialects so distinct that the inhabitants of the various districts hold no communication with one another."

THREE BAD BARGAINS. Thus Esau despised his birthright. Gen. 25:34.

A Sunday school teacher remarked that he who buys the truth makes a good bargain. I inquired if any scholar recollected an instance in Scripture of a bad bargain. "I do," replied a boy, "Esau sold his birthright for a mess of pottage." A second said, "Judas made a bad bargain when he sold his Lord for thirty pieces of silver." A third boy observed, "Our Lord tells us that he makes a bad bargain who, to gain a whole world, loses his own soul."

BOOK CHAT

F. J. Wiens

Poetry and music are often the refuge of those who are in sorrow and distress as well as being a medium of expression for those in a joyful mood. Every now and then we are asked to suggest a book or a motto suitable as a gift for someone in trouble or sorrow. Some of the finest, most comforting poetry is found in our Christian song books and hymn books. Next to our Bibles we are most likely to find words of cheer and hope in some of the great hymns, and to every person in need of comfort or encouragement I would suggest that you read over and over or repeat to yourself while at work the words of the songs and hymns that have become especially precious to you.

Only those who have experienced deep sorrow or distress are in position to really appreciate certain passages of Scripture and certain poetry. When our dearest ones lie cold in death before us, when friends we have trusted betray us, when even Christian people engage in silly gossip or do things that cause those weaker in the faith to stumble, it is often a great promise in the Bible or some beautiful little poem that helps us bridge the gap and get a new hold on ourselves. It is also true that only those who have experienced the deepest sorrows and discouragements who can give us any real comfort and hope or write those touching poems or songs that will find a response in our sad and bleeding hearts.

Today I wish to call the attention of the readers of The Mennonite to a book published within the past two years that makes an ideal gift to the discouraged or sorrowing. It is the little volume by Grace Noll Crowell which bears the appropriate title, LIGHT OF THE YEARS.

The poems of Grace Noll Crowell appeal to the hearts of men and women in the same direct fashion as the poems of Robert W. Service and the novels of Temple Bailey. Like these two writers, Mrs. Crowell promises to win a permanent hold on the affections of the American people, for she is a poet of the people and the problems, big and little, which they confront daily.

"I have found such joy in simple things," the first line to one of the poems in this volume, reflects the spirit of Mrs. Crowell's verse. The fifty-four poems included in this book show her work at its best. Her lyric skill is in constant evidence and her sincerity carries conviction and puts new hope and courage into the hearts of others.

Mrs. Crowell's audience is already a large one, particularly among women. For several years she has been a steady contributor to such standard magazines as Good housekeeping, McCalls, Ladies Home Journal, and Hollands. Readers of farming and religious magazines of national circulation are also familiar with her work. Says Godfrey Hamond, Managing Editor of the Christian Herald, "Letters from our readers prove that the regularly published poems of Grace Noll Crowell are our most popular feature."

LIGHT OF THE YEARS is a small, handsomely bound volume, size 7½ x 4½ inches, printed on heavy white paper. The special hand set type is large and easy to read. The price of $1.50 for this little book will seem rather high to those who buy books by the pound and judge values solely in terms of size and number of pages. The best things in life often come done up in little packages and that is certainly true of this precious little volume. But if you want a book that you can read again and again without having its contents grow stale and pall on you be sure to get a copy of LIGHT OF THE YEARS. And when it has become precious to you, you will also want others to have it.

Orders may be sent to THE MENNONITE BOOK CONCERN, Berne, Ind.

SIN READY TO ENTER. Sin lieth at the door. Gen. 4:7.

A young friend was one day calling upon an old Christian woman, nearly eighty years of age, just waiting for the summons. Said this friend, "Oh, granny, I wish I was as sure of heaven, and as near it, as you are!" With a look of unspeakable emotion, the old woman answered, "And do you really think the devil cannot find his way up an old woman's garret-stair? Oh, if He hadn't said 'None shall pluck them of My hand,' I would have been away wandering long ago!"

VOL. LII BETHEL COLLEGE, KANSAS, JUNE 1, 1937 NO. 22

Doing Things Well

The word well in its adverbial use is related to the word weal, German wohl. It conveys the idea of will and of wish. It suggests both a condition or state of mind and of a purpose. It is the basis of two series of word modifiers which indicate an ascending and a descending scale of operation in which a deed may be done. The series well, better, best has a progressive, forward-looking, hopeful aspect; but the series well, worse (poorer), worst (poorest) has a retrogressive, backward-looking, dismal aspect. It is with the well in the ascending relation that we wish to deal here.

The word well always has a relative meaning. A child learning to read may be doing well now. But as it progresses in the art, it will be likely to read well a few months hence; yet, in comparison with his first attempts, his efforts would then be rated better. A Model T Ford served well in its day, but its service is poor as compared with the swell performance of modern makes of autos. So, while the word suggests satisfactory performance on the one hand, it points toward a better and best status later on.

Abraham did quite well at Ur in Chaldea, but God pointed the way where and how he might do better. The good man fell in with this plan, became God's friend and a prince among godly men. Moses who might have been king of Egypt could have been content with his lot, could have acquiesced in a "leave good enough alone" or "laissez faire" policy, as so many do in "soft jobs." But, following an inner urge, "he chose rather to share ill treatment with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." Saul, who became Paul, was living a life that merited the approval of his people. In their eyes he did well. But on the road to Damascus his eyes were opened to a vision of a far better career. And by daily striving to do his task well, but better than the day before, Paul has become our examplar in the Christian life, tending, struggling, and often stumbling, but always pressing on toward the goal which is set before us in Christ Jesus.

No man has ever become truly great without constantly striving to do well the task before him, and a little better each day. This principle is crudely but forcefully illustrated in the life of the mythical Greek character Hercules. Descended from the gods he incurred their disfavor and was degraded to a state of servitude; but by performing a series of tasks or stunts, each apparently more difficult than the previous one, he at last succeeded in winning back his place among the deity.

Teachers have made much of the instinct of rivalry. Rivalry between near equals is a great help in inducing children to put forth their best efforts, and when so used it has distinct value. The Jesuits made effective use of this urge by matching pairs of boys on the basis of a fair degree of mental equality, and then urged them on to rival each other in their tasks with good results.

However, the best kind of rivalry, and the safest in the Christian life, is to rival one's self, in striving that "each tomorrow finds us farther than today." The Bible teaches us in various ways that God expects each person to use well the endowment he has given us. In the parable of the talents the men who received the two and the five talents traded with them as best they could and made gains of one hundred per cent. That was so well performed as to merit their Lord's "well done." They stood for progress and development. The man with one talent represents inactivity, indifference, stagnation. If all people were like him, this world would be a dismal place; nobody would want to live in it.

To do things by halves or thirds, to put only part of one's self into a given task, whether the tool be a pen or a pick, is to add to the world's misery. To do one's best every day, to put one's self into one's allotted work with heart and soul adds to the world's happiness. It has the approval of our fellowmen and of God and gives inward satisfaction. It promotes our health and well-being and engenders a feeling of optimism which tends to prolong life. To do things well and to grow in grace are the glorious privileges of the Christian.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. Richert

K'ai Chow, Hopei, China, April 14, 1937.

Dear Friends:

Greetings in Christ's Name! So many of you have remembered us at Christmas and during the Easter season, with your letters and greeting cards. We thank you for this and also heartily for your prayers for us and the work. Some of you have brought sacrifices to the altar, and thus the Mission Board has been able to send the necessary funds for the work, and our hearts are full of thanks and praise to God. Now before we return on furlough we would like to give you all a short report of what we have been doing in the last weeks and months. We are sure it will fill your hearts with praise and thanksgiving.

In anticipation of our going on furlough this summer we commenced the country church work early in the season, and now all churches have already had Bible instruction classes. In all we had 291 people regularly attending for a period of two weeks, having four meetings a day. From among these, 73 persons were accepted for baptism. Beside these we received four other Christians by letter. Most of the churches in our district have during these months had baptismal and communion services. We also have opened a new place at Pei Chao, where 13 people were baptized. We have also done a good deal of tent follow-up work and in seven villages opened preaching places. We do not have sufficient workers to hold regular Sunday services in all of these places; but we have held several series of meetings in each place, and we are planning to continue this service in the future. The prospects are that all of these places will later develop into churches. Let us remember these scattered groups in our prayers.

We are always concerned about the spiritual life of the Christians. Last year we had revival meetings in all of the larger places, and also a series of strong evangelistic meetings during our 25th Anniversary of the mission. This year we have so far not had any such meetings, but in some places we are opening a one-month Bible school for the church members. We also plan for a one-week retreat during the summer. This retreat is to be in connection with the summer institute. The mission is further arranging for an all-field conference to which all our churches are to send delegates. A permanent Chinese Conference, Mission Reorganization, and Native Ministers to be Ordained are to be topics for discussion. It is our prayer that the discussions will result into actions.

Mrs. Brown is enlarging the work of teaching the women to read. She has opened such reading classes in the country churches and also in other villages where there are Christian groups. A good deal of Christian doctrine is taught in those classes, but it also establishes them in the faith. She often goes along with me to outstations for the purpose of house-visitation. Here at home she takes a large responsibility for poor relief. Sometimes the women almost crowd her out of our house.

Rev. Wang Hsun Ch'en and Bro. Liu Ming Shun are continuing in the revival campaign. This spring they are visiting a number of stations in the Bartel (China Mennonite) Mission. The Lord is with them and the power of the Holy Spirit manifests itself in the meetings. From all over come the reports of great blessings and many souls saved. Christians confess their sins and many make restitution for things that were unjustly taken into their possession. In many lives these are days of house-cleaning. Praise God for the power of God that saves to the uttermost! Remember these servants of the Lord in your prayers. Just now they have hard sailing financially.

We sail on the Empress of Japan and reach Vancouver, B. C., on the 29th of June. Any letter for us can be sent in care of Rev. Jacob H. Janzen, 2880 West 42 Ave., Vancouver, B. C. God bless and keep you till we meet again!

Very faithfully yours,
H. J. and Maria Brown.

INVITATION

The Bethel Church of Wolf Point, Montana, extends an invitation to all our churches to enjoy with them the blessings at the dedication of their new church building on June 13, 1937.

A special invitation is herewith extended to those who have served us from time to time, when we were without a pastor and also to those who have served the church as ministers.

They also invite the guests of the Northern District Conference to plan to be with them and share in the blessings of that day.

HOME MISSIONS

W. S. Gottshall, Sec.

Lena Epp, Girl's Home Winnipeg

This winter we had many girls in the Home, and some very young, of 15 years. The most of them remain for the Bible Study, so they must sit close together so all may have room. Preacher Enns comes and teaches the Word of God so clearly that all are richly blessed. We buried our oldest Home Sister, Mary Duerksen, on February 20. She died in Grace Hospital of cancer. The girls and Preacher Enns have visited her often; she was very faithful. Many of our girls had the flu, and some so serious that they had to be taken to the hospital. The time in the Home on Thursday is always too short because everything has to be planned for this time. One group attends Bible study, and another group takes part in the catechetical instructions, and those that remain in the Home do handwork. They do much singing.

On March 25 we had our Easter program. Preacher Enns spoke impressively on the story of Christ's suffering and death and resurrection. The sun is shining so warm, and this prompted many to go home for the summer to come back in the fall.

Reesor, Ont., H. P. Lepp

The unfavorable conditions in our field works more or less depressing on our people. In caring for the temporal needs there is a danger of losing sight of Him who alone can help. I serve alternately in two meeting houses. In the winter we close one of them and hold our services in a school house. In connection with the services I have catechetical instructions.

In both of our schools we have Mennonite teachers so our children receive religious instruction and that in German. We have a Sunday School for the children which is discontinued during the cold winter months.

One important part of the work is the personal work in the Home. In this way we accomplish most in the caring for souls and in reclaiming the indifferent. After the long winter there is much need of visitation work and of ordering the work and finding workers and encouraging the downcast, for which we need the earnest prayers of God's people.

Smith Corner, Pa. (Mountain Mission), John S. Rough

The attendance at the services is good, the Y.P. S. is active, and a "Goodfellowship" society has been organized to bring the members closer together. The spiritual condition of our members is good, but there is much to be done here to win souls for Christ. The offerings are satisfactory.

(Brother Rough has been in charge of the Smith Corner Mission for two years. He has done a good work and has improved the mission in every way. The elder, Stephen Yoder, of Roaring Springs, expressed his desire to be released and said that Brother Rough has deserved full recognition and ordination as elder, so the Smith Corner congregation asked to have him ordained. Accordingly the brethren, A. J. Neuenschwander and J. E. Amstutz, members of th Home Mission Board, and by order of the Board, ordained him on March 16 in the mission chapel at Smith Corner.—Sec.)

Altoona, Pa.

Since Brother Glass was not able to officiate, and Brother Klink was not ordained, Brother Neuenschwander officiated at the baptism of 17 persons in the Altoona mission when he came back from the ordination services at Smith Corner.

Brother Glass who is not well and unable to do any work at the Mission, has again expressed his desire to be released, and with sincere regrets the Board has accepted his resignation. His successor has not as yet been named.

Portland, Oregon, Cath. Niswander

Several weeks ago a man and his daughter expressed their willingness to become Christians. It was so hard for them to understand the way of salvation. They have seldom gone to church, so they need to be taught almost as one who has never heard the Word before. The highest attendance at Sunday School the past quarter was sixty-one, except Easter Sunday when it was considerably higher.

In March our Women's Society had a Fellowship supper followed by a program. We had a very good attendance.

Homer Leisy of Salem gave us stirring messages one Sunday in March. The Misses Leisy and Homer Welty furnished special music. Mr. Welty also gave an illustrated talk in Sunday School.

On April 18, Rev. S. S. Baumgartner was with us and gave us interesting and helpful messages. Six members were received into the church that day, and communion was also observed that day. Mrs. Koch, a mother of one of our Sunday School children, has gone to be with the Lord. She was saved several months before. About a week before she passed away she said that one day while she was praying she felt God's presence so very near to her, it just seemed as if He had laid His hand upon her head.

We praise God for the way He leads when we look to Him for guidance. Beside the prayer hour on Wednesday at 2 p. m. at the church, a cottage prayer meeting has been started. Will you all join us in prayer for the salvation of souls?

Swift Current, Sask.

In this extensive and needy field, Brother N. W. Bahnman did a great work this winter. He conducted a Bible School of a total of 29 pupils and from Friday evening to Monday morning was out preaching at 14 points, accompanied by the pupils, until his strength failed him and only with great difficulty could he complete his program. The services were well attended, and on Easter 11 of the pupils and three others were baptized and Communion services observed with 139 participants. In the afternoon they had their closing exercises for the Bible School, and it was a blessed time for pupils and teachers. They are all thankful for this opportunity to build the Kingdom of God this way. Since April 20, Mr. Bahnman is with his family in Sardis, B. C., from which he was separated for six and a half months, endeavoring to recover his health. He plans to return to his work by May 19.

No report has been received from Chicago, but Rev. Leaman told us at the Eastern Conference that on Easter the congregation had a large increase and that the church is full now and by Fall it will be too small.

For three months the Secretary of the Board has been somewhat indisposed—the attack of the flu has preyed on his physical strength. The physician declares that he is considerably better. He has continued to pursue his ministerial duties, but has conducted only one service on a Sunday.

Schools and Education

A. S. Rosenberger

On the campus of the small college there can best be fostered the spirit of brotherhood and democracy which is characteristic of Mennonite idealism.

First of all, from the standpoint of the church itself the spirit of brotherhood is promoted because in such an institution the young people from different sections come to know each other, and this is a vital factor in developing a better understanding and in breaking down sectional prejudices. The contacts that have been made in our institutions have done much to help build the spirit of brotherhood throughout the entire church. In a large institution it would be impossible for so many young people to learn to know each other in a personal way.

In the second place, the general spirit of brotherhood and democracy is fostered on the campus of the small college. Here the ideal is that of one large family. The entire group is considered as a unit which leaves no place for fraternities or sororities. To have any of these organizations would lead to the breakdown of a spirit of oneness throughout the entire group. The small college has the opportunity to establish the whole college group as a unit which the larger school does not have.

In these respects the small college is the ideal size for carrying out this Mennonite viewpoint on life.

ABIDING IN CHRIST

The secret of all spiritual life is to be "in Christ." The maintaining of spiritual life is dependent upon abiding in Him. Jesus stressed the necessity of abiding in His analogy of the vine and the branches, when He said, "Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me . . . For without me ye can do nothing." It is the work of the husbandman to graft the branch into the vine; it is the duty of the branch to abide. Abiding is a voluntary act. The statement Jesus makes is imperative; not merely imperative that we abide, but as our obligation to abide. He brings us into the relation of branches, but it is largely our responsibility to maintain that relationship, or to abide.

There is nothing mechanical about abiding; it is a vital relationship. Branches which bore no fruit were in the vine. They were pruned off and burned. Why was there no fruit? There was no conscious maintenance of the relationship. There was no drawing of strength and life from the vine. They were living in self-sufficiency and were consequently cast forth as a branch and withered. Abiding in Christ cannot be taken for granted, it must be a conscious and continuous realization of relationship with Christ. There must be full reliance upon Him and His grace and strength for our fruit-bearing as well as for our life. It must be living and vital. The more we consciously abide in Him the more fruit we will bear for Him.

Obedience is the secret of abiding, or of maintaining a definite relationship with Christ. God's promises and the blessedness of His presence are assured to them that obey Him. Jesus stressed this vital truth by these words, "If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love." Obedience that maintains a vital relation with Christ involves the minding of the checks of the Spirit upon our hearts, the following of His leadership or guidance in our lives and service as well as keeping those commandments recorded in His Word. And yet this matter of obedience involves something deeper than a rigid and legalistic attitude toward these things. It involves the law of love. A love to Christ and one that is so strong and so perfect that we delight to do His will and which prompts us to run in the ways of His commandments. Behind every act of the Christian in all efforts at service and all endeavors to please God must be a heart filled with love to Christ. There will be no difficulty in abiding if we love Him sufficiently to give Him and His kingdom first place in our thinking and living. There will be no danger of being a fruitless branch as long as we draw deeply from the sources of divine love to nurture our hearts and to enable us to reach out to help those about us who are away from Christ. Prayer will be a fruitful and enjoyable exercise if it is prompted by love to Him. If we love Him, we obey. If we obey, we abide in His love.

There is protection by abiding in Christ. We are safe as we abide. It is as we abide in Him that our lives "are hid with Christ in God." One writer says, "Any break with God takes one away from the protection of His presence, and so automatically exposes him to whatever conditions surrounding him." We are safe from conditions, from assaults of the Evil One, from the fiery darts of temptation, when we are abiding in Him. "In Him" is the zone of protection for the Christian.—Herald of Holiness.

TRIVIAL HINDRANCES KEEPING BACK FROM PUBLIC WORSHIP: Ye shall keep My sabbaths, and reverence My sanctuary: I am the Lord. Lev. 26:2.

Of good Archbishop Leighton it is said, that the Sabbath was his delight; no slight hindrance could detain him from the house of prayer. Upon one occasion, when he was indisposed, the day being stormy, his friends urged him, on account of his health, not to venture to church.

"Were the weather fair," was the reply, "I would stay at home; but since it is otherwise I must go, lest I be thought to countenance by my example the irreligious practice of allowing trivial hindrances to keep me back from public worship."

THE BROTHERLY LOVE OF JUDAH

Genesis 42:1 to 45:15 Printed: Gen. 44:18-34

Topic: Self-Sacrifice in the Family

Introduction

About twenty-two years have passed since Joseph was sold by his brothers. For nine years he has been elevated to high authority. For two years the famine has continued and has spread into Canaan. Jacob has been compelled to send his sons into Egypt to purchase food.

Joseph's brothers failed to recognize him because of changed appearance and foreign speech. He knew them, spake roughly to them through an interpreter, accused them of being spies (42:6-28), learned that his father and brother Benjamin were still living. Their sacks were filled, and they returned home, all except Simeon, who was kept a prisoner until they should return with Benjamin.

Occasion of Judah's Pathetic Plea.

The brothers returned with Benjamin, Simeon was released, Joseph made a feast for them in his house (chap. 43), their sacks were filled, and they were sent away. Joseph's steward hastened after them, and accused them of stealing his silver cup. They were brought back and it was found in Benjamin's sack (44:1-13). Joseph demanded that he be held as his servant and the others return home (44:17). At this point Judah makes the heart-moving plea of our lesson. It has been described as "the finest specimen of persuasive eloquence in the Old Testament." He speaks with a heart filled with emotion and with desperate earnestness. Judah had pledged he would be responsible for Benjamin's safety (43:9). His plea is complimentary to Joseph (18b), very considerate of his father's past sorrow, very courageous in his readiness to be a substitute for his brother. He recalls their first visit to Joseph (vs. 18-23), draws a picture of the old father waiting in the home in Canaan, of his deep love for Benjamin.

His plea centered in the one great desire to spare his father a new sorrow in his old days (v. 22, 27-31). He had seen the father's anguish when Joseph was lost. Judah proved not only a loyal son, but also a true brother. He not only pled for his brother; he was willing to suffer in his stead (v. 33). This is true brotherly love, similar to Christ's, our substitute.

Effect of Judah's Plea

Judah summoned all the force of his pathetic plea in verse 34. Its effect on Joseph was irresistible. He could no longer restrain his feelings, so he makes himself known to his brothers (45:1-4). He sees that they have had a change of heart. They were heartless when they sold him; now they are sympathetic and can be trusted. He assures them that he holds no ill-will against them because of the cruel way in which they treated him. He assures them that God was leading them in all this to preserve them and save their lives (45:5-11). Joseph manifested a lofty type of Christian grace of forgiveness to his brothers. They had sold him into slavery but God had set him on a throne.

Nuggets of Truth

Judah possessed a noble sense of responsibility for his brother, to his father, to the family.

The privilege to speak a word in behalf of another is often ours. We are untrue if we remain silent.

The real test of our love for a brother in need is found in the degree of our willingness to suffer and sacrifice for him.

True brotherhood and self-sacrifice for others is a duty which we owe to our brethren in the flesh, to our brethren in the Church, and to mankind in general.

The Spirit of Christ in their hearts will prompt Christians as they have opportunity and ability to do good to all men.

What would happen if we took our responsibility for our brother as seriously as Judah did for Benjamin?

Sermon Sketch

C. E. Krehbiel

ONE THING

Psalm 27:4

"I don't want to know!" he shouted. It was on a Santa Fe train. An elderly man wanted to air his knowledge of astronomy. He used a boy of about five as a medium by asking him various questions, and then himself answering them loud enough so we all could hear. But the little fellow seemed to see through the ruse and every time he was asked a question he shouted more lustily, "I don't want to know. I don't care!" and would hold his ears shut.

That is a pretty effective way of not learning. Another equally effective way is to open our minds to everything. O yes, we need open minds, but our minds should not become Chicago rivers. He must discriminate, eliminate, concentrate. To be effective there must be an objective. One thing must be supreme. What shall it be? Curly hair, a slender streamline, a new hat, a trip around the world, a gunman, a star athlete, an "A", the best horseshoe thrower, a prizefighter, a professor, a Christian, crime, a president, a million, or a mess of pottage?

We must choose daily. We get up or slump. We eat or starve. We work or shirk. We go to church and listen or gather goatfeathers. Martha was nutty on service, and has imitators galore today. David once preached preparedness, as many do now. Against the protest of his general Joab, he numbered his warriors. He was shown the folly of being "quick on the trigger," and when given the choice between three things, seven years famine, three years flight, and three days plague, he chose to fall into the hands of God. Evidently he had revised Dean Inge's modern version of it, "It is useless for sheep to pass resolutions in favor of vegetarianism so long as the wolf remains of a different opinion." Or as another has said, "Every new generation is a fresh invasion of savages." David had a conversion. From riper experience he wrote: "Though war should rise against me, even then will I be confident. ONE THING have I asked of Jehovah, that will I seek after."

And what was that ONE THING? Not gold! Gideon fell by that. Not might (arms)! David relied on that and lost. Not patriotism! Edith Cavell said, "Patriotism is not enough." Not service! Martha stressed that and was rebuked by the Lord. Not even morality! The rich young ruler pinned his faith on that and went away sorrowing. Not the past! Paul urged the Philippians to forget the things behind, and to press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Not position, or power, or knowledge, or age, or honor! All have their place, but they are not enough. They are like the ball player who is put out on strikes, or on first base, or second, or third. At best they are bases, not scores. They do not reach the home plate.

David says the one thing he has asked for and will seek is, that he may dwell in the house of Jehovah all the days of his life, to behold the beauty of Jehovah, and to inquire in his temple.

Jesus puts it thus, "Seek ye first the kingdom." Do we? Or are we saying like the boy "I don't care. I don't want to know!"

Blessed Are the Prompt

Blessed are the prompt for they shall have the joy of being accounted dependable. To be prompt means to be ready in time and quick and correct in action; that means to be ready on time and to do or to say or to think quickly and as we should. Not to be prompt often causes much unpleasantness, trouble and worry to ourselves and to others, and the worst of it all is that people cannot depend upon us if they find that we are not prompt. The story is told that George Washington had a secretary once who was not prompt in coming to his work in the mornings. One morning when the secretary was late again the father of our country spoke to him about it, and the secretary gave the excuse for being late that his watch was slow, so George Washington said to him: "Well, I see that you need a new watch and I need a new secretary." This man lost his job because he was not prompt. He may have been a very good secretary otherwise, but since he could not be depended upon he lost his job. We hope he found another job, but it must have been hard for him since he had been discharged for not being dependable. If we hire anyone to do something for us we want to be sure that he will do it on time and that he will do it right.

The Word of God, too, teaches us in various ways that we should be prompt. In the story about the ten virgins who went forth to meet the bridegroom, five were prompt, but five were not prompt. The five who were prompt were ready—they had looked ahead and arranged everything so that when the time came they were ready to meet the bridegroom—that is what is meant by being prompt. These ten virgins represent all those who profess to believe in Jesus and who are looking for Him. But some of these seem to think that being baptized is all that is necessary; they hardly ever come to church; they do not read their Bible or if they read it they do not pay any attention to what it says, but go their own way together with others who do not attend the church. Others are prompt, they do not only profess to be Christian, but they are active in serving their Lord and Master, and they are not ashamed to confess Him before men so that He in turn will confess their name before His Father who is in heaven. Matt. 10:32. Five of the virgins are called foolish because they did not look ahead and did not get ready as they should have done. When the time came they were not ready, and when they finally did get ready the time was past and they were too late. It seems like a very severe punishment not to let these in just because they were late, but it seems the Lord wants to teach us by this story that even God cannot use such who are not prompt because they are not dependable.

There are times, of course, when even the most dependable may happen to be late. But a prompt person will do all he can that that does not happen very often. Let us all try to be prompt in all our dealings with our fellow men, but above all let us be prompt in our relation to God; for if we are not prompt—faithful—in little things how can anyone entrust to us greater things? Luke 16:10-12.

If we learn to be prompt in all that we are supposed to do, that will go a long way toward making our lives happy. Let us be prompt in learning to know God's will; let us be prompt also in doing His will. John 7:17. Blessed are the prompt, for they shall have the joy of being considered dependable.—In "The Messenger."

THE PROFANATION OF THE SABBATH. Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy. Exod. 20:8.

Blackstone declares somewhere that "a corruption of morals usually follows a profanation of the Sabbath"; and La Place said just before his death, "I have lived long enough to know what at one time I did not believe, that no society can be upheld without the sentiment of religion." The testimonies of other such men might be quoted in great numbers that, alike on moral, social, economical, and physical grounds, the disregard of the Lord's day is a dangerous evil both to the individual and the community.

About the Mennonites

The following article appearing in "THE HERALD," a monthly sheet edited by Rev. L. Hostetler of Upland, Calif., is so timely that we bring it in THE MENNONITE. Are there not others who want to have a share in answering this question?

Who Are The Mennonites?

The question is often asked by strangers and not always answered as intelligently as it should be. There are many people who have never heard the name Mennonite. They think it sounds outlandish and wonder where it comes from. When they ask for information you should be able, without hesitation, to give it. It is only a matter of self-respect that you know something interesting to tell about your own denomination. When you are asked who the Mennonites are you should not be embarrassed or apologetic. This is what you should answer:

The Mennonite Church is one of the oldest Protestant denominations in the world; we celebrated our 400th anniversary in the year 1925; the Church originated in Europe; the name comes from Menno Simons, the principal leader and organizer, who was born in Holland about the year when Columbus discovered America. Mennonites from the beginning taught that war is wrong, that a Christian will not kill. This has brought them frequently in conflict with the State, and our history has in consequence been filled with many dark pages of persecution. We believe in the practical application of the teachings of Jesus; in the Bible as the Word of God and the sufficient guide of life; we believe in the simple life, in the sanctity of the marriage vow, in the separation of church and state; in the new birth, the forgiveness of sins, and in salvation through Christ. There are about 200,000 Mennonites (including children) in the U. S. and Canada, approximately one-fifth of whom belong to our branch the General Conference of Mennonites of North America. We believe in missionary work and have missions in China, India, Africa, and among the American Indians in Oklahoma, Arizona, and Montana, and in a number of cities. We believe in Christian education and have colleges at Newton, Kansas; Bluffton, O.; and Freeman, S. Dak. Our official church paper, "The Mennonite," is published every week at Newton, Kansas. Our form of government is congregational. We are comparatively small in numbers, but we are large enough to do a great work.

This is only a beginning. If you will carefully read a little book by Dr. C. Henry Smith, entitled "Menno Simons, Apostle of Non-Resistance," you will be prepared to add other interesting facts.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Jacob T. Nickel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Nickel, was born Sept. 11, 1878, on his father's farm, near Mountain Lake, Minn. In 1899 he was baptized by Rev. Henry Quiring and received into the membership of the Bergfelder Mennonite Church of Mountain Lake. In 1902 he was married to Miss Susanna Friesen, which union durated for more than thirty-one years, until her death in 1933. To this union there were born three sons and five daughters, all of whom survive, except the oldest son, Jacob, who died at the age of sixteen. Thus he leaves to mourn his early departure his children: Mrs. George Franz, Mrs. John A. Dyck, Peter, Tina, Elizabeth, Hilda and Benjamin; also two sons-in-law, two grandchildren, six brothers, six brothers-in-law, six sisters-in-law, and many other relatives and friends.

Mr. Nickel had received just an ordinary education, so he strove to give his children a better one, and always attempted to train them to an upright Christian life. Much of his interest was centered in church activities, such as teaching in Sunday school, young peoples' guidance work, and since 1928 he served as deacon of his church.

He died suddenly as a result of a heart attack Friday evening. He had complained of pain in his side and his daughter had administered what relief she could, which eased his suffering. During the night he evidently fell asleep and died without awakening. His death was discovered next morning, when he was called to breakfast and didn't answer. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. A. Wiebe of Delft, assisted by Rev. John Bartel, on Wed., May 19, 1937.

We have the hope of meeting him in the eternal home.

"All of Christ for my salvation,
All the Bible for my study;
All God's children for my fellowship,
All the world for my mission field."

THE HEATHEN'S REPLY TO THE JESUIT.

Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image. Exod. 20:4.

When the Jesuit missionaries first arrived in the Sandwich Islands, they used many arguments with the natives to show that their instructions and those of the Protestant missionaries were alike. It was on one of these occasions that an old man, who made no pretensions to religion, replied that the missionaries had taught him about God. "Oh, yes," replied the priests, "Mr. Thurston taught about God and that was right; you heard him, and now I wish you to hear me." The old man gravely answered, "But the Bible says I cannot serve two masters." He further objected to their images, when the priests said: "Oh! we do not call this God, and we do not pray to it. It is only a representation, shadow, of God." The old man replied: "Let me see it. That cannot be any representation of God. It is made of brass. If there be any shadow or representation of God, it must be in the heart, not in an image."

The Panel Discussion Type of Program

"A number of times I have noticed that you suggest on the Young People's page of THE MENNONITE, that if at any time we have any questions or suggestions for that page we are to write you.

"Some of us have heard that in some churches they have had a Round-table discussion in the form of a program being carried out by about four or six people, while the congregation listens in on the discussion . . . Now we would like to know where we can get material for such a program, what kind of questions have been discussed. Can we get someone to give a discussion on the Young People's page of THE MENNONITE? We shall watch for it."

Thus runs the letter from one of our readers. It indicates a sincere desire on the part of one leader that material at the C. E. Programs shall be of vital significance, both to the audience and to the participants in the program. We submit, as our discussion, portions of our answer to the letter itself:

The panel-discussion type of program is gaining in popularity, partly because of its simplicity and partly because of its effectiveness. The plan is as follows: A theme is chosen. The theme is then divided into its logical subdivisions, and a group of young people is selected just as is ordinarily done, to handle these various topics. From this point on, however, the procedure is different from the usual "topic" program.

These people are seated, usually, around a large table, but not always. Sometimes they are seated in a semi-circle, in comfortable living room chairs, with perhaps a floor lamp in the midst, to make it seem informal. Someone leads off the discussion (in a manner as casual as possible) with some question which is pertinent to the theme of the evening. Then other members, in a conversational manner, answer the question, or contribute thoughts to it. The comments ARE NOT SPEECHES—they are CONVERSATION, in a conversational tone. They are brief, but not too brief—not a mere Yes and No conversation. In other words, they resemble very closely an intelligent living-room conversation, by people who are prepared to make intelligent contributions to the theme of the evening.

One such panel-discussion program was given by a group of young people, on the theme "Mennonitism." The entire work of the entire General Conference was divided into the various Boards, and each person in the panel informed himself pretty thoroughly about one Board. Having done this they wrote out on slips of paper (each one did) four leading questions, which might be questions which a typical audience might ask. These slips were handed to other members of the panel before the program began. Thus armed, the panel group now take their places on the stage.

On member of the group begins with a remark something like this: "I notice an item here in DER BUNDESBOTE about the work of the Emergency Relief Board of the General Conference. I get these boards all mixed up. What is this Emergency Relief Board anyway?"

Another member of the panel answers: "Why, yes, I know something about this Relief Board. It was organized in 1899, when the news of the great famine in India reached this country. The Conference sent David Goerz over to India at that time to distribute over 8,000 bushels of wheat. They collected more than $7,000 for this purpose.

Another member of the panel asks, "What is the purpose of the Board otherwise?" And speaker above replies, "I would say it is to give aid and relief in any emergency among Mennonites much as the Red Cross does on a large scale."

"And who are the members of the Board? Do you know any of the men."

Well, the panel speaker most likely does. He may have written to these men personally. He may have had the time of his life getting material for this program, so he replies, "O yes. The chairman of the Board is Rev. John Lichti, of Medford, Oklahoma. Perhaps some of you know John C. Mueller, of Freeman, or Reverend P. H. Unruh, of the large Alexanderwohl Church, at Goessel, Kansas. He is very busy, but he finds time for such things. . . "

Thus it goes—one question suggests another, and the other Boards of the Conference are discussed. Finally, in closing, the various members of the panel express their satisfaction in having learned something new to them. After the panel discussion is closed, the meeting is adjourned with prayer and song, perhaps, as is customary in the church giving the program.

WAYS AND MEANS

"I would like to, but I don't see how I can."

You've heard it a thousand times, but it's mostly nonsense.

Take the question of attending one of our Mennonite Retreats—all fine, all good, all designed to be a source of inspiration and blessing to our young people. One Conference decided, as one of its objectives for this year, to help someone in each church attend one of these retreats. That's a fine thing to do.

The expense of attending one of these retreats is not large. Make up your mind TODAY, that you ARE going—not because you will it, but because God wills it, and because, if He wills it He will also provide a way. God stands ready to share with you out of endless abundance all good things of life. Say to yourself daily, not once but many times, "O Father, I thank Thee, that thou art providing me out of Thy fullnes with all that is good." He knows you want to go to that retreat: say this often enough, say it fervently, earnestly, expectantly—and you'll GO. Watch and see if you don't.

HOW TRUE TO LIFE ARE THE MOVIES?

Young People's Topic, June 20, 1937
Phil. 4:8; 1 John 2:15-17

Reading and Meditation

M., June 14. The flight of a king. 2 Sam. 15:23, 30.
T., June 15. A traitor and his fate. Matt. 26:14-16; 27:3-8
W., June 16. Favoritism in the home. Gen. 27:1-13.
T., June 17. Rebuking a king. 2 Sam. 12:1-10.
F., June 18. The King of kings. John 18:28-40.
S., June 19. A scenario by Jesus. Luke 15:11-32.

Recently one of our readers wrote us regarding the editorial policy of the Young People's pages regarding movies, indicating that in his opinion the influence of movies was in the direction of Atheism. He indicated in his letter that he does not go to movies at all, but he knows from hearsay that it is so. Doubtles this feeeling obtains in many quarters, while in others, some very fine people, while not condoning in any sense the evil tendencies in some pictures, feel that other pictures are fine. It is one of the great controversial questions of the church today, and it will not be solved by heated argument, but by honest searching and quiet efforts to solve the problem in the Spirit of our Master.

1. Would you call a picture like "Little Women" truly great?
2. What would you include in a list of characteristics which should be present in a "good" picture?
3. How could the moving picture become an instrument for religious education? What films are available, and where?
4. Many pictures show drinking scenes, on the ground that this is "true to life." Is it? If so, does the showing of such scenes help to build up public opinion FOR or against prohibition?
5. Studies prove that many boys are started on careers of crime by the movies. They actually learn how to prepare to rob. Do you think that the effect of such pictures is to make heroes out of criminals, even though the criminal is caught and punished in the picture?
6. Are you influenced more by a picture than by an editorial?
7. Should a movie that aims to be true to life, show a preponderance of good, wholesome, constructive activities of life, or a preponderance of crime, divorce, sexuality, and the like? Just what does it mean to be "true to life" anyway?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

BIWEEKLY INTERMEDIATE TOPICS FOR SUMMER MONTHS

At the suggestion of the editor of the Y. P. department, Intermediate topic material will apper in this paper only every two weeks during the summer months. Some societies combine with Y. P. Societies, while others meet only once or twice a month. If you do not like this arrangement, please let us know.

Sometimes we feel like the artist who painted the rear view of a cow blue. After the picture was finished he showed it to one of his friends. His friend was puzzled. "Do you really think there is something beautiful in that picture?" "Oh, no," the artist confessed, "but I know it will get criticism and attention."

We wonder sometimes if the material prepared for the Intermediate C. E. topics is meeting the needs of the societies. Do you like to have a complete program plan suggested? Would you rather have more discussion, more illustrations, more poems, or what? In the eighteen months we have been preparing the material for this department we have heard from one society. What is your reaction? Must we produce something as extreme as the artist to get your criticism?

SOME ACTIVITIES OF AN INTERMEDIATE C. E. SOCIETY

The Intermediate C. E. Society of the First Mennonite church of Reedley, California, is composed of 23 members. We meet every Sunday evening and in the summer we have joint meetings with the young people.

To increase our attendance the Lookout Committee divided the society into two sides, the "Win-some" and the "Golden Rule." One point was given for every one present and two additional points were awarded for each visitor. A picnic has been planned for the winning side.

At Christmas our members met at the church a half hour early, and then carolled along the way to our superintendent's home where a Christmas meeting was held. Each one brought a white gift of dried fruit, which was later sent to an orphanage in Alaska. The missionary committee also supervised the giving of a Thanksgiving basket to a crippled lady and supervised the correspondence with two of our missionaries in foreign countries.

For one of our missionary meetings we asked a high school student who had recently returned from China to be with us. She told us about their occupations and traits, illustrating her talk with pictures and articles from there. On Mother's Day we sent out special invitations to the mothers of the members of our society. They were met at the door by two members and corsages pinned on them. A program was given in their honor. Our pastor's wife, Mrs. J. H. Langenwalter, gave the closing talk.

The social committee has given us some good times. We have had several socials in various homes, and a skating party that is still being talked about.

We chose as our motto at the beginning of the year; Phil. 4:13: "I can do all things through Christ that strengtheneth me."—Frances Ewy.

      2) God is abundant in truth. Ex. 34:6
      3) All God's paths are truth. Ps. 25:10

3. Repeat in unison verse for the evening. This could be put on blackboard previous to meeting. Beneath this could be the words: God, Bible, Jesus. Put these one beneath the other. These could be veiled until this step in the program. This would thus serve as a brief review and as an introduction to your heart talk
4. Heart-talk by leader: "How Can I Be True? Led the hearts to the three sources of truth by the way of Ps. 51:6a and Psalm 119:30a
5. Hymn in unison: "Open my eyes that I may see glimpses of truth Thou hast for me."
6. Closing prayer

And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays.—Lowell.

Junior Corner

Eight Cents a Week

There is a wonderful promise in the Old Testament. Would you get your Bible? Turn to Malachi 3:10 and read it. Now I will tell you a story.

Once upon a time, some eighty years ago, there was a junior boy, who like most boys, had very little money. Now and then, however, he earned a little and was given a little. He did not put in the bank all he earned and reecived like some of you do, nor did he run to spend the pennies thoughtlessly for marbles or sweets. Perhaps after all, he was different than most boys. This is what he did. Of the little he received, he gave five cents a week to foreign misions and three cents a week to the poor. This added to eight cents a week which he gave to God. What can God do with eight cents? That story I will tell you some other time. Toady let us see what happens to a boy who promises to God a part of all he received.

This junior boy "once upon a time" grew to be ninety-eight years old. He died yesterday. The papers of our nation came out with big headlines bearing his name. Some gave a whole page telling the history of his life. Have you guessed who it was? Mr. John D. Rockefeller, the multi-millionaire!

Now read the verse again in Malachi 3:10. Do you think this might have had something to do with his great riches? I do. God is truth. God keeps His promises. God does not make every one rich in money as He did Mr. Rockefeller but every one who remembers God with a part of all he receives, will always be repaid many fold in some way that God knows is best for us.

Are you earning a few pennies now and then? Why not try Mr. Rockefellers plan and see what happens?

* * *

Bring ye the whole tithe into the store house, and prove me now, herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. Mal. 3:10.

LOOK TO YOUR POCKETS. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. Exod. 20:7.

Howard, the philanthropist, was standing in a crowd by the door of a post office, when a man uttered a volley of oaths. "Look to your pockets!" cried Howard, buttoning up his own tightly. "Always take care of your pockets when you find yourself among swearers. He who will take God's name in vain will think little of taking your purse, or doing anything else that is evil."

Liquor's Program

to reach Youth and Women through Home-read Magazines

More than a billion (1,000,000,000) pages of highly artistic sales appeals on behalf of widely known brands of whisky, gin, brandy, rum and beer were whisked into American homes last year through the expert service of Uncle Sam, and given library table prestige, within the covers of a half score of nationally read and otherwise respectable, high-grade magazines, declares a statement issued from National W.C.T.U. headquarters, summarizing an extensive first-hand study of leading periodicals, conducted by the members of the Y.T.C. in all parts of the country.

The young people, according to Miss Helen L. Byrnes, National General Secretary of the Youth's Temperance Council, thus summarize their findings after a careful study and analysis of both editorial and advertising contents of these and other non-liquor advertising magazines during recent months:

1. For the first time in the annals of magazine history in the United States, it is evident that the liquor traffic has succeeded in launching a sales appeal program of the most costly, alluring, and artistic type imaginable, within the pages of some of the otherwise highest grade and most popular magazines circulating widely in American homes.

2. On the other hand, despite the easy money possibilities manifestly involved in liquor advertising, several other nationally read and highly regarded magazines of general circulation, and practically without exception all of the publications catering exclusively to women, still refuse to accept the sales appeals of the brewers and distillers and by their continuing popularity and evident prosperity disprove the assumption that magazine success today necessarily depends to any extent upon acceptance of paid propaganda from the wet interests.

3. To a large extent the magazines now accepting liquor advertising are among those which, during the past three years have been, and still are, making the strongest possible drive for youthful readers and which boast of their large home circulation.

4. The feature and editorial contents of the magazines accepting paid liquor publicity appear more and more to reflect their advertising department's attitude toward the liquor trade, and seem startlingly unanimous in putting the stamp of respectability upon so-called moderate drinking with almost nowhere a hint of the personal, economic, or social advantages of abstinence, especially for youth.

5. Although four years of liquor-bred crime, dissipation and accidents have ensued since the sale of beer was technically legalized by Federal law, it is evident that with one or two exceptions these widely circulating magazines are still maintaining a policy of silence on any discussion of the question, apparently so as not to embarrass their advertising departments in accepting the patronage of deluxe liquor makers.

6. A study of liquor ads in these magazines reveals that in almost every case the advertiser has, manifestly with the sanction of the magazine itself, gone beyond the limits of fact in describing the alleged virtues and excellence of the intoxicants so publicized.

CORRESPONDENCE

Bethel Church, Wolf Point, Montana

Dear Mennonite Readers: Again a busy season is nearing it's wind-up. Many acres of wheat have been sown, however, mostly in dry ground. We have had very little moisture this spring, at places none, and the snowfall during the winter was also light. During the past few weeks we have had a number of dust storms which are doing much damage. Nevertheless, we are looking forward for a crop. We know that God is the creator of all things, and then He certainly is also the manager. Let us trust Him for He promised to supply our every need. But how true it is that we so often, like Jacob of old, wrestle with the Heavenly Wrestler and do not yield to His will until finally He also has to dislocate us physically or materially, more so materially, that we may become or remain adjusted to the will of God. He has ways and means of drawing his people closer to Him. Let us praise Him for whatever He does, even though it may hurt.

But, above all, we praise God for the many spiritual blessings that have come to us through our dear pastor, Rev. Albert Schultz. O dear fellow-Christians, let us not grow weary in well-doing; let us not grow slack in being witnesses, nor in proclaiming His word. Remember that is the purpose of our lives. What does it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own soul?

The work on our church has been progressing nicely this spring. It will not be long now until it will be finished. We are looking forward to the time of its dedication. What a joy it will be to worship Him in spirit and in truth in a church building.—P. M. Franz, Corr.

Pratum, Oregon, May 18, 1937

Dear Brother Thierstein: I am sure you will be interested to hear of the delightful S. S. and C. E. convention that the Conference Churches of Oregon had in Dallas Sunday, May 16. In spite of a drizzling rain the Presbyterian church, where the convention was held, was filled to capacity. The interest, the Christian fellowship, and the spirit that prevailed throughout was of the very best. Fine singing by choirs of various churches, short talks on vital S. S. or C. E. problems and a few longer addresses made up the program of the forenoon and afternoon sessions. The Junior section in which over a hundred children were present had their meeting in the basement. Outside speakers were the acting pastor of the local Presbyterian Church, Rev. S. S. Baumgartner, and myself. I had to speak twice to the adult group and once to the junior group. Everybody felt uplifted and refreshed by the program and the fellowship.

The work of the field secretary is received with the finest appreciation everywhere, but commencement activities and heavy field work sometimes cut down week day meetings.

Very sincerely,
H. A. Fast.

Ebenezer Church, Bluffton, Ohio

Much interest is being manifested in the preparation for the observance of the One-hundredth Anniversary of the Swiss Mennonite congregations, which is being planned by the four Mennonite churches—First Mennonite and Ebenezer churches of Bluffton, Grace and St. John churches of Pandora. The date is July the fourth. It was in 1837 when the first organization was formed.

In March the Bluffton High School Mixed Chorus rendered the "Song of Praise" in our church under the direction of Ruth Bixel.—The Good Friday message was preparatory for the observance of Communion held on Easter, on which day we also had baptism and reception of new members.—The Mixed Chorus under the direction of Miss Mabel Amstutz rendered the Cantata "Easter Alleluia" very effectually.

The loved ones are passing away. On March 26 Eugene Tschiegg died in the Community Hospital at the age of seventy-five. His funeral was in the Ebenezer church; Rev. P. A. Kliewer officiated. He leaves to mourn his death, his widow and eleven children. He was a native of Canton, Berne, Switzerland. On March 26 Peter Lora passed away at his home at the age of seventy-five. His funeral also was held at the Ebenezer church. He is survived by his widow, four children and three step-children. Rev. Burrichter of the Reformed church assisted the pastor Rev. Kliewer in the services.

On April 4, Mr. Carl Roethlisberger and Mrs. Mary Hauenstein were united in marriage, and will make their home on S. Jackson street. Rev. R. F. Larsen and Rev. Ezra Steiner assisted the pastor in serving the bread at the Lord's table on April 18. Rev. Don R. Falkenberg gave a very interesting message here, revealing the plan of the Communists to overthrow our government through Labor Unions, politics and education. II Tim. 3:1 tells us that in the last days perilous times will come. Two earthquakes here in the month of March gave evidence of Christ's words in Matt. 24:7.

On April 15 we had the Young People's Convention of the Ebenezer church. The theme was, "Crusading with Christ." The guest speakers were Rev. D. J. Unruh of the St. John church; Mr. Shelly, a member of the Bluffton College Gospel Team; Dr. Alva McClain, Dean of the Theological Seminary at Ashland, Ohio; Miss Inda Sprunger, Middle District Field Secretary; and Miss Pauline Krehbiel of Donnellson, Iowa, President of Young People's work of M. D. Conference; also leaders from the young people of our church. The music was rendered by the different churches. We had blessed times.

On Sunday evening, April 18, all went to the St. John church to enjoy the sacred concert given by the Swiss Men's Chorus, directed by Alvin Burkholder. Sunday, May 2, Rev. Ezra Steiner gave an impressive farewell message to his church, the Ebenezer church, which has recognized him as its Missionary and will support him with free-will offerings. He and Mrs. Steiner sail for India, Tibetan, Napalese Border, where they have established work and will continue to labor for the salvation of souls. Their two children remain in America while their parents are far away laboring for the Lord. Their testimony will long be remembered.—Your Correspondent.

Bergfelder Church, Mountain Lake, Minn.

Dear Mennonite: Since I have been elected reporter for the Mennonite from our church, I will give you a short report of the spiritual activities. In April Rev. John Esau from Lima, Ohio, was conducting revival meetings here, one week at Mountain Lake, and one week at Delft, Minn. And with the help of our dear pastor, Rev. H. H. Quiring, and the other co-workers through the Spirit of our Lord, twenty-two young souls were brought to Christ and baptized on Pentecost Sunday, May 16; also three other members were added to the Church.

On May 15, my dear beloved brother Jacob T. Nickel, Deacon of our Church, died at seven in the morning. (See the obituary on another page.) He has the blessed hope that he has gone to be with the Lord forever more. So Rev. A. A. Wiebe took his place at the baptismal service as substitute. We wish and pray that the newly baptized members may grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Your brother in the Lord,
G. T. Nickel, Corr.

A MIRACLE

"This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes." Psalm 118:23.

The summer of 1936 was one of intense heat and drought and resulted in numerous forest fires in the heavily wooded areas of Northern Minnesota and Wisconsin. The fire fighters could do little to stop the rapid spread of the flames as they were driven by high winds through the dry timber lands.

But God is present, even in the flames to protect. Let us tell you the story of what happened in a little settlement just north of Duluth which was in the path of one of these destroying fires. Several years ago a nice church had been built by the people; and when the fire swept down and destroyed 40 homesteads, the people's first thought was of their place of worship. After struggling hopelessly to conquer the flames, the settlers were finally forced to flee for their lives, believing that their church was destroyed. But a miracle took place—God protected His House—when the fires came close to the church they parted and passed on both sides of the building and did not even scorch it.

A forest ranger had his Bible open on the seat of his car—five hours after the fire had gone through it was found unharmed, also the car in which the Bible lay was unharmed "except for scorched enamel, a warped and twisted windshield and the upholstery of the car full of holes burned by falling sparks."

From this little town years ago, a school teacher had written the Northern Bible Society to send her quite a number of Bibles as most of the families were Bolsheviks. As we sent the Bibles to her we prayed that God would bless His Word. A change took place among the settlers—religious services were held in the school house and finally the church was built. It was this church which God protected.

But in the stories of the great forest fires that have swept our northern areas through settlements scattered in its path are recorded many miraculous escapes—also the preserving of Bibles when everything else was destroyed by the fire.

"Thou shalt not be afraid for the terror by night—nor for the destruction that wasteth at noon day—Because thou hast made the Lord—thy habitation." Psalm 91:5-9.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—F. J. Wiens resigns.—Brother F. J. Wiens, for several years manager of the Mennonite Book Concern at Berne, Indiana, recently tendered his resignation to the Board of Publication which the Board has now regretfully accepted. The young brother Fred von Gunten who has assisted Manager Wiens for some time will carry on the business temporarily, until a suitable manager can be found.

—The Lorraine Ave. Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas, gave a reception dinner in honor of their new pastor, Rev. S. M. Musselman and his family, Sunday, May 23.

—The five young ladies, four of them students of Bethel College, who were pretty seriously injured in an auto accident nearly a month ago, had been recovering quite satisfactorily. At present, however, one of them, Margaret Regier, daughter of Prof. A. J. Regier, has developed lockjaw because of an infection in an injured leg and is in a precarious condition. Prayer is needed here. Another lost an eye, and a third one may remain slightly crippled. The girls drove into a truck standing in the road without a tail light.

—COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES were held at Bethel and Freeman Colleges last Thursday night. Bethel College graduated a class of forty-eight this year, the largest in the history of the school. Dr. E. Guy Cutshall, Chancellor of Nebraska Wesleyan University, Lincoln, Nebr., gave the commencement address. Bluffton College has its commencement June 9, with Dr. Gould Wickey, Secretary of the Board of Church Related Colleges, as the main speaker.

—The closing exercises at the Mennonite Institute, Gretna, Manitoba, are to be held Sunday, June 6, beginning at 10 a.m. with worship, a sermon by Rev. Heinrich Gossen, and short addresses by students on religious subjects. In the afternoon a German literary program will be given.

—THE WORKER'S EXCHANGE, a monthly published by the Pacific District tells of a lady who had been gloriously saved a few months before she passed away; that one day while she was praying she felt God's presence so near to her, it just seemed He had laid his hand upon her head.

TABOR JUNIOR COLLEGE closed its work for this school year Friday, May 21. Two students were graduated from the Bible School, seventeen from the Junior College, and twenty from the Academy. The school is progressing nicely.

— Much of the territory of the Middle West that was so hard hit by drouths the last few years is now showing prospects of better times and the countryside and crops look quite hopeful. But, alas! Where are the beautiful shade trees and groves? So many have dried up, and places once beauty spots now look desolate. The Bethel College Campus, formerly admired for its beautiful grove, is half depleted of trees. It's such a pity to lose these silent friends.

— A SPLENDID IDEA.—A service in special honor of the older people is being planned by the Mennonite Church at Upland, California, for Sunday, June 27 next. Special music, a special sermon, and a surprise are being arranged for all over seventy-five. All below that age should be there to help make this a success. Let us show our appreciation of the older people while they are still with us.—The Herald.

— From South Dakota comes the report that Jacob A. Friesen of Spink, S. D., has been ordained to the ministry at the Emmanuel Church there, by Rev. H. H. Quiring of Mt. Lake, Minn., on Sunday, May 23.

— Besides the International Relations Institute which is to be held at Bethel College, June 8-18, others are sponsored by the American Friends Service Committee at the following places: Duane University, Durham, N. C.; Grinnel College, Grinnell, Iowa; State Teachers' College, Cheney, Pa.; Mills College, Oakland, Calif.; Nashville Institute, Nashville, Tenn.; Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.; Whittier College, Whittier, Calif.; Reed College, Portland, Oregon.

— THE FRIENDS are again the chief Samaritans in Spain's Civil War, as they probably were in the World War. About 75 per cent of the population of Spain is now crowded into government territory, and the need of food, clothing, medicine, and other matter is urgent. The problem of orphans and refugee children is receiving special attention. Couldn't we Mennonites show a little more interest and activity in doing similar service among these unfortunate people?

— We thank Rev. P. E. Whitmer of Pandora, Ohio, for a copy of the draft of a new constitution for the Middle District, worked out by a committee composed of H. T. Unruh, J. S. Schultz, and Brother Whitmer as its chairman.

— "NEWS LETTER", Salem Menn. Church, South Dakota.—From the families of our church in 1936-1937 three persons are attending Freeman Junior College, twenty-nine Freeman College Academy, seven Freeman High School, one Marion High School, one Humboldt High School, one Bethel College, one Wheaton College, one a Biblical Seminary in New York, one Yale University, one Northwestern Bible School. Nineteen are teaching. There are four other young Mennonites from the Freeman neighborhood attending Bethel College (Editor).

— One of our sisters writes: "In our English adult S. S. class the question of discipline in our Mennonite churches arose. Perhaps a discussion of the problem in our church papers might prove helpful. Is there a place for church discipline in our times?" This good sister is to be complimented for bringing up this question. Won't someone who is able write for the Mennonite on this topic? That would be very timely. If we have church discipline, just what does it consist of? That should be told in plain, simple language.

— Rudolph Voth, son of Rev. and Mrs. P. R. Voth now located on the Bethel College Campus, who teaches music in the Clearwater high school, Kansas, has won high honors with his musical organizations. At Friends University music festival his entries in vocal and instrumental solos and ensembles made the best showing. And in a contest at Emporia two of his students ranked highly superior and two superior.

— Fascism, Nazism, Rexism! What next? In Belgium a youthful politician named Degrella is propogating a new brand of nationalism for his country. He has styled it REXISM. In a recent election in Brussels the Rexist followers received 69,242 votes and four other factions which together supported Premier Van Zealand polled 275,840 votes.

— Rain every other day is the average for two months, and the total rainfall for the year thus far is 15.66 inches. During April and May, up to the 19th, 24 days out of 49 were rainy days, and these rains have been greatly retarding spring seeding.—Witness, Berne, Ind.

— A propos the wrangle over the enlargement of the Supreme Court, the administration strategists suddenly seem to have changed their tactics. They started a quiet undercover campaign to salvage as much as possible of the original program, because of a definite lack of votes in the Senate.

SOLID HAPPINESS. Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his! Num. 23:10

"My first convictions on the subject of religion," says the late Rev. R. Cecil, "were confirmed by observing that really religious persons had some solid happiness among them, which I felt the vanities of the world could not give. I shall never forget standing by the bedside of my sick mother. 'Are not you afraid to die?' I asked. 'No.' 'Why does the uncertainty of another state give you no concern?' 'Because God has said: "Fear not....When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee." Let me die the death of the righteous.' "

NOT SLAVISHLY AFRAID OF HIS SINS. I am the Lord thy God. Exod. 20:2.

When Ebenezer Erskine lay on his death-bed, one of his elders said to him, "Sir, you have given us many good advices. May I ask what you are now doing with your own soul?" "I am just doing with it," he replied, "what I did forty years ago; I am resting on that word, 'I am the Lord thy God.' " Another friend put the question, "Sir, are you not afraid of your sins?" "Indeed, no," was his answer; "ever since I knew Christ I have never thought highly of my frames and duties, nor am I slavishly afraid of my sins." At another time he said, "I know that when my soul forsakes this tabernacle of clay it will fly as naturally to my Saviour's bosom as the bird to its beloved nest."

Can the World Be Set Right?

A bit of serious thinking about the conditions in the present-day world must lead to the conclusion that there is something wrong with it, not so much with the physical world, although strange things occur there, too, but particularly in the world of man. And what is even more appalling is the fact that the world doesn't seem to have the means to salve itself. So many conflicting, illboding elements and forces assert themselves that those in power and influence, to whom we naturally look to set things straight, get so confused that they are lost in quandaries. Speaking particularly of the American world we see our penal institutions being filled to overflowing with criminals of all sorts, particularly beardless young men; we see the grim Reaper stalking along, leaving his trail strewn with homicides and suicides as never before; we see divorces multiplying at an alarming rate, and homes that might have been havens of happiness torn ruthlessly asunder, with orphaned or half-orphaned children left stranded out in a cold world; we see young people who need healthy bodies and sound minds to cope with the serious problems of life, suffernig their lives to be contaminated in fashionable rendezvous, through drinking and smoking; we see nations arming to their teeth, ready to jump at each other's throats, to kill and maim the flower of manhood, the hope of their future; we see families with meagre means vieing with the well-to-do, by buying and living beyond their means and paving the way to the poorhouse; we see millions of people with insufficient work or no work at all, while armies of others are striking for shorter working hours with more pay, to gain leisure with which they will not know what to do; we see the government spending billions in frantic efforts to remedy matters, yet still facing confusion on every hand; we see selfishness and crass individualism holding the stage everywhere, while the spirit of brotherly helpfulness is vanishing to the rear. Is there yet a way out of this turmoil?

An European paper some time ago published the story of a boy who was very expert in solving a large jig-saw puzzle, which consisted of a map of the world cut up in jig-saw fashion. When set to work to put the puzzle together the boy did it so easily that the people marveled. Then he made this explanation, "I found the figure of a man on the opposite side of the paper. I put the man right and then the world came right of itself." Here we have it! What is wrong with the world is wrong with man. If man could be set straight or made over, the world would soon become better. And there is a way to put man right, but only one way. It is by bringing him in touch with the world's Savior Jesus Christ. He who made a Peter out of Simon, a Paul out of a Saul, powerful men of God out of timid, unpromising disciples, can remedy the troublous conditions of the world, if the real Christians, those who have not yet bowed to Baal, will get down on their knees and implore God without ceasing to cause a mighty revival and return to God to sweep over the lands. Such reawakenings were possible in Old Testament times among the Israelites, why shouldn't they be possible today?

The Square Deal

Our first reaction to the impulse to give a square deal, is to question whether it is worth while. We may sometimes be deterred from being entirely fair in our dealings, because we think that we will get no thanks for it. Possibly we have sometimes tried to be a little more than fair, and others have just taken it as their due or even taken advantage of it. However, this calculating the rewards of just dealing overlooks the plain teaching of Jesus to do as we would be done by. It also fails to recognize that God does not deal in this manner with us. Probably we would be startled by the little which would be justly due us, if we could estimate how much we deserve from God. If his dealings with us were on the basis of our deserts or of our returns to him, we might fall far short of our present well-being and happiness.

Another consideration which often seems to influence our stand for justice, is others' opinions of our actions. It is evident that sometimes, when we would like to be fair to Tom, the certain enmity of Jerry scares us and Tom gets a "raw deal." This, apparently, is the usual course followed by those persons or nations who are guided by expediency or diplomacy instead of righteousness. It seems only a step removed from the policy of doing the thing which promises to pay, whether it is right or wrong. We must expect to be disliked by somebody, if we try to be just to all, because some will think their interests are opposed. If they were only wiser, they might realize that the highest interests of all are one. Besides, we cannot doubt that a stand for justice is approved by God and by all right-minded people.

On the other hand, we may often be perplexed as to what attitude we should take on others' dealings with us. One cannot be the victim of unfairness without debating whether he should endure or oppose it. We are often tempted to act on the suggestion, that as "one good turn deserves another," so does a bad one. It would seem wiser to remember that two wrongs never make a right. But it often appears hard to act wisely when treated unjustly. Perhaps this is at the root of retaliation or unwise opposition. We do not really mean to be revengeful, but in the stress of enduring unfairness we act unwisely. It may be helpful to consider whether an injustice is not more fully and permanently overcome by endurance than by opposition.—N. C. L.

FIELDS WHITENING UNTO HARVEST

Again do I feel constrained to report to interested friends on the Evangelistic Work of this station. As far as ingathering is concerned, there has not been a time during the past 15 years when the outlook has been so favorable. We started our winter's tour early in January, and went from village to village, attempting to spend one week in each. Up to the middle of February when the tour was interrupted, baptisms resulted in every village where we camped as follows: 2 in Sukrhi, 1 in Bheradepa, 11 in Rajpur, 26 in Jhagrandihi, 4 in Bhatkunda. In addition, since Christmas Day, 12 were baptised in Khirjhuri, 12 in Jagdispur, 1 in Jharband, and 2 others in Rajpur. Thus the total since Christmas Day is 69.

In addition to the above, requests have been received from Oriya Garra groups in upwards of 15 other villages, "Come, instruct us that we may receive Christian baptism." Never have I known of such a situation at this station in the last 15 years time.

Whether I am in camp or at the home station, reports of the work of the Spirit and petitions for my services come in, so that we have now again listed the names of at least fifteen different villages from which word of an awakening has been received. Some of these need verification, and in many of them the strength of the enemy is not known.

One of the most encouraging features of all this is the way those who have been baptized since New Year have suffered, and yet remain firm. One man, a leader of his outcaste brethren in 20 different villages came through to victory in Christ, sealing his faith in baptism. At once he broke all marriage engagements of his little children and this alone cost him Rs. 60. Then he endured a bombardment of criticism, reviling, abuse, and lies. His kinsfolk besieged him and pled with him to return. Neighboring village headmen promised him Rs. 100 to return to caste. Another young man was convinced that in Christ alone was his eternal salvation. He cut all bridges and left all, and suffered intensely. Before baptism, with no pressure except of the Holy Spirit, he insisted on baptism, though his wife was then fleeing from him, taking the children with her. He then gave up the use of narcotics, and the beating of drums at Hindu marriage feasts. Another young man declared his intention to accept Christ. He was assaulted by his brothers. They threw a fire-brand onto the thatch-roof of his hut and he plucked it off. Then they beat him and gnashed on him with their teeth. Scars of the teeth and rods still remain. He stood firm, took baptism, and within three days, twenty-five others followed him in accepting Christ. These twenty-five did not include his persecuting brothers. He who sins is a servant of sin.

The above is with reference to the situation largely to the West of us. On the East the signs appear just as propitious. My best Indian coworker and I have carefully considered four key centers among the Lariya Garra folk, which have been worked during this term of service. Closely linked with these are groups in five other villages. These people we know personally, and some of them intimately. They have been fed God's Word more or less faithfully. It appears that God is now ready to do a tremendous work in their midst if the field were rightly worked. So that just as Jericho and Canaan fell before Israel, so too each of these nine large Lariya Garra groups if rightly worked will yield to the Lord Jesus, and perhaps 1000 men, women, and children would come into the church, probably before next Spring, and that there would soon be going here a movement of Pentacostal proportions.

The above is with reference to ingatherings. It is not all glorious progress. Troubles there are too. The Devil is awakened and as usual makes his assaults on the vulnerable points. Then too, our physical strength is badly used up. The storage battery of health is run down. Under God's grace only some time in the U. S. A. will recharge it. We are now finishing our eighth year of service for this term. It is time we get out of this country.

Will you who read this please pray for this entire situation. Are we really sincere in our desire to bring souls to God through Jesus Christ and baptism in His name? Shall this situation go in default? Will the Devil so disturb things that the Lord's work cannot go on? Some who read this may wish to make it a matter of prayer as they have their family devotions. Others may wish to make it a matter of persistent prayer for the next ten months until March, 1938. We would thank all such for becoming praying supporters of this work.

Your coworker, S. T. Moyer.

THE KING OF KINGS

Radio brought the CORONATION of the English King into our own sitting rooms. We heard spokesmen for the various countries of the Great British Commonwealth of Nations pay homage to their Royal Highnesses. Bermuda, Newfoundland, New Zealand, Burma Canada, India, South Africa and others adress their Crown from their own doorsteps. We listened in and were thrilled. For the first time in history all the world could hear a king address his subjects. And all the while we thought: Some day the KING OF KINGS will thus be acclaimed by His countless subjects. Some day all the world shall see and hear HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, THE MOST WORTHY KING OF HEAVEN. Will we be ready for His appearance? "And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other." "For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." "And I saw heaven opened, and behold a white horse; and he that sat upon him was called Faithful and True, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war . . .And he hath on his vesture and on his thigh a name written KING OF KINGS, AND LORD OF LORDS." "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little while. Blessed are are all they that put their trust in him." Mt. 24:30, 21:27: Rev. 19:11, 16: Psalm 2:12.—P. R. Schroeder, in "News Letter," Salem Menn. Church.

Schools and Education

ADVANTAGES OF THE SMALL COLLEGE

A. S. Rosenberger

The second advantage of the small college is that it gives its students greater opportunities for extra-curricular activities. It is in these activities that the student finds his greatest opportunity to develop his personality and to build character. Here he lives his life in a social relationship with the other students on the campus. Contacts and conflicts are intermingled just as they are in life after college. While studies should come first, the importance of these activities can not be minimized.

Here is a picture. In a school of 200 a student would have, speaking solely from the standpoint of numbers, one chance out of 4 to become a member of a vesper choir of 50 and one chance out of 20 to become a member of a debate team that numbered 10. In an institution of 1000 students he would have one chance in 20 to become a member of the vesper choir or one chance in 100 to became a member of the debate squad. In a school of 2000 he would have one chance in 40 to make the vesper choir or one chance in 200 to make the debate team.

The work that has been done in the extra-curricular activities of our Mennonite institutions needs no apology. Our schools have well held their own with many of the larger schools. The greater opportunity to become members of these organizations is one advantage of choosing the small college.

PROPHECY

C. H. Suckau

Prophecy is looked upon by some honest and sincere Christians with caution, shyness and even prejudice. This is not without cause or reason. We briefly point out three causes for objecting to the study of prophecy.

Over-zealous men have erred in prophetic interpretations and wrong applications. Church history gives us instances where havoc has been wrought in the church because of fanaticism along this line. Therefore some Christians object to all study of prophecy, because some have erred in its study.

Another cause for objecting to this study of prophecy is the undue emphasis placed on details. Most prophetic students agree in the interpretation of the major predictions of prophecy. Few agree absolutely on minor details. Stressing interpretations of details has caused and is causing confusion in the minds of many, and has prejudiced some against the study of prophetic truth. They thus rob themselves of the peculiar blessing which is promised in Rev. 1:3, to those who heed the words of prophecy.

The most serious harm to the study of prophecy is perhaps done through the setting of dates for the return of our Lord Jesus Christ. This gives much reason for objection, because it is in direct defiance to the declaration of Christ's own words when He said: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man." (Mt. 24:36). In this connection let us note, however, that Christ does not withhold from His own the knowledge of the NEARNESS of His coming again. Indeed He points to certain signs in the same passage (Mt. 24:33) which are to indicate the nearness of His return.

We acknowledge and deplore errors in the interpretation of prophecy, the undue emphasis on details, and the setting of dates. But even though any or all of these errors exist, is it not the height of folly to excuse on this ground the woeful neglect of the study of prophecy in our churches and schools? Every pastor should recognize the importance of, and the demand for the study of prophecy in the church, and should be prepared to give sound prophetic teaching to his people regarding the "THINGS WHICH MUST SHORTLY COME TO PASS." How important today is the injunction: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye (we) do well that ye (we) take heed!" (2 Pet. 1:19).

PRAYER FOR OUR COUNTRY*

O God of freedom, under Thy guiding hand our pilgrim fathers crossed the sea. We rejoice that in Thy spirit they founded upon this continent a nation dedicated to liberty, equality, and the brotherhood of man. We thank Thee for their spirit of adventure in a new world, and for their daring experiment in the untried ways of government by the people.

Give to us, we pray, the spirit of the fathers as we, too, face a new world. Give us their faith and courage to launch out upon political and economic experiment, adopting such new forms as may be necessary to fulfill the purpose for which our country came to birth.

Deliver us, O God, not alone from ancient tyranny of kings, but from new autocracies in modern life. Help us rather to extend the frontiers of freedom for the common man, fulfilling in economic and industrial democracy our sacred traditions of government by the people. Lead us into the cooperative commonwealth of God.

May we also go forward in the spirit of divine adventure into the new world of internationl relations. Through co-operative institutions of world conference, court, and league, may we play our part in establishing justice among the nations, assure peace and tranquility in all the world, and promote the general welfare of mankind.

Help each one of us, O God, as Christian citizens to vote as we pray, judging parties and programs not with regard to our own interests, but by the measure of their purpose to advance the interests of those less privileged than ourselves.

God of our fathers, be with us yet. Help us in the continued genius of our nation ever to pioneer in the cause of human freedom and the brotherhood of man.

Walking on the Water

S. P. Preheim

In the fall of 1916, I was asked by the Evangelization Committee of the Northern District Conference of Mennonites to visit its churches wherever I was wanted and invited. So I wrote to the different churches and received quite a few invitations for conducting series of meetings. Among the invitations was one from the Mennonite church of Avon, S. Dak., of which Rev. D. A. Schultz is pastor.

At the time we lived at Wisner, Neb. We had agreed and arranged for my coming to Avon on Saturday the 16th of December. I could have gone by way of Sioux City, Iowa, and crossed the Missouri river on the bridge, but as I saved time by taking the other route, I decided to travel by way of Norfolk and Niobrara and cross the Missouri river on the ferry boat, at Running Water.

As we had had a nice fall that year, it had not occured to me that perhaps the river might be frozen and the boat by this time might have ceased its work for the winter.

I left Wisner at about 12:30 Saturday noon. We had to change cars at Norfolk, and if the branch road train had been on time, we would have left Norfolk about 2:00 o'clock. But the train did not leave before 3:30 and then we had to make about 60 or 70 miles before we got to Niobrara. Well, I was somewhat worrynig all the way and wondering if we would not be late for the Ferry boat which crosses the river for the last time at about six o'clock. When we reached Niobrara the evening twilight was commencing to fade away in the west.

The first thing I did after stepping out of the train was to inquire about crossing the river. The cab driver who was there told me straight out, there was no use trying to cross the Missouri river that evening, as the ferry boat did not run any more and the ice was not strong enough for auto's to cross. He told me, the ice was from 3-4 inches thick at places and that a few men with teams and wagons had crossed the river in the morning, but as it had thawed considerably that day, it was very dangerous to go across now. I told him that I had an engagement in South Dakota for Sunday morning and there was a man waiting for me on the other side of the river and that I simply had to get across.

We finally decided, that he would take me to the river which was about three and a half miles away, and I would try to cross it on foot. On our way to the river I was thinking of the seriousnes of crossing the river at night. The Missouri river is a very treacherous stream, as the water is flowing swiftly in places and washing and eating away the ice in front of it. Many people have lost their lives by trying to cross it, when apparently there was no danger.

When we reached the river I took off my suit-case, placed it beside his auto and told him very emphatically a few times that he should not leave, until I had investigated the conditions. I had decided to go and see, whether I could see the tracks on the road made by the rigs which had crossed that morning, and, if so, I would attempt to walk across, but in case I could not follow the trail I would go back with him to Niobrara. When once on the ice, I immediately realized that it was useless for me to try it, for I could absolutely see nothing before me. The night was seemingly at its darkest. The ice under my feet looked black and I turned around to go back to the auto which was supposed to be waiting for me about fifty steps from the bank. I was astonished when I started back to see no lights, as I was only a few moments away. I hunted and called for my chaffeur, but he did not answer. And after a few minutes' hunting, I stumbled over my suit case. Then I realized that my man had actually left me. This shameful deed provoked me, for it meant walking back three and a half miles with a suit case and a heavy overcoat to carry.

Now came the crucial test. I had not dreamed that day what God had intended to teach me, and that he meant to give me the best chance to prove Him and His ability to help in very dangerous circumstances. As I stood there and accused that man in my mind, the thought came to me, that I was a real hypocrite. I had that afternoon chosen my text for the Sunday morning sermon and it was Mark 9:23, "All things are possible to him that believeth."

Satan told me, not to tempt God and not to risk my life. He told me to go back and stay over night in Niobrara, for I have a wife and five children who can not spare me. The Holy Spirit told me to take Christ at his Word, for it cannot fail! If Peter walked on the waves, I can walk on the ice. After a few moments of arguing, in my soul, I perspired so, that the sweat drops trickled down my cheeks. I said, Lord, I will go across the river. I have served Thee for almost 20 years. I have testified to thy wonderful power to help, and now, if Thou canst not help me, then let me go down under the ice and disappear forever.

I committed myself and my family to Him and started out. I could see nothing but a few lights of the village of Running Water ahead of me. After walking a while, I came to a stream of water. I heard its rumbling from quite a distance. I got down upon my knees and crawled to the stream. The stream was several inches deep and, of course, as far as I could feel with my fingers, without getting my clothes wet, there was still ice under it. But the thought came to me now, that this was not faith, and that I was not fully trusting God. I got upon my feet and cried, Lord forgive! I will not investigate again. I came to the second stream which was still louder and noisier in its course, but I never stopped. I came to the bank on the other side of the half-mile wide river and, after walking a little distance, I saw an automobile and a man just cranking it. I ran a little distance, spoke up and found out that it was our dear Brother Tob. A. Schultz, a brother to the pastor of the Friedensberg church. He said he was just making ready to go home which was about 15 miles away, for he had given up all hope for my coming, as he had waited there for hours and could not see or hear a thing of me.

I went with him and, of course, preached the next morning on my chosen text. After a week of very cold weather, one day 20 degrees Fahrenheit below Zero, this same brother took me back again to Running Water and Niobrara. Since it was daytime, and, after a week of cold weather, we were able to drive across the ice, and when we came to the bank on the north side of the river and I looked across towards Niobrara, from whence I came across a week before, I said to him, do you see that large open place? This must have surely been right in my path, and God must have put ice under my feet a week ago, when I crossed the stream. I returned home after having learned one of the greatest lessons in my life. God proved again to me, that He is able to help to the uttermost. He who trusteth in Him, shall not be ashamed. We give all glory to Him.

Sermon Sketch

NOTE ON JOHN 2:13-17

This portion of Scripture has sometimes been cited to prove that Jesus on occasion had recourse to the use of violent coercion to accomplish His end. The argument usually is that He recognized here a situation to which His usual method of gentleness and non-resistance was not equal. And since He used force, as some assert, the conclusion is that there are times and circumstances when His followers may have recourse to such means. War-minded persons have cited the passage in attempts to prove that Christians may even take part in war and bloodshed.

The argument for the use of violence here turns principally on two points. A careful examination and translation of the passage does not support the militarists' argument on either point, but rather disproves it.

The first point is the use of the whip or "scourge." As to the use of this we are told that He drove them all out. The question is, Who was intended by the pronoun "them"; did it include the people? In the text of the original it is clear that the writer adds the next following phrase as a closer definition of this pronoun, when he wrote: "He drove them all out of the temple, both the sheep and the cattle." The reasonable interpretation is that He actually used the rope whip, if at all, on the animals only.

The second point involved is the use of the apparently strong verb ekballein in the original to describe the expulsion from the temple precincts of animals and persons. The verb is a compound, and might mean literally "to throw out, to cast out, to expel." In studying this verb as it is found to be used in other passages of the Gospels, one observes that it is rarely or never used in its literal sense or with any suggestion of violence. Thus we find it used of the Spirit sending Jesus into the wilderness for His temptation (Mark 1:12); of God sending out workers into His vineyard (Matt. 9:38); of a man taking money from his purse (Luke 10:35); of a shepherd sending sheep out of the fold (Jno. 10:4), and of a householder bringing forth things out of his storeroom (Matt. 12:35).

Therefore it is only natural to think that in the account of the expulsion from the temple this word does not mean any more than an authoritative dismissal. The scene as we might picture it to ourselves was something like this: Jesus found this mercenary traffic in the temple court and His feeling of reverence for God's house was outraged. By the compelling authority of His words and tone of voice He overawed the guilty ones, whose consciences condemned them besides, and they withdrew in disorder. It was an instance of the voice of Divine authority triumphing where violence would have been futile. Violence could only have provoked retaliation and been overpowered by superior numbers. Hence the passage taken as a whole is an argument against the use of violence, rather than for it.—Gospel Herald.

JOSEPH'S KINDNESS TO HIS KINDRED

Genesis 45:16 to 50:26 Printed 46:1-7; 46:28-30; 50:24-26.

Introduction

The last important crisis of Jacob's carrer now comes to him. He could, at first, not believe the report that Joseph is still alive (45:26), but on seeing the wagons and provisions sent from Egypt, he is convinced (45:27, 28). Now he must decide whether he shall migrate to Egypt or not. Canaan is the "land of promise," yet the existing famine made it seem reasonable to go where there was food to be had.

God's Gracious Revelation vs. 2-4

Israel, and all of his, start on the long journey with probably some misgivings. The prospect of seeing again his long-lost son overjoyed him, yet he felt he should consult God. No place could be more suitable than Beer-sheba, where both Abraham and Isaac had built altars. He offered sacrifices unto God there. There are many occasions in the home when prayer is especially needed.

In the "visions of the night," God spake to him and removed all doubt from his mind (vs. 3, 4). God assured him that He approved of his going into Egypt, assured him of His presence, of prosperity there and of the certain return to Canaan, the promised land. God wanted Jacob to know that he would not be beyond His loving care and companionship in his journey. His love and care is always with His trusting children, so why should we fear.

Journey to Goshen, vs. 5-7, 28

Assured by God Himself, Israel headed the large caravan that moved into Egypt. Sixty-six males are mentioned in chapter 46 and probably as many women, besides children and servants, also the flocks and herds (v. 6). God had a great purpose in this migration to Egypt. Possibly He purposed in this way, to build up the faith of Israel's family in Himself. The Egyptians had many gods, but they also believed in One Great and Almighty God. They believed in immortality and the resurrection of the body.

Judah was sent on ahead to Joseph (v. 28) to secure the needed instructions for settling in Goshen, the region selected by Joseph for their abode. This was well adapted for grazing their flocks and here they would be separated from the native Egyptians who despised shepherds (46:34).

A Joyful Reunion vs. 29, 30

Joseph lost no time in hastening to Goshen to meet his aged father. Although he had risen to highest honors and power, he was happy to acknowledge his humble kinsmen, revere his father. The reunion was a most sacred hour for father and son. Joseph's loyalty and devotion to his father and family is sure evidence of his nobility of soul. Jacob was permitted to spend seventeen years in happy companionship with his son. Joseph is truly a type of Christ in sustaining his loved ones in the midst of dangers.

Faith in Old Age. vs. 24-26

Joseph in old age felt that Egypt was not the permanent home of his people. God will surely bring them into the promised land (vs. 24, 25) and they shall carry his remains with them. God had done much in the past and he believed, He would do greater things in the coming days. Joseph kept the faith.

Nuggets of Truth

Israel took his religion along into Egypt and used it.

Joseph left an example of integrity, brotherly kindness, forgiveness and faith in God, to all generations.

If undertakings are to be successful, they require divine blessing.

A son's true success makes up to the father for all care and cost of upbringing.

The family is supremely the place of both opportunity and necessity to think of others.

Joseph's kindliness and tears broke hardness with powerful blows that healed rather than hurt.

God's workers go hence, but His work goes on. 50:24.

REPORT OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BETHEL DEACONESSS HOME AND HOSPITAL

May 11, 1937, at Newton, Kansas

Following the opening devotion, Rev. J. N. Smucker of the Bethel College church spoke appropriately on the text, "For God has not given us the spirit of fear; but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind." As individuals radiate influences, the speaker said, so also institutions of this nature are a force for good. Fear is the greatest danger in the world. Therefore the power of heart and soul, which comes from God, must unite with his love in order to counteract fear. Love and power must go hand in hand. Love without power is sentimental; while power without love is dangerous. And lastly, a "sound mind" is given for discipline. "Self-discipline" brings us that mind "which was also in Christ Jesus."

Upon this Rev. J. E. Entz, chairman of the Hospital Board, declared the meeting as officially opened, inviting any to take part in the discussions of the day. Following some preliminaries, the Board of Directors then gave their report.

On the whole the report evidenced successful administration of their trust in the past and a hopeful look into the future. The gift day had brought about $500.00 in cash. The heating plant had been completed. Various repairs in the kitchen, new floors, painting and insulations became necessary during the year. More than a thousand patients entered the Hospital and nearly again that many treatments were administered to others. Of this number only a relatively small number were Mennonites.

The Home for the Aged reported 28 in the home at this time. About one-half of these pay by the month, while the others have made arrangements for the rest of their life time. The extreme heat last summer made the insulation of the third story necessary.

The financial reports showed that a debt of $50,000 still needs to be liquidated.

The result of the election for Board of Directors was: Rev. J. E. Entz, Rev. G. N. Harms, and F. N. Funk, with H. J. Andres as advisory member for the Home of the Aged.

At the afternoon session Rev A. J. Dyck presented a paper on the possibilities of establishing a Home for the Feebleminded, Nervous, Epileptic patients. Discussion showed our need of bringing such an institution into being. However, the debts burdening our College and Hospitals caused hesitancy. But our responsibility toward such unfortunates made action seem imperative.

Dr. E. G. Kaufman next presented plans for possible future closer cooperation between Bethel Hospital and Bethel College. He reported that an interchange of help between the two institutions, whereby the Hospital furnishes the College a doctor, a nurse, and a matron, and the sisters can continue their education at the school had been quite successful. The institution of a deaconess course, their opportunity to serve as pastor's assistants and to enter further into the educational field, were suggestions which need time and planning to perfect.

The meeting was interspersed with special music by the Emmaus Ladies' Chorus and the Eden Male Chorus.

The following motions were passed:

1. Resolved that our Board of Directors create a committee to cooperate with the committee of the Minister's Conference to make preliminary investigation concerning the establishment of an institution for feeble-minded and nervously sick in cooperation with other Mennonite bodies.
2. Resolved to encourage our Board of directors in line with Dr. Kaufman's address and we wish them the Lord's blessing.
3. Resolved that the leaders of the churches encourage the members of our churches to become members of the Bethel Hospital Society.
4. Resolved that the members of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society join the sisters in hearty appreciation for the work so kindly and ably rendered both in the Home for the Aged and in the Hospital.

In a series of final resolutions the meeting gave thanks to God for his continued mercies, to those who served with papers, addresses or music, to the First Mennonite Church, and to the Ladies' Auxiliary for their contributions. Sympathy was also extended to Rev. Entz, the chairman, in view of his recent loss.

A NEW KING was recently crowned in England, and on this ocacsion much was said about the need of loyalty of the five hundred million Britishers to their new sovereign. How about our loyalty to our King who has provided for the eternal happiness of all the peoples of the earth? Shouldn't we vouch new and more active allegiance to Him, the King of Kings? Shouldn't we enthrone him anew as the King of our hearts and make more room for him?

CORRESPONDENCE

First Mennonite Church, Berne, Ind.

In harmony with the springing up of new life in nature all about us this time of year, it is a joy to report also of new life in the spiritual realm. A goodly number of our young people have taken on new life in their acceptance of the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. These were baptized and taken in as members of the church on Sunday, May 23. Some adults were also received as members upon confession of their faith in the Lord Jesus, and some by letter from churches where they were formerly members. We are not striving after numbers, but each soul that unites with the church brings just that much additional witnessing of the Saviour's love and His power to save. O that every member would realize the responsibility of walking blameless before the world and living holy lives to the glory of God!

Last week it was again our blessed privilege of having with us, Dr. Lewis Sperry Chafer, President of Dallas Theological Seminary, Dallas, Texas. He brought two messages daily, and we praise God for his ministry among us. We feel that he is one of God's choice men today in unfolding the deep and hidden things of God's precious Word to men. We are not surprised that pastors and members of other churchess availed themselves of the opportunity of coming to hear him, even from distances. We were happy to have with us one evening some members of St. John's Church, Pandora, Ohio, among them the pastor, Rev. D. J. Unruh, who was on the platform to lead in prayer before Dr. Chafer spoke. One of our members, Miss Dorothy Lehman, had the honor of being married the evening of May 21st, by Dr. Chafer, to Rev. Andrew Lozier, one of Dr. Chafer's Seminary graduates this year. These two young people are candidates for the Africa mision field, where they expect to labor in the near future.

Next week the Summer Bible School, of which Rev. C. H. Suckau is the Superintendent, again opens in our community. This is to be conducted for five weeks. Again we would mention the importance of this kind of work in these days, when it is so necessary for our youth to be firmly grounded and taught in the things of God, having to face all that lies in their path, that they may be prepared and fortified against whatever may be lurking ahead. We rejoice that parents consider it worthwhile to send their children and are willing to make the sacrifice. They will be amply rewarded.—Martha Gilliom, Correspondent.

East Swamp Church, Quakertown, Pa.

On Mother's Day an impressive service was held here. The Sunday School presented each mother with a white carnation. The Primary department under the direction of Miss Dorothy Dietz and Mrs. Wallace Markley gave each of their mothers a small bunch of sweet peas. Miss Lucy Awckland sang a solo, "Wonderful Mother of Mine." Forty-three mothers were present in the school. Rev. W. S. Gottshall used as his topic for the church service, "Mother of All," Gen. 3:20.

On Sunday, Mar 30, Infant Consecration was held, at which time Florence Marjorie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Bleam, was consecrated. June, a month of brides, may be looked forward to at East Swamp. We also noticed at the Annual C. E. Convention held at Allentown on May 29, quite a few weddings had been held since the last convention in the various churches of the district.—The twenty-sixth anniversary of the society will be held July 11, at 7:30 p.m. Mr. Horace Awckland, the president, will be the leader.—Wm. W. Cope, Corr.

Harleysville, Pa., May 25, 1937

The Eastern District Conference of the Juniors was held at the Zion Mennonite Church in Souderton on May 25, 1937, with Mrs. Clarence Kooker, President, in the chair. The program consisted of devotions, prayer, solo, piano solo, playlet, instrumental numbers and choruses.

The speakers for the afternoon were three missionaries, one from India, one from Arizona, and a return missionary from China. Their talks were very interesting to the children, because of the stories that grew out of their experience in the mission work.

The banner went to Perkasie for having one hundred percent present. The picture was presented to West Swamp for having the largest number present. The following societies were present; Lansdale, Souderton, Perkasie, West Swamp, East Swamp, Bally, Allentown, Deep Run, Saucon and Schwenksville.

The meeting closed with having three conferences for the children and also a social.

A PROGRAM OF C. E. STANDARDS

Following this introduction we present what we consider one of the finest things which has ever been done for Mennonite Christian Endeavor Societies. It is a program of standards, a set of objectives, of aims which the various C. E. Societies should seek to attain.

It was prepared, as you will notice, as a special project of the Young People's Committee of the General Conference. Mr. John E. Fretz was chairman of the special committee which had this in charge, and we submit that this is a much-needed piece of work, and one which should be must appreciated. There are twenty points on which you can guage the effectiveness of your society. On how many of them does your society "measure up"?

While each of these items seems to be quite modest in its demands, yet any soicety will have a hard time measuring up to even a majority of them, we venture to say. Why? Simply because we are all given so much to talking about our Christianity, instead of DOING something about it. "Not those that SAY Yea, Yea, but those that DO the will of my Father" are the blessed ones.

We suggest that not only societies as such, but that each individual may well sit down and spend some time on this set of standards, and critically inspect his own life, and set down, point for point, where he meets these minimum standards and where he does not. Such quiet self-appraisals cannot but help to make each one of us more effective.

It seems to us not only that, but there is material in this sheet for at least four good programs, on the general theme, "Our C. E. Aims and Objectives." One Sunday you could make a fine program of point I. Worship; later, another program on point II. Instruction, etc. Modern psychology points very clearly in the direction of expecting little achievement until aims and objectives are clearly defined and felt. To have a set of objectives on the way somewhere—well, you remember the motto, don't you: "It's not the motto on the wall, but the motto which hangs in my heart, that counts." It is only when the entire group begins to feel, definitely, the significance, the urgency, and worth-whileness of these objectives that results can be looked for in the life of the society.

THOUGHTS ON RECREATION

Young Peoples' Topic for June 27, 1937

Meditation:

M., June 21. Aiming at Mastery. I Cor. 9:24, 27
T., June 22. Physical development. I Tim. 4:8
W., June 23. Recreation on Sunday. Acts 16:13-15
T., June 24. Jesus' rest and recreation. Mark 6:30-32
F. June 25. Learning self-control. Prov. 16:32
S., June 26. Jesus' know-the-Bible game. Luke 2:42-52
Sun., June 27. Topic: Recreation That Develops Character. Col. 1:18b; I Cor. 10:31.

Program Suggestions:

"Some of the greatest men in history have not restricted themselves to one hobby. . . . . They have learned that all knowledge is related. You never can tell when the thing you are doing for the sheer joy of it will help you in your daily work."

1. Astronomy is the oldest of all sciences . . . and the most thrilling of adventures. Discuss the fascinating mythology connected with the sun, moon, and stars as coming to us from the Greeks, Egyptians and Lapps. Do these myths vary from one country to another?

2. Let some one who plays tennis or baseball or some other game tell the values that he finds in these games. He should prepare to tell how they help: (a) keep the body fit—a temple for the Holy Spirit to dwell in, (b) keep the mind alert—so God's speaking may be heard, (c) develop habits of honesty and fairness, (d) increase one's self-control.

3. Have roll call. Answer with one hobby or one you would like to have. Plan a meeting in not too distant future as a report program of advance made and enjoyment received from them.

4. Too few people have learned to get great enjoyment from good music. Let someone who appreciates music tell what kind of music develops character. How can a person who knows little about music learn to appreciate and get help from it?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

WHAT SHALL I READ?

Intermediate C. E. Topic, June 27, 1937

Daily Bible Readings

June 21. Jesus, the student. Luke 4:16-21
June 22. Reading to others. Neh. 8:1-8
June 23. A guide to our reading. Acts 17:22-28
June 24. Paul quotes a poet. Acts 17:22-28
June 25. A lost book found. 2 Kings 22-28
June 26. A blessing to readers. Rev. 1:3
June 27. Topic—What books shall I read this summer? I Tim. 4:13; II Tim. 4:6:18

Making Good Books Attractive

If you do not have access to a god public library, or even if you do, plan to have a library shelf in your society room for the summer months. Get 12 or 15 of the best books for Intermediate readers from friends, who are willing to loan for two months. Have these books on display at the meeting, and a short talk about each book by someone who has read it, just enough to arouse the interest in others to read it. A good way to handle the circulation would be to limit the use of a book to one week, with a small fine for keeping it longer. Prepare a sheet of paper giving the list of boks and as many spaces under the names of each book as there are Sundays in July and August. When a book is taken out, the reader puts his name in the space for the corresponding week. Post this sheet on the bulletin board or some other convenient place. Appoint one person as librarian to have charge of the books.

Purpose of the Meeting

The purpose of this meeting might be three-fold. It should arouse the interest of the members to do some reading during the summer months. It should give them standards by which to judge the value of books. It should direct their interest to some good books that are available.

Planning your Meeting

I. Worship Service. Plan your own, with suitable hymns and suggestions in the C. E. World Quarterly.
II. Discussion of the topic. Bible readings and questions
III. Brief book reviews
IV. Closing moments.
Read Prov. 1:1-9
Song, "Open My Eyes"
Benediction: Ps. 19:14

For the Leader

The topic takes for granted that I should read something this summer. Do I? If a man were travelling on a train and kept his shade down all day, never looking at the passing scenery, we would think him foolish. Yet so many people go through life with good books all around them, but never think of looking through these windows of their souls. Give some of the reasons why we should read.

I should read, but what? I can go out on the mountainside to gather flowers in the spring and come home with an armful in a hurry. But I may be disappointed. Unless I have picked carefully, some may even be poisonous ones among them. So with books. It is better to bring one well chosen than a stack of worthless ones. Speak of the purpose of this meeting.

Some Discussion Questions

1. Why do people read?
2. How can you interest someone who does not like to read, in reading good books?
3. What questions would you ask in deciding whether certain books were worth reading?
4. How much time should we spend reading the Bible this summer? How can it be made more interesting and helpful?

The Other Dress

It was house cleaning time. Sue's mother was ever so busy. When Sue came home from school she hardly knew where things were and where they were not. It was very difficult for her to keep from bumping into things or upsetting something. Sue was a bit awkward, anyway, and not very careful. This noon she had fallen right over a dish of water her mother was using to wash the windows. It made an awful mess. It happened just after she had put on her very best dress which was of a beautiful silk. Her mother did not really want her to wear it today, but because she was so tired, she had finally given her consent. Sue was to recite at the parent-teacher's meeting this afternoon. The other girls wanted to dress up too. They had planned it so. And now? She could not wear the dress so. It would have to be sent to the cleaner. Sue's mother was very sad. She didn't mind so much about the dress. It was her daughter that troubled her. Sue had another dress. This dress also had spots. It needed to be cleaned. This is the story of THE OTHER DRESS:

It was almost a year now since Sue had given her heart to Jesus and when anyone gives his heart to Jesus, something very wonderful happens. It is like changing an old ugly dress for a beautiful new one. We come to Jesus with our many sins which hang about us like filthy rags. It is awful to have old, filthy, smelling rags about us, but that is how our life is without Jesus. But when we come to Him, He removes these all and gives us a beautiful dress of righteousness. He makes our heart clean and spotless.

Now Sue had this dress. Jesus had made her heart clean and she loved Jesus, but Sue was a little careless with this dress, too. So often she spotted it. Only yesterday Sue had told her mother a fib. Of course, it made a spot on this dress. Every sin makes a spot in the heart. Her mother saw the spot right away. That is what troubled her. Sue seemed to have forgotten about it for she had not asked for forgiveness.

It was bedtime now. Sue had just said her prayers when she felt a hand on her shoulder. She looked up and saw her mother who led her to the big chair where they both had room.

"Sue dear, I sent your green dress to the cleaner."

"What is it, mother, are you sad?" Sue finally said.

"Yes, dear. I was wondering about your beautiful dress which Jesus gave to you. Does your heart have spots, Sue? Does it need cleaning, too?

Then Sue remembered the fib. She had forgotten to ask for forgiveness. That, too, she remembered. She began to cry.

"Sue," her mother said gently, "let us take this dress to the cleaner, too. Jesus is the Cleaner for your heart. Let us bring the spots to Him."

Sue and her mother both knelt down to pray. How wonderful it was to take one's heart to Jesus; to feel that the spots were all washed away. Sue was very happy when she kissed her mother good night and her mother was happy, too, as she softly closed the door of the room.

YOUNG MENNONITES IN AUTO CRASH

About two years ago, Orin and Peter Rutschman, Norman Dirks, members of the Swiss Mennonite Church, near Whitewater, Kansas, and John Eitzen, a Californian, all former students of the Los Angeles Bible Institute, were making a tour east as a Gospel team and singing quartet. In one of their programs they were heard by Robert G. Le Tournean, wealthy manufacturer of road machinery, at Peoria, Ill., and they made such a favorable impression on him that he offered them good positions in his plant. They continued their evangelistic efforts by jury programs in churches, colleges, and meetings as often as it was expedient, their employer and his wife often accompanying them on their trips. That was the case on Decoration Day, when the six, in Mr. Tourneau's high powered Buick, were on their way to give a program in Tennessee. Driving along at a high rate of speed, they suddenly met a car with three negroes, coming at high speed, and in such a way that a crash was unavoidable. Orin Rutchman who was at the wheel was crushed to death instantly; Peter, his brother, seated behind him, died a few hours later; Norman Dirks and the Tourneaus were badly, though not fatally, injured, while John Eitzen miraculously escaped unhurt. All three negroes were killed. Engaged in doing work for the Lord as they were, the Rutschman brothers were no doubt prepared to meet their God. But their untimely death makes it hard for those left behind. Orin, thirty, was married a year ago, and leaves his young widow. Peter, twenty-five was to be married June the fifth, the day after their funeral, which was held from the Emmaus Church near Whitewater, Friday, June 4, in charge of Rev. Theo. Roth, their uncle, assisted by other ministers. The Rutschman brothers were sons of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Rutschman and Norman Dirks a son of Rev. Jacob Dirks. The bereaved brides and families have our heartfelt sympathy.

RESOLUTIONS BY THE EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE

passed at its 139th Session, at Souderton, Pa., April 29 to May 2

1. Resolved, that we thank our Heavenly Father for sparing us from misfortune and for blessing us with health and strength, so as to be permitted to attend another conference.

2. Resolved, that we thank the Souderton Congregation for their wonderful hospitality and especially thank the ladies for their excellent care of our bodily needs.

3. Resolved, that we thank our Heavenly Father for the unity of hearts and minds of this group of Christian people, that we are able to have a conference where we can talk and plan in a united effort to carry out the work of God. May we take this united spirit of cooperation with us to our individual churches.

4. Resolved, that we as a Conference, cooperate with the suggestion made by our president, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, at the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, to call our country to prayer on Sunday, July 4.

5. Resolved, that we, the Eastern District Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, again express our opposition to the legalized liquor traffic, to all attempts to legalize gambling in any form, that we cooperate with the Pennsylvania Council of Churches in their efforts against these evils, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the secretary of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches for forwarding to the proper officials in Harrisburg.

6. Since we are aware of the social instability in the world today, the spirit of unrest, the growing disregard for Christian Standards, the breakdown of the Christian Sabbath, and the growing indifference of men and women to the Church, be it resolved, that we as delegates to this conference dedicate ourselves to strive to bring before the members of our individual churches the importance of Church attendance, of following the teachings of Jesus, and urge that the conference sponsor a Loyalty Program in the individual churches during the coming year.

7. Since the Sunday School Quarterly published this year by General Conference has been well received, and since the Mennonite Book Concern is able to supply all our Book and Literature needs, be it resolved, that the pastors urge their Sunday Schools to use the quarterlies prepared by the General Conference and also urge their members to avail themselves of all the facilities of the Mennonite Book Concern.

8. Since we are aware of the spirit of unrest in the world today, the state of uncertainty, the heritage which we possess as Mennonites, be it resolved, that we acquaint ourselves of present conditions in the world, and that we resolve to teach our young people the principles of Christ on peace, and that we stress the individual responsibilities we have to our God in the event of war.

9. In order to promote a closer feeling of cooperation between the churches in the Eastern and those in the Western section of our Conference, be it resolved, that the President of Conference or a minister of his designation visit each of the western churches at least twice during the current conference year.

MIDDLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE SESSION, August 12 to 15, 1937, at the First Mennonite Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio

« « JOTTINGS » »

—FIRST CHURCH, PHILADELPHIA.—Rev. J. J. Plenert, pastor, is another one of those considerate souls who sends us his weekly church bulletin, which we appreciate as we do all others so kindly sent us. The imprint of the stately church building on the front page, beckons one as the place where much good has been accomplished for the Lord by the venerable N. B. Grubb, nestor among General Conference ministers, who so efficiently served that congregation something like fifty years. Rev. Plenert, a worthy successor of his, characteristically calls the church, "THE FRIENDLY CHURCH THAT HELPS." He and the members of his flock must be a very busy company, for there are announcements of a Mothers and Daughters' banquet, a Fathers and Sons' banquet, a program where the Senior C. E. will play children; a play by the Dramatic Players Guild, sponsored by the Seekers of Truth Class; Sixty-ninth Anniversary of the Sunday School, and what not! Another item of interest is that on Sunday, May 23, it was sixty-five years, that the Schwenksville Church elected Rev. N. B. Grubb as assistant pastor of Rev. Moses Gottshall.

—THE BERNE (INDIANA) WITNESS reports that the churches of that town are as usually holding their Summer Bible School under the supervision of Rev. C. H. Suckau, with an enrollment of 319, 150 boys and 169 girls, and 12 teachers. The classes range from Kindergarten up to and nicluding the ninth grade. How splendid! What a blessing to a truly Christian community. Berne never does things by halves.

— The editor had a very delightful visit with Freeman Junior College and the good people of that community during Commencement days there. In an early issue of this paper he expects to say somethings about that valuable little institution, its splended work, and the blessing accruing from it.

— Rev. C. H. van der Smissen, veteran editor of several of our General Conference publications, now living at the Bethel Home for the Aged, Newton, Kansas, is about ready to make an extensive trip east, to visit his children in Indiana, and his many friends in that state and other eastern states.

— Rev and Mrs. T. H. Unruh of Bluffton, Ohio, who had come west to see their son Earl graduatee from Bethel College, had a busy time while here. For, in addition to calling on some of their many friends, they celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in the Hutchinson Mennonite Church, on Monday, May 31, amidst a goodly circle of relatives and some friends. After musical renditions by their two gifted children, Earl and Mildred, Rev. P. H. Unruh, brother of the groom, opened the service. He was followed with brief addresses by Rev. J. H. Epp of Hillsboro, and P. H. Richert of Goessel, Kansas, and a response by Rev. H. T. Unruh. The program was further spiced with vocal renditions by Miss Martha Penner and the Gaeddert Quartet, composed of brothers of Mrs. Unruh. The festivity was held in Hutchinson largely because Rev. Unruh formerly served the church there and Mrs. Jacob Unruh, Mrs. Unruh's mother, resides in that city.

— The P. J. Wiens family, missionaries on furlough, are now at home at 323 East Fourth Street, Newton, Kansas, for the time of their sojourn in America. Daughters Mieka, Martha and Frieda are attending summer school at Bethel College.

— The Mennonite Song Festival of Kansas, held on Sunday, May 30, at Lindley Hall, Newton, Kansas, instead of "the Bowl" on the College campus, because of the wet weather, was attended by a large crowd and the choruses were generally well rendered. Best of them all, however, were the German Choral numbers, in some of which the audience were invited to join. Lindley Hall seats 3,000 people and it was crowded. Singing like this is, to a considerable extent, the result of the work of the music department of Bethel College, where the leaders and many of their singers received their training.

— Rev. M. Horsch asks us to notify our readers that he has moved from 1022 Market St. to 706 Bell Street, Beatrice, Nebraska, and that he finds moving to be a very disagreeable piece of work.

— A CALL TO PRAYER has been issued for the World Conference on Church, Community, and State, to be held at Oxford, England in July. This gathering of Christians from all parts of the world in a critical hour of human history is going to try to find God's will and way for the work of the Christian Church in this time. And all earnest Christians are asked to pray for the Conference that it may show readiness to wait on God, the spirit of truth, humility and charity, and for an outpouring of the power of the Holy Spirit into the delegates, and on all those who love Christ as their Lord and Savior.

— A new "Exchange," THE CHRISTIAN LEADER," a monthly magazine, issued by the Menn. Brethern church of N. A., now comes regularly to the editor's desk. It is a thirty-two page publication, 6x9 format, printed on good paper, with an artistic title page and has offerings under the following headings: Editorials, Devotional—Doctrinal, The Prophetic Corner, Sunday School Lesson, Young Peoples' Topics, Field Notes, What Readers Say, Education, The Children's Corner, Home and Fireside.

— PEACE HEROES.—Constanly growing is the movement sponsored by the Peace Memorial Society (Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, O.) to devote Memorial Day to the heroes of peace. "Miners, railroaders, builders, electricians, mechanics, fireman, policemen, explorers, physicians, nurses, mothers, and others upon whose risks and sufferings life depends form an army larger than any fighting force. It is an army serving without intermission and knowing no armistice, an army that endures both pain and privation. It numbers its losses of life by tens of thousands every year, and its other casualties by the hundreds of thousands . . . It is the army of our real national defence—defence against hunger, cold, sickness, exposure, disorder, exhaustion, extinction. Ultimately perhaps, it is the truest defence against foreign foes."—World Events.

— A BIBLE EVANGELISTIC CRUSADE, with headquarters at 1501 W. Marquete Road, Chicago, is in the making. Its main officers are: David L. Forsythe, Pres.; John McNeill, Vice Pres.; Wm. G. Stu- Executive-Secretary; Glen A. Leaman, Treas. By using Bible students, ministers and laymen who can devote part of their time to evangelistic field work, it is hoped that when once started the movement will take on volume until, slowly but surely, the whole country can be evangelized and brought nearer to Christ. Every serious minded Christian is going to have an opportunity to join the movement. The following groups of workers are contemplated: 1. Acting members, including pastors, evangelists, missionaries, and other full time Christian workers. They should pay a fee of not less than $5.00 to help the organization. 2. Sustaining members, made up of laymen who should also contribute a minimum of $5.00 annually. 3. Volunteer workers, people not engaged in full time Christian service. 4. Student volunteers. 5. Intercessory members. — This looks promising, and the work deserves the support of our churches, and its individual members, with gifs and prayers, at least. Our ministers should write to headquarters to get literature, so that they may properly inform our constituency.

The great end of all human industry is the attainment of happiness.—Hume.

CHILDREN AND THE BIBLE

It is an indisputable fact that, generally speaking, young America knows little of the Bible. That is not surprising with children and youths that grow up in non-Christian homes, but it is rather strange that so many children that come from Christian homes are quite ignorant of the Book of books. May that not largely be the fault of the parents? There is a religious instinct or urge planted in every human soul. But it must be awakened and made to grow, just as through sunshine and moisture the seed put in the soil is made to germinate and develop into a plant. It must be exercised as every other power of man needs to be exercised, if it is not to become dormant or to deteriorate. Of course parents cannot make their children love a book in which they themselves are not vitally interested or which they neglect to use. But if the parents really live the Christ-life and find their spiritual nourishment, their comfort and inspiration in the good Book, they can and should be able to make it the dearest and sweetest book of them all to their children.

One of the most valuable things in the home is an illustrated Bible, for visual instruction leaves indelible impressions on the child's mind. Goethe relates that as a small boy he liked nothing so much as leafing through the large folio family-Bible, and that through the splendid copper engravings in that book, its stories and their meaning were deeply impressed upon his memory. Then he continues, "I for my part loved the Bible dearly and valued it highly, for to it almost entirely I owe my spiritual education." And it was further through listening to the Bible stories so charmingly related to him and his sister by their gifted mother that he learned to art of story telling of which he became the master. Yes, parents, especially mothers, can make the Bible the dearest and sweetest book to their children. But they can't do that by compelling them to read so many chapters each day, for such practice is apt to cause the youthful minds to dislike the Book. They will gently and lovingly show them the beauty of the wondrous narratives and incidents, from the story of Adam and Eve to the story of Bethlehem and Calvary, and on through the accounts of the Apostles. They will assign them a share in the family worship by letting them read the scripture lesson, and in other ways help make the Book and its truths a part of their lives.

The Sabbath

The Sabbath dawns, fair and cool. The ordinary sounds of life seem hushed, a peaceful quiet pervades the atmosphere, yet never have the birds sung more sweetly.

The family awakens in a home made neat and orderly for the Lord's Day, the household cares and tasks minimized by careful preparation. The father's voice is heard in morning devotions, in Scripture and in prayer. Then comes the sweet sound of the chiming of the church bells—the call to morning worship.

Father and mother and the children file into the family pew. Even the littlest child feels the reverent and worshipful spirit of the House of God as the service goes on to its close. Here in the quiet of this hour God seems very near and those who hunger for the Bread of Life are fed. Here the weak are helped, the troubled heart eased of its load and strength is gained for the duties and tasks of another week. Here the children learn of their Heavenly Father and His love and feel the impress of that which will go with them through life.

The afternoon is spent in quiet recreation and relaxation, in reading and in pleasant companionship, in doing those things which build up body, mind and soul, as God intended His Holy Day to do for mankind.

As daylight fades and the twilight deepens, there comes the hour of evening worship.

Once again the family worships God in His Sanctuary and comes home under the stars to peaceful rest, refreshed by the slowing of the tempo of life and the simple pleasures of the day, and blest of God in the loving, reverent and obedient observance of His Holy Day. Here in the home on such a Sabbath as this, all that is high and holy, all that is helpful and ennobling is made an impressionable part of family life. May God lead America back to the proper observance of the Sabbath Day!—Reformed Church Advocate.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. Richert

Marion, S. D., May 25, 1937

Dear Editor and Readers: Greetings in the Saviour's Name.

After a beautiful farewell service for which the Chinese Christians had spent no little time and energy, and of which we felt unworthy, we left our station April ninth, traveling on cart and ricksha the first day's trip overland. After a few more days by train, we finally arrived in Shanghai, April twelfth. While I went to look after the heavy baggage, my wife stayed to watch the hand baggage and the children. While waiting there, she was relieved of her hand-bag in which she had her wrist-watch and fountain-pen. Such is one's introduction to a westernized city.

We stayed at the Missionary Home in Shanghai and on the eighteenth we went on board ship and after midnight we departed from the land we have learned to know and love dearly.

Our boat stopped at Kobe and Yokohama in Japan, but in both places it rained so we did not see much of Japan. After we left Japan, the sea was a little rough for several days, especially when we crossed what is known as the "Devil's Hole," where the ocean is seven and one-half miles deep. Many were seasick and did not come out for meals. We also were a little affected the first day but after that we all were well and good sailors.

We also stopped at Honolulu which is the most beautiful place I have ever seen, but as it rained almost the whole time we were there we did not see as much of it as we had hoped. From there to Victoria, Canada, it was very calm. We left the "Empress of Japan" and took a small steamer for Seattle, arriving there late in the afternoon of May fourth. There were missionaries from Borneo, India, South and North China, Philipines and Japan on the boat and we had a most blessed time together.

We spent one day in Seattle and there took a bus for Monroe, Wash. where we visited the Mennonite Church of which Rev. M. M. Lehman is pastor and whom we knew from Chicago days. We enjoyed our visit there very much and from there we took a bus to Cedar Falls, where we boarded the train for Dolton, S. D. arriving there May eighth past midnight. It was good to see parents and relatives again. On May thirteenth we left by train for Chicago to visit my wife's mother and sisters. From here we are planning to go to the Northern District Conference in Montana which is to begin June 5. We plan to go by car, passing through South Dakota on our way to Montana.

We hope you will continue to pray for the few missionaries left on the field. Rev. and Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker have charge of the work we left behind, besides the work they had before. They are also to have charge of Rev. and Mrs. Brown's work after they leave on furlough in June. This is a heavy burden for them and we must stand back of them in prayer. Also pray much for the Chinese Evangelists and Bible women that they may be faithful and that God may be glorified in all. Also pray for us that we may be a blessing while we are on furlough.

Yours in Christ Jesus,

August and Martha Ewert

Our Different Vocations

Storrs was a student at Andover Theological Seminary with young Gordon Hall. On a certain Saturday, towards the end of their course, Hall was preparing to go to Braintree to preach upon the following Sabbath, having some expectation that the invitation so to do would grow into a call. In the act of splitting some wood, however, his hat fell from his head beneath the axe, and was cut in twain and ruined. The circumstances were such that to replace it was impossible just then; and Hall, compelled to vacate his engagement at Braintree, arranged with Storrs to go in his place.

Storrs went. His preaching pleased. He was invited to come again. And the result was that Hall was quite forgotten, a call was presently extended to Storrs, it was accepted, and he was in due time settled, remaining the minister of that parish until his dying day, a period of more than half a century.

Hall, disappointed, one might naturally suppose at this thwarting of his hopes, had his mind turned to the foreign mission field, and became Gordan Hall, the first missionary of the American Board, whose name is forever linked with the early enterprise of that eminent organization.

No one who has any belief in Divine providence will for a moment doubt that God stationed Storrs at Braintree and sent Hall to India; but does it not also seem as if He effected that arrangement by means of the accident to the hat? And this is the obvious lesson of the incident: that there is really no such thing as accident in this world; that "all things work together" in the execution of God's purpose, and "for good to them that love Him;" that the most trivial occurence should be contemplated in the light of the possibilities which may flow from it; and that our least concerns, as well as our greatest, are under the supervision and control of the heavenly Father.

The very hairs of your head are all numbered.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SMALL COLLEGE

No. 3

The third advantage of the smaller college to which we wish to call attention is that of greater opportunity for constructive oversight and discipline. In an institution of this type the faculty learn to know the members of the student body as individuals, and they know to a large degree what the attitudes and viewpoints of these students are.

In a larger institution with which the writer is acquainted, accurate records are kept on a personal score card, yet these must necessarily be rather mechanical, because the instructors who make these records come in contact with the student so infrequently. This institution is doing a fine piece of work in this field considering its disadvantages of dealing with such a large number of students.

In the smaller institution the faculty learn to know the student not only in the classroom but in discussion groups and outside activities. Knowing how the students feel, and think, and knowing their problems from the personal angle, there is greater opportunity to help these students and to exercise the type of supervision that is best adapted to their needs.

When this advantage is fully utilized from the Christian viewpoint, the smaller school is again in a unique position to make a large contribution to the life of its students.

Coronation Day

J. H. Janzen, Vancouver

Today's weather does not favor the celebration of the Coronation Day under open skies. It rains. I sit inside the house, at the radio, and let the events pass before my inner eye as they proceed in London, England. In spirit I am with the crowd in Westminster Abbey and peculiar feelings and thoughts are filling my heart.

We came from Russia with a peculiar disposition which is very hard to describe. We know what it means, when kings are dethroned and the mob takes over the reigns. Our hearts are also still heavily depressed, due to the tragedy of Khodynca at Moscow which cast deep shadows upon the coronation of the last Russian Czar, Nikolaus II. To some extent we are still under the impression of the Russian superstition or belief that the sun must shine when the Russian Czar holds his annual military review, and, as we are informed, at the last annual military review of the last Russian Czar the sun tore apart the heavy clouds which were overcasting the sky, and shone brightly upon the Czar and his troops. And still. . . .

We are witnesses of how the might of spirit overcame the might of the heritage of blood, and it was not always good spirits that were victorious. We have also seen spiritual nobility push aside inherited nobility, and still, today, we are under the very definite impression that something of great significance and importance is taking place.

A King is being crowned. It is our King.

When his older brother was honest enough to abdicate, yielding to the constraint of his heart, he emphasized in his farewell message the fact that his brother, the Duke of York, was leading a happy family life. To us the Duke of York was then known but little. Not for him but for the Prince of Wales the sentiment of the people had been raised and the latter became the favourite of his people. In him all hope of the people was rooted and everything seemed to indicate that this was justified altogether. And then. . . .

But there still was one who so far had taken tender care of the very foundation of the Empire—the family. It was like one time in the little town of Bethlehem, where the Prophet and the father with his grown sons were gathered at the sacrificial repast, while the smallest boy took care of the sheep, fulfilling the small duty of a small man. But he was called from his flock of sheep and anointed King of the people of God. Being anointed, he did not press for his kingship but waited until God called him to take over the reigns. He never endeavored to get rid of his predecessor in order to take the government from him. God's time was his time.

His Majesty King George VI also never has pressed forward to become a King, but he came hesitatingly when called. He is not a greedy one who makes haste to take over riches, or a proud one who can hardly wait till the time comes, when his glory shineth about him. He came, because he was called, to bow to the great commission to the heavy burden of responsibility that was to be placed upon him. We heard his message today, the address of a man who is slow of speech.

We know of another man who was slow of speech but eager in listening to the commands of the Lord, and powerful and conscious of his aim in his undertakings. There are no treasuries that could outweigh the slow, kind words of love and faithfulness of His Majesty Our Most Gracious King George VI, and one could hear and feel that he, before speaking, had listened attentively to the Voice that can be comprehended only by a tender, good heart.

God has, and we have, plenty of fast talkers, but we need men with faithful hearts who comprehend more than that which is merely human. God bless His Majesty, our King George VI, to reign over us in obedience to Him in Whose hands the heart of the King is as the water courses.

When King and Queen arrived at Westminster Abbey, the sun shone brightly upon them. There the precious but heavy Crown of England was placed on the King's head, and the King took the Oath of Allegiance to his people and to His God. Then the crowned King and Queen rode back to Buckingham Palace in a driving rain and appeared soon after on the balcony, to receive the greetings and cheers of their people. We are no wizards, but it seems to me there is some significance in all this.

Is it not as if God's pleasure smiled on them whom He had called to the crown, and they came? Is it not as if the reign of our precious King is to be like his ride through the driving rain, which is no pleasure in itself, but makes the soil bring forth the blessings which repose in it, for the benefit of the people? Is it not as if a grateful people stands at the end of the course to cheer its King who has proved a blessing to it?

When the festivities were being concluded with "God save the King", I joined in the singing my heart singing rather than my lips.

Our Mennonite People is not a people of conspicuous demonstrations, but I believe that many of us who had the privilege of participating one way or another, in the festivities, sang in a particular way from the bottom of their hearts: GOD SAVE OUR PRECIOUS KING!

"Whoever is king, is also a father of his country."

THE FULL ASSURANCE OF HOPE

When floating on life's troubled sea,
By storms and tempests driven;
Hope, with her radiant finger points
To brighter scenes in heaven.

She bids the storms of life to cease,
The troubled breast be calm;
And in the wounded heart she pours
Religion's healing balm.

Her hallowed influence cheers life's hours
Of sadness and of gloom;
She guides us through this vale of tears
To joys beyond the tomb.

And when our fleeting days are o'er
And life's last hour draws near,
With still unwearied wing she hastes
To wipe the falling tear.

She bids the anguished heart rejoice
Though earthly ties are riven
And still we hope to meet again
In yonder peaceful heaven.

LIGHT FROM ABOVE

The celebrated Mr. Hume once wrote an essay on the sufficiency of the light of Nature, and the no less celebrated Robertson wrote on the necessity of Revelation, and the insufficiency of the light of Nature. Hume came one evening to visit Robertson, and the evening was spent on this subject. The friends of both were present, and it is said that Robertson reasoned with unaccustomed clearness and power; whether Hume was convinced by his reasoning or not we cannot tell, but at any rate he did not acknowledge his convictions. Hume was very much of a gentleman, and as he rose to depart bowed politely to those in the room, while as he retired through the door, Robertson took the light to show him the way. Hume was still facing the door. "Oh, sir," said he to Robertson, "I find the light of Nature always sufficient;" and continued, "pray don't trouble yourself, sir," and so he bowed on. The street door was opened, and presently as he bowed along in the entry, he stumbled over something concealed, and pitched down the stairs into the street. Robertson ran after him with a light, and as he held it over him, whispered softly and cunningly, "You had better have a little light from above, friend Hume." And raising him up, he bade him good-night, and returned to his friends.

I Cor. 3:18. "Let no man deceive himself. If any man among you seemeth to be wise in this world, let him become a fool, that he may be wise."

THE ROSE

Mrs. P. R. Aeschliman

I know a flower garden,
With roses full in bloom;
They bring to people sunshine,
And also cheer in gloom.
It's pure as love in nature,
With divers names and kind,
Varieties in color,
Sweet fragrance there you find.

They are moistured with the dewdrops,
Descending in the night;
At dawn then comes the sunshine,
Behold a glorious sight.
The flowers wake from slumber,
And glitter with the dew,
They sparkle like a diamond,
Display their golden hue.

If all the flowers were blooming
And you could from them choose,
To pluck them had permission,
Would you the rose refuse?
If briers, thorns, and roses,
Your path of life compose,
Frown not upon the briers,
But smile upon the rose.

Compare it with a flower,
In paradise of old.
Of lilies in the desert,
A story has been told:
That Solomon in wisdom,
Arrayed in rainment fair,
A King in all his glory,
Could not with these compare.

Every rose is an autograph from the hand of the Almighty God in this world about us. He has inscribed His thoughts in these marvelous hieroglyphics which sense and science have been these many thousand years trying to understand.—Theo. Parker.

MESSAGES FROM GENESIS

Hebrews 11:1-22 Printed, 11:3-10, 17-22

Topic: Faith Tested and Triumphant

Introduction

Genesis is rightly called "The Book of Beginnings". For three months we have studied from its pages the beginning of creation, sin, God's redemptive purpose for mankind, His revelation of His real nature and of the national life of His chosen people. God is here beginning to train persons who had faith in Him, is laying the foundations of a family who could teach others the One God.

Our lesson from Hebrews is a brief review of one outstanding quality in the character of the chief men of the book, Genesis—their faith. This faith is so intimately connected with their obedience and loyalty to God. We will not obey God nor be loyal to Him, unless we believe that His word is dependable and that our obedience will be rewarded.

Faith is absolute and unwavering trust in the integrity of God's word. It counts the promises as sure to be fulfilled, no matter what the seeming impossibility. Faith believes in God's Word, rests in it and that alone. "Faith makes the future appear as present, and the unseen as though visible."

The writer's chief object in Hebrews 11 is to show how faith enables men to live noble and heroic lives and thus "gain a good report" (v39).

Faith Before Abraham

Verse 3 takes us to the very beginning of God's Word. God spoke, by the power of His word the worlds came into being. We know this by faith in His word. All true worshippers of God, from the beginning possessed faith in Him.

Abel believed God, brought an offering of shed blood, acceptable to God (Gen. 4:3-5). His faith gave value to the offering. Enoch by simple faith, vital and fruitful, lived in fellowship with God, "walked with God", was well-pleasing to Him. God took him to the heavenly world unto Himself without his seeing death (Gen. 5:21-24).

Noah is the chief example of obedient faith before the time of Abraham. He illustrates the saving power of a living faith in God's commands. In unquestioning obedience to His command, he built the ark and proclaimed to others his confidence in God's warnings (v7). God honored his faith in saving him and his household from perishing in the flood.

Faith of Abraham

In Abraham we have the great examplar of faith for all time. He completely lived "as seeing the invisible" (v27). His faith required entrusting himself to God's care in answer to the call to a distant land (v8), "not knowing whither he went." It involved sojourning as "a pilgrim and a stranger" in the land of promise (v9), and heir to God's promises. With faith's eye he saw the eternal city of God as a reality (v10).

In the supreme test of his faith and obedience (v17) he did not falter. He was ready to obey God's command to offer his only son, Isaac, as a burnt offering. Through this son the promised blessing was to come (v18, Gen. 22:1-3). What a miracle of faith. Abraham believed God was able to restore him to life to fulfill the promise (v19). We see here a foreshadowing of Him who "spared not His own Son," of the willing sacrifice in submission to the Father's will.

Faith after Abraham

Verses 20 to 22 tell of the faith of Isaac, Jacob and Joseph. Isaac's and Jacob's faith assured them that the promises made would be fulfilled in their descendants. Their dying benedictions were an expression of their faith. Joseph's faith assured him God would deliver his people. We need a like faith if we are to accomplish God's purpose concerning us.

Nuggets of Truth

Men who walk by faith and not by sight, acquire ruggedness and strength of character.

Faith in God leads to fellowship with Him; and fellowship is followed by revelation of God.

It takes both courage and faith to "step out on God's promises."

The greatest need of the world today is greater faith in Christ the Redeemer.

Sermon Sketch

MAKING EVANGELISM EFFECTIVE

Rev. Ralph E. Stewart, Chicago, Illinois

There are certain factors essential to the functioning of a perennially evangelistic church. Without these, such a church cannot be maintained.

The Pastor

He should be God's main artery in the church and community which he serves. "The Son of man is come to seek and to save," our Lord gives as the purpose for His coming. "And now I am no more in the world." He prayed in the prayer of intercession, "but these are in the world . . . I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world . . . Sanctify them through Thy truth. . . .As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world" (John 17). Read now Acts 1:1, 2, "The former treatise. . . .of all that Jesus began to do and teach, until the day in which he was taken up, after that he, through the Holy Ghost, had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen." How is the work continued? Have we a right to say the work Jesus came to do stopped with His ascension? How can this seeking, saving ministry be continued through pastors who have the passion for the lost?

Brethren, we need that passion that lead our Lord Jesus Christ to take a well curb for His pulpit and one lost sinning woman for His congregation, and tell her of the water of life that flows freely to everyone that is athirst. This passion will manifest itself in our study, prayers, preaching, pastoral visitation, personal work, plans, and entire church programs.

We have worked with pastors who were too careless even to make a constituency list in order to visualize to themselves and their church the evengelistic task for which God was holding them personally responsible. You may have a general idea, and your people a more hazy one, but not until they see those cards—each one naming a precious soul worth more than all the world—will they begin to be anxious and have a burden. Until pastor and people have a burden, nothing will be done. Make soul-winning the master note of your life.

Church Officers

The church officers were meant to be the pastor's spiritual cabinet in soul-winning. The qualifications of a deacon in Acts 6 demand that he be a soul-winner. The aim of every Bible School teacher should be to win pupils to life everlasting. The women's, the men's and young people's groups should have the evangelistic spirit, and seek the power of the Holy Ghost for soul-winning. The church leaders, if evangelistic, give the soul-saving tone and temper to the life of the church.

An Evangelistic Backing Among Our Members

In the homes of the people, in the prayer meetings, in all gatherings and circles there should burn the spiritual yearning for lost souls. Prayer groups and personal prayer lists are the life of an evangelistic church.

The music of the church should be turned to evangelism and spiritual results. The choir can create evangelistic atmosphere, or blight the chances to win men to Christ in the services. If my choir director, organist or paid singers were not Christian, I would either win them to Christ or go without their services. In my first pastorate we had the largest chorus choir in the county and never had a rehearsal without prayer. One Thanksgiving Sunday every member of the choir gave a personal testimony in the evening service to the saving and keeping power of the Lord Jesus Christ. They were as interested as I was in the results when I gave the invitation.

In this church the chairman of the board of deacons, the Sunday School superintendent, and the president of the women's missionary society were all soul-winners. My head usher was not only a Christian but a soul-winner, as were many under him. You say that is unusual. Perhaps, but what are you doing to develop your leaders? How long would a commercial house maintain efficiency if the department heads were not cooperating along the same lines?

Evangelistic Opportunities

Under the leadership of the pastor, personal work bands, fishermen's clubs, prayer groups and classes in "How to Win Men to Christ" will be organized. The membership will be led out in gospel missions in crowded centers or neglected quarters, tent meetings, street corner gospel services, parks, jails, hospitals—all these places will be utilized as opportunities to win men to the Saviour. Are we doing this?

A further suggestion. What organized work is being done along the line of Bible classes and personal evangelism with nurses in training in your city, police and fire stations, employees of hotels and other places where folks work through Sunday and do not have the opportunity of going to church?

This work should become a principle and passion in our lives, not just a program. Then evangelism will become a natural, normal, all year work of the pastor and his church. Realizing full well that there are "seasons of the soul," yet knowing also that "he that believeth not is condemned already," we hasten to organize the work of our church around the seeking and saving ministry of our Lord Jesus Christ. Then our churches will go farther than an evangelistic month, or period of even a year. We will major in evangelism.

Are we anxious to become fishers of men? Then the method, technique, and success will be easily worked out and gained. "He that is wise, winneth souls."—Moody Monthly

Experiences and Observations on a Trip To Arizona

J. B. Epp

Thirty-six years ago I was sent out there as a missionary to the Hopi Indians, who live in the north-eastern part of the state, seventy-five miles north of the Santa Fe R. R., out from Winslow. I was permitted to remain there for ten years, when on account of the high altitude, about 7000 feet, we were obliged to leave. In December of last year our youngest daughter went out there, to assist in the work, and I, having been planning for some time to visit "my people" once again, thought that this might be a suitable time.

On my stop-over in Oklahoma I read in the dailies about the blockaded roads in the mountains of New Mexico and Arizona. But, being on the way, I decided to go on. I was quite sure that the trains would not long be blockaded; but how get out from the railroad to the Reservation on the car or truck? Too, I knew that at this time of the year, January, there was very little traffic between the railroad and the Reservation; but the mailcarrier goes, if at all possible, so I went on.

The mail for our Mission is carried on a truck, from Holbrook, 120 miles, three times a week. I stepped off the train at Holbrook at four o'clock in the morning, on a mailday. The mailman was to leave at nine o'clock. It was cold, with some snow on the ground. To save expenses, I remained at the depot. The seats were partitioned off, so I could not lie down on them. Tired as I was, and seeing a number of Mexicans lying on the floor around the warm stove, I spread my old overcoat out on the floor and joined them. They snored very complacently. I did not join them in that, for fear that some of my baggage might wander off; but I rested.

After I had located my mailman, and eaten a little breakfast, we finally got started, shortly before dinner. Going higher and higher into the hills and mountains, the snow got deeper. A few times we were halted; but after putting on chains we made one hill after another, some 1000 feet high. My truckman had also loaded some freight and express for the government schools and agencies and for the trading posts along his route, so we stopped at every station, about eight, from ten to forty miles apart, delivering mail and unloading goods, but no place to get a warm lunch.

At seven o'clock, after dark, we finally reached the last post office on the route, Hotvilla, where our daughter is staying, with our missionary, Miss Shirmer, 7000 feet "in the air." The warm supper tasted good.

The mailman started homeward early the next morning, but more snow had fallen during the night and the wind was blowing, so he did not get very far on his way; he was snowbound for a number of days. This meant no mail for the people on this 120 mile route. Nearly all the roads were blockaded for days and weeks, even the national highway for a while. Parties had to be rescued with tractors and snowplows, and aeroplanes brought supplies to out of the way Indian camps.

For a time I feared that I might have to remain there longer than I had planned, and I wanted to visit around at other stations also. But all traffic stopped. There was Oraibi, 1000 feet lower, within a few miles. A Hopi was able to take me down there; but he could not get back. And when I was ready to go back to the railroad it was found that only the road from Oraibi to Winslow was open, because it runs north and south and follows a valley, no hills to cross, and down hill all the way. A missionary was willing to take me down. Was I not fortunate! The trains had been running regularly.

A few comparisons between conditions today and those of about thirty-five years ago may interest the readers. At the time when we pioneered there, there were practically no wagonroads at all, only pony trails, which were often obliterated by heavy sandstorms. We drove in covered wagons drawn by two or four ponies, at the rate of two to four miles per hour. Thus to make the trip of seventy-five miles to the railroad station required two to three days, if not delayed by the river or muddy roads. The round trip required a whole week, or longer. Today, on the graded highway, per auto, they reach town in one and a half hours, and unless they have much business in town, they can make the round trip in four hours. Then we had that treacherous river to ford, the Little Colorado, and a number of "washes", with quicksand. No bridge anywhere. Sometimes we waited at the river for days; once I camped there nearly a whole week. Today there are bridges everywhere, and no delay at all. Who built these bridges and these roads? The government and the state. A bridge across the river costs $100,000. Steel bridges they must be, all attempts to build wooden ones failed.

Oh, what experiences we have had at that "old" river! We seldom ventured into it without the help of an Indian. A great danger was the deep holes. These had to be thoroughly investigated before going in. Sometimes we had to go in ourselves, even when the ice was floating. But the worst of all was the quicksand. As long as one can keep moving, the danger is not so great; but woe, if one must stop! Sometimes the horses have to be cut loose and very hastily gotten out, and the load carried out. Many a wagon, and sometimes the horses too, have been swallowed up by this mysterious element—slow, but sure!

No camping places are needed today, not even a lunch place. In case of car trouble, there are other cars and trucks going all the time to help out. In our day we had certain places where we usually managed to camp, for meals or for the night, where there was some water, a little spring, and a hut or something. But we were never sure if we would reach these places; so we had to be prepared to camp anywhere in the open desert. Sometimes the poor ponies did not get a drop of water, after perhaps a hot day, and very little grass. We carried food with us for a week or two, always, and a little feed. Bedding, repairs, etc. made a small load for little ponies already. If we wanted to bring back with us any freight, we had to take four or even six ponies (borrowing the extra ones from the Indians). Large horses could not endure the desert hardships very well.

Especially hard were our trips in winter. Many a time we sought shelter behind a rock, covering up the ponies with warm quilts, and we either slept in the wagon, with much extra bedding, or some of us men dug ourselves into the sand, with a sheltering wall of sand on one side, and a fire on the other, if we could find enough dry roots and sticks of the small sagebrush. Some nights we did not sleep much, but walked around half of the time. If we got too cold while driving, we soon got warm trotting behind the wagon. I can still "feel it" in my limbs when I think about those trips. Compare with this their auto drives today.

But what about all that precious time spent on those long trips? We were busy every minute. We had to have an Indian with us anyway (as explained before); so we studied language, wrote Gospel Hymns, translated Bible stories, etc. The days were never too long.

There are not any more white people on these reservations today than there were then, but their communications with the outside world are so different. Nearly all of them, and some Indians, have radios; they have mail service every other day, and may soon have it daily; they have telephone connection between the stations and with the railroad towns.

When we wanted to send a telegram, we dispatched an Indian runner. He left early in the morning, made the run of seventy-five miles in about seven hours, delivered the telegram, awaited the answer, and returned in the evening or in the night. Today they sit at home dictating the message over phone to the telepragh officer at Winslow. Some difference?

When we wanted to visit our nearest missionary neighbors, we had to go by pony, over the donkey trail, eight miles, or by wagonroad twenty-two miles, around the Rocky Mesa, at the rate of two to four miles per hour. Now they run over there in the car—on "high"—over the same rocky Mesa and sandy plains, in about fifteen minutes, or they visit over the Mission phone, as long as they please, seated in the rocking chair. Some difference? The other missionary neighbors are twenty, thirty-five, and fifty miles away from Oraibi, in different directions. We did not visit each other very often.

But—all this does not say at all that actual mission work is any easier than it was then. It is even more difficult in some respects.

A Mennonite Youth Looks at Education

By Menno S. Harder
Westminister, California

Young folks have been the subject for so many varied discussions that they are becoming youth-conscious. These discussions are both good and bad. They are good because they have served to awaken in adult minds the importance and the problems of youth. They are bad for they tend to bewilder our youth.

WHO IS MENNO HARDER?

Someone asked us the other day, "Why do you always put in the little personal comments about the authors of your weekly feature articles?" We replied, "To make it personal; to make sure that you will read the man's article through the man's mind."

Every article means more, when we know the writer.

For instance, our visitor this week, Mr. Harder. .To have known him personally in the school room, to have worked under him, a high school principal, filled, both heart and mind, with those finer idealisms of education which make of a school somewhat more than a house of correction, and the classroom a bit of heaven; to have seen him as an administrator, who loved both his students and his community, little by little, bring the twain into a constructive and helpful understanding of each other; to have had the opportunity to breathe the atmosphere of his school and, therefore, to take new faith in the possibilities of education at its best—is to interpret the accompanying article with altogether different mind from what one could possibly have done otherwise.

Aye, for Mennonites to produce even a few like him, and for the late Professor D. E. Harder to have given the world a Menno is an inspiring thought.

The youth of today is living in a world that has rapidly become more complex in the last twenty years. These are days of turmoil, of swift-shifting standards in government, in economics, in religion, in family life. This is a time in which to remain serenely calm and to manifest an explicit faith in education. The basis for the solutions to the problems of the world rests on the shoulders of true education.

Too often youth has been lead to believe that education is the sesame to success. Teachers who are usually idealists are guilty of causing young people to think that they are about to enter a period of life in which the world is awaiting them with open arms. The cold realities of life will not verify such idealistic hopes.

Success in life comes as the result of some luck, clear thinking, and hard work. Education cannot provide the necessary luck but it tries to train the mind to think clearly and it tries to encourage a wholesome attitude toward hard work. When these three ingredients, luck, clear thinking, and hard work, function generously in the life of an individual his future is assured.

In the past young folks were urged to get an education in order that they might increase their earning power. Schools tabulated statistics that showed how incomes were in direct proportion to years of scholastic training. That schools accomplished this economic aim cannot be denied. Americans have been known all over the world as Shylocks. Youth was taught how to make money. As a result the profit motives invaded every activity of man. Instead of creating great musical compositions that would live through the ages musical talent produced dividend paying jazz. Instead of devoting their entire energies to serving mankind, the dignified professions became profit gathering occupations. So through the field of skilled and unskilled labor financial gain was the paramount issue.

The economic depression of the last few years has emphasized quite clearly that a nation devoted to building bank accounts is resting on shifting sand. In the wake of the great material development of the nation we find in abundance insecurity and want.

It is time for education to formulatee new aims. Youth must be urged to go to school, not to enhance their earning power but to become throughly socialized. The profit motive must be replaced by a service motive. Happiness, contentment, peace, and goodwill must head the list of true values. Whatever education will sow into the minds of youth that society will surely reap.

Attend a Mennonite Retreat somewhere this summer

VACATION EDITOR!

Beginning this week, the Young People's topics for the C. E. Program will be handled by Miss Minna D. Regier, of Whitewater, Kansas. Minna is one of these enthusiastic young people just brimming over with life. Life is good, and full of promise for her. She loves young people, and young people love her, and we believe that she wil bring to these pages a fine contribution and a fine spirit. Let us pray for her part of the work; and let her know how we like the work she is doing. She really has promised to do it only during June and July; but such things are catching; we may get her to do it in August also!

HOW A CHRISTIAN SHOWS HIS PATRIOTISM

Young People's Topic for July 4, 1937

Acts 5:17-29; Rom. 13:7

(Consecration Meeting)

Meditation

M. "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country" expresses feelings of true patriots. How could a Christian apply this?

T. "Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said
This is my own, my native land!"

W. "Land of my sires! What mortal hand
Can e'er untie the filial band
That knits me to thy rugged strand!"

T. To the underlying sentiment that makes men patriots—the conviction that life itself is of secondary importance to life of the nation—we would add: to the cause of God's kingdom

F. Teachers may help develop in the young one of the finest of all virtues—patriotism

S. What have you gained by your meditation of the preceding days this week?

"There is no finer quality of love for country than that which inspires men and women to be good citizens, such a patriotism makes them sacrifice leisure and pleasure and money and personal preferences to serve the state. It makes voting and intelligent study of the problems of the day a sacred duty."

Program Problems

1. Have various members compose and present definitions of patriotism.

2. May a Christion be patriotic in a country where "the state" is the highest entity? How? Why?

3. Can a citizen do his level best for a country without a deep love for her? Discuss.

4. Does true patriotism coincide with real Christian living?

5. Outline patriotism as commonly thought of. Outline a Christian's patriotism. Do you find contrast, or close correlation?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

WHAT HAVE YOU DONE?

Suggestions for June 27, 1937

During the summer months some of the space in this department will be devoted to telling what our Intermediate societies have been doing. Send in a report of some of the worthwhile things your society has done in the past year.

It is always interesting to read what other societies are doing. Often we say, "We could do that too, but we never thought of it before." Just a suggestion may revolutionize a dead society and make a living power of it for Christ.

We even enjoy reading about "ourselves", though we don't like to confess it. Write about your society and your members will read THE MENNONITE. Appoint someone at your next meeting to send in a report.

Five Rules for a Happy, Holy, Healthy Christian Life

1. Consecrate (set apart) your life for your Lord. Do this definitely. Tell Him you lay yourself, your all at His feet. You have been bought with a great price and belong to Him. Make it real.

2. Criticise yourself every night before retiring. After you have done this, sincerely and honestly, you will not have much time or heart for criticising others.

3. Confess your sins daily. Start the day with a clean record. "If we confess. . ., He is faithful to forgive." Don't flatter yourself that you have not sinned, for the sins of omission are just as great, and often greater, than the sins of commission.

4. Commit your ways unto the Lord. Practice the habit of following His leading every day. He knows the way. You do not. He cannot fail.

5. Be content with your lot. "Godliness, with contentment is great gain." It is not what you have, outside of Christ, but what you are that counts.

By an Endeavorer

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

WHATSOEVER THINGS ARE LOVELY

Suggestions for June 27, 1937

What we need is the Christ revealed by the Spirit through the Word of God. The present tendency in Christian education is not a direct teaching of the Scriptures. Lessons of morals through the medium of play are being substituted in the years when the child's heart is so plastic and so receptive for the rich truths of the Word of God. These truths are their inheritance. Who dares to rob them of it? This Word is to be the lamp to guide their feet through the pilgrimage on earth; it shall be the light to reveal to them their Savior. This tendency "away from the Bible" should drive us nearer to it; should lead us to a new consecration to teach its truths. to plant the seeds given to us so plentifully. These seeds, by the grace of God, become the foundation to a life abundant toward God and man.

"Holy Bible, book divine, Precious treasure, thou art mine."

To stimulate love for the Scriptures is the aim of these suggestions.

Opening service:

1. Song service with theme 'The Bible"
2. Scripture reading: Ps. 119:9-11, 18, 129, 130..
3. Sentence prayers
4. Sing in unison: Holy Bible, Book Divine

Three minute mission news and prayer for missions
Announcements

Study period

1. Poem: Thy Word is like a Garden. (You will find it in past issues)
2. How was the Bible written? Answered by a junior using II Tim. 3:16; II Peter 1:21
3. Why was the Bible written? Answered by three juniors: a. John 20:31; b. I John 5:13; c. II Tim. 3:16 and 17
4. A wonderful promise concerning the Bible. A junior using Matt. 24:35
5. Sing in unison: Wonderful Words of Life
6. The Beauty of God's Word. Perhaps you can find a guest speaker who can reveal the beauty of the scriptures. One who has found in it gems of art,—who has had to pause in the reading; to stand still in order to let the beauty of a scene sink deep into the heart. And then there is the beauty of words and phrases. Above all is the God, the Father, the Christ it reveals and the great plan of our redemption. No, we cannot live without it. The juniors cannot. They must love it. It must become theirs. Can you find someone that will make them see its riches?
7. Sing in unison: Break Thou the Bread of Life.
8. Closing prayer by leader

Junior Corner

"Carry your Bible with you,
Let all its blessings outflow;
It will supply you each moment,
Take it wherever you go.

Carry the word of pardon,
Sweeter each day it will grow;
Somewhere some heart will be waiting,
Take it wherever you go.

Carry the word of promise,
Sinners unpardoned may know
God's path from sin unto safety,
Take it wherever you go."

I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. 1:16.

AMERICAN YOUTH AND LIQUOR ADVERTISING

"In all the many youth surveys of individual magazines received at W.C.T.U. headquarters, nothing is so much in evidence," declares Miss Byrnes, "as the warm-hearted praise and sense of relief expressed by young men and women in all parts of the country after studying the contents of those magazines which refuse to do messenger service in soliciting business for the makers of beverage alcohol."

"I enjoyed this magazine, now exceeding the 3,000,000 mark in circulation, because everywhere I turned I found no advertisement on liquor," writes a frank Youth's Temperance Council reader of several weeks painstaking examination of every page of this 11x14 inch 150-page magazine.

And the general trend of interest and determination "to do something about it" is vigorously expressed by another member of the Youth's Temperance Council, participating in the survey, in these words: "I find the advertising problem facing us is a tremenduous one....I think the time has come for action."

Among the accomplishments of youth there is none preferable to a decent and agreeable behavior among men, a modest freedom of speech, an open elegant manner of address, a graceful and lovely deportment, a cheerful gravity and good humor, with a mind ever appearing serene under the ruffling accidents of human life.—Watts.

Intelligent Obedience

Laura Gray

"Jean, stop bouncing your ball!" The mother looked over her book as she spoke; the father frowned behind his newspaper. Their eight-year-old daughter stopped and glanced from one to the other. But no sooner had the parents become absorbed in their reading again, then, "Bounce, bounce," went the ball!

"I told you to stop playing here!" the mother said sharply.

"Well, it's raining outside!"

"Find something else to do."

Jean amused herself for a while with a book, and all promised well. However, that troublesome ball soon began to bounce once more. Sighing, the mother laid down her book; the father tossed his paper aside and went out. Jean had been allowed to spoil the evening for her parents—through lack of obedience.

"I can't understand why John lets people dominate him the way he does," said an influential woman speaking of her grown-up son. "He and his sister Susie seem to have no wills of their own. John lets that partner of his dictate all policies and decide every issue. Dear me! I have enough initiative and determination; why aren't my children stronger?"

"May it be that your will was law to such an extent, when the children were young, that there was little opportunity for them to develop initiative?" asked her friend, gently. "You always prided yourself upon getting implicit obedience. I used to wonder how you gained such complete control."

"I certainly did insist on obedience! When I gave instructions they were carried out, and no questions were asked. Mine were the best disciplined children in the community. I remember when John was a little fellow, I told him one day to sit on a stool in my room until I said he might go. I forgot about him, and went out. He was still sitting there three hours later! I believe if the house had caught fire he'd still have sat there. I've always felt sorry about that day, but it does show the boy knew how to obey."

"Yes, but you see he continues to obey now, while others command. He never developed initiative, he learned only to obey."

How to secure an obedience that does not lead to servility is an important consideration for every parent. We do need to render obedience, from the very day of birth, to such requirements as regular times for feeding, sleeping and exercise. But submission to customs held to be best by the race, consideration for other's rights, order and cleanliness, should be taught rather than commanded. Obedience to a parent's will, merely because it is his will, is unimportant, in fact, harmful.

As soon as a child is able to understand reasons—and this is very early—it is wise to encourage him to seek reasons for those forms of behavior that we desire. In that way obedience becomes intelligent. "Why must I go to bed so early?" "So that you may grow to be strong and capable and brave like the heroes." If the innocent pastime of ball-bouncing annoys others then that is the reason it must be stopped. The child should be encouraged also to challenge his own independent actions: "Why am I going to do this?" It is a really important habit.

Training to implicit, unquestioned obedience: "Why must I do this?" "Because I say so," is not satisfactory. The boy or girl brought up this way is usually easy to manage and often practices very pleasing behavior habits until the time comes for him to be his own master. Then it is discovered that he is unfit for the task. On the other hand, a child allowed to be disobedient to the principles that he is able to understand, is also in danger of an unsatisfactory adulthood. He is apt to live according to his own selfish desires, regardless of others. What we need is intelligent obedience; this can be developed. It is an attitude of mind that causes one to choose to do right because it is right and best.

PERSPECTIVE

Grace Noll Crowell

Looking back along the years
I can see the hand of God
Leading me down every road
That my feet have trod.

I can see the long steep hills
That I dreaded so to climb,
Now I know He went with me
Up them every time.

And I find He walked with me
When I thought I walked alone
Through those far-off, shadowed, dark
Valleys I have known.

So today why should I doubt,
And today why should I fear?
Sometime I shall look and see
Even now, God near.

I sought Thee at a distance, and did not know that Thou was near. I sought Thee abroad, and behold, Thou wast within me.—St. Augustine.

CORRESPONDENCE

Boyertown, Pennsylvania, June 6, 1937

Dead Editor and Readers:

Since my appointment as Correspondent for the Boyertown Church, I have had the desire to contribute more toward the "Mennonite" than just reports of the passing away of our beloved members and friends. Although our congregation is small, yet the spiritual depth of our people is beyond measure. Also, most of our members are advanced in years, or disabled, physically, so that, although the spirit is willing and anxious, yet the body is unable to go forward to the church.

For this reason, I would like to bring to your attention my desire to "bring flowers to the living". We have a dear Sister who will be 96 (ninety-six) years old, in September. Until 1933, she was able to attend Church Services, especially for Holy Communion. Since that last time in the Fall of 1933, she has been forced to remain at home; as she herself has expressed it, "If only my legs would carry me, I'd be so happy to come to Church." So she sits in her rocker, upstairs, in her room, in the home of her dear son, and her fine daughter-in-law ministers to her needs as tenderly as any one possibly could.

The dear Sister is so happy when we bring her communion, twice each year; also enjoys her Pastor's visits, at which time her mind shows a clearness and alertness, remarkable in one of her age. Her sight is good, and she loves to read. You can imagine what a great joy it would be to this dear soul if she would receive letters and greetings. from all parts of the country, from our faithful readers of the Mennonite. Few of her old friends are left, and her own folks are very busy with business and household duties, so her days are very lonely, and tiresome, as she sits alone in her room day after day.

Our readers need not wait until her next Birthday; for her age, and an increasing nerve disorder which makes eating and speaking so painful, makes one wonder whether her desire to be with her Lord, may be soon granted. She is ready to meet Him—face to face.

So let us give her "Flowers" while she is with us! Cheer her dear heart while you may! Gladden her days with words of comfort, and thoughts of cheer!

The name and address of the sister is: Mrs. Catharine Focht, 798 Charlotte St., Pottstown, Pa.

Dear Readers, do not delay,
Write to our dear friend while you may,
Fill her lonely days with joy and cheer,
Send her greetings, friends, from far and near.

Thank you, and may God bless you.

Yours in His Service,
Sara Kait, Correspondent

Editor's Note: We are very glad to publish this appeal and hope that many who read this will remember the aged sister with words of cheer and comfort, on cards or letters. Let's scatter flowers for the living. The dead can't appreciate them.

Mennonite Mission Church, Enid, Okla.

The past month has been an interesting one in our Mennonite Mission here in Enid. On May 22 our pastor, Rev. H. N. Harder, and a group of young men from the Mission went to Inola to the Oklahoma S. S. and C. E. Convention, where they rendered some musical numbers at the program on Sunday.

Our Mission has received fifty copies of the new song book, "Treasure Songs" compiled by the Education Committee of the Western District Conference, members of the Musical Staff of Bethel College and other friends of song. These books will furnish our group with continued inspiration and interest at our services.

A vacation Bible school is being conducted at our Mission by Rev. Harder with the assistance of Miss Lavina Boese. Already 28 children are attending the school, which will continue until June 18. On June 20 the children will take part in the annual Children's Day Program which will be held in the morning. At noon everyone will go to the city park for a picnic dinner.

Mrs. A. T. Mueller, Corr.

First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma

The fact that you have not read much about us lately in our church papers should not be construed to mean we had nothing to tell, but rather that we may have overemphasized the proverb, "Speech is silver but silence is golden."

Last Sunday, June 6, our Sunday school had a memorable day. We observed Children's Day with a well rendered program by the children, beginning at 10 o'clock. Then followed a children's consecration service for five little ones. In connection with the latter, four young girls sang, "Open the Door for the Children." It also being mission Sunday both children and adults had their separate collection. The monthly children's collection is being saved until Thanksgiving, at which time they are to go to the boy's school at Birra, India.

At noon everyone drove to a shady spot north of town on the Herman Lehman place, for a picnic dinner. The afternoon passed all too quickly, playing games. The weather was ideal and those present agreed the attendance was greater than for some years.

On Thursday previous to Children's Day the Ladies' Aid observed "gift day" with an all day meeting and united noon meal. The Aid is very busy quilting, having quite a bit of work on the waiting list. Just recently the ladies helped the girls' class in the selection and purchase of new silverware for the kitchen. Miss Emma Ringelman has kindly made and embroidered lovely flannel cases for each dozen pieces of silverware.

The young married and older unmarried folks of the S. S. have organized their class under the name "The Booster Class." Their teacher is Mrs. Emil Lehman. They have been quite active, having had their monthly social gatherings regularly at which they also discuss the needs of the church.

The Methodist, Baptist, Christian and Mennonite churches of Geary are making plans for union Sunday evening services during July and August.

The visit of Rev. H. A. Fast, our field secretary, in spring is still a pleasant memory. It was a real treat. We sincerely feel he is doing a big piece of work toward inspiring, informing and unifying our churches.

Harvest has already begun. A good yield generally is in prospect. After three lean years it is with grateful hearts that farmers gather in their grain.

With Greeting and well wishes
Mrs. P. E. Frantz, Correspondent

« « JOTTINGS » »

—A dear sister who doesn't want her name mentioned writes, "I doubt whether there is any other reader of THE MENNONITE who "eats" the paper as completely and as thoroughly as I do, for this reason: I am caring for one of our Mennonite ministers who is blind. For three years I have been doing all I can to help him (in the service of the Lord), and while he walks out-doors, every afternoon, I have found that reading aloud to him makes up to him for the inability to see the everyday things about us. So while we walk, I read aloud almost every moment of the hour which we spend out-doors during our afternoon walk. First I read the Jottings, then the Family Chronicle, then I turn to the very first page and read straight through to the end. These last two issues, May 25 and June 1, have been very inspiring to both of us. We certainly enjoy walking under the trees, while birds are singing as an accompaniment to my reading of the Mennonite."

—EDEN CHURCH, MOUNDRIDGE, KANSAS.—Sixty young people were baptized Sunday May 30. Prof. A. E. Kreider and Rev. C. J. Gering delivered the messages, in English and German respectively.—Rev. P. A. Wedel, former pastor of our church and at present pastor of The First Mennonite Church at Aberdeen, Idaho, is visiting his mother and other relatives here.—The Men's Chorus of our church drove to South Dakota and rendered a sacred program in the Mennonite church east of Freeman, S. D. They stopped at Clay Center, Nebraska, to broadcast, Sunday, May 23.—Mr. John D. Stucky passed away at the Halstead Hospital, Friday, May 28.

—NEW MIDDLE DISTRICT CONSTITUTION.—"In regard to matters of faith it (the Conference) requires of those congregations who would unite with it that they stand on a scriptural confession of faith, and that they positively adhere to the doctrines generally accepted by the Mennonites . . . . baptism on confession of faith, the abstaining from oaths, a Biblical non-resistance, the practice of scriptural church discipline, and the prohibition of membership in secret, oath-bound societies, since we consider their principles as contrary to the teachings of Christ and the apostles. Further we are committed to a way of life in which, though profession of faith is primary and fundamental, the expression of the same is inevitable. "Faith without work is is dead."

—Like the Amish Mennonites, the Mormons decline to receive relief at the hands of the government. Over a year ago they entered upon a campaign of self-support. They farmed, formed cooperative industries, sewed, quilted, canned, and what not. Now, after a year they report that they have spent over one million dollars in supporting 25,000 needy brethren that had been on government relief.

—Recently a London newspaper offered a prize for the best definition of the word "money." The following received the award: "Money is an article which may be used as a universal passport to everywhere except heaven, and as a universal provider of everything except happiness.—Herald of Holiness.

—PROTESTANTS IN THE WORLD.—The World's Sunday School Association's Headquarters in New York has just issued some interesting statistics relative to the Protestant churches and Sunday schools in the world. Here are a few of the figures:

Total population of the globe	2,042,107,992
Number of Protestant Christians in the world	231,486,840
No. of Protestant Sunday schools in the world	369,510
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in world	34,139,624
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in world	34,139,624*
No. of Protestant S. S. in N. America	175,411
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in N. Am.	20,607,046
No. of Protestant S. S. in Europe	105,915
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in Europe	8,636,809
No. of Protestant S. S. Pupils in Asia	1,778,908
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in Africa	1,587,939
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in Australia	884,972
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in S. Am.	287,558
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in Central America	78,662
No. of Protestant S. S. pupils in the West Indies and Mexico	277,680

* The number of pupils in the world has had an increase of 349,579 or 2.75 per cent in the last four years.

—The Old Order German Baptist Brethren, or Dunkards, have just had their 195th general meeting on the Adam Blocher farm, near Delphi, Indiana, with an attendance of 4000. It was in 1742 when this creedless, non-liturgical church was founded in Eastern Pennsylvania. At this meeting men greeted each other with "the holy kiss," as usual. As a proof that they are still practicing the simple life which we Mennonites of the General Conference are in danger of losing, they again voted to debar from the communion table church members who keep radios in their homes. Only quite recently the ban from the use of automobiles, telephones and lace curtains was lifted.

—Discrimination against Older Workers.—The Mass. Department of Labor, after a two-year study, reports a serious discrimination against workers of 45 years and over 310 establishments were found that had no men on their payrolls over 45 years of age and 1,283 had no women over 45.

—President Mary Woolley who is retiring from the presidency of Mount Holyoke College, a women's institution, which has been headed by women for nearly one hundred years, recently made the following statement concerning separate schools for women, "Educational ideas should not all be cast in one mold. We have not quite got away from our inferiority complex as women. A girl in a separate institution does gain a responsibility and independence which she often lacks in a college with men."

—Washington, D. C., was recently the scene of the Sixteenth Triannual Convention of the World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union. This organization had its inception in 1873, as follows: Dr. Dio Lewis of Boston had gone to the little town of Hillsboro, Ohio, to deliver an address on temperance. When the women of his audience left the church where he had spoken, they gathered in the street to pray and then marched two by two into every saloon in the town. Kneeling on the dust-covered floors, they asked that the saloons be closed for the good of their husbands and sons. Other women throughout Ohio followed the example. Within fifty days the movement had penetrated twenty-three states. Today the organization carries on its beneficient work in our states and many other countries. Prayer is still a vital part of the W. C. T. U.'s crusade against the use and trafic of liquor. The national section consists of 10,500 local unions, has a publicity department, a national weekly magazine, innumerable state magazines, radio programs, and a vast educational program to assist the five hundred members in their drives. Their pledge is: "God helping me, I solmenly promise to abstain from all distilled and fermented liquors." Dr. Ella A. Boole is the efficient president of the organization. The membership is about a million.

—Rev. J. E. Entz, pastor of the First Mennonite Church at Newton, Kansas, and Miss Anna Epp, for many years an efficient primary teacher in the Newton city schools, were married on the evening of June 10.

—Both Houses of the British Parliament daily open their sessions with Bible reading and prayer. In addition, for more than a century there have been private prayer meetings in the House of Commons as well as in the House of Lords for members who wish to attend. May it be that this is one reason why the British government apparently runs more smoothly than ours?

—A war between the "Holy Father" in Rome and Chancellor Hitler seems to be pending. The crucial question is: Shall the Reich or shall the Catholic Church educate Germany's 2,000,000 Catholic children? Hitler's campaign against immorality among the monks which resulted in the arrest of 915 priests, including some laymen, in the Berlin diocese, has brought the struggle to fever heat. It is very unfortunate for Germany to keep on fomenting opposition to her churches. If instead of trying to foist upon twenty-six religious organizations one common religious belief and instead of forcing upon the churches his leaders, the Nazis had allowed them to chose their own leaders, Germany would have a better reputation today.

—The Institute of International Relations now in progress at Bethel College, June 8-18, has a very good attendance, more than double that of last year. The popular evening lectures, especially, are listened to by large crowds. These Institutes aim to give the people a better understanding of the world problems and to point out possible solutions from the Christian point of view. An Englishman, a Chinaman, a Frenchman, a German Jew from New York, an American who has spent years in Latin America, and three other Americans constitute the staff of lecturers. A good many of the Mennonites of German extraction in Kansas had hoped that a real German from the fatherland, a Nazi, might be added to the staff. They would like to get a picture of Germany through one of her own sons and not merely through other Europeans.

THE BIGGEST BUSINESS IN LIFE

What is the biggest business in life? To this question different people would be likely to give innumerably different answers. May we venture some of them! A serious-minded mother would be apt to say: "To raise my children so that they may become useful men and women, is the biggest business in life"; the honest statesman: "To run the government in such a way that all the people of the land may have a chance to live fairly contented and happy lives"; Henry Ford: "To produce an automobile with all possible comforts, conveniences, and safety appliances, at a cost so low that the great majority of families with limited incomes might own and enjoy one"; the astronomer: "To contemplate the starry worlds and the wonders of the universe." These are all big things, but is any one of them the biggest? Might not the contemplation of the human mind be bigger still, as suggested by a wise man in these words, "There is nothing great in the world but man; and there is nothing great in man but mind?" In view of what the mind of man has already accomplished, and how much more it could do once the seven-billion unused nerve cells in the brain should become developed, this looks big indeed. But in reply to this the Psalmist says, "What is man that thou art mindful of him?"

Truly, any one of the enterprises mentioned is big enough. But there is one bigger than they all. It is the business of helping men to know God as He is revealed in Jesus Christ. It is helping them to a knowledge and use of the inexhaustible spiritual resources that have been provided by the Savior of man. It is getting them to realize the truth, that man cannot live by bread alone; that there is a well of water which may be opened in their souls that will spring up to eternal life; that there is a light that may be kindled in their hearts which will make all their days shine as bright noon-day. It is the business that promises the highest rewards. "He that winneth souls is wise, and they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever."

This is the biggest business, because it has God's indelible stamp of approval, because He sent his son into the world for this very purpose, and Jesus himself gave us, his followers, this great commission, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, etc." And in numerous ways Jesus has stressed this as the chief business of every Christian. To the person who would make the amassing of wealth his chief business, He says, "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee; then whose shall those things be, which thou hast provided?" Him who conceives his haven of happiness in this world to be a luxurious home, He gently warns, "The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of Man has not where He may lay his head." To those who dream of Utopias in this world, He suggests, "My kingdom is not in this world," get ready to enjoy that heavenly Utopia. To the individual who has so scrupulously tried to live a perfect life that he can say he has done everything that can be required of a good man, He gives the admonition, "Go, sell all that thou hast and give it to the poor."

To help others find Christ is the biggest business, because it produces the most valuable commodity. Honest men have come to judge the success of any enterprise by the products it turns out. The real import and value of an institution of learning, in its last analysis, does not consist in stately buildings and well equipped laboratories, nor even in the faculty, however good that may be, but in the quality of students it turns out, and in the contributions they make to life as it should be. The worthwhileness of a church cannot be judged by the majestic structure of its church edifice, nor by the splendid organizations in the church, nor by brilliant preaching, but in its capacity to make over human lives, to save men and women and even children from their erroneous ways. It is the church, the institution, that actually helps the lost in sin to find salvation in Christ; that helps the impure to become purer; the selfish to become more and more unselfish; the impatient, the impetuous to become patient, discreet; the proud, domineering to become meek, humble; the belligerent to become peaceful, sociable; the worldly-minded to become spiritually minded. It is such an institution, such a person that is endeavoring to do the biggest business in life.

Christian Celebration of Chinese New Year

"Do you think," said the captain of the ship which bore the first Protestant missionary to China, "that you will make an impression upon four hundred million Chinese?" "No sir," replied Robert Morrison, "But I BELIEVE GOD WILL."

Last week we realized anew that God's power is as great as ever when He moved seventy volunteer workers during the WEEK OF EVANGELISM to go out daily, some on foot, others on bicycles, to make known His saving power to the thousands within ten miles of Kai Chow who still do not recognize Jesus Christ as their Saviour. All over our field, in fact all over China, a big evangelistic campaign was going on during the first two weeks of the Chinese New Year. At that time the Chinese are having a vacation and so have time to listen as at no other time of the year.

Last Sunday when the reports of this campaign were given, one was impressed by the note of triumph, by the joy which radiated from the speakers. Everywhere the people had heard them gladly and had begged them to come back. In the tent the staff of young men, all of them students spending their vacation making His name known, were most enthusiastic. "We ate our meals in relays, because the people were so eager to listen. Great numbers brought their lunch and stayed all day in order to learn as much as possible," were some of the eager comments these young men made. A few less than ten thousand men, women and children had heard the gospel message during those two weeks in the tent.

On the 16th of the Chinese month (a special holiday) over 1000 men, women and children had entered the Kai Chow East Suburb church to listen to the gospel messages. Every half hour there was a change of speakers with still others leading the singing, and teaching the people short choruses.

To the foreign house came the women and children in such numbers (800 by actual count) that at times the crowd was hard to manage. They came not so much to hear the gospel as to see the house, but this opportunity was grasped, and every fifteen minutes a new speaker was presenting the old, old, story which is ever new while others were teaching short choruses. Even on the lawn groups had collected to listen to volunteers give forth the message. We tried to usher them out the side door in order to avoid heavy congestion at the front door, after they had listened for a half hour or more, but often to no avail, for Chinese always like to leave by the same door they enter. A tract was given to each person who came to the house.

And so God has and is still making an impression on the four hundred million Chinese. Pray for the 2,300,000 people in our Mennonite field.

ADVANTAGES OF THE SMALL COLLEGE

Fourth Article

Probably the most outstanding advantages of the small college is that of promoting the development of personal contacts between the faculty and the student body. Here faculty and students cannot only learn to know each other but also develop a spirit of friendship and understanding. If the small school falls down on this, and the faculty carries on its work in a strictly professional way, it will have missed its greatest opportunity.

There is no greater inspiration than that of personality upon personality, and no influence that a teacher can have in the classroom or out is comparable to what he may mean to some student in terms of personal friendship. Many instances could be related to show what this personal interest on the part of faculty members has done to keep students in school, to encourage them in their work, to inspire them to live nobly, and to help mold their religious attitudes in ways that are constructive and positive.

No small college need bemoan its size. It has opportunities no larger school can have. Some of these we have listed during the past few weeks. As Mennonites we need to recognize the value of the small, Christian colleges that we have and help them to meet the opportunities that are theirs to offer to our young people, our constituency, and the world at large.

WHAT NEXT?

Factory work tied up in seven states; 100,000 workmen idle; thousands anxious to go to work again; physical encounters resulting in bloodshed; Uncle Sam being appealed to for immediate help; strike pickets shooting at air-planes as they flew over the troubled scene to deliver food to loyal workers inside plants against which pickets were striking.

If the present era of strikes and strike violence, fomented by communistic influence, continues, it will only be a question of time before the strikers will take to the air in planes and drop bombs on workers in plants.

What next? The only answer that can be given is, the present trend absolutely must be halted. Carried on to the bitter end, it must inevitably lead to civil war.

And Thou Too, Brutus

Are we Mennonites, too, going to allow ourselves to be drawn into that bitter maelstrom of antagonism that is being carefully built up in our country for everything German? Are we whose ancestry, whose blood-ties are mostly German going to allow ourselves to receive as truth all the bad things concerning the "fatherland" that the largely Jewish controlled press agencies try to make us believe? A tendency in that direction appears to be evident. But might it not be well in this connection to heed the old German proverb, "Trau, schau, wem (be careful in whom you trust)?" To be sure, it must pain the heart of every true Christian to see the land of Luther, the great Reformer, the land of Franke and Zinsendorf, apostles of a deeply spiritualized Christian life, dominated from above by a spirit that does not augur well for Christian faith and Christian ideals.

Yet, in spite of it all, the Christian people of Germany are still free to worship God in church and elsewhere according to the desire of their hearts, and their ministers are free to preach the word of God without restraint. This one thing alone should help to make us tolerant toward the land. This is quite at variance with the situation in bolshevistic Russia, where the government resorts to every possible means to stamp out Christianity, by persecuting and murdering the followers of Christ in a manner so fiendish that Satan himself could not devise it more cruelly, as we know from the horrible experiences of thousands of our own brethern. And the American people don't seem to take note of this, much less get heated up over it.

Nazi-ism as it is generally viewed in this country may appear to have a tendency to enslave the German people, hence the fear of danger to our own country. But, would that our eyes might be opened to see the far greater and more imminent threat of communism! And haven't the farmers in our democratic America had a taste of enslavement, due to abnormal economic conditions that reduced them to a state of dependency, in which large numbers lost their property? Nazi-ism may be bad, but has democracy been an unqualified success? Anyway, we older folks seem to have made such a poor mess of it that we find it necessary to apologize to our young people and to charge them to do better. That being the case, we ought to be willing to give the German people enough time to try their experiment with the Nazi regime. Then, if it proves to be unsatisfactory, they will have enough intelligence and will power to get away from under it. Meanwhile, Adolf Hitler and his aides have brought their country out from under the heel of France and England, have freed it from the shackles of the Treaty of Versailles, have reduced unemployment to a minimum, and have restored to their countrymen the self-respect they had lost when vanquished in the war.

If we could see Germany and her people with our own eyes, note their actual living condition, their joy in work and leisure, we would all be agreeably surprised. Therefore we should not be too ready to lose faith in that country, nor be too ready to pronounce our anathema on its leaders who are, no doubt, just as sincere in their efforts to guide the destiny of their people as President Roosevelt is in guiding ours.

THE BREATH OF GOD

"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof" (John 3:8).

Thou Breath from still eternity,
Breathe o'er my spirit's barren land—
The pine-tree and the myrtle-tree
Shall spring amidst the desert sand;
And where thy living water flows,
Thy waste shall blossom as the rose.

O Spirit, Stream that by the Son
Is opened to us crystal pure,
Forth flowing from the heavenly throne
To waiting hearts and spirits poor,
Athirst and weary do I sink
Beside thy waters, there to drink.

My spirit turns to thee and clings,
All else forsaking, unto thee,
Forgetting all created things,
Remembering only "God in me."
O living Stream; O gracious rain,
None wait for thee, and wait in vain.

THE MENNONITES

It is difficult to arrive at an exact total of Mennonites in the different countries, but the following figures indicate where some of the larger groups are to be found: Holland, 70,000; Germany, 12,000, U. S. A., 200,000; Canada, 90,000; Russia, probably 50,000, and 20,000 in the mission field. The third world conference of Mennonites took place last year, as an outcome of which a central headquarters has been established at Karlsruene, Germany, for all international relief work, under the direction of Prof. B. H. Unruh, Karlsruhe-Rueppurr, Auerstr. 24. Disturbing reports encroaching upon the rights accorded to them regarding their schools and the possibility of removal to Paraguay is under consideration.—International Christian Press and Information Service, Geneva. Brief Report of Forty-fifth Session of the Northern District Conference

Madrid, Nebraska, June 11, 1937

Since the Conference days, June 5 to 8, at the Bethlehem Mennonite Church, Bloomfield, Montana, are past and the Forty-fifth Session of the Northern District Conference has passed into history, I shall attempt to give a brief report of the same. Even though the days just before the Conference were marked by a general rain over the northwest central plains, the Conference was well attended.

Sixty-six delegates, representing twenty-four out of the twenty-five churches of the Northern District, and a large number of guests were present. A spirit of unity, peace, and good will prevailed throughout the entire session.

Missionaries Rev. and Mrs. August Ewert from China, now on furlough, and Missionary Rev. Rudolf Petter were our conference speakers who served us with several very interesting, deeply grounded sermons, while Mrs. Petter, and Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Habegger from the Cheyenne Indian Mission field, at Lame Deer and Busby, Montana, were guests of honor. Two native Christian Indian workers, Milton Whiteman and Oliver Eaglefeather, were present, witnessing for Christ occasionally. In a testimony Mr. Whiteman said, "To be a full-fledged Indian you must have a hole punched in your ears in which you wear ear-rings, but to be a Christian you must be born again." Certain young men asked the other Indian what his name was. He replied, "Eaglefeathers." They then jokingly asked him where his feathers were and he replied, "I don't wear them anymore, I am a Christian." Have we laid off our feathers, the worldly things and customs, to be a true Christian?

A letter from Missionaries H. J. Brown was read in which they state that they expect to land in Vancouver June 29, and that they deeply regret that they could not be present at the Conference.

Greetings and a set of resolutions were received from the Eastern District Conference. They call special attention to resolution No. 4, in which they invite all to join them in their observance of July Fourth, as a day of prayer for our country. It was accepted by the Conference.

Very good recommendations were made by the Evangelization Committee and approved by the Conference. Especially was it emphasized that much more work could and should be done, since there were over $300 left in the treasury. The Committee on Education likewise gave a good report, with a number of recommendations which had the hearty support of the Conference.

Only fifteen of the twenty-five churches reported having a daily vacation Bible school. It was especially urged that other churches make greater efforts in regard to Bible schools. A brief report of Freeman Junior College was also given.

A short religious musical program was given Monday afternoon by the Freeman Junior College Choir, which nicely portrayed the Christian spirit and good will of the college.

The Conference also expressed their sympathy and support to the proposed plan of organization of a Mennonite Seminary, under consideration by the General Conference Board of Education.

The Coming of the Swiss Mennonites to Ohio

This article which originally appeared in "THE COLLEGE RECORD" of Bluffton College, on May, 1912, from the pen of Mrs. S. K. Mosiman, in German, and which seems to be appropriate to the centenary celebration of the Coming of these Mennonites, which is to be observed on the Fourth of July next, was kindly sent us by the writer and is here given in English.

"The first definite cause that led to our emigration, at the time of our parents, was the so-called "teure Zeit" (hard times) during the years 1815-18. There was then a real famine among our people. The old folks often relate how scarce the supply of food was, especially among the poorer class, who had no supplies laid up from more prosperous years. In place of bread they ate cakes made from bran. Herbs and roots were gathered and eaten, and this scarcity and undernourishment brought on much sickness.

"Then the first ones emigrated and settled in Wayne county, Ohio. In 1819 a second group followed. Its members landed in New York, forty-seven days after their departure, and they, too, wended their way into Wayne county: Schrags from Basel, Hans Burkholder, Lehmanns, Isaac Sommer, and others. These settled on land that now forms the center of the Sonnenberg congregation. Here they dwelled, lonely and far away from relatives and acquaintances, surrounded by a large wilderness, within which there lived only here and there an isolated backwoodsman, whose customs and language were strange to them. At the beginning life was difficult and cumbersome, but they soon discovered that their work brought them better returns than did the wild, barren mountains of Switzerland. In addition, they began to enjoy the pure air of American liberty and the inestimable blessings of freedom of conscience and of worship. Their favorable and grateful reports to relatives in the homeland soon brought more of them over. They all settled here in Ohio until 1938, when the settlement in Indiana, the center of which is now Berne, was started. It was ever the same story: After the long, troublesome journey had been ended, there began the toil of building the home, with almost unspeakable hardships.

"Many that had a little money bought land from American pioneers, on which there already was a hut and a piece of cleared land. Others, however, settled in the primeval forest. There stood the mighty oaks, beech- and chestnuts trees, the hickory- and sugar trees, that had to be felled with heavy strokes of the axe and removed, before the tilling of the soil could be started. First, however, came the erection of the blockhouse, at which the neighbors gladly assisted. Oxen were used to plow the land which, with the many tree-stumps in the way, was no small task. One can easily imagine that, in addition to much toilsome labor, many privations had to be endured. Especially depressing was the scarcity of clothing during the first years after the immigration. Those that had been brought along went to tatters at the rough, hard work, so that in the larger families conditions got to the point that they hardly knew how to cover their bodies.

"For the products which they raised there was no market, for within a distance of a hundred miles there was no commercial city. Wheat brought only twenty-five cents a bushel, while a yard of muslin cost fifty cents, and so everything else in proportion. Money was astonishingly scarce. But the settlers found ways out of the difficulties. They raised sheep and planted flax, and each housewife spun yarn from wool and linen, which then was woven into cloth by the father of the family, and soon they had self-made garments to wear. They wore wooden shoes at work and to church as well; but it wasn't long until shoes made of leather made their appearance. Boots were, for a long time, looked upon as offensive articles of luxury. Hats for both women and men were plaited from straw; for winter wear caps were knitted from white wool. Furniture and farm tools, also, were mostly self-made.

"On Sunday they assembled here and there in some settler's hut, where the word of God was preached in a simple way, by teachers or preachers. In due time houses of worship were erected. The opportunity to acquire knowledge in schools was limited at first. But in time provision was made for instruction in German reading and writing. Higher schooling was looked upon as unnecessary if not as dangerous world wisdom."

Eighty, almost hundred years have elapsed since the founding of the churches in Ohio and Indiana. And when one passes through the extensive, flourishing settlements, one looks in vain for traces of the early conditions. Stately houses and barns, whose owners enjoy all the conveniences of life, are seen on every hand.

Only seldom does one see one of the old-timers that can tell the tales of the hard beginnings and who has lent dignity to the privations once endured. May I not make mention here of a dear old mother who learned to read only in her later years but not to write! She took pleasure in contributing to our library fund, so that others might enjoy what had been denied her. They are remnants of a staunch, rugged race. These are the Mennonites, as we know them, not the carricatures, such as are found in some books that picture them in sadly distorted ways.

"I come daily in touch with girls of our denomination that might properly be matched with "Mollie" in the story of the "Fighting Doctor". I know parents who willingly make sacrifices in money or who readily deprive themselves of the help of their children, in order that they may acquire a better education than they themselves received. They fully realize the need of adequate preparation for a life of usefulness. And that is true not only among the Swiss congregations. From far and near visions of persons arise in my mind that command one's respect and veneration, and deserve to be remembered among the worthy ones.

May the present generation, as well as the coming one, be gratefully conscious of their heritage as Mennonites. May they devote themselves to their life work with the same staunchness, loyalty, and sacrifice that their immigrant forebears did!

GOD HEARS A PEOPLE'S CRY

Scripture Ex. 1:1-22; 2:23-25; Printed 1:6-14; 2:-23-25.

Introduction

The time of the patriarchs closes with the Hebrews settled comfortably in Egypt where they prospered and greatly increased in numbers. A long period of bondage followed and then the era of Moses, the law-giver and emancipator. The main purpose of the quarter's lessons is to study this Hebrew history so that we see God working in human events, leading and guiding nations. These lessons about the making of the Hebrew nation should help us to see how God is teaching us to choose the path leading to higher goals of righteousness.

Our lesson brings us to an entirely new stage in Israel's history. The Hyksos or Shepherds kings, so favorable to Israel, have been replaced by a dynasty of Egyptian Pharaohs who were very unfriendly and grievously oppresed, virtually enslaved, the Hebrew people.

Israel in School of Prosperity vs. 6, 7

Verses 6 and 7 cover a long period of time. The intended temporary sojourn in Egypt had lengthened into over three centuries. God in His wisdom, saw it necessary. Israel must develop into a strong, well-knit nation before they could possess Canaan. The stay in fertile Goshen, under the friendly protection of Joseph and the kings who knew him, gave time and opportunity for this. The "seventy souls" who came with Jacob, were now a mighty host (v. 8) and filled the land. God had promised this increase (Gen. 46:3).

Egypt, mistress of the then civilized world, was a fine training school for the Hebrews in the arts of settled life. Their prosperity, however, was not an unmixed blessing. It rarely is. They here absorbed that which was undesirable, dangerous even, some of the spirit of the prevailing polytheism. The God of their fathers became less real to them.

Israel in the School of Bondage vs. 8-14

A revolution brought a new king into power some thirty years after Joseph's death (v. 8). All of his valuable services were forgotten. The new Pharaoh took a hostile attitude toward the now numerous Hebrews. He was afraid of them (v. 9). He feared they might even help his enemies in case of war. Goshen lay in the direct path of an invader from the north. He resolved on harsh, strong measures, to "deal wisely" with them (v. 10). They were forced into the hardest of slavery, that of the laboring class (vs. 11-14). His purpose was to crush their spirit and make them a permanent slave people. He had them build treasure cities and great monuments, the price of bitter agony and probably crushed out lives of slaves. Even under this affliction they multiplied and grew. God had not forsaken them.

God Hears their Cry 2:23-25.

God does care when His people suffer. Pharaoh left God out of his plans. They were contrary to God's and must fail. In the darkest hour, a child was born, destined to be the deliverer of the Hebrews. God must delay until His people are ready for deliverance. Their sufferings taught them faith in God, dependance on Him, welded them into a more united people.

God heard their cry, looked upon them in mercy, in a marvelous way wrought deliverance for them. He is deeply moved with compassion because of men's needs.

Nuggets of Truth

There is not a cry or sorrow on earth that is not heard in heaven.

God prepares people for new eras. He provides leaders. His resources are sufficient for the nation which trusts Him.

If people would put into practice the teachings of Jesus, abolish war and live the Golden Rule, sufferings would be greatly reduced.

God rules and overrules the destinies of men.

An oak grows in the open, tortured by many storms.

Sermon Sketch

COME AND GO

By I. B. Niswander

The entire plan of salvation for the human family is primarily wrapped up in these two words: come and go. The invitation to a sin-burdened world over nineteen centuries ago was: "Come unto me all who are burdened and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Although this invitation was given centuries ago, it is still ringing through the ages, come. Come unto me, unload your burden and find rest. Come unto me and find refuge from the enemy of your soul, who is ever alert to bind you with his chains of slavery. Do not stand still, go forward. When you have answered the call, and have come, you are then ready to go, to go forward.

When the Israelites received the call from Jehovah to flee from Egyptian bondage, and come to a land flowing with milk and honey, they answered the call and started under the leadership of Moses; they came, but they found their coming was not all smooth traveling. They found the Red Sea lay in their path. When they were halted by the sea, the Egyptian army pursuing them from the rear, they became discouraged and began to murmur and criticize Moses for bringing them to disaster and death.

Moses seemingly forgot himself, and told the people to stand still and see the power of Jehovah. When Jehovah said: "Why do you tell the people to stand still? Command them to go forward!" But consider the conditions under which they had to go. Jehovah told Moses to lift up the rod, and stretch out his hand, and divide the waters of the sea. As we have said, this invitation to come was given centuries ago, and many have accepted the invitation, and have accepted Christ as their Deliverer from the bondage of sin, and have answered the call to go: "Go ye into all the world, and tell the people how to obtain this rest, this peace of mind and of soul."

This going may sometimes be difficult; it may be met by opposition. But Jehovah protected Israel from the enemy by a cloud, and at the same time gave Israel a light for a guide. In our present-day going we have the light of the gospel, not only to guide us, but also a rod with which to remove obstacles, and overcome the enemy.

This command to go comes not only to ministers and pastors, neither was it given only to Moses, but was given to all the people. But in this going, it is very important that we do not neglect taking the rod (the gospel) with us. This is as necessary as it was for Moses to have the rod to get the people started over the Red Sea. Some of the people may be found standing still, some of them perhaps because of fright, some because they do not know the way—no Moses with a rod, no gospel, no good news, showing them the way.

May not those of us who have come, and who have found the way, not only point the way, but may we by our lives and daily walk, show those lost souls the way, and get them started on that way.

Observations in Hopi-land

(Concluded)

J. B. Epp

In the early days our mail was carried once a week by Indians on horseback, the last thirty-five miles on the back of an Indian on foot. It required three days from the railroad to our station. Today our daughter gets our letters from Nebraska on the third day, and soon, as they expect, on the second day. Through the mailcarrier now they can get fresh vegetables, or anything from the market, every other day, soon perhaps every day. We lived mostly from tin cans ordered from Montgomery Ward in Chicago; but we had to get it all from the railroad.

One missionary, now has a small dairy for self-support, getting his alfalfa from Phoenix, 350 miles distant; and it pays! We allowed ourselves the luxury of a cow for a while; we needed fresh milk for our children and for the orphans. Alfalfa cost us from forty to forty-five dollars a ton; oats, five dollars a hundred, etc. We could buy an Indian pony for ten dollars, but to feed it a year cost from one-hundred to one-hundred-fifty dollars. We paid forty to forty-five cents a gallon for coal oil. What we would have paid for gasoline I cannot say, for we did not know gas out there then. Now it costs less than twenty cents in Oraibi, if they get it from Winslow. We pay twenty-one cents in Nebraska. Freight charges have come down one-half and more.

When our car gave us trouble on our way in to Winslow, we tried to adjust the trouble, but could not. We waited a little while. Along came a truck and two Navajo Indians stepped out saying, "Can we help you?" Thirty-five years ago a Navajo could scarcely harness up a horse; now these two men got busy with the tools, and in a little while we were speeding on, rejoicing.

I started to point out to my missionary driver some of the places along the road where we, thirty-five years ago, had camped, and told him a few of our experiences; but I had not finished the second story when we heard the whistle of the train—and we were in Winslow. As we were speeding along, I tried to recall some of the visitors whom we had gotten from the railroad and taken back: Father Epp, Father von Steen, Missionaries P. A. Penner and G. A. Linscheid, remembering distinctly just where we had camped with each one, for something had happened at each place that had been very remarkable, at least to them. In one place a snowstorm, for which we were not prepared, had overtaken us; so the thoughtful missionary's wife had sent a runner to meet us with a fur robe and a few quilts. In another place a pony, frightened, had run away, and our Hopi had to follow it nearly all the way home, forty miles.

The most interesting visitor was Professor C. H. Wedel, President of our Mission Board. He delighted in the desert adventures. When he returned home he held his audience spellbound for hours, relating his "very wonderful" experiences. To us they were everyday affairs. Poor as his eyesight was, he saw and noticed everything, even things that we had overlooked. The most thrilling experience to him was that he had to ride through the river on a horse. The river was deep, but it was summer. Our load had to be carried across on the heads of the Indians; even the wagon, taken apart. "I'll pay for it all," he exclaimed, "this experience is worth the money."

Other distinguished visitors, tourists, had honored our Missions with their visit. They wished to speak to the missionary, who is supposed to "know more about the life and the feelings of the Indians than anyone else." Among these were ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, William R. Hearst, the Indian Commissioner from Washington, D. C., Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, and other "Great Lights." Hopi-land is still one of the greatest attractions in the United States for tourists. The world-famous snake dance, and other dances, largely commercialized today, are still going on.

Our missionaries today must be at least amateurs at repairing their own cars, while we in our day had the pleasure of breaking in wild Indian ponies. But we made a very quiet and "tame" job of it. "Believe it or not," these highly "uncivilized" creatures absolutely would not eat oats! But this they had to like because that was the lightest feed we could take with us on our long horseback tours. They would not touch oats until nearly starved, so we tied them to the trough, with oats and water before them, and let them take their own time. Meanwhile, we used a bit of "good common horse sense," visiting them with a bunch of desert grass off and on. Thus they began to like us very much. Getting quite weak, they resisted very little when we gently put on bridle, harness, and sadle; and with a little grass in one hand, they followed us everywhere. Before they regained their strength, we were their friends.

Thirty years ago our industrial missionary, C. J. Frey, supported by a wealthy lady in California, taught the Hopis how to farm on a large scale, to cultivate their fields with horses, instead of the hoe only.

Many thousands of dollars of federal money, relief, have gone to the Indians during the last years, and great improvements have been made on roads, fences, etc. From these and other sources, many are now living in "luxury", compared at least with the former great poverty. Their newly-built homes also prove this. Where formerly there was one lonely trading post for several villages, there are now several stores in each village.

The Spaniards, several hundred years ago, introduced peaches and apricots into this desert. That was all the fruit we saw in our day, and we pioneers were sure that no other fruit trees would grow here—we had tried it! Now, after the Hopis themselves once took a real hold of improving things, the desert grows beautiful orchards of apples, pears, cherries, plums, grapes, berries, etc. All this without irrigation, in the right kind of sand.

When our first misionary, Rev. H. R. Voth, arrived on the field over forty years ago, he could scarcely find an interpreter at all. We found a few with a second reader education, so we had to learn their language, and we learned it, too. Today the older generation has "passed on," and the greater part of the Hopis understand English, more or less. There are many "returned students," even high school graduates. This condition almost constitutes a problem. Will all the late improvements give them satisfactory employment and a living such as they may demand. It is still the same old desert! I do not feel competent to say much on this question. Perhaps our brother Otto L. will write on this sometime.

Mennonite Youth Looks at the Ministry

John F. Schmidt

Since the dawn of prophecy men have recognized a trumpet call, clear and certain: "Whom shall I send and who will go?" And if man has not answered in taking up the challenge, God's purposes have in so far been defeated. If God's purposes are to be accomplished in this world they will be achieved through men—men who in various ministries recognize a demand upon them to serve their fellowmen in the highest and best capacity of which they are able. The prophetic call has been answered in many realms, notably statecraft, medicine, art, and literature. My answer confines itself more particularly to that of the Christian Ministry or, shall I say, the "Shepherd of Souls."

Among Mennonites the minister has always been regarded as the servant of the living God and, whether he was chosen by some form of election or by lot the conviction that he was verily called of God has always been variously interpreted. To give this term reality I believe that the demand of God must be personally apprehended by the individual. I believe that God speaks through the whole personality of man and especially through a consecrated intelligence. If my life is to be lived in the Christian Ministry, I like to think that God has used my own intelligence and the intelligence of perhaps a great number of people to direct the course of my life into that ministry. In one sense I have consciously chosen to enter the ministry, in another sense I have felt compelled to accept a challenge to serve a unique and vital need of man.

It is said by some that the voice of prophecy has long since died. No doubt such a statement is based upon the idea that prophecy is primarily prediction. However, most prophets in the Old Testament take the view that they are speaking in behalf of God or telling forth the will of God. If we today have no place for the prophet the church has no unique function in modern life and it might as well become a "good-time center" which in many instances it has an itching to become. But as long as man has spiritual needs, religion has a vital function. Men may say they live on bread alone and thrive on it, but in sounding their depths they find yearnings for certainty and longings for direction that can be answered only by man's deepest experience of God. The historic church is today suffering from a terrific blight of indifference, but in many quarters there is a renewed interest outside the church in the spiritual approach to life. This interest should be fostered and conceived through fellowship.

The church as an organized fellowship may have to initiate changes in its own sphere, in order to minister more effectually to the complex needs of humanity. My experience, however, has shown me that in making adjustments the church must never forget that man is primarily a spiritual being. Men want light, they need the strength of resources beyond themselves and the Christian Minister is called of God to direct men to the Light and to help men avail themselves of Divine resources. If the church and its ministers remain true to this unique function it will justify a vigorous revival of a sane religious enthusiasm. The church must have a positive concern in the whole of humanity. All kingdoms must become the kingdom of our Lord. In the process of transforming the kingdoms of this world, Christians will suffer and many, like Rauschenbush, will die of a broken heart. But the power of sin can be broken only by a cross. The place of the Christian minister is to challenge men to turn from their interest in themselves, call them to the way of the Kingdom, and to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.

WHY YOUTH'S LACK OF INTEREST?

Youth wants to be part of an ongoing force for good to humanity. But too often it finds the Christian church too powerless to be the means....of making the changes they seek. Older people, it is said, fail to accord youth places of leadership; the language of the church is outworn and often meaningless to youth; and the church is talking, but not living or working toward the kingdom of God it preaches. The church as an end in itself, not a means toward a noble end, has little interest for a generation eager to be doing something. Youth's charge that the church is "static" would probably be admitted by most churchmen, but what are they doing to give it life?—Christian Century, Feb. 3, 1937.

Although not publicized by the press, it is a known fact that Sunday evening finds the Living Church of Russia crowded to capacity with eager young people who are finding in the "living" church the inspiration for an abundant life for all. K.K.F.

NATIONALISM OR INTERNATIONALISM?

Acts 10:34-43

Meditation

M. Imperialistic or "foreign-territory-seeking" nationalism destroys in the annexed country what it covets for its own—liberty and freedom in home affairs. Is imperialism a Christian principle?

T. What is the underlying human trait that often makes nationalism of bad repute? Why is not nationalism necessarily bad?

W. "That which makes a nation is a common heritage of memories of the past and hopes for the future."

T. "National rivalries and antipathies were never stronger than in the nineteenth century, and in the twentieth century they brought forth the calamitous World War. By their fruits ye shall know them.

F. "A 'Nation' may be defined as a people or group of peoples united by common ideals and a common purpose." Is the Christian Church a nation?

S. What is the dominant attitude of the Mennonites toward churches of other creeds,—national or international?

Sun. Topic: Nationalism or Internationalism? Acts 10:34-43. Of a truth I perceive that God is no respector of persons; but in every nation (or church and denomination) he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is acceptable to him.

Suggestions

1. Did you know that the Church was an international state in the Middle Ages?
2. At the time of existence as an international state the Church performed a double task:
    a. it gave religious and moral instruction
    b. it took an important part in secular affairs

   Does our church really play a significant part in so called secular affairs? How could the condition be improved?
3. "Modern Civilization, which on the one hand creates an international current drawing the world's peoples together in art, literature, science, and industry, on the other side creates a national current tending to keep them apart." Discuss.
4. Some mediums of international god will are:
    a. "Wireless" communication
    b. Modern literature, science, philosophy and art, if appreciated
    c. World's Fairs
    d. Red Cross Society
    e. Postal Union
    f. World Congresses and International Relations Institutes
    g. Great educational system
    h. Religious toleration

   Discuss by means of interesting illustrations. Any good World History will give information on this Sunday's topic.

Jane Adams established Hull house and gave her life to improve one of the poorest sections of Chicago.

David Livingston discovered the darkest continent of the world and opened the way for the spread of the gospel in Africa.

Shakespears put the truths of the Bible into the greatest dramas that have ever been written.

Abraham Lincoln freed a nation of the curse of slavery.

Thomas A. Edison gave the world the electric light that has turned night to day. (Add other names if you wish)

3. In what ways does the world need to be made better today? Is there anything in which we can help?

4. Does all progress in science and inventions result in making a better world? Illustrate.

WHAT MAKES ONE CERTAIN OF GOD

"The Lord hath heard my supplication."—Ps. 6:9.

Here is a man who knows there is a God, and who is sure of His love and goodness—the man who can say "The Lord hath heard my supplication." This man needs no arguments to prove God to him.

Our great need today is to be certain about God, and the only way to that certainty is the way of prayer.

Some of us have tried other things. We have tried reading books, listening to speeches, studying nature, and so on; and we have not yet found the argument or proof that puts our faith beyond the shadow of doubt. A great university professor said that the intellectual arguments for God and against Him were about evenly balanced. He may be right. At least, only the use of prayer will bring the balance down on the side of God.

If you have been trying to reason your way to certainty about God and you are still groping in the dark uncertainty, I suggest that you try prayer.

The scientific road leads to God—some sort of God. Science requires a "First Cause," and men of science speak of "the Infinite," "the Eternal Substance," "the Cosmic Force," "the Central Fire"—"a Something" in the universe not ourselves and greater than ourselves. That is as near to God as the road of science can take us. We have to take the prayer road to find a Personal God with Whom we can commune in personal fellowship.

If you are going to seek certainty about God through prayer, do not think of prayer as merely a means of obtaining some material benefit. Prayer brings its reward, and the real reward is something infinitely better than any material good or temporal blessing we may pray for. The reward is God Himself.

To pray is to experience God. That is the deepest meaning of prayer. When a man has had an experience of God, he has entered into the deepest secret of human life, and he has something of deeper significance to say to his fellowmen than anything that can be said by the most learned scientist or the most profound philosopher. What he has to say is about a God who is known certainly, and known to be love, goodness and mercy—a God who is a Father to His children, who is responsive to their cries, who succors them in all their needs, who shares with them His wisdom, power and glory.

Not scientific or philosophic knowledge, but prayer knowledge, is what makes one certain of God.—Fort Wayne Journal-Gazette.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn.

Dear Brother Thierstein:

Please send THE MENNONITE to me at 605 South Seventh Street, Goshen, Indiana, until further notice. We will live in Goshen during the summer and go back to Hartford during the winter. Hartford Theological is getting to be quite a Mennonite Seminary. During the past year we had about nine Mennonite students. There will be an equal number for next year, if not more. I am interested in these young people, and so long as the church has no Seminary, I suppose someone ought to stay by them in some other good institution.

In the Seminary I am teaching in the Department of Systematics, my particular courses being, The Great Christian Creeds, Christian Ethics, and Introduction to Philosophy. Dr. E. E. Johnson is in Church History. This makes a fine combination for our Mennonite students. Most sincerely, J. E. Hartzler

Essex United Mennonite Church, Leamington, Ont.

Dear Editor and Readers:

Summer has come, and with it the many blessings bestowed upon us by our Heavenly Father.

On May 16 Baptismal Services were held in our Church, and ten young people were made members. The choir rendered appropriate songs and Rev. Mr. Driedger preached an inspiring sermon. The Church was crowded to capacity and I do not believe anyone went away without benefiting in some manner. On the 23rd Holy Communion services were held in which the new members all took part, along with many others. Rev. Mr. Evert from Winnipeg was guest speaker. On Wednesday morning, May 12, special services, celebrating the Coronation of Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, were held in our Church.

Our Church has been the scene of three pretty weddings recently, when on May 15, Miss Mary Taves was united in marriage to Mr. Abram Dick; on May 22 Miss Mary Cornies became the bride of Mr. George Krueger; and Miss Katy Bergen became the bride of Mr. Nicolai Cornies on June 5.

On the last Sunday in May, in the evening, our Young Peoples' Society presented a short program. It consisted of four spring songs, which were sung in unison by two mixed choirs of our church, two male quartettes, music selections and a number of recitations, all of which brought out the joys and the beauty of Spring.

FAMILY CHRONICLE

DEATHS

Rev. Henry W. Wiebe was born January 24, 1877, at Mountain Lake, Minnesota. In the year 1896 he was baptized upon his confession of faith and received into the church by Elder Quiring. On November 30, 1897, he married Miss Elizabeth Friesen. This union was blessed with three children, one of which preceded him in death. In 1904 the family moved to Canada and made their home at Langham, Sask. Having been called into the ministry by the Zoar Church, he served at that place until they moved to California in 1923, where, during the last years of his life, they made their home in Delano, California.

There he continued to be a teacher in Sunday School and to do other church work wherever opportunity offered itself. As long as his strength permitted it at all, he was in his place at all services. Revelations 5:13 was precious to him.

About a year and a half ago he became ill and his strength was failing more and more. He did not suffer pain until the last day of his life.

On the morning of May 24 he passed away at the age of sixty years and four months. He leaves to mourn his death his wife, two daughters, Mrs. B. J. Harder and Mrs. J. E. Wallace, three grand children, three brothers, four half-brothers, one sister, one half-sister, and many friends far and near.

We mourn, but not as such who have no hope, for he passed away gladly and happy.

In the Funeral Home, Rev. H. J. Krehbiel read Revelations 7:9-17 and lead in prayer. At the church Rev. A. G. Schmidt spoke on I Corinthians 15:26 and 57, and Rev. H. J. Krehbiel on Luke 2:29. The funeral took place in Shafter, California, on May 26, 1937, conducted by the First Mennonite Church, of which he was a member at the time of his death.

Emma M. Reichenbach, nee Badetscher, daughter of Frederick and Marianna (Ziegg) Badetscher, was born near Bluffton, Ohio, Sept. 8, 1880, and died Friday morning, June 4, 1937, aged 56 years, 8 months and 27 days.

On April 8, 1898 she was baptized upon her confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as her personal Saviour, by the late Rev. John Moser, and received into the membership of the Swiss Mennonite Church. Later she joined the St. John Mennonite Church, Pandora, of which she remained a faithful member up to the time of her death.

She was married to Henry Reichenbach on Nov. 6, 1904. To this union 7 sons and 6 daughters were born. The husband and these children survive to mourn the early and sudden departure of wife and mother. The children are: Mildred, Harley, Francis, Cleona, Helen, Margaret, Gladyce, Frederick, Dale, James, and Kenneth at home, Geneva, (Mrs. Clarence Fleming), Pandora, and Myron, Bluffton, Ohio. Two grandchildren, and the following brothers, Dan, Fred, William, Menno, Bluffton; Noah, Columbus Grove, and a sister, Anna, Bluffton, also survive her.

The funeral was held from her late home on Sunday, June 6, at 1:45 p. m., and from the St. John Mennonite Church at 2:30 p. m. The services were largely attended and the many floral offerings were expressive of the sympathy for the bereaved and the esteem of the departed one. Services were in charge of her pastor, the Rev. Daniel J. Unruh, who used as his text for the occasion, John 14:1-3. Interment was made at cemetery adjoining the church.

Mrs. Reichenbach's death which came unexpected, the result of a heart attack during her sleep, has left a large gap in the family, where she will be sadly missed. She was a devoted mother, who "looked well to the ways of her household," and who was respected by those who knew her.

"O rare, sweet soul, so early passed beyond,
What sights are to thy raptured vision given?
What fruits supernal of thy hopes so fond
Are thine in that far country we call heaven?

O strange, deep mystery: Sudden from our sight
Thou passest like a shadow—all in vain
Our questionings and our grief; for us the night,
For thee the day where suns unsetting shine."
—Luella Clark

Solomon S. Welty, son of Peter and Fanny (Bixel) Welty, was born Oct. 10, 1868, died May 31, 1937, aged 68 years, 7 months, and 21 days. On March 30, 1888, he was baptized on his confession of faith in the Lord Jesus Christ as his personal Saviour by the late Rev. John Moser, and received into the membership of the Swiss Mennonite Church. He remained a faithful member of this parent church until the organization of the St. John Mennonite Church, when he transferred his membership to this church and remained a faithful and trusted member until the time of his death.

He was married to Barbara Amstutz on January 23, 1890. To this union one son and seven daughters were born. One daughter, Bertha, preceded him in death, on July 2, 1916. Besides his beloved companion, now widowed, he leaves the following children to mourn his departure; Metta (Mrs. Joseph Probst), Pandora; Hiram, Bluffton; Mary (Mrs. Wilmer Reist), Didsbury, Alta., Canada; Lona, (Mrs. Ernest Bauman), Pandora; Rosa, Armanda, and Susie at home. Three brothers, Christian C., of Ft. Wayne, Ind.; John J., of Phoenix, Arizona; and Peter P., of Pandora, Ohio, also remain to mourn his departure. Six sisters and four brothers preceded him in death.

The funeral services were conducted from his late home on Wednesday, June 2; and from the St. John Mennonite Church. The services at the home and at the church were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Daniel J. Unruh, who spoke on the Scripture text found in II Cor. 5:1-5. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery.

Mr. Welty was respected in the church and community as a man of Christian character and integrity. The church has lost a devoted member and the community an industrious and upright citizen. He left a good testimony, and we rejoice with him in the eternal rest, into which, we are confident, he has now entered.

Peter Conrad, the son of Abraham Conrad and Maria Hiebert-Conrad, was born September 20, 1871, in South Russia. He came with his parents to this country in 1874 and settled north of Newton, Kansas. He was baptized at the age of twenty, joined the Mennonite Church, of which he was a faithful member. He was married to Mrs. Agatha Fast, May 5, 1932.

He died June 10, 1937, bringing his age to 65 years, 8 months, and 20 days. He leaves to mourn his departure his wife; two step sons, Rudolf and Arthur Fast; one sister, Mrs. Peter Friesen; five nephews, Edward and John Friesen, Jake, William and Hermon Schierling; and one niece, Mrs. Jess Scanton; all of Medford, and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were held Sunday, June 13, in charge of his pastor, Rev. John Lichti, assisted by Rev. Chase, pastor of the Free Methodist Church, Caldwell, Kansas. Interment was made at the Mennonite cemetery. May he rest in peace!

Annual Report of the Busby, Mont., Mission for 1936

Mission stations—Busby, Mont., Upper Rosebud Outstation.

Native Helpers: Oliver Eaglefeathers, Chas. Yellowrobe and Robert Littlewolf.

These three receive no pay and are used only now and then.

Number of members added during 1936	None
Number of members died	2
Number of members on record (including those away from here)	101
Members who attend quite faithfully	50
Members not living in district	27
Members not attending services	24
Average attendance per Sunday, of Indians, adults and children	44
Sunday School enrollment including Missionary's family	71
This includes some whites, but mostly Government School children. This group is almost totally different from those at Church services, as the children go back to the school after the S. S. session is over. The Sunday School attendance is irregular this year because the children mostly go home over week ends. Attendance about average of	40

Collections during year:

Sunday School	$44.50
Birthday Offerings	2.82
Total	$47.37

(Other collections are given on page with Account)

Budget for the year 1937, for general expenses $160.00

Estimated value of Mission Property at Busby:

Church	$1000.00
Dwelling House (frame)	1200.00
Log House	900.00
Barn, Garage, chicken-house	200.00
Windmill, fences, shed, tools, etc.	200.00
Out-station building	40.00
Total estimated value	$3540.00

The average attendance has been growing from year to year, and we see spiritual growth in those who faithfully attend the services. Some of the Christians have done better the past year while others have not done as well as other years. It hurts us and you, too, that we have no new members to report, and Mrs. tells me it is my own fault, because we have held some off who would have been willing to join. We do not like to take them too young, nor do we like to take them when we feel that they are poorly prepared, not showing consistent interest, and faithfulness. How happy we are for faithful ones, how pained we are with those who are unfaithful.

May God prepare their hearts and claim them as His own converting their souls and making His abode in their hearts!

The Kansas friends of the family will be glad to hear, that Rev. Enss serves as pastor of a large Baptist church in that city. Mrs. Andres is the efficient editor of the Junior Department of the Y. P. section of THE MENNONITE.

—GOSHEN COLLEGE at its recent commencement had 81 young people who were condidates for degrees or diplomas, 29 were candidates for the degree of Bachelor of Arts, 13 for the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education, 46 for Elementary Teacher Training diploma, and 2 for the Two Year Bible diploma.

—Rev. and Mrs. Albert L. Jantzen of Ransom, Kansas, where Brother Jantzen is pastor of the Mennonite church, have accepted a call from our Board of Foreign Missions to go to our mission field in China, where more help is urgently needed, as two families of workers frem there are home on furlough. After visiting relatives and friends in Oklahoma, Kansas, and Nebraska, the Jantzens plan to wend their way west into California, the home of Rev. Jantzen, and along about the first of September they will embark on an ocean liner that will take them on their long journey to far away Chine. Both of the young people are graduates of Bethel College and children of ministers in our Conference. Brother Jantzen is the son of Rev. F. F. Jantzen, Paso Robles, California, and sister Jantzen the daughter of Rev. John Lichti, Medford, Oklahoma. What could be more fitting than that they should consecrate their lives to work in the mission field!

—THE BERNE (INDIANA) WITNESS lists thirty-seven reunions that are scheduled to be held in the Lehman Park there between June 13 and Sept. 12. Many of the gatherings are those of Swiss "clans" in that neighborhood: Wittwer, Reusser, Zuercher, Roth, Stucky, Lehman, Baumgartner, Bixler, Neuenschwander, Houser, Bury, Gerig, Lora, and others.

—Missionaries Rev. and Mrs. F. J. Enns, whose folks live near Inman, Kansas, have just recently arrived from the African Congo, where they are in the service of wining souls for Christ, under the auspices of the Central and Defenceless Conference Mennonites of America. They started on their homeward journey the last of February and arrived at Hutchinson, Kansas, April 16. The couple grew up in churches of our General Conference and we are glad that sister conferences find them to be faithful workers for the Lord.—From "Congo Missionary Mess."

—Rev. John Lichti, Medford, Okla., writes that his health is still improving and getting more and more normal. He asks his friends who have remembered him in prayer, to praise God with him for His wonderful help.

—THE LOS ANGELES MENNONITE CHURCH which is looking for a pastor to take the place of Rev. D. D. Eitzen resigned, through its council has drafted a questionnaire which they send out to a few ministers whom they look upon as possible candidates for their pastorate. Question I. General—Calls for personal data, and in addition asks: Who is your favorite preacher, what is your favorite book and verse in the Bible? II. Doctrine—Do you believe (a) in the inspired word of God? (b) the Blood atonement? (c) a regeneration experience? (d) the second coming of Jesus Christ? (e) the premillenial coming of our Lord? (f) prophecy and its fulfillment? III. Education—High school, college seminary, Bible school. IV..Experiences—1. A short history of your experience in the ministry. 2. Experience with young people. 3. Do you preach fluently in both the German and English languages?—Bulletin of the Immanuel Mennonite Church.

—This same church has just had a series of evangelistic meetings, with Rev. J. H. Janzen of Vancouver, B. C. as speaker. The themes were: The Need of our Time, The God of My Salvation, God's Wonderful Way, The Blood of the Lamb, The Power of the Holy Spirit, Peace, and The Coming of our Lord.

—THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION at its recent meeting in Philadelphia passed two interesting resolutions: 1. One attacking compulsory military training in schools and criticizing particularly Ohio State University for ousting a freshman who conscientiously objected to it. 2. Another one calling for a constitutional amendment providing that Congress shall no longer have the power to declare any wars until authorized by a vote of the people in national referendamus.—Pathfinder.

—June 10 was Baby Day at Bethel Hospital, Mountain Lake, Minn. 54 little "hopefuls" with their mothers were entertained by the hospital sisters, and the youngsters were measured, weighed, ages and other statistics taken, for the hospital's archieves.—Mt. Lake Observer.

—At the Chinese National Assembly, held at Nanking recently, the widow of Sun Yat Sen, the man who founded the Chinese Republic twenty-six years ago, demanded that China enter into a covenant with Communism with the purpose (1) of putting into effect the communistic principles advocated by Sun Yat Sen, and (2) of making common cause with Russia as against Japan.—Rundschau.

—Current History has just published an article listing the anti-crime forces of the United States, and their cost for one year. It shows that Uncle Sam spent fifteen billion dollars for this work, i. e., about the same sum as the taxes paid into the United States for a year. There are employed 11,204 private police; 12,865 detectives; 148,115 guards and watchmen; 15,020 keepers; 9,350 marshals and constables; 15,338 sheriffs and deputies. Thus this crime-fighting force outnumbers the standing army of the United States, numbering 160,000, by 51,892.

—E. Stanley Jones, the great missionary to India, reports that the "untouchables", of whom there are 72,000,000 in that country, are turning to Christianity at the rate of 15,000 a month.—Herald of Holiness.

—College choruses making extensive trips is getting to be a sort of fashion among our Mennonite institutions. A few weeks ago the Bluffton College a capella Choir made a tour into the middle west, as far as Pretty Prairie, Kansas. After commencement the Tabor College Choir made a tour to California, from which they have just returned; singers from Hesston College likewise made a trip to the nearer west; the Freeman Junior College Choir gave an afternoon program of Christian music at the Northern District Conference, held at Bloomfield, Montata, June 5 to 8; the Bethel College a capella Choir will start on a tour east, as far as New York, the middle of July. Our colleges are doing a great service in improving the music among our people and churches.

—At the Board of Director's meeting of Bluffton College, O. F. Gilliom of Berne, Indiana, was elected chairman; Dr. B. F. Thutt, Elida, Ohio, vice-chairman; Rev. Jerry Souder, Grabill, Indiana, secretary, and P. W. Stauffer of Bluffton, treasurer.

—The biggest, richest, and most influential of all Christian churches is the Roman Catholic. Its world membership is 333,500,000, that of the Protestant church 207,000,000, while Asia's non-Christian Confucianist-Taoist sect has 350,600,000 believers.

—Isvesta, Moscow daily paper, recently stated, the influence of religion and of the churches on the wider masses of population is greater than ever. The latest census shows that the people answer the question whether they believe in God with hesitation. Many will not describe themselves as unbelievers, but go on record as believers. And Lenin's widow adds in the same paper, "The children who go to churches behave better than their elder associates who do not go to church. Let us pray that these good signs may be the beginning of a better day in that unfortunate land!

—Rev. M. J. Galle, who is celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of his induction into the ministry, has taken a month off, and with Mrs. Galle is visiting relatives, friends and acquaintances in Kansas and other places. He is secretary of the General Conference Board of Publication and serves two of our churches at Ruff and near Schrag, and a Congregational church at Odessa, Washington.

I AM A PACIFIST

On my thirty-fifth birthday I sat down at my typewriter and wrote what I entitled, "Credo at Thirty-Five." I endeavored to search my mind and put down on paper what I really believe about Religion, Death, War, Politics, Success and Health. No doubt at forty-five my viewpoints on many of these subjects will have changed; perhaps on some of these subjects my opinions may be changed tomorrow. What I have written about War, however, I think shall ever remain the same.

This, then, is one man's opinion about war:

"When I think of the horror, suffering, terror and hell of modern warfare and then consider that so-called sane, thinking men and women even contemplate the possibility of repeating such utter folly, my faith in mankind experiences its darkest and most hopeless moment.

"Men who plot war seem to me to be wild animals with cunning brains; animals which possess in addition to claws and fangs—shrapnel, machine guns, tanks, airplanes, poison gas. The jungle would be a tame place compared to a modern battlefield.

"If war isn't insanity, what is it? What good can come of destroying a cathedral? What desired end is achieved by wholesale murder? What goal is reached by turning gold into cannons? Death, debt, destruction —what is glorious about this?

"Personally, I am a thorough pacifist. I am unalterably opposed to war!

"The supreme tragedy of human life, to me, is that man, with the inspiring qualities that enable him to paint, sing, carve, compose symphonies, write masterpieces, construct bridges, fly among the clouds, create radio and build a Utopia, will descend to the insanity of war.

"At seventeen, war seemed to me to be color, heroism, adventure, flying flags, bands, cheers. I wanted to go. At thirty-five my opinion has reversed itself. I do not want to go to war. I do not want anyone to go to war.

"The old men plot the wars. The young men fight them. The old men want power. The young men want glory. It is this combination that creates wars."

I believe that the first test of a truly great man is his humility. I do not mean by humility doubt of his own power. But really great men have a curious feeling that the greatness is not in them but through them. And they see something divine in every other man, and are endlessly, foolishly, incredibly merciful.
—John Ruskin

APT COMPARISONS

Harry Stanley, member of a prominent pioneer family, drew many apt comparisons at the old settlers' picnic Saturday at the Forum.

"It used to be we were scalped by the Indians and now we are skinned by congress," he said with a chuckle.

"Nowadays," he continued, "when we want a new car we trade in our old one. Back in the old days all we had to do was to raise another colt and we soon had a driving horse.—Wichita Eagle.

THE FIRST PEACEMAKER

Compared with his father Abraham, whose faith and devotion to God have become proverbial, and with his son Jacob, whose tenacity of will and of purpose are outstanding, Isaac appears to be a rather tame, colorless figure. Yet his life is, in many respects, unique, and presents some splendid lessons. He was the son of promise, born when his mother was ninety, a very unusual age for a mother to give birth to a child, so unusual that she laughed and inwardly flouted the promise. For that reason she named the child Isaac which means, he laughs. When his father is bidden to sacrifice him, Isaac yields without a murmur, even when being tied to the altar. He again submits, without a word, to his father's unique plan for getting him a wife. He meekly "took Rebecca, and she became his wife; and he loved her, and was comforted after his mother's death." After that Isaac's life ran on smoothly, except during the famine, when he risked his life by telling the Philistines that Sarah was his sister, and when his sons had their quarrel over the birthright. Yet, within that time something happened in Isaac's life which, if universally practiced, would enable dissenting nations and people to live side by side, and cherish one another. The Bible tells us, "the man (Isaac)....became very great....and the Philistines envied him," until their King Abimelech said, "Go from us, for thou art mightier than we." And Isaac passed on to the valley of Gerar and there he had his servants re-dig a well that father Abraham had built and the Philistines had stopped up. When they had a nice flow of water, their enemies claimed it and appropriated it. Isaac had a second well dug, and again the Philistines seized it. "And Isaac removed from thence, and digged another (third) well, and for that they (the Philistines) strove not." Then the king of the Philistines, Abimelech, called on Isaac, and Isaac said to him, "Why come ye to me, seeing ye hate me, and have sent me away from you?" To this the king and his men replied, "We saw certainly that the Lord is with thee; ....so let us make a covenant with thee....that thou wilt do us no hurt....thou who art the blessed of the Lord." Thus Isaac had won a victory over his enemies, through non-resistance. Would that all enemy nations, all quarreling people might see the Light, and emulate Isaac's example!

THE EDITOR HEARS VOICES

The editor has received a good many compliments, also a few well-meant suggestions for improving this paper. He is especially grateful for the latter and is receptive for more. Two voices suggest that THE MENONITE could or should be more spiritual. We admit that some issues have been lacking somewhat in that direction. We should be glad to have those who feel this need, contribute sound, helpful, spiritualized articles frequently. On the other hand we maintain that any item that tries to help discover truth, or to bring us a little nearer the truth, may be spiritual in its effect, although it may not be typically evangelistic, devotional, doctrinal, or the like. Jesus and the whole Bible give us many spiritual lessons drawn from nature, practical life, and the errors of men. Two other voices tell us that we are featuring the schools and education too much. In answer to this we wish to say that Missions, Relief, Schools with Education, and Publication form the major interests of our Conference, and we take it to be the duty of our papers to inform our people on the work, plans, needs, aims, and outlooks of these activities. The Board of Publication has granted the Mission Boards the use of up to a page per issue, and it would seem only fair that other boards and their activities should be allowed to utilize up to a column per issue. But thus far they have used much less. Another reason why we permit schools to be heard from rather frequently is, because so many members of our constituency know so little of them, or have erroneous notions about them which, with needed information, would likely give place to appreciation. Then, too, as long as there are those who favor other schools in preference to our own, and aid them, it seems only proper and just that our own papers should uphold our own institutions. Who is next on this subject?

Evangelistic Committee Report

To the Twentieth Annual Workers Conference at K'ai Chow, China, November 18, 1936

H. J. Brown

Dear Coworkers:

Examining the year just finished we find great reason to be thankful for ourselves, our fellow missionaries and our Chinese coworkers. They have all not only been graciously kept but also greatly blessed in the service. Our work has continued with full force. Under the heavy loads some of us have almost faltered, but the Lord has given special strength to carry on. We feel, however, that this way of working cannot be made a permanent policy. Our nerves are getting on edge and relief has to come soon. So we are glad to welcome Miss Aganetha Fast and Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Pannebecker back to our China Mission. Especially the former is definitely to be engaged in evangelistic work. We also expect help from Miss Wilhelmena Kuyf in a year or two, but the need is far too great, that with their coming it should already be supplied. Furthermore, two of our evangelistic families are due to go on furlough next year. To say, "No, you better stay" is easily done; but will their nerves stand such a prolongation of service and will it remedy our troubles? Should we not rather plan a little further ahead, look into the future, and secure an additional evangelistic force from the home base? To us this seems the only adequate solution of the situation.

I. Volunteer Workers

We have had much larger evangelistic volunteer groups this year than formerly. The K'ai Chow East suburbs church had, during New Year's week of evangelism, daily morning prayermeetings, after which from 40 to 50 Christians went out into the villages, preaching and distributing literature. They divided into bands and visited villages in a radius of three miles. The bicycle contingent, however, went out much farther. Here in the city some twenty church members formed groups and preached on all the streets of K'ai Chow. In Tung Ming, too, the work was undertaken with great zeal. Similar campaigns were held in other places throughout the field. In Ch'ang Yuan 120 people volunteered to go out daily for one week. As a result many new people came to the regular church services after that. In the city of Tamingfu the big tent was pitched, and for three weeks big crowds daily heard the message of life. In the country churches, however, the groups were small and lacked leadership. The village Wen Chai was an exception. Here really good work was done. Even a Bible Study class met daily during the winter months. The K'ai Chow East suburbs church also opened its doors for Bible study classes during that week. Since the weather was rather chilly, the classes were held in the ladies' house. From 60 to 100 people attended daily.

The big fair at K'ai Chow again gave splendid opportunity to publish the good news of salvation. There were, as usual on these fairs, three preaching places, namely the West Street church, the San Miao Street tent, and the big evangelistic tent. We had more volunteers for preaching, singing and other service than could be advantageously used, so another group went out and preached to the crowds on the street. Our tents were much overcrowded for hours at the time. During that one week thousands and thousands of people were definitely faced with the Word of Life.

II. Tent Work

Besides during these special occasions the two evangelistic tents have been out in the villages, faithfully preaching the Gospel. The general idea is to visit smaller churches or their surroundings, so that inquirers and converts can later find a place for worship and further Bible instruction, after the big tent has left again. The K'ai Chow tent stayed west of the city for a whole season. For we found there large and fruitful openings.

During the third quarter of the calendar year, the Evangelists and Biblewomen did personal work, and house-visitation, or went back into regions where the tent had been. They were working in small groups doing followup work. In general, the work has been quite successful, but in a few places we had reverses and partial defeat. This was largely due to the tactlessness of some of the workers. The addition of a male nurse to the tent staff for holding clinics seems to be a step forward.

The reading classes for women have been kept up during the winter months on all main stations and some on the outstations and even in some villages. In the country the yare held only for short periods. Thus many learn to read better: and since literature used is either Christian or the Bible itself, they get more grounded in spiritual truths. In the Taningfu district a goodly number of women take a home study course instead of attending a regular class.

The Biblewomen help along at instruction classes, and teach in women groups throughout the field.

Advantages of the Small Colleges

Fifth Article

During the past four weeks we have presented some of the advantages of the small Christian college. Among these are greater opportunity for the promotion of the spirit of brotherhood and democracy, of extra-curricular activity as well as for better constructive oversight and discipline, and finally the promotion of inspirational contacts between the faculty and the student body.

Our Mennonite colleges will probably never be among the larger institutions. Our constituency is too small for this. What we should work for is to have small colleges that are the very best that they can possibly be. There are small colleges today that have an outstanding requtation for the type of work that they are doing.

But while we are speaking of small colleges, we must recognize the fact that our own institutions could and should have more students than they do. They should have from 100 to 200 more students in order that they might serve more satisfactorily and efficiently, and be of the greatest good to the greatest number. But even with such an increase in the number of students our colleges would still rank as among the small colleges.

For the work that we as Mennonites wish to do, our colleges, even with the increase that they should have, are of ideal size for the task our church should do in the educational field. We hope that some of the advantages that have been cited will bear out this point. What we need to do as a church is to get back of these schools and make them the best that they can be. With God's help we can do this.

PUBLICATION

THE CHURCH AND ITS PAPER

In the United Church of Canada a small element recently maintained that the organ of that denomination, the New Outlook, which is undoubtedly one of the best on this continent, is "a too expensive luxury for the church to keep going, and either its elimination or its publication in a much less expensive and, inevitably, much less effective form, has been demanded." One who was in the very best position to know the facts in the case made what sems to us the unanswerable reply that, "if the United Church of Canada cannot or will not publish and circulate, widely and effectively, a worthy weekly paper of independent thought, aggressive policy and vigorous life, it had better stop thinking of itself as a forward-looking institution that seeks to match itself to the needs and demands of its time."

To be sure, if we are not willing to concede that the church paper is one of the most important enterprises carried on by the denomination, and one "upon whose healthy and vigorous life and growth and dissemination a very great deal depends," then it doesn't matter much how cheap and unworthy the publication may be. It can then be regarded as an elective which pastors and people can take or leave alone as they may choose, and without any appreciable influence upon the future of the denominational work. But if, as expert judgment indicates, "what is happening to the Protestant church papers and what is being done in and through any specific organ of a denomination gives a rather fair and conclusive indication of the life and spirit and prospects of that denomination itself," then indeed it is of prime importance to keep up its standard and to make it increasingly expressive of what is best in the spirit and genius of the church it represents. Need we add that, no matter how good its quality, it cannot do its God-given work successfully through the printed page, unless it goes into the homes and becomes a household companion of our Christian families who are the backbone of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. To accomplish that, pastors and church officers must lead by precept and example.—The Messenger.

THE MYSTERY OF THE CHURCH OF CHRIST

Eph. 1:3-14

It is the duty of every minister of the Gospel of God to understand and explain the mysteries which our Lord revealed to his apostle Paul. But, alas, so many cannot even name them, because they neglect the study of his thirteen Epistles, especially the "Prison Epistles": Ephesians, Philippians, and Colossians. Just let me mention three of the seven: 1) "The Mystery of Godliness—God manifested in the Flesh." 2) "The Mystery of Israel—the Everlasting Nation." 3) "The Mystery of the Church—His Body."

The above named passage, Eph. 1:3-14, is one of the most blessed portions of Scripture to me, because it reveals part of the Church Mystery as the "Heavenly blessings of the redeemed in Christ Jesus our Lord." They show to us the immeasurable riches of God's grace towards his believers.

The true Church—not the nominal organizations—is constituting the "members of the body of Christ," of which He is the head, directing by his Spirit the whole organization for service.

This mystery of the Church was not known to Prophets and Kings of the Old Testament Dispensation. Our Lord Jesus Christ revealed it partly to his disciples, by the seven parables in Matthew, chapter 13; but a full revelation was reserved for the apostle Paul, the Ambasador of the Gospel to and for the Gentile nations. O, how thankful should we be for the thirteen epistles written by this Hero-Apostle!

In these twelve verses he reveals unto us the Position and Purpose of God regarding this Body of Christ. He begins with a most wonderful expression of praise (v. 3). The believer is a heavenly man in his relationship to Christ, but a stranger and pilgrim on earth. Mark what God has done for him:

1) He has chosen him since (before) the foundation of the world. What is meant by foundation of the world? Does it refer to Creation? To me Rev. 13:8 was a mystery for some years: "The Lamb slain since the foundation of the world." Attending the Baptist Bible Conference in Minneapolis one year, we had a real Bible student for a speaker, Dr. Jelesnow, a Russian Theologian, who commanded nine languages. He gave us an exposition on the First Epistle of the apostle Peter, having his Greek Testament on the pulpit which he cited, verse by verse, translating it in the best of English and correcting the King James and Authorized versions. I gained so much confidence in this marvelous student that I approached him with this question, "What is meant by the foundation of the world in Rev. 13:8?" At once he gave the original Greek word and asked me what that meant. Having only a few crumbs of Greek, I did not know, but my friend standing near me quickly said, "Umwaelzung," "Revolution." "You could not give a better translation," he said, and then he asked me, "When did that revolution occur?" My answer was, "At the fall of Adam and Eve, when God's curse was pronounced over Creation," and he continued, "and since then every creature has slain the Lamb."

That was the time when God in Christ chose the members of the Church—you and me—for a most wonderful position and puropse of his Grace in times to come.

2) "He has predestinated us unto the adoption of children"—rather sonship—which becomes real at the resurrection and translation unto heavenly glorification in a spiritual body, the redemption of this earthly body.

3) "To the praise of the glory of his grace He has made us acceptable in the Beloved Jesus Christ." Such was God's affection shown us, when we were still enemies. If such rich favor is dealt out to enemies, what shall be the portion of his friends! O, that we may grasp these precious, these glorious distinctions.

4) "In whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sin, according to the riches of his grace." How marvelous! By faith in the atoning blood of Christ we become spotless and without wrinkle in his sight. We were conciliated to God by the death of his Son. This speaks not of our weakness or our sins or anything of ourselves. It tells us of God's side of that wondrous transaction on Calvary.

5) "Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, that in the Dispensation of the Fullness of Times He might gather together in One all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him."

Can you, dear reader, realize and comprehend this greatest of all changes? Today, what misunderstanding among the nations, what race and class hatred, what dreadful preparations for war, what lack of peace, friendship, and love. What differences even among Christian denominations, and our own church! And then: Listen! "Gathered in One all Things in Christ!" O, how I like the four Unities of the Bible, "One World," "One Gospel," "One Kingdom," "One Commission": "Go ye and preach this Gospel to all creation"!

6) "In whom also we have obtained an inherit- ance.' At the first resurrection, I Thes. 4:13-18, to be translated from this earthly home heavenward, to meet our Lord in the air and be taken to the mansions He prepared for us in heaven, and our vile bodies changed, to be like unto his glorious body! What riches of Grace and Glory are waiting for us, if we have received Him by faith as our Saviour and Redeemer!

7) And lastly: "Being sealed with the Holy Spirit of Promise until the redemption of the purchased possessions unto the praise of his glory." This means that the transaction is complete. The Holy Spirit gives us the assurance that nothing can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus, and the apostle Peter assures us that our eternal inheritance is kept for us in heaven, and we are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time (I Peter 1).

Are you sure to be one of those chosen ones? Have you complied with his call for service? May God grant that we may grow in grace and the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, and understand the Mysteries of the Gospel of God.

General Conference Session in 1938

About a year from now several hundred conference delegates and visitors will be making plans for attending the 28th session of our General Conference to be held in Canada. It is not too early to heed Moses' words to Israel: "Go unto the people and sanctify them today and tomorrow, and let them wash their garments, and be ready against the third day; for the third day Jehovah will come down in the sight of all the people upon mount Sinai." Exodus 19:10-11.

Our Conference is a group of churches joined together for missionary purposes. We are living in a time of great need, confusion and conflict. May I therefore humbly entreat all the members to admonish one another to earnest prayer in behalf of the boards, the missionaries, the ministers, the business committee, the officers and the churches in preparation for this triennial gathering. Let us intercede for the Canadian brethren that have invited us.
